News Flashes

Rev. Robert A. Whitten of Winchester has been announced as one of the guest speakers appearing at Martinsville, W. Va., this week during the week of prayer services.

Dr. Albert Buckner Coe, president of the Massachusetts State Conference of Congregational Christian Churches, will speak in Newport News on Monday, January 24.

The Suffolk Ministerial Union is sponsoring a Week of Prayer this week. Services are held each morning in the Christian Church. Rev. Duane Vore was the speaker on Monday at 10:00 a. m.

To prepare their people spiritually for 1950, the Year of Evangelism, the Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Christian Churches of Washington are uniting in Services of Prayer this week.

Dr. Alfred W. Hurst gave the sermon at the 35th Anniversary of Pilgrim Church in Chattanooga on December 4. Dr. Hurst was pastor of the church for nearly 12 years before going to Cleveland Park Church in Washington.

Rev. Robert Lee House will be installed as minister of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, Sunday, January 8, at 8:00 p. m. Rev. Raymond T. Grissom, president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, will preside at the service. Dean D. J. Bowden will give the installation sermon. Dr. John G. Truitt, President of the Southern Convention, will give the charge to the church. Superintendent W. T. Scott will give the charge to the minister. A cordial invitation is extended to ministers and churches within driving distance.

NEW CHEVROLET IS SURPRISE GIFT FOR CONGREGATIONAL PASTOR CHRISTMAS DAY.

After the Christmas morning service at the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., members of the Men's Bible Class invited the new minister, the Rev. Robert Lee House, to step outside for a real surprise in the way of a Christmas gift.

Drawn up at the curb was a new black Chevrolet sedan, its hood tied up with a big red ribbon bearing the words "Merry Christmas."

George W. Case, chairman of the board of trustees of the church, presented the key of the car to Mr. House, who at first was so surprised he could scarcely speak but, when the words came, made a gracious and happy speech of acceptance.

The gift was made possible through contributions of many members of the congregation and other friends, with the Men's Bible class as sponsor. Will Wiggs is president of the class.

The plan was carried through, and secrecy maintained, not without difficulties. With the money almost all in hand a short while before Christmas, it was hard to find a car immediately available and the Chevrolet was secured in time through the good offices of the Mid-South Motor Company at Aberdeen. Some maneuvering was also gone through to arrange a quick sale for Mr. House's old car. This was managed through pretense of giving it a wash job at Howlett's. The plans worked perfectly and the surprise was complete.

Mr. House came to the local church November 1 from Richmond, Va.

MR. AND MRS. LUTHER E. CARLTON HONORED.

The choir and young people of the Ingram Christian Church presented their annual Christmas program at the church on Christmas Day night before a full and appreciative audience. A play, "A Great Decision," written and directed by Mrs. Fletcher C. Whitlow, was dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Carlton.

As Mrs. Whitlow made the announcement of the dedication she said in part, "For several years we have honored some member or group in our church. Tonight the entire church joins the cast and director in dedicating this program to two of our beloved members—Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Carlton.

"About twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Carlton returned to our community to make their home. At once they took their places in the church.

"Mrs. Carlton organized and sponsored a youth's organization. Today those young people are grown up and scattered to many parts of the earth. Wherever they are or whatever station in life they have taken, each of them still rises up and calls her blessed. Mrs. Carlton has continually taught a class in our church school, has been an active member of the W. M. S., and has served as a most efficient treasurer of two building funds.

Mr. Carlton, as a deacon and as a member of the board of trustees has ever been ready to sponsor or help in any undertaking of the church or its agencies. His influence has extended beyond our local church into larger phases of our denominational work. At present he is a member of the board of trustees of Elon College and of the Orphanage.

"Mr. Carlton makes two demands each year. They are almost institutional. The first is a big picnic in the summer. The other is a Christmas party. When one is over he starts planning for the other.

"Tonight we dedicate this program to Mr. and Mrs. Carlton because we love them."

As though the entire cast tried to truly honor the Carltons, the choir, directed by Mrs. Eva Adams and accompanied by Miss Naomi Farthing, gave a great performance. Each one did the assigned part well. Special interest centered on the acting done by Miss Elsie Satterfield. She was ably supported by Mr. Clifton Satterfield who played opposite her. Even the pastor's prayer of dismissal honored the Carltons as well as the God they serve.

J. K. LANDRUM.

AN APPRECIATION OF THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Dr. Wilson P. Minton, Milroy, Pennsylvania, formerly Secretary of Foreign Missions of the Christian Church and now Superintendent of the Congregational Christian Conference of Pennsylvania, writes:

"Congratulations to THE CHRISTIAN SUN! I am so glad that this one great section of our church (The Southern Convention) has the solidarity and cohesiveness and loyalty to support a paper of this kind. It is rendering great service not only to the Southern Convention but to our whole brotherhood. Keep up the good work, and all power to you."

A PREDICTION.

*And even as the year's clock strikes
The middle century hour,
The drink trade rules the Nation with Its wicked, ruthless power.*

*But, ere another fifty years—
Or twenty-five or ten—
Have rolled around, the drink trade will
Be only a "has been."*

CHRISTMAS WITH THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CONVENTION.

Christmas was a happy experience in the household of the Convention Superintendent. We were very happy to have our son, Bill, Jr., home from Yale Divinity School for the holidays, and it was a busy time making ready for the great Christian Christmas event. Our joys were increased by the thoughtful remembrances from the Convention through the inspiration and "engineering" of President John G. Truitt and Treasurer George D. Colclough.

On Friday before Christmas it was my happy privilege to "play Santa Claus" for the good women of the Convention for Timothy and Silas Chang. The responses in money were generous to help give Timothy and Silas a happy Christmas. They went with me to a clothing store in Burlington where many needed articles of clothing were bought, and, and the boys were most grateful. The gifts of money from the women also made it possible for us to pay the transportation of Silas from Michigan State College so that he might be with Timothy for the holidays. After being with us Friday and Saturday they returned to Timothy's room at Duke Divinity School, where they spent Saturday night. We were awakened Christmas morning by beautiful Christmas carols being sung at our front door by these two fine boys. They sang them in Chinese and English. It was a happy time around our Christmas tree with our own family and our two adopted Chinese boys. Christmas dinner was a most beautiful and impressive occasion. Silas and Timothy sang "Joy to the World" in Chinese, after which Timothy read the Christmas story, and our son, Bill, Jr., gave our Christmas blessing for a bountiful dinner. Altogether it was a day to remember.

What a blessed thing it is to live in a Christian land, to have a Christian home, and to have the privilege of working with the church. The year 1949 has gone and we are now in 1950. What a great year is ahead of us. So much needs to be done and the time is so short. We pledge to you our best gifts of time and talent for 1950, and we wish to be of every help to churches and pastors throughout the year.

AN OPEN LETTER FROM TIMOTHY CHANG.

Elon College, N. C.,
December 30, 1949.

DEAR FRIENDS:

I hope you had a merry Christmas and are having a happy New Year.

Christmas comes every year but I wish for you Christmas joy in Christ always.

One day, I was sending the Christmas cards to my friends right after several quizzes. It made me remember that the time passes so fast. Last year I came down from Pennsylvania on September 14, and passed the first Christmas in the United States and my second Christmas in the United States was coming. It is not a long time but it is a long time, too. Yes, I have been in Duke Divinity School for fifteen months already and I have met so many kind people in the Southern Convention and other communities. During these fifteen months you know that you have done so much for me and I always confess that I have not done a thing for you.

Santa Claus really came to me and Silas, also. Some of you sent useful gifts. Others sent money to me and to Dr. Scott for Silas and me. Dr. Scott played "Santa Claus" and bought for us many useful items of clothing. All the presents are very good and useful and we can remember you all every time we look at them. You also made it possible for Silas to visit me. Thank you very much. I had a very nice trip with my brother Silas (of Michigan State College) to

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

A CHRISTIAN CENTURY?

As we stand mid-way in this momentous century, we may very appropriately consider the character of the century which we are helping to formulate. So firm and widespread was the conviction that this was to be "A Christian Century," one religious periodical began and has continued to crusade under that title. The first half of the century has not been without its Christian witness and work, but the total impact of the Christian religion has been far from satisfactory. Two dreadful wars have blighted our civilization, while individual and social evils persist in varying kinds and degrees. Thus far, the ideal of a Christian Century falls far short of realization.

Will the second half of the twentieth century be like the first? If so, God pity us. It will be unless greater spiritual forces are released. It will be unless the children of light are wiser than the children of darkness.

There is still time to redeem the twentieth century. Half of it remains. But if the second fifty years are not to be years of war and evil, then America and the world must be lifted at once to new and higher spiritual levels.

This means for us, does it not, a new measure of devotion, a more intelligent participation in the Kingdom of God, and a willingness to attempt greater and more difficult tasks in the name of Christ.

Two signs of promise appear at once on the horizon: The United Evangelistic Advance, and the ecumenical movement which includes definite progress in Church union. May God bless these two movements and make of them redemptive influences in a Christian Century!

GOSPEL WAGONS.

The writer remembers reading Dr. John Truitt's "Ode to an Automobile," which was used in his Suffolk ministry. He recounted many tender ministries which had been accomplished with his assisting automobile. His attachment to this ever-ready friend, and his reluctance to part with it were described in a realistic vein. Such a car is an indispensable adjunct to the ministry.

At this writing, two recent donors come to mind: Union Ridge Church gave a new car to its minister, the Rev. Kenneth Register; and First Church, Greensboro, gave one to Dr. William Wisseman. It would be difficult to think of a more needed and appropriate gift from a congregation to its pastor. It becomes at once a symbol of affection and the recognition of a need.

The Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines played Santa Claus to its pastor on Christmas Sunday in the gift of a new Chevrolet. The carefully guarded secret was kept until the conclusion of the morning service when the presentation was made by Mr. George W. Case, chairman of the Board of Trustees. Such thoughtfulness and generosity serves as a powerful stimulus for a pastoral as well as a pulpit ministry.

The modern automobile is a paragon of comfort and convenience. The engineering genius of a quarter century finds its culmination and flower in the late models, thus enabling a modest parish minister to enjoy mechanical blessings which were denied the wealthy one or two decades ago. Thanks be unto God for all His gifts. This is a great age in which to exercise a pastoral ministry.

PERPETUATING CHRISTMAS.

We live in a Christmas world, thank God. And this is the time to relive Christmas and explore its implications. One practical and interesting way to do this is by re-reading leisurely and thoughtfully—our Christmas mail.

Now the majority of us resort to the simple expedient of affixing our names to a verse which was composed and printed by someone else. But, happily, there are a few rare souls left with the spark of originality. They valiantly write their own Christmas messages. Let me share with you three or four such messages which came to this editor during Christmas.

Rev. Robert E. Chandler, who now relieves Dr. Earl Ballou as China Secretary of the American Board, writes:

At Christmas—

The season of remembrance, we send you warm greetings. Can you think what it means to us to be here again among you, to have seen once more the glory of a New England autumn and the silent beauty of falling snow? To receive the richness of music and mental stimulation, the joy of family and friends, the sharing of great problems and hopes and fears from within our loved America once more?

But more than ever we reach over to that other half of the world that we claim as our own—India and Japan of our childhood, and especially China of thirty-eight years of privileged living.

We ask you to remember with us these peoples, their persistent struggle for independence, the courageous meeting of utmost difficulty or humiliation, yet the keeping their faith in an ultimate free destiny. Remember with us the Kingdom of God, strongly rooted, but challenged anew today in these lands.

This Christmas message comes from the Rev. Frank A. Lombard, a former missionary to Japan who now spends his winters in Southern Pines. The meaning of Christmas is set forth in these thought-provoking lines:

Gaily we keep the birth of Joseph's son,
And cherish all the tapestry which love
Through centuries didst weave to clothe
That humble Jewish lad who lived the life
Of God in Palestine, long years ago.
His day we keep; but seldom stop to think
How, in that birth divine, the rating high
Of our own children stands attest—
Born sons of God to live as those who do
Inherit all that God can give—the power
Through love to build his better world.

ON BEING PROUD OF YOUR FAITH.*

By F. ERVIN HYDE, Minister,
First Congregational Church,
Cadillac, Michigan.

"Reverence the Christ as Lord in your hearts; and always be ready to give an answer to anyone who asks your reason for the hope that you cherish, but give it calmly and respectfully."—I Peter 3:15 (20th Century Translation).

I wish that it was not so . . . but it is! There is a great deal of intolerance in the air these days. It slips out in most unexpected places. People whom you least suspect are suspect are planting seeds of suspicion, distrust and hatred. The need of the hour is for Christian understanding. It is a time when we need to remember that Christ taught his followers to practice a very simple rule towards those that differed from your own views. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye likewise unto them."

There are many areas in life where this rule needs to be applied. It could solve the conflicts between management and labor, between youth and age and between the liberal and the conservative. It could do much to abolish racial discrimination. Yet, before the church can proclaim this principle she herself must put this principle into practice.

If you have eyes to see and ears to hear you cannot but be aware of the growing tension between Protestants and Catholics. Subversive groups are trying to play the one against the other. This is regrettable in a nation which so recently fought to rid the world of intolerant totalitarianism. This ought not to be true in a nation that regards religious freedom as one of its birthrights.

Today is Protestant Reformation Sunday. It commemorates the anniversary of a new day within the church. We do well to pause and pay tribute to those "who built better than they knew." The movement was started by one who loved the church better than he loved his own life. His one aim was to liberate the church from certain corrupt practices. Indeed most of the Reformers were devout Catholics who entertained the hope of reforming or purifying the church. Fairminded Catholic historians now admit that the Protestant Reformation did help to rid the Catholic Church of certain evil practices.

Reformation Sunday is a good time to remind ourselves of the heritage that belongs to those who follow the Protestant way. We need to remember that there is a positive and a negative way of approaching the subject. All too often Protestantism has been interpreted in terms of Protest. It has been a negative thing. It has been an antagonistic movement. It has been anti-Catholic. It has opposed everything which the Catholic Church proposed simply because it was Catholic.

One day while interviewing inductees at Fort Sheridan it suddenly dawned on me why so many Protestants are powerless. The interview went something like this:

"What is your religion?" asked the Chaplain.

"Protestant, Sir," the soldier replied politely.

"Good," I said, "you see I am the Protestant Chaplain and I am interested in finding men who will help carry on our work in the army. What is your denomination?"

"Protestant, Sir!" the soldier replied.

"I know that," the Chaplain replied, "but what are you—a Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, Congregationalist, or what?"

"Just Protestant, Sir," insisted the soldier with emphasis, and he meant it!

This soldier thought that he performed his duty to God and man when he had voiced his protest against the Jews and the Catholics. But do not be too hard on this soldier because he is the spokesman for a multitude of people. Their number is legion!

On the other hand there is a growing number of people who interpret Protestantism in terms of a positive approach. They are aware that Protestants and Catholics share a common heritage. Bishop Oxnham acknowledges all of this when he says:

"We both worship the same God, adore the same Christ, and are both inspired by the same Holy Spirit. Both know that religion is serving God and brother. Both believe that sin is a violation of the will of God, and that there is forgiveness to be found in his mercy. Both believe in Jesus Christ as Saviour and together they hold the sustaining doctrine of immortality. There is much that we have held in common and in such an hour Christians should center on their identities rather than on their differences."

Not only do we share together the basic tenets of the faith but most Roman Catholics share our dream of a Christian world. And do not forget that we share a wealth of devotional literature. Our hymn books contain many prayers and hymns whose authors were Roman Catholic. The great creeds of the Christian Church are shared by both groups even though they interpret them differently. Not a little of our theology is influenced by Roman Catholic theologians.

A positive approach to the interpretation of Protestantism recognizes the right of the individual to be different and to worship God according to the dictates of his own heart. It does not belittle the Catholic faith. It does however bear witness to the fact that it has found a faith that can satisfy us as Catholicism could never do. So this sermon is born out of the conviction that the vast majority of Protestants are unaware either of our Protestant Heritage or our Protestant Assignment.

Most Roman Catholics know why they are Catholics but do you know why you are a Protestant? Is it simply because you were born and bred in a Protestant environment? Is it because of mere chance? Or is it because of a conviction that Protestantism is a way of life?

Maybe this is the day when the words of our text ought to become meaningful for us: "Reverence the Christ as Lord of your hearts; and always be ready to give an answer to anyone who asks your reason for the hope that you cherish, but give it calmly and respectfully."

Let us look briefly at the cardinal principles of Protestantism. They are four in number.

1. We believe in the doctrine of Justification by Faith.—Martin Luther did not originate this idea. It had been proclaimed by Paul and rediscovered by Augustine. The historian, Lord, says that "It was not new; but it was new to Luther and his age." The Catholic Church of that day was teaching that salvation was by membership in the church. The CHRISTMAS ACTIVITIES AT ASHEBORO.

The Christmas season brought much happiness to the members and friends of the Asheboro Congregational Christian Church, with a varied program planned to include all groups in the church.

On Sunday night, December 18, the choirs under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Davis presented a program of Christmas music, featuring carols from many lands.

A Christmas pageant, "The Seekers," provided the program at the joint meeting of the three women's circles on Tuesday night of Christmas week. To this the entire church was invited. At their business meeting the women voted to give $400 to the church as a Christmas gift.

On Wednesday night the Sunday school had its program, with 165 present. The various departments from nursery through juniors presented the program, which was under the direction of Paul Shane, superintendent. Following this, Santa Claus visited the group, bringing a "treat" for each child. Dr. Lester was presented with a pulpit robe as a gift from the church.

On Sunday night, December 25, the young people gave a play, "Christmas Under the Stars," which showed how a group of modern people lost their prejudices and fears in the light of the nativity scene which they produced in impromptu fashion on the desert where their bus had broken down on Christmas Eve. An offering amounting to $11.00 was received for the work camp fund for a young person from this area to go to Europe next summer.

The highlight of the Christmas season was the Christmas morning worship service, to which one hundred and twenty members and friends of the church came, sitting in family groups. Then it was that all received a surprise Christmas gift in the form of a Hammond Electric Organ.

The organ, which had been secretly installed on Thursday, was presented by Mrs. J. Rankin Parks, III, of Burlington "As a Gift to the Christ Child and a Loving Tribute to Mr. and Mrs. J. Rankin Parks (her father-and mother-in-law), Mr. and Mrs. W. Irwin Smallwood, Jr. (her brother-and sister-in-law), J. Rank Parks, III (her husband), and Serena Rankin Parks (her daughter)."

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Parks, Sr., were originally from Randolph County and in recent years have retired to live on a small farm on Route 2, Randleman. Mrs. Parks is a sister of the late Dr. E. L. Moffitt, one time president of Elon College. They are members of the Asheboro Church. Mr. and Mrs. Smallwood live in Greensboro, where he is a member of the sports staff of the Greensboro Daily News, but are members of the young adult class of the Asheboro Church.

The guest organist on Christmas Sunday was Miss Margaret Rowland of Greensboro, whose father was pastor of the First Church there when the Parks family were all members of that church. Special music for the service included an anthem, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," by the choir, "Away in a Manger" by the junior choir and a solo, Harker's arrangement of "There's a Song in the Air" by Mrs. John L. Davis.

Dr. Lester's Christmas sermon was on the topic, "Jesus Christ, Our Lord." Max Vestal, ministerial student at Elon College, read the scripture. A special feature was the litany used in connection with the dedication of the organ, which was written especially for the occasion by the pastor.

The Asheboro congregation had dreamed of having an organ some day, but had no idea that that dream would come true so soon. They are very grateful for this addition to their church, which adds so much to the dignity and worship of its services.

VETERAN CHURCHMAN DIES.

Funeral services for Alphonso Lexington Smith, were held Monday afternoon before Christmas at the First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, with Rev. H. S. Hardcastle, officiating.

A native of Nansemond County, Mr. Smith had lived in Newport News the past 49 years. He retired from the Newport News shipyard in 1944 after 44 years service.

He is survived by his wife; two daughters, Mrs. Orion McLamb, Wilson, N. C., and Mrs. Irmalee Kerlin, Hampton; two sons, Harvey A. Smith, Norfolk, and Rev. J. Howard Smith, Milford, Conn.; and one grandson.

EDITORIAL.

Do Christmas Candles have special meaning for you? Could you write a few verses about them? Mrs. Grace

Abraham, beloved citizen of Southern Pines, wrote these choice lines:

Christmas candles burning,
Every heart aglow;
You will find the meaning
In the long ago.

When a light from heaven
Came in baby form;
The Prince of Peace was given
On that Christmas morn.

Lying in a manger
Meek and lovely then,
Now His kingdom ever
In the hearts of men.

Crowned with Truth and Mercy,
Robed in Righteousness;
His statutes were made truly
The lives of men to bless.

Love, ever as His scepter
Mighty in its sway;
Has changed the world; forever,
Turned darkness into day.

Christmas candles gleaming,
Lighting all our way,
Emblem of the meaning
Of that first Christmas Day.

Mr. Wilbur J. Sanborn has the fine habit of giving books for Christmas. His gift this year was a little book, The Sign of a Child, by William Allen Knight, a Congregational minister, who lives in Framington, Massachusetts. Here is a paragraph from that charming book:

"When Christmas casts its spell on our world, the tumult of things we are trying to get done gives way to the magic of the story of Bethlehem. What a flood-tide of song sweeps over our homeland and many others overseas!

"It voices again the story we have loved from childhood—reproduces the homage with which past generations and centuries have cherished it—gives proof of the same delight in its glorified yet dearly human simplicity, even in our iconoclastic modern minds and hearts.

"So real is its charm that Christmastide becomes a visible demonstration, year after year, of the friendliness and good cheer that would be ours if peace and good will ever become our way of life all through the year.

"Ring out, bells of Christmas! Sing on, voices of carol-singers roaming the streets, of choirs and congregations sounding the Bethlehem story! Go on being glad of heart, doers of the season's kindnesses! In keeping Christmas you are bringing into clear view the shining goal of human life—the goal of 'great joy to all the people,' proclaimed when a heavenly messenger in the long ago announced the birth of a Saviour."

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

All contributions for the year 1949 have been received unless otherwise designated. On the apportionment of $15,000.00 for the college, a total of $12,695.17 has been received through the Convention Office. Of course, we had hoped to receive an amount equal to the full apportionment but are grateful for every contribution made by our Sunday schools and churches. The amount received is only a few dollars more than the original apportionment of $12,500.00. with the many demands upon the college, every dollar that can be secured is needed.

Our church should begin to plan now to pay their full apportionment for the college for the year 1950. If they begin at the first of the year, when they come to the close of the year they will have this obligation out of the way and will render a good service to the college.

Elon College takes this privilege not only to express its appreciation of the support given by the Sunday schools and churches but to wish for all a harmonious, peaceful, and profitable year as they shall undertake the work of the Kingdom.

BIBLES IN PRISONS—NOT IN SCHOOLS.

The Detroit Camp of Gideons requested permission of the Board of Education of the City of Detroit to give copies of the New Testament with Psalms and Proverbs to all students that would accept them from the fifth through the twelfth grades. The request was refused. It appears the refusal was based on the ground that the Bible is a "sectarian" book, which is contrary to decision of nearly all the courts that have ruled on this issue. The prison law of this same State of Michigan reads: "The chaplain shall hold religious services in the prison, and he shall attend to the spiritual wants of the convicts, he shall give the convicts moral and religious instruction, and he shall, at the state expense, furnish a Bible to each convict."

The convicts are furnished Bibles by the State and given religious instruction by chaplains paid by the State, but the State's youth in her schools must not be given this same book, even though presented as a gift! This doesn't make sense.

Following this we received an order from a Gideon for ten copies of Dr. Fleming's book, God in Our Public Schools, seven of these copies to be mailed to the seven members of the Detroit Board of Education. They are now in their hands. —Christian Statesman.

At Home and Abroad

THE JACKSONS JOURNEY FROM SHAOWU TO FOOCHOW.

Foochow, China,
November 23, 1949.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Why have we written only once in the past few months? Not because of the "bamboo curtain," but because in addition to our regular work, we've had so many meetings and discussions on the question, "Leave Shaowu or stay in Shaowu." We've also spent hours and days packing, unpacking and repacking. Some of this was due to the threat of looting; the rest followed our constantly changing prospects of leaving, the method of travel as well as the season and our destination determining what and how we packed. We did leave Shaowu as you see; so until further notice, our address is: American Board Mission, 29 Hua Yuan Lu, Foochow, Fukien, China.

Permission to Travel.

All this coming to Foochow business began some time ago when the Big Knifers were active around Shaowu. We had been carefully considering all advice given us, official and unofficial, re-evacuating our station. We knew the Riggsses were planning to go to Foochow to see about supplies and to have their baby; their return, at least a quick return, was most uncertain. At that time, even Shaowu friends thought we might do well to come to Foochow till Shaowu conditions were more settled. Hence, all five of us decided to leave. Often one day's decision has been just the opposite of the previous day's, even an afternoon may be different from the morning; but at that time our decision and conditions which led us to make it remained the same long enough to set wheels in motion. The local government said they had no authority to issue us road passes. Just finding out that much took time, for the set-up was so new. We then wired Foochow requesting our mission group here to secure permission from the state authorities. As Harold Matthews says, that telegram sealed our fate. With much trouble and time here, letters were secured and carried by a trusted person to us in Shaowu. Meanwhile, local conditions had settled and we weren't at all sure we wanted to leave. The Riggsses still wanted to come to Foochow. We preferred to stay but did not want to risk being in Shaowu a long time without a doctor. All us thought it inadvisable to refuse to come, even though local government people were very good to us and assured us such a refusal would not jeopardize any future chances of leaving, if the need arose.

So the packing and unpacking and repacking activities began again in earnest, or rather continued at a sharper pace. Dick hardly did any; so busy was he talking with synod folks, government men and friends, and seeing about the truck, passes from local government, the "ferry" for the truck, etc.

We rammed our choir concert through a week earlier than planned, not knowing just what day we'd be leaving. Dick probably told you about the farewell meetings we had been given earlier, after which it looked as though we wouldn't be going at all! Finally, on Sunday, October 23, we were told to be ready within the next five days. That Tuesday I was packing for a Thursday start when Dick informed me we were to leave the next day. Leona was definitely not going with us; but would come down on the trucks second trip when she could take care of her freight. The cook was floored by the hasty preparations; and we were all in a hectic state not knowing when, if ever, we'd get back to our Shaowu home nor knowing what work we'd be doing in Foochow. We've been glad Leona wasn't along because of the difficulties we encountered on the road.

Frances, being eight months pregnant, was perched behind the cab of the truck around boxes and duffle bags so she could stand up if the going was too bad. Ed was there, too. Their servant couple with a three-year-old girl, our servant ShuYing, Mr. Wei and Mr. Feng and three Communist soldiers were also in the back jammed among the freight. Not far along we picked up another soldier who was walking with his unit but was sick. Dick was driving; I was next to him with Lewis on my lap and the mechanic sitting beside us helping to steady the gasoline lantern, thermos of milk, and "changing" suitcase which occupied every inch of free space. This is a heavy duty two-and-one-half-ton Ford truck—not one of those things with oversized cabs.

Break Down.

About twenty miles out of Shaowu, the clutch broke; we had been expecting trouble since the first mile showed us the engine had no power at all; but we didn't expect that. The officer with us said, "You can't stay here; this village was looted last night by one hundred bandits who are surely still close enough to learn of your truck and come again. You must all walk to the next town." (About ten miles.) By then, it was noon so we had to carry something to be eaten as we walked, something for Lewis, and some kind of wrap or covering for the cold night. The Riggs' manservant is a pole-carrier by trade; so he fixed up his two baskets with a few provisions, his little girls in one and Deedee, crying lustily, in the other. Now in this climate, October days of sun can be burning hot, the nights cold. A piece of clothing was draped over the supporting ropes to keep Lewis from getting burned; but he could still see out enough to know neither ShuYing nor I were carrying him. Despite the good example of the little girl and the pleasant jolting swing of his basket, Lewis was furious; and we finally had to make other arrangements. He had had his lunch at an earlier stop (a few cans of the baby food sent by American friends had been saved for travel) and needed a nap. But there was no comfy truck to shake him to sleep.

We were just getting into our stride when rumble, rumble came the truck and roared on past us, Dick's voice trailing back with the dust, "Can't stop; can't stop!" Fortunately there was a hill not too far along where we could reload and start with a coast; but Fran couldn't risk riding on that road in a vehicle which could neither shift gears nor stop. Dick, alone on the truck with Mr. Wei, had begun to think about the chances of help coming and what might happen that night, and in desperation had got the old car going in second gear. Thus we made it to the "ferry" above the village where we hoped to get help. We all got off; but I didn't dare watch Dick maneuver the truck down the hill, across those flimsy boards and onto the glorified raft they call a ferry. It was all he could do to get the truck on and stopped. Then there was the starting and getting up the hill on the other side. More than once

DECEMBER MEETING IN SUFFOLK.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church held its December meeting in the Fellowship Hall, where 91 members brought a covered dish supper. This was probably the largest group ever to attend a regular monthly meeting.

The hall was beautifully decorated with a lighted Christmas tree, evergreen, and candles, and the tables were arranged with holly, pine and berries. Mrs. C. C. Rawles and her group served as hostesses.

Mrs. F. M. Hall, president, opened the meeting with the reading of a poem, "Christmas," which was followed by prayer. She presided over the business session which followed. Very interesting reports were given by the ten circle chairmen and the standing committees. The society voted to send a Christmas gift of $10.00 to Timothy and Silas Chang, Chinese students who are studying in this country. It was decided also to give $10.00 as a Christmas gift to a student nurse at a local hospital. Four new members were welcomed—Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. Richard Boyette, Mrs. W. A. Bradshaw, and Mrs. Marshall Harrell.

A sad note of the meeting was the reading of resolutions by Mrs. Harry Taylor, on the death of four members who had passed away this quarter—Mrs. George W. Nurney, Mrs. Annie B. Hayes, Mrs. W. J. Boyette, and Mrs. J. D. Cross.

Miss Ruthanna Foard, Miss Anna Koontz, and Miss Connie Newman presented a lovely Christmas program. Miss Koontz conducted the devotionals, using the Christmas story as found in St. Luke. A trio—Misses Brinkley, King and Shirley—sang "O Holy Night," accompanied by David Brown Harrell.

Miss Ramona Rose gave a reading, "The Little Hunchback Zia," and Miss Nancy Anne Newman gave another called "Annie's and Willie's Prayer." Miss Foard led the group in singing Christmas carols, which was greatly enjoyed by both the young and older women. Gifts were exchanged and everyone was really excited to see what was in her package. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Hall, the society is really going forward with its work and its plans this year. The twenty years that she served as treasurer of the society gave her excellent experience in helping her to qualify as one of the outstanding presidents in the history of the society.

MRS. J. W. UNDERWOOD,
Corresponding Sec'y.

Mrs. O. H. Paris, Woman's Convention President, recently issued a bulletin to local presidents and officers. Why not let other women in your church read this bulletin and be informed about what is going on? Pass your bulletin around in your church!

Anyone interested in helping to sponsor a DP family or single person may write concerning this to Dr. W. T. Scott, or Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, North Carolina, or to Mrs. H. S. Smith, 1523 Hermitage Court, Durham.

In view of the difficulty some of us have in not knowing exactly what to call our women's groups, why don't we adopt a general name, such as Woman's Fellowship? This would certainly include all types of activities, including missions.

March 23—Spring Rally, Eastern Virginia, Suffolk.

1948 WORLD DAY OF PRAYER— MARUGAME, JAPAN.

On Friday afternoon, March 4, 1948, a small group of Japanese Christian women and four missionaries met to observe the World Day of Prayer, but those who came were very much in earnest and we had a good meeting, using part of the same printed program used in the U. S. Various Japanese women took part in the prayers and Bible readings. At the close of the meeting we asked the Japanese ladies to sign their names and one of the younger women wrote a message for their Christian friends in America:

"To our sisters in America bound together by the name of Jesus Christ: At this meeting for the peace of the world, we all prayed that all of us Japanese, along with the people all over the world, could be saved, and become disciples of Jesus Christ, and that our country could be one that worships the true God, the Lord. We believe that this is the only way that our defeated and erring country could rise again."

JACKSONS JOURNEY FROM SHAOWU TO FOCHOW.

during that first part of our trip, our soldier escorts had to help push the truck.

So we made it to the village of Masa (Mah-sah) where our mechanic met a friend mechanic driving another truck, basically in weaker condition than ours, but at least still running. They discussed the possibility of that rice-burdened truck towing ours to Chien-Yang where repairs could be made; but finally decided the two men together would attempt to fix the clutch right then and there. (Meanwhile Fran and Ed arrived from their long hike, hungry, thirsty and pretty tired.) When a bolt couldn't be removed, they borrowed Dick's saw and sawed it through; the tin of a milk can served to repair the clutch, but nothing could be done about that bolt except to hope that the other two would continue to function without their companion. By using the gas lantern, the men could work far into the night.

Ed, out of his country experience, says that Masa inn is a good one; but really it was filthy. I will say it could have been noisier, for we had a few hours of quiet; also our room had one good feature—a window, the usual kind in a glassless countryside, an opening with a wooden door. We were often too cold or too hot, and Lewis cried off and on all night. Fixing the accommodations, Lewis' food—ours, too, for that matter—and diapers had been nightmarish, for darkness fell before we were ready. My candle was used up and our flashlights were balky ones with questionable batteries. We finally realized the little object that looked like a

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

In the first fifty years of this century a great many things have happened. Airplanes fly over our heads every day, automobiles skim along the streets and roads. We use electric lights and radios without thinking much about them. Our telephones ring and ring and we crossly say, "Oh, that 'phone—wish it had never been invented" . . . doubt if we really mean it.

We take "shots" at the doctor's that prevent us having diphtheria, whooping cough, lock jaw and even measles. We take sulfa pills or penicillin for tough germs that stay with us too long. We take fish oil drops and vitamins to make our bones strong and keep us healthy. All these belong to the twentieth century.

We wear dresses of rayon and nylon. We eat foods that come from the farthest corners of the earth. We have synthetic soles on our shoes and play with plastic toys. We eat frozen foods and dehydrated foods.

What else do we do?

We think very little of these things but take them as they come. As your parents about their first automobile ride or the first time they flew or listened to the radio. I remember the first broadcast I heard. My grandfather placed the earphones on my ears and told me that the man's voice that I was to hear was the voice of the president of the United States. The voice sounded quavery and far, far away. I remember when I listened to a telephone conversation between London, England and Richmond, Virginia. I remember when I heard the news of Lindbergh's crossing the ocean, now clipper planes fly it many times a day. I remember the news of the atom bomb.

When 2,001 comes you will be in a new century. Many of my older readers will not see that new day—I doubt if I do, for I must live to be an old woman in my 80's to accomplish that, but many of my younger readers will see that day. It should be a good day, a better century than this.

The blessing of our heavenly Father on all in the coming year.

MORE FRIENDS.

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Some time after Happy, who, as he says, is "eight, goin' on nine," had entered a new school, the third grade held an election for class president. Happy was nominated but failed to win the honor his childish heart craved.

"I guess I'll just have to make more friends, Mommie," Happy confessed to his mother.

The making of friends is an important factor in every child's life. Your son or daughter and ours should both be given freedom to know, and to like, boys and girls having varied types of background; and we should encourage the appreciation of all natural differences.

School to the child is an adventure in living. The most helpful lessons will parallel everyday experiences. Making friends, learning to adjust to others, is a vital part of character-building.

Children like to feel wanted in the homes of their friends. One tawny-eyed youngster told a pal's mother, "I like to come here! We play all over your house. At home Mom doesn't let me have the boys anywhere but in my room."

Your child's friends appreciate genuine, warm hospitality. While the living room certainly isn't the place for a game of tag, there should be times when every member of the family may take friends to any of the rooms in the house.

In books on social relationships unpopular youngsters are often called "isolates" or "neglectees"—serious sounding names. The socially maladjusted child needs help and understanding if he is to be led to develop so as to enjoy a normal, happy life.

Children should never be made to feel self-conscious about their friends. In the majority of cases, parents should set an example in loyalty by discussing only the best characteristics of the boys and girls brought to their notice. If, however, the new chum is not the right type of playmate, careful thought and finesse must be used in dissolving the friendship. But—should the problem be yours—don't forget to give the child you have successfully brought up, thus far, some credit for good sense. In other words, don't jump to tragic conclusions.

My neighbor Jimmy startled his mother by saying, "Mike wants to teach me thieving!"

Much perturbed, the mother disclosed the situation with a psychologist, who advised her to afford Jimmy the opportunity of voluntarily giving up any intimacy with Mike. When she went home she said to her son, "What was it you told me Mike wants to teach you?"

"Thieving, Mother."

"Do you want to learn thieving?" she asked.

"No, of course not," he answered. "I told him I liked my freedom. And I said, 'Anyway, what would I want with a lot of things that don't belong to me?'"

"What did he say?"

"He said there was something in that. I told him if he was going to steal, he'd better not come around, because I have three friends who are grown-up policemen."

"Do you like Mike?"

"Oh, so-so. I like John and Philip better. But Mike doesn't have anybody to tell him anything, and he's not very smart. Think of his wanting to teach me to steal! Wasn't that funny?"

Jimmy's mother didn't think it was funny, but she was relieved—and a little ashamed, too.

visit the friends around Durham, Chapel Hill, Burlington, Elon College, Greensboro and Winston-Salem during the holidays. We had a beautiful Christmas sermon from Dr. Truitt at Elon and a big Christmas dinner at Dr. and Mrs. Scott's home—my adopted home in the United States—with more than 20 pounds of turkey and all the "fixings."

Christmas is gone and the New Year is coming and I'll be in the Valley of Virginia during the New Year with Miss Coghill and the Valley young people. I am sure that I will have a good time there.

I really appreciate everything you have done for me, my folks and the Shaowu people. I can only tell you

Thank you!

DEAR FRIENDS:

Yet needed: $6,443.57—that is the amount needed to bring us to the goal of $50,000.00. Churches, Sunday schools, and many friends have given generously. You have made us here a clearing-house for human-kindness. God bless you everyone. Thank you for your money, your gifts and your goodwill. It has been bounteous, and I am deeply grateful. I am going to hold the books open for one more report in order that every church and every individual that will may hasten a final contribution toward the goal. We need every cent asked for, and only a few of us know how badly. Read this letter and send us your final 1949 gift today.

Now let me tell you that I have never seen such happy children as during these Christmas holidays. We have been overwhelmed with gifts of clothing of all kinds, toys, fruits, cakes, candies—and still more! It has been an inspiration. We have not yet listed all we received, nor have we been able to thank everyone with our personal letters—but we shall. Every child has had a good Christmas—a big Christmas. People in Burlington, Elon and Alamance have asked us to let them know if any child has not had a big Christmas; churches throughout the entire Convention have sent big cartoons of the best that could be had for these children; church organizations and classes have gone to great length to be especially good to the most of our boys and girls. Many of them had long visits in lovely homes and came back with glowing accounts of good times. Many firms and individuals not connected with our denomination have done good things for these children. I am so glad to see so many people interested and concerned for the care of these little ones.

There are many thrilling stories I could tell you. Perhaps, none more thrilling than the reports which six boys and girls brought back from South Norfolk where for one full week they had had the best and kindest of Christmas vacation and Christian goodwill shown them. And how thrilled were those who gave them such a good time! As they separated here on our campus they told me to please take good care of our dear, little friends. That is why I call this place a clearing-house for human-kindness!

Now let me close by telling you how fine these following staff workers have been during this extra busy season: Miss Hattie Brakefield and Miss Lola Lackey at the Main Building; Mrs. Nancy Whitt at the Baby Home; Mrs. Oie Black and Miss Fanny Newman at the Johnston Hall. These five matrons deserve more than they receive for their long hours and their faithful service. Then there is Mr. L. W. Wagoner, and Mr. Garner Hilliard, who are at it early and late; and finally there is Mrs. Clarke Berry, who does an efficient job as secretary and bookkeeper. These all deserve many thanks for work well done.

FELLOWSHIP IN THE EARLY CHURCH.

LESSON III—JANUARY 15, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Now the company of those who believed were of one heart and soul, and no one said that any of the things he possessed was his own, but they had everything in common.—Acts 4:32.

LESSON: Acts 2:42-47; 4:31-35.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 11:23-26, 32-34.

Holy Habits.

Here were men and women who had recently found the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour. As a result of the preaching of Peter and the work of the Holy Spirit, they repented of their sins, confessed their faith in Christ, and were baptized—there were three thousand of them according to the record. They had been born from above, they had been born again. But that was not enough. It is important, it is essential that a man be born again, for except he be born again or from above he cannot see and he cannot enter the Kingdom of heaven. Jesus himself is authority for that statement. But after one has been born again or into the Kingdom, he must grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. He should form holy habits. He should give diligence to make his calling and election sure. It is interesting to read what these early converts to the Christian way of life did by way of nurturing their new spiritual life. They are still basic, holy habits which every new church member should cultivate.

"And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching, and fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and the prayers." First of all they had a desire to learn more about the new way of life. They gave heed to the teaching of the apostles, which concerned the things that Jesus said and did. They realized that the Christian life was a process and not a single act. They therefore took advantage of every opportunity to learn more of Christ's way of life. A ministerial friend of mine once asked a man to unite with the church. The man rather superciliously and somewhat cynically told the minister that as a young fellow he had gone to Sunday school, but that he had graduated from that stuff long ago. "Graduated did you say?" replied my friend. "Perhaps it would be better to say that you had simply flunked." Alas, for the folks who join the church and then never or only seldom come to Sunday school or the services of worship, and who seldom or never read their Bibles or books about religion in an effort to learn more about Jesus and His way of life.

These folks also continued steadfastly in the apostles' fellowship. The word "fellowship" looms large in the vocabulary of the New Testament. Whatever else the Christian life is, it is a fellowship with God and with God's people. These new converts continued steadfastly in the apostles' fellowship and associated themselves with God's people. They went to the house of prayer together. They thereby found strength and encouragement and power in this fellowship and they grow in grace and in a knowledge of both their Lord and His people. A convert ought to join the church and he ought to go to church and to associate himself with God's people.

Furthermore these new converts continued steadfastly in "the breaking of bread." That was the language used for what we now call Holy Communion. These folks soon discovered the rich possibilities of the Lord's Supper and they attended it regularly. They partook of it, not only in public gatherings, but they continued steadfastly with one accord in . . . "breaking bread at home." In that day the Christians did not have churches—in many instances their homes were their churches. The point is, however, that these new converts found meaning and help in the Communion Service. The habit of attending the regular Communion Service is a splendid "holy habit."

And the new converts continued steadfastly in "the prayers." Was it the daily prayers at the temple? Was it the prayer hour in the synagogue? Was it private prayer? It may have been all three forms. The point is that these men and women nurtured and nourished the inner life by the habit of prayer. And out of the fullness of a life nourished by prayer they praised God and found their lives filled with gladness and singleness of heart.

Fellowship in Sharing.

There was an amazing fellowship in sharing among these early Christians. It was voluntary, and it was confined to believers. Furthermore, it never became common practice and was eventually discontinued as a general rule. But it was an expression of Christian fellowship in the sharing of material things. Because these folks loved their Lord they wanted to help the Lord's people who were underprivileged. They looked upon the church as a family and as in every good family the members share with one another, so did the church likewise. People who love God in Christ love each other, and their hearts go out to any brother in need, whether spiritual or material. If the members of the Church of Christ gave as God prospered them, there would not have to be any organized charity.

Mighty Works.

"And many signs and wonders were done through the apostles." Not done by them but through them. When a group of God's children continue in prayer and in fellowship signs and wonders can take place. The Holy Spirit is with power.

Those That Were Saved.

"And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved." As a matter of fact the true church is made up of those who have been saved by the grace of God through faith in Christ. That is the acid test of membership in the church of the living God.

JACKSONS JOURNEY FROM SHAOWU TO FOOCHOW.

doll's high chair was a lamp! For a seat the "chair" had a black metal shallow cone which held about a tablespoon of tea oil. In it was what I at first took to be a thin piece of noodle spilled from someone's bowl. That was the wick. When lighted, it couldn't equal a good foreign candle; but it pierced the darkness somewhat. I would never have recognized the object if I hadn't gone to examine the "altar" in the hall. On that dirty old table were the little idols, oddments of bowls and stuff, incense burning, and one of those tea-oil lamps, lighted. If Dick hadn't told me they had swept out our room, I would never have known; although we did have to wait for the process.

By the time we got the army cot set up for Deedee, there was about one foot space between it and our bed, boards on saw horses. But there was a table with a few feet of space beside it; suitcases, boxes, food, little pressure stove, thermos bottle, diapers—what a mess we were! We didn't begrudge space to the bug powder sprayer, however. DDT makes even filth acceptable.

Ruins.

Next morning we went for a walk, enjoying the mountain air and fast-warming sun. By then the truck was ready though still without power, and Deedee was glad to take a nap as we jolted toward Chien Yang. That town was a terrible sight, street after street of gaping mud walls. Some rebuilding was taking place and much business was being done from temporary shacks of bamboo or wood. But every crumbling wall and blackened stump cried out against the incendiary bombs dropped by the Nationalists last spring. None of the Chinese with us could find anything familiar; we suddenly came upon some church ruins which we knew must be the shell of the beautiful little church where we worshiped with Olive Bell when we were first en route to Shaowu. Olive's home and a school were not destroyed and the Catholic mission also escaped destruction. The latter have been taken over by the Communists; the church's "idols," as the local Chinese call the statutes, being thrown aside. How many thousands must have suffered from that day's bombing!

While hunting for a place to eat lunch we realized again how many northerners must be in Chien Yang. The large numbers of Communist soldiers everywhere evidenced to us how important the town still is; but the food sold in the shops told us the visiting soldiers were northerners. Rice was hard to find, but noodles, wrappings, and steamed bread were common. One more hardship for the Chinese with us—no rice for lunch.

A vital spot untouched by the bombing or the fire, was the large bus garage and machine shop. It was to this that the town's head officer directed and accompanied us in his strictly business manner. And there we spent the afternoon while skilled men renewed our engine's vitality. Lewis attracted much attention, as usual, and Dick had another opportunity to fraternize with some Communist soldiers. Deedee's diapers, washed at Masa, were draped over the canna plants outside the office building. But the waiting was tedious and we longed to find lodging and settle in before nightfall. We didn't; but since the hotel was a much better one—roomier and cleaner and since we were more accustomed to the process, fixing for the night was not such a burden. Also we had the use of our gasoline lantern. It's this "can't see" business that gets me down, when I'm tired and Lewis is fussy and I can't remember where I put things. We all had a delicious Chinese supper there at the hotel and fell in bed early.

Night Visitors.

The proprietor's wife, who had never seen foreigners before, was quite nice to us; but Fran had a strange experience with her during the night. After some of us had gone to sleep, the night inspectors came. This inspecting of hotel guests is apparently a routine thing in large towns. Their questions to Dick were brusque, but while in our room they said nothing objectionable. I heard one of their number coarsely shouting, "Foreign lao!" (rhymes with cow), an epithet we can't seem to translate but which was almost daily shouted by some child in Shaowu. But Fran said they were rude to her, and the proprietress especially so. In fact, they entered Riggs' room twice in the night. Perhaps the lady was trying to impress the new rulers. At any rate there were numerous knockings at the inn door, much talk and walking around all night. So our second night was not very restful either. In fact, I confess to some foolish fears, myself. I must have recalled too many scare stories, for I got up and put on half my clothes in order to sleep—ready for an emergency. At least I was warm enough.

The third night also followed a long wait in and around the truck. By noon we had reached Chien Ou. The outskirts of that town had been destroyed. But already new wooden structures were housing several eating places and many people. Though Lewis had a canned food lunch, he ate a little of our Chinese soup and liked it. We had the usual audience while we ate and all during the long afternoon. Tens of hundreds of military trucks kept coming past scattering dust over everything and everybody. Out of the hundreds seen we couldn't identify one as Russian; everything seemed to be American, and lots of good tires, too, with the familiar trademarks—Goodrich, Firestone, etc. We did find a pleasant, if occasionally smelly, spot down by the river bank where we read and rested and worked hard trying to keep Lewis out of trouble.

Up by the busy intersection where we parked the truck there was quite a distraction from ourselves in the form of a mentally ill man. He seemed to enjoy entertaining the people and was able to beg a fairly constant supply of cigarettes. He could read and write characters; so must have been a person of some learning and position. He preached a little, using Christian terminology, prayed a little, did a ritualistic dance, and called on Buddha, too. What must his story be, poor fellow!

Dick finally returned from his busy rounds of seeing authorities and checking on road conditions (bandits as well as drivability) to inform us that we would drive to Nanping and go the rest of the way by launch. To drive all the way would require a larger number of soldier escorts than we could accommodate. A word about these men: Each day we had different ones, but all, sooner or later, were pleasant companions. It was interesting to see the coolness of some break down into friendliness as time and travel together proved us all just human beings jouncing through the lovely mountains of Fukien in a jam-packed truck.

The moon was growing bright as we entered Chien Ou to settle for the night. Not only were the hotel family and all the children friendly to us, but a high police official came around to see if we were comfortably fixed. All, of course, crowded close to see Lewis—diaper-changing, having his bottle, and sleeping alone were most novel activities. The night inspectors arousing us about one o'clock in the morning were very courteous. Dick and I really slept that night; Ed and Fran asserted that they did too, though I wonder. They had insisted upon sleeping on the truck. It was nice to give the others a chance at sleeping in a room. Of course beds out here are boards anyway; so it wasn't a matter of softness but of distribution.

Always we were up before light and the fourth day was no exception. A larger crowd was on hand to watch us at breakfast. They seemed pleased to see me poking soft rice into Deedee's mouth with chopsticks just as Chinese mothers do.

Another War Casualty.

The first day or two we had observed that our road was far less used than the path which ran beside or on it. There was a goodly amount of traffic, but the only vehicles other than a rare truck, were wheelbarrows. Now we were seeing many trucks and many two-wheeled horse-drawn carts (rubber tired, too, if you please!) come down from North China.

The pedestrians interested me most—so many of them were former soldiers. There were old and young, in groups and alone; a few were wounded. Most were tired and all were pathetic looking. Very few had any possessions to speak of—just an old towel, usually around the head or face to protect from dust, and a cup or bowl and walking stick. These men are apparently former Nationalist soldiers discharged and sent home by the Communists. Will they ever reach home? What will they find there? How many of them are joining bandit gangs? We know that around Shaowu, the Communists did well by the defeated soldiers, considering their own impoverished state. They gave each a silver dollar and some rice and let them go. No, that's not much by American standards. But we feel it was the best these folks could afford and as their former officers would have done. Here in Foochow Dick has seen a number of such former soldiers. They didn't beg for help; they were too far gone for that. Several were dead or dying in the street. Yes, there are some in the mission hospital, suffering, among other things, from malnutrition—in this case, a scientific word for starvation.

First Class Floor Space.

By noon of the fourth day we reached Nanping. Our Methodist friends, the Dennises, the Harrises, Dr. Downey, and the "seegoos" (a pet name derived from Chinese for unmarried lady missionaries) gave us a hearty welcome. At evening we were preparing to enjoy their fellowship a few days when Dick rushed in with news to pack for the launch trip next day.

A foreign breakfast at 4:30 a.m. gave us a good start; but our first sight of the launch's "accommodations" gave our spirits a sag. We had heard there were no cabins, but didn't know that meant no place to sit. The ceiling of the general cabin was too low even in the high center for some of our party to stand erect. What did we do? What all the other passengers did—sat on the floor midst all our stuff and were thankful we had one duffle bag and a sleeping bag handy. It's surprising how little we minded the arrangement, how quickly we adjusted to this mode of travel, quite common in China and elsewhere in the world, I imagine. Frankly, we were glad for the experience of traveling in a way somewhat like that of the common people. Our general cabin, by the way, was the boat's first class.

One could move around by walking out on the deck, one and a half feet wide, and enjoying the scenery. But some of our fellow passengers just sat for hours or lay sprawled among their things and each other's legs, trying to sleep the dragging hours away.

By 9:00 a.m. I found myself thinking of lunch and was most interested two hours later when the gallery boy came in with lunch orders. He would serve a few, I thought, of their bowls of rice and center bowls of soupy vegetables; then serve the rest in groups, gradually. But no, as long as the bowls lasted, the boy kept bringing rice, vegetables and chop-sticks. I don't know yet where room was found but all were fed and dishes removed before an hour had passed. The floor, which you remember meant our seats and beds and tables, was sprinkled with bits of rice and drops of soup.

Since Lewis' canned foods were all used up, there was nothing for it but to give him some of our sandwiches. He didn't mind; he just spat out the meat he couldn't chew. The bananas were good anyway. If it hadn't been for them I would have had to use the native method in order for Deedee to get enough: mother chews the food first, then puts it in baby's mouth. For supper, we were all Chinese—a bowl of noodles with vegetables. Despite the unclean bowl I shoveled some of the hot food into Lewis' mouth. After all, he had to eat; and with modern medicine plus Dr. Ed Riggs, we felt there was little risk. These four weeks have proved nothing came of Lewis' first uninhibited meal.

We did have a can of milk to open; and so were able to entertain our fellow passengers by laying Deedee down on a sleeping bag with a bottle of milk to suck. The baby bottle wasn't quite as interesting as the diaper changing, I presume; but Lewis liked it better. Despite the comfort of his bottle and later Mommie's lap, he never did go to sleep 'til long after dark, when we were off the boat and loaded into Union Hospital's station wagon. That nice jolting over Foochow streets sent him immediately into slumberland.

What a day it had been for Lewis and the rest of us! So early did we start we had had to use our gas lantern to settle on the launch and so late did we finish the trip we had to light the lantern again for disembarking. The boat had purposely delayed in the afternoon fearing that if we arrived too early we might run into bombing. Just the day before, planes had strafed the launch killing about fifteen and wounding as many others. Later we learned, too, that had we followed the original plan—driving all the way—we would have been among those robbed by bandits. Yes, what a day! But had it been a day earlier or a day spent on the road, we might not even have been in Foochow to sigh with relief, "What a day!"

For almost a week after our arrival there were daily bombings. Some Chinese who have wanted America to help their country, even with military supplies, now want none of America's aid. Now that they personally experience what American military aid means, they are not grateful for bombers which kill innocent people, for incendiaries that burn the homes of unlucky civilians and for machine guns that spatter the blood of poor unfortunates who happen to be using important transportation facilities. Nor are we Americans provoked at their ingratitude. It is hard to remember the life-saving medicines from American when you're afraid of the life-taking bombs.

Leona Burr arrived safely two weeks ago. She had had adventures, too; one whole night in the truck stuck in the country, for one thing. She, too, had met no bombing. In fact, there's been none at all lately, partly due, perhaps, to rainy weather. Now she's settling in at Fukien Christian University, outside the city. We shall all miss her companionship and hope the authorities won't be too tight about passes so we can visit occasionally.

Ed is already deep in medical work; Fran's fixed up a bassinet; Dick is straightening up business and other Shaowu matters. I am giving more time to Lewis, the house, and social matters; but see studying and perhaps a little teaching in the near future. Thanksgiving and Christmas plans are beckoning for attention, too. Though you will have passed them by the time you read this, we hope yours have been happy times, and not too busy.

Affectionately yours,
DOROTHY JACKSON.

ON BEING PROUD OF YOUR FAITH.

Reformers asserted that the salvation of the individual depended upon a right relationship to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. They did not discount the value of good works but they did deny that these things could save a man. Rather they taught that good works were the visible signs of an inward work of grace . . . the evidence of justification by faith.

This doctrine of the manifestation of God's love, through the sacrificial act of Christ's redemptive work, has produced ruggedness of character wherever it has been proclaimed and accepted. Underlying all of the differences of Protestants there is an essential unity about the fundamental thing in Christianity. They reverence the Lord Jesus Christ and own him as the head of the church. They say that the whole hearted allegiance of a man to Jesus Christ ought to change both his character and his destiny.

2. The Reformers recognized the Holy Scriptures as the authority for Christian action.—They made it their final rule of faith and practice.

Indeed the Reformation started with a new interpretation of the Scriptures. The truth which carried its own authority met them in the Bible took them captive. They were held as it were in a vise that could not and would not let them go. It transformed their personal lives. It changed their spiritual outlook. They protested for the truth rather than against the church. They were driven out of the church because they refused to recognize any authority above that of the Holy Scriptures.

Protestants believe in the Bible. They make their appeal not to the church or the priest or the bishop or the people to the Word of God as it is revealed in the Old and New Testaments. They believed that holy men inspired by the Holy Spirit had given us the Bible to guide us in matters of faith and doctrine. Because of this conviction Protestants through many generations have labored to put the Bible into the language of the common people. They have tried to get their people to read and study the Bible for themselves.

In all fairness we ought to say that the Catholics believe in the Bible also. A few years ago that church gave to the world a revised translation of the New Testament and commended it to their people. However, the Roman Catholic position is that the Church must interpret it for the people, thereby making the Church rather than the Bible occupy the chief place in their thinking. We Protestants on the other hand believe that no prayer books, no symbols of our faith, however meaningful, nor no formal recital of the creeds can take the place of the open and read Bible. Protestantism rejects only those tradition and doctrines of the Catholic Church that are out of harmony with the spirit and laws of the Bible.

3. Protestantism asserts its faith in the capacities of the common man and the Priesthood of all believers.—This idea probably grew out of the fact that the Roman Church taught that the Bible was not to be entrusted to the common man. The Reformers insisted on the inalienable right of private judgment in interpreting the Bible. Like Luther, they believe that "the Scriptures could be understood by the common man, that they were the light of life and the guide to heaven." The proclaimed spiritual liberty and obedience to the voice of conscience. They gave the Bible to people and said: "Read and make up your own minds; you are responsible only to God for your opinions and your conduct."

So this doctrine also made a difference in the lives of men and the history of nations. For there is much more in this doctrine than we have sometimes supposed. We have said that it has made "every man his own priest," but it also makes everyone of us "his neighbor's priest," also. Professor Nickols thinks that it would be nearer the truth to drop the word "priest" and make it read "the mutual ministry of the believers." It is altogether possible that this doctrine has inspired the desire and the willingness to accept personal responsibility and to work for the welfare of the community. It has made Protestants the champions of democracy. Study your maps and you will discover that Protestantism thrives best in the soil of freedom. You will also discover that where Protestantism is the strongest Catholicism is the purest.

4. Protestantism sanctions the separation of the Church and the State.—It demands soul liberty. To possess freedom of spirit one must have a free church that will not accept dictation by the state and a free state that will not tolerate dictation by the church. The church may be the conscience of the state. It ought to support it when it does right and condemn it when it does wrong. The church ought to oppose any move on the part of the state that would exploit any of its citizens. There may be times when the church must part with the state even though it means persecution. "It needs to remind the state that the foundation and jural life of the nation and the world are not merely legal or political or institutional but they are religious and moral as well." The nation needs to be reminded again and again of that ancient truth: "Righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." In the mighty struggle for power which is again upon us, the church must help by pointing out the fact that "there is no true authority which does not combine might with right and justice with the symbols of force." Good Protestants do not want the church to play politics any more than it wants the state to play God. The best way to safeguard the state is revitalize the church.

So we Protestants would do well to occasionally pause and ponder our heritage and our assignment. Let us be proud of our faith! Faith in the doctrine of justification by faith. in the self evident power of truth and the Bible as our only rule of faith and practice. Faith in the capacities of the common man and the priesthood of all believers. Faith that the church must always be the church—it can never be the state.

This is our faith! Let us be proud of it. It still offers a way of life to those who seek God, truth and soul liberty. It belongs to those of us who know what this freedom means to stand fast for these ideals that has made Protestantism great. And everyone that would like to see these ideals survive should join a church of his choice and give it his devoted allegiance to Jesus Christ.

"Reverence the Christ as Lord in your hearts; and always be ready to give an answer to any one who asks your reason for the hope that you cherish, but give it calmly and respectfully."

Let us be proud of our faith. . . . This is our Protestant Assignment!

"The statistics of every state show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits than to any other source." Who said this? The Supreme Court of the United States—none other.

THE GIFT OF TIME

By Charles A. Wells

A new year, like youth, can seem so endless in its storehouse of time. In January we have endless time for all those things that we want to see accomplished in the year. In December it is as if some thief had stolen into our lives and made off with a large portion of our days. That thief is neglect—procrastination. He has robbed so many lives of success and the richness of experience that had been anticipated. One of the great benefits of the Christian faith is its teaching that we are responsible to God for all things. We are stewards who have been given many treasures that we are to invest and not squander. So the devout person faces the end of a year with a deep awareness—he wants to mark the passing of the year with prayer and meditation. Let the bells then ring and the fun begin—after he has taken God into his accounting. It is no wonder that those who have made a cheap and wasteful failure of their years want to dim the New Year bells in an alcoholic fog. The question all must face at the year's end—what have we done with the light that has now been spent?

The Mission Board of the Convention will hold its annual meeting at Bay View Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., Monday and Tuesday, January 16-17.

President L. E. Smith is attending a joint meeting of college representatives in Cincinnati this week to study the problems of the Merger as they relate to our denominational schools.

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of Palm Street Church, Greensboro, N. C., presented his resignation because of ill health. His physician tells Brother Neese that rest should restore his good health.

Martha's Chapel Church has made substantial repairs on its building; O'Kelly's Chapel has beautified its grounds, and Morrisville makes plans for additional Sunday school rooms. Rev. Martin Fogleman is the pastor.

Dr. H. A. Fesperman, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Burlington, was given a great surprise when his congregation presented him with a new four-door Packard Sedan for Christmas. We extend congratulations to Dr. Fesperman and also the congregation.

Laymen are urged to make their plans to attend the Laymen's Rally and Banquet to be held at Elon College on Sunday, January 29. This meeting is being sponsored by the Laymen's Fellowship of the Convention, and is a part of the Christian Workers Conference sponsored each year by Elon College.

Mr. Geo. A. Robinson has recently been elected superintendent of the Hopewell Sunday School, succeeding Mr. F. W. Lowe, who has been superintendent for eighteen years. Mr. Robinson has been chairman of the Board of Deacons since 1927. The school is planning a membership drive in the immediate future.

The Congregational Christian-Evangelical Reformed Leadership Training School for Alamance County has been in progress during this week. The meetings are being held nightly in the First Church, Burlington. Twenty-five CC and ER Churches are participating. Miss Coghill is serving as dean and is supported by a strong faculty of leaders.

Rev. Earle H. Ballou, who for the past year has been compiling the China Newsletter, has been appointed acting director of the Congregational Christian Service Committee, succeeding Edgar Chandler. The Newsletter will be compiled by Rev. Harold Matthews upon his return from China. Meantime Rev. Robert Chandler, himself an elder statesman of the North China Mission, will carry on. In closing his last Newsletter, Mr. Ballou says, the Newsletters "have brought me in some sort of touch with a lot of people whose deep concern for our work in China, and those who carry on that work, has been a great and continual encouragement. I shall now join the ranks of its readers—until such time as I may again be numbered among those in China who contribute to it."

CHRISTMAS AT TIMBER RIDGE.

An interesting program of Christmas carols and recitations by the little children; and a showing of the picture, "King of Kings," attracted more than 250 people to Timber Ridge Church Christmas Eve.

The pastor and his wife were remembered with gifts of clothing—wool blankets, arrow shirts, socks and hose, shaving lotions, pajamas, ties, candy and fruit, shoes, and many articles too numerous to mention.

A gift purse of $75.00, and 650 gallons of fuel oil for the house furnace, were greatly appreciated.

One offering was $12.34 for Gifts to Ministers was made; another of $20.00 for the need in the community. Gifts were distributed to many families in the community, and everyone present at the church was remembered with oranges and candy—old and young alike. Old Santa himself delivered these gifts.

Our personal thanks go to all the good people here who have proven their loyalty to pastor and wife—making this the best Christmas in our five years at Timber Ridge. God bless you everyone.

REV. R. D. COULTER & WIFE.

BRIEF HISTORY OF BETHEL CHURCH, ARLINGTON, VA.

The Arlington Mission was enrolled by the Board of National Missions of the Evangelical and Reformed Church in February, 1941. Dr. and Mrs. Lee A. Peeler of Staunton, Virginia, were challenged to take charge of it. They accepted the challenge and began work on May 15 of that year.

Services were held in a school house in the community where it was decided to establish the mission until October 24, 1943, when the congregation entered into the basement unit of their new church.

This unit was used for all purposes until November 21, 1948, at which time the opening services were held in the new nave and sanctuary. This part of the church was dedicated April 3, 1949.

The church is built of Northern Virginia stone. Due to the high cost of construction, it represents an expenditure of approximately $92,000. An educational wing to the rear west of the present building will be erected later. The congregation also owns a parsonage at 1 North Granada Street. Payments on both buildings constitute rather a heavy load, but so far they have been able to carry it, with some outside assistance.

The attendance at worship is good. The membership growth is not rapid due to the fact we are in a rapidly changing community. But a group of faithful people are being secured and developed.

The church is located on Lee Boulevard, the main street, going east and west, through Arlington. We are under the shadow of the Nation's Capitol. All friends who come to Washington are invited to visit our church.

Dr. and Mrs. Peeler have continued in this work.

THE COUNCIL CAN BE KNOWN BY ITS ENEMIES.

Re-editing the old adage that a man shall be known by the company he keeps, Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, associate general secretary of the World Council of Churches, declares that the ecumenical movement can be known by the opposition it has aroused.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Friends of the World Council of Churches held on December 13 in New York City, Dr. Leiper gave a gusty description of sundry "enemies of ecumenicity."

First, the nervous conservatives who take fright at the thoughts that Christ might really turn the world upside down through a new vision of what is involved in having His will done on earth as it is in heaven.

Second, the Moscow Patriarchate and those influenced by it in this and other lands who see the fundamental challenge to dictatorship, the police state and atheistic communism which this movement creates.

Third, the over-eager proponents of immediate merger of all churches who want to see the Council make itself a marriage bureau or a match-maker.
These friends forget that the initiative in organic union must come from the autonomous bodies which compose the Council to which they have given no mandate to coerce them!

Fourth, the demagogic fundamentalists who seek to disrupt any and all church movements which do not conform to their own rigid patterns of doctrine. These have become increasingly vocal of late and have disturbed many with their incredible misrep-

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE BLESSINGS WHICH INHERE IN CHRIST.

"He that spared not his own Son,
But delivered him up for us all,
How shall he not also with him
Freely give us all things?"

This truth, absurd and unbelievable to some, finds constant fulfilment and illustration. Ministers, Christian people, Christian communities, Christian nations, find that their greatest blessings stem from Christ. Even those of apparently secular origin may be motivated by Christ, even by remote control.

Our civilization can by no means be explained fully on the basis of material resources. The inner springs of gratitude and generosity, stewardship and philanthropy, love and mercy, work according to a spiritual as well as a natural law. Look at other lands with equal fertility.

When we give Christ to individuals and to the world, we give the great gift, the all-inclusive gift. Christ is the great blessing to individuals and nations. Having him, we have all. With him, untold blessings are forthcoming, concomitant. This is the faith of the minister, the missionary, the humblest Christian. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

VOLUNTARY DEATH.

Bethlehem and Calvary, Christmas and Lent—these are not only times and places, they are events. They typify the two magnetic poles of Christian experience, the two inescapable elements of all religious living.

Said Paul: "I die daily." No, Paul was not in the dying and dry-cleaning business, neither did he operate a beauty shop. His was an experience in which one thing died that another might live. There was a steady resoluteness to his endeavor that was nothing less than excruciating. His motto was neither, "Take it easy," nor, "Let well enough alone." He spared no faculty in the prosecution of his God-given task. His was a daily routine of purposeful abstemiousness.

Ours is a great age in which to live. The Christian must die to many of the worldly appeals of luxury in order to live redemptively today. The Christian is one who has learned to suffer many things, or without many things, for Christ and his cause.

Our pilgrimage from Christmas through Lent should be a rewarding and redemptive one. The death of Christ should be a daily, spiritual experience. Let the weeds die in order that the flowers may live. The multiplied sacrifices of innumerable Christians can bless the world.

TRUMAN DOUGLAS ANNOUNCES HOME MISSIONS CONFERENCE.

The first nation-wide interdenominational planning conference of Protestantism home mission leaders in over 20 years will take place at the Home Missions

Congress in Columbus, Ohio, January 24 to 27. The meeting, sponsored by the interdenominational Home Missions Council of North America, was announced by Dr. Truman B. Douglass, president of the organization.

A thousand officially delegated home missions executives and church leaders of 23 Protestant denominations will meet at the Congress to draw up a ten-year Christian program to deal with the problems of poverty, sickness, racial tensions and social dislocation, the mission executive said.

In preparation for the Congress, Dr. Douglass said, church and other specialists have made extensive surveys covering the church in rural and urban areas, Protestant institutions, mission work among migrants, share-croppers and Indians and a score of other activities both here and outside the territorial United States.

Seminars at the Congress will cover every phase of home missions work on the basis of these studies, he continued, and from their findings the Congress will adopt a nationwide plan of Protestant action for the next decade.

One of the crucial issues to be discussed by the group, Dr. Douglass said, will be the role of home missions work among special language, racial, religious and economic groups.

Included in this phase of the conference's work is an evaluation of the church program to the nation's 350,000 Indians, who are being dealt with, he stated, "by an outdated system of paternalism and racial inequality."

The question of Christian-Jewish relations will also be aired, he said, adding that "home missions need to develop a truly Christian answer to the questions raised by anti-Semitism in the Church and their implications to its program of evangelism."

The Congress will also act on the relationship of religious institutions to state and national governments, especially in the field of education and child welfare.

"One of the problems Protestants must be prepared to answer," Dr. Douglass pointed out, "is that of the future role of Protestant institutions in the light of expanding government social and welfare services."

The future of the church in rural and urban areas will highlight other Congress discussions, he said. In the city, he explained, Protestantism is seeking ways of reaching low income groups, which it has been accused of neglecting, while in rural areas, the main problem is to "re-church" on a rational basis rather than "through cut-throat competition between denominations."

Other topics to come before the Congress include human rights and the secularizing influence of comic books, modern advertising and commercialized recreation, he said.

"Since home missions groups last met in 1930," he said, "we have passed through a major depression, a devastating war and a period of tremendous technological and social change."

"Today it is imperative that leaders in the home missions field take stock of the changes and design a new program to fit the needs of the coming decade."

Among the church leaders who will address the Congress are Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, Union Theological Seminary, New York; Dr. Ralph Sockman, Christ Church, New York; Dr. Mark Dawber, co-executive secretary, Home Missions Council; Dr. Hermann N. Morse, General secretary, Board of National Missions, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and others.

At a special mass meeting during the Congress, public figures will speak on human rights issues.

Theme of the Congress is "Home Missions for a Christian World." A special feature of planning for the gathering is the inclusion of a representative youth delegation, with a view to stimulate interest in mission work.

No Faltering Here

The Executive Committee of the National Christian Council must have had a meeting of real significance at Shanghai late in October. Jimmie Chuan was there as a regular member, and Arthur Rinden as a member of the staff. Several things said and done will be of interest to you, I am sure. Dr. Wu Yifang, president of Ginling College, in introducing Dr. T. C. Chao of the Yenching School of Religion, "reiterated the need for complete frankness of speech in this new era, and declared that religious freedom would be a reality under the New Democracy. Chairman Mao Tse-tung had himself lauded the missionary spirit. The Christian Church in China must strike its own roots deeper, and in the spirit of Christ make its distinctive contribution towards implementing the social revolution being carried through according to the new Government's policies."

It was resolved "that a Joint Office be established in Peking by the Church bodies and national Christian organizations interested, to fulfill liaison functions between the Christian Movement and the Central People's Government." In a "Third Message to All Christians in China" a section on "Some Facts of History" called attention to the "very real contribution to the early beginnings and humble struggles of this movement which has now awakened China to a new destiny" made by the Christian Church in the teaching and practice of science, the promotion of literature in the vernacular, phonetics or romanization, education in general, the emancipation of women and of the working man, and the raising of the level of living for rural people. "In recent years . . . the contribution made by the Church has on all sides been surpassed. The Church not only views this fact without the slightest dismay, but feels the keenest joy, since the function of the Heavenly Kingdom among men, originally likened to that of yeast in the dough, is the task of showing the way and of setting things afoot. . . . In this new situation the Church should readily accept criticism, and engage in its own self-examination. We must discover our faults, and truly repent of them; on no account are we to pride ourselves on our pioneering progressiveness," but make sure that in all departments of Christian service we "strive towards making complete the Christian's distinctive contribution." After a number of specific recommendations it concludes, "To sum up, the Christian Church in China must serve the people—individuals, small groups, and the masses—with Christian faith, in Christian love. . . ."

In an accompanying "Message from Chinese Christians to Mission Boards Abroad" the meeting went on to say, ". . . From now on, a new political concept, a new philosophy, a new creed and a new mode of life will be instilled into the masses of the people with a vigor that is hitherto unknown. . . . Much of western culture that has been introduced in recent years will be re-examined and shorn of its undesirable elements. Out of this will be born a new China, radically different from the old. Compared with the present moment, the change of dynasties in the 4,000 years have little significance; the revolutions of 1911, of 1927, and the war of resistance are but wavelets in the rapids of time. . . ."

There are "challenges and difficulties lying ahead." "Just how the Christian gospel can be witnessed to in a clime that is, by virtue of its ideology, fundamentally materialistic and atheistic presents a challenge stronger than ever before. Whatever the external clime may be, the burden falls upon us Christians to demonstrate the efficiency and sufficiency of the gospel as exemplified in the life of Christ."

Will there be a place for the missionary? "There is nothing in principle which makes the future position of the missionary untenable, or renders his service unnecessary. On the contrary, there is a definite challenge to work and serve under adverse circumstances, and to bear witness to the ecumenical fellowship. . . . The future contribution of the missionary will lie along lines of special service projects, and not along administrative lines. To be, to share, and to live will be a significant contribution in itself. . . . The missionary, from now on, will be living and working in a setting that is entirely foreign to the new comer. Difficult physical and mental readjustments will be demanded from him. . . . The missionary will be placed in a political environment much different from the one he is accustomed to. . . . The missionary will be living in an economical environment, whose standard of living is much lower than the one he is accustomed to, and in which practice of austerity will be the rule rather than the exception for some time to come. . . . Travel is likely to be restricted. . . . Adjustment for families is likely to prove more difficult."

Regarding financial support, "there is nothing in principle that prevents its continuance. It is understood that mission funds are still welcome provided no strings are attached. It is to be stressed here, however, that such financial support should be regarded as temporary in nature, and it is the duty of the Chinese church to build up its own support as soon as circumstances permit." And the "Message," signed by nineteen Chinese, every one of them a distinguished churchman and citizen, concludes: "The Christian movement will have its due place in the future Chinese society and will have a genuine contribution to make. Its future road will not be a bed of roses. To build a new nation of the ruins of the old will not be easy, neither will it be easy to build a genuinely Chinese Christian movement. Difficult as it is, the task will be easier if we can clear away some of the unnecessary obstacles in the way which we ourselves can remove. The Chinese church will not emerge through this historical change unaffected. It will suffer a purge, and many of the withered branches will be amputated. But we believe it will emerge stronger and purer in quality, and a more fitting witness to the gospel of Christ."

DR. LAUBACH BEGINS ANOTHER CRUSADE.

Proper application of President Truman's Point IV program to human needs, coupled with an attitude of "surprising kindness" in international dealings can accomplish more than anything else to stop Communism.

This view was expressed by Dr. Frank C. Laubach, pioneer missionary educator and literacy expert, on the eve of his departure for Africa, where he will lead another six-month literacy crusade in eight countries. He will leave New York January 16.

Dr. Laubach, who spends approximately six months of every year teaching primitive and backward people of the world to read their own language, urged Christian groups in this country to press vigorously for a "good bill" to carry out the President's program to aid economically backward areas.

In the event the right kind of a bill is passed, Dr. Laubach said he wants the Church to establish a "Central Recruiting Station" for Christian technicians. These people, who would be made available for possible employment in the Point IV program, Dr. Laubach said should be "of magnificent character, devoted to their fellow men, and above all, expert technicians."

He admitted his proposal might be rather revolutionary for the Church, but he pointed to the fact that "the world needs Christian plumbers, just as badly as it needs ministers and evangelists."

Furthermore, he sincerely believes that the United Nations and the U. S. Government would welcome such a panel of Christian technicians, and would make it a point to use them to good advantage.

One point Dr. Laubach said he wished to clear up before leaving was press reports describing him as a leader in a united Christian campaign to stop Communism. He said that press reports had been especially wrong in attributing to him a call for Christian missionaries "to infiltrate the Iron Curtain."

"I do not want the Church to be identified with a fight against Communism in the conventional sense of the word," he said. "I want the Church to fight Communism with Christian love and surprising kindness."

One of the Christian leaders who helped establish a prayer room at the United Nations Headquarters, Dr. Laubach believes that prayers for Stalin's conversion are not amiss. "Furthermore," he added, "I don't think Stalin would resent it."

On his latest trip to Africa, which he has visited on four previous occasions, Dr. Laubach will organize literacy work in Liberia, Angola, Mozambique, Nyasaland, Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi, Uganda and French Cameroun.

In Liberia, he will be a guest of honor at the launching of a nationwide literacy campaign to be conducted by the government and missionaries. He will be accompanied by his son, Robert, who acts as reporter and photographer; Dr. and Mrs. J. Maurice Hohlfeld, Professor at the Kennedy School of Mission, Hartford, Conn., and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Gray of Boulder, Colo., who illustrate Dr. Laubach's literacy charts and graphs.

The work of Dr. Laubach is supported by the Committee on World Literacy and Christian Literature, an interdenominational body, supported by 33 major Protestant denominations.

INSTITUTE OF RELIGION SCHEDULED.

"The Paths to Peace" is the theme of the Eleventh Annual Institute of Religion, held under the sponsorship of The United Church, corner of Hillsboro and Dawson Streets, in Raleigh. To discuss various phases of the international crisis and the need for world organization, six outstanding analysts or makers of world policy will speak at 8:00 p. m., in the church, on the following dates:

January 23—Dr. David Bradley, eye witness observer of the atom bomb experiments at Bikini atoll in 1946; author of the best seller, No Place to Hide; active member of the United World Federalists. He will speak on the topic: "World War or World Law."

January 30—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, Director of the Department of Trusteeship of the United Nations; Acting Mediator for the United Nations in Palestine, following the assassination of Count Folke Bernadotte, whose patient diplomacy led to the settlement of the Israeli-Arab dispute. Dr. Bunche's subject is: "The United Nations' Peace Effort." (Note: Dr. Bunche will speak in the Raleigh Memorial Auditorium at 8:15 p. m.)

February 6—Dr. Max Lerner, former editor of The Nation, and editorial writer for PM; expert in foreign affairs and government; now columnist for The New York Post and Home News, and member of the faculty of Brandeis University, and the New School for Social Research. Dr. Lerner will analyze Soviet-American tensions, speaking on the subject: "America and World Leadership."

February 13—Dr. Dorothy Fosdick—daughter of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick—the only woman member of the State Department's Policy Planning Staff. "The Foreign Policy of the United States" is the subject of Dr. Fosdick.

February 20—Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, professor of philosophy at Earlham College; distinguished leader of the Society of Friends; brilliant theologian and author of such widely read books as The Predicament of Modern Man, Foundations for Reconstruction, Alternative to Futility, and The Common Ventures of Life. Dr. Trueblood's subject is: "The Christian Faith in the World Civil War."

February 27—Dr. Robt. M. Hutchins, Chancellor of the University of Chicago, one of America's foremost educators and intellectual leaders. Dr. Hutchins, who served as Chairman of the Committee to Frame a World Constitution, will speak on "World Government."

Fellowship dinners will be served on each Institute night at 6:00 p. m. The cost is $5 for six dinners, or $1 for single dinners. Study classes will meet at 7:00 p. m. Courses will be offered on "Meeting the Changes in Family Life," "World Government," "Art in Modern Living," and "Public Housing and Human Welfare."

For additional information or dinner reservations write: Rev. Frederick B. Eutsler, The United Church, Corner Hillsboro and Dawson Streets, Raleigh, North Carolina.

HOLIDAYS ARE DOLLAR DAYS FOR E. & R. CHURCH.

The largest single offering in the history of the Evangelical and Reformed Church was expected on Dollar Day. Two thousand pastors asked 700,000 Evangelical and Reformed Church members to give their first dollar away on New Year's Day for world service. The Dollar Day offering was dedicated to the twenty million refugees in our world at a time when the world remembers three other refugees—Joseph, Mary and Jesus—taking refuge in Egypt.

Dollar Day is good news doubled! It is good news for all those millions who have not where to lay their heads. It is good news for members of the Evangelical and Reformed Churches.

THE NEW GYMNASIUM.

Construction of the new gymnasium has progressed quite satisfactorily. The building is complete. The painter is not through with his work nor is the plumber. Tile for the rest rooms is being set this week. The floors are being sanded and will be completed by Wednesday. The back boards and goals have been ordered but will not be here until later. Temporary equipment is being installed. The first game will be played in the new gymnasium on Saturday, January 14, at 8:00 p. m. Elon's opponent will be Catawba College. It will be a pleasure to welcome our many friends to this game in our new gymnasium. As stated above the gymnasium will not be completed and this will not be considered the formal opening of the gymnasium. This will come later. It would seem that work on this new undertaking has progressed more satisfactorily than the raising of funds with which to pay. Yet, we have done very well in this particular. The building will cost a total of around $230,000, including fold-a-way seats and other furnishings. Indications are at present, that by the time the building is finished, we will have about half the cost of the building in cash with between $75,000 and $80,000 of the remainder in pledges, leaving about $40,000 to be secured. We feel that this can be done during the current year. A lot of our friends in Alamance and Guilford Counties have been very considerate and generous. The following article announcing the gift of twenty thousand dollars to this fund by the Burlington Foundation is of great encouragement to all who are interested in Elon College and its advancement. As you read this article, I know that it will inspire you to help provide for the remaining indebtedness on this undertaking.

BURLINGTON FOUNDATION DONATES $20,000 TO ELON GYMNASIUM FUND.

The Burlington Foundation, a charitable trust of Burlington Mills Corporation recently donated $20,000 to Elon College for its new gymnasium that now is under construction.

Grover Furr of Greensboro, a hoisery division manager of Burlington Mills, made the presentation to Dr.

Leon E. Smith, college president, in the offices of the May McEwen Kaiser division of the company in Burlington yesterday afternoon, with representatives of both the corporation and college in attendance.

Mr. Furr said that the Burlington Foundation recognized the need for assistance to the college on its gymnasium project and for what the facility will mean to Alamance County, thereby considering the donation more than worthwhile.

In a letter to J. C. Cowan, Jr., president of the Burlington Mills, and Charles F. Myers, administrator for the Foundation, Dr. Smith expressed the appreciation of the college for the donation:

"I fail to find words to express adequately either the appreciation of Elon College and all it represents or my personal appreciation of this generous contribution.

"We are endeavoring to erect this gymnasium for the purpose of physical education of many Alamance County young people and others who may enroll at the college. We hope that you may experience increasing satisfaction because of the contributions that you have made to this worthwhile project.

"Last year, you will recall, you gave us a donation of $8,500. This makes a total of $28,500 that the Burlington Foundation has contributed to the erection of this building. These and other generous acts have endeared your organization to the people whom it serves and who look to Burlington Mills for employment.

"I note from the annual report of the New York Stock Exchange appearing in the Greensboro Daily News on Monday, January 2, that more than fifty-four million shares of Burlington Mills stock have changed hands during 1949. This is a convincing expression of the increasing confidence that the general public has in your company."

Dr. Smith then invited Burlington Foundation and Burlington Mills officials to be in attendance at the opening game for the gymnasium to be played against Catawba College on January 14 at 8 o'clock. The gymnasium has not been entirely completed but has progressed to the point that the game can be played.

All Foundation and company officials who can attend will be guests of the college.

Those in attendance at the presentation of the check yesterday other than Mr. Furr and Dr. Smith were John A. Boland, Jr., superintendent of the Decorative Fabrics division of Burlington Mills with headquarters at Piedmont Heights; John Harden of Greensboro, company vice-president in charge of public relations; George Bourdelat, personnel manager for May McEwen Kaiser division; Jimmy Darden, Elon alumni secretary, and Luther Byrd, college publicity director.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Our churches and Sunday schools did a very good job during 1949 in raising apportionments for the college. They did not raise the entire apportionment but they did raise a good share of it. We cannot start the new year with the inspiration of having completed the requirements of the old year but we can begin the new year with a resolute determination to do better and to make every possible effort to raise the entire apportionment for the year 1950. We are getting off to a fairly good start, a total of $122.64. It will be necessary, however, to average more than this week's total if we are to secure the entire apportionment in 52 weeks. I am sure, however, that we shall see that our offerings are increased as the weeks pass. At any rate, suppose we begin with a new year's resolution to surpass the old year in our offerings for the college.

VALUE OF A SERMON.

A gloomy English cleric once compared preaching with tossing a bucket of water at a number of open bottles—not more than a few drops land where they should do any good. The comparison will doubtless be meaningful to many preachers, but most of them learned long ago that the worth of sermons cannot be reckoned only in conversations and conspicuous reformations. No evaluation is complete unless it takes into account the total contribution it makes toward maintaining the religious and moral tone of the community. These results

MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES FROM THE ASIAN CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

The East Asian Christian Conference has met here in Bangkok as members of the Christian Church from twelve countries in Asia, and conscious of our privilege in being enabled thus to meet and of our responsibility as disciples of Jesus Christ, at a moment of grave peril and great opportunity in the history of this continent, we are constrained to send this message to our fellow-Christians in the countries which we represent.

We believe that it is God Himself who has made it possible for us to hold this first meeting of the representatives of the churches of Eastern Asia at such a time as this. Many of our countries have in the recent past endured great suffering and distress. All have entered upon a period of far-reaching change and upheaval. Some have entered—or are now entering—with mingled hope and fear, upon the tasks which follow a newly-won freedom. Others are in the throes of internal revolution and continuing civil war. All are conscious of new and powerful forces in the life of Asia which hold possibilities both of good and evil for the future.

Amid all the turmoil of the time we bear witness afresh to the eternal truth of the Gospel, the truth that the world has a Lord, a Judge and a Saviour—Jesus Christ. Constrained by His love and directed by His plain command we declare again that the Gospel is the saving truth for this as for every generation, and we urge upon the churches of Eastern Asia the duty of making the Gospel known to every creature.

In the struggle to found their national life upon the principles of freedom and justice, our peoples are threatened not only by forces which explicitly deny these principles, but also by the fundamental inability of unredeemed human nature to implement them even when they are explicitly accepted. But these very conditions constitute an urgent summons to us who have been entrusted with the gospel of redemption, and there is widespread evidence of eager desire on the part of multitudes to hear this Gospel. Doors are wide open to us in many lands. But some of these doors are likely soon to be shut. In some countries restraints are already placed upon the entry of foreign missionaries. In other areas the church has come under governments which aim to prevent the organized propagation of Christianity, and yet others are likely to come under the same conditions. These facts give a special urgency to our appeal to the churches of East Asia to undertake with a new sense of responsibility the task of so making Christ known in the power of the Holy Spirit that men may come to accept Him as Saviour and King, and to serve him in the fellowship of His Church. In this task both younger and older churches are bound together in a partnership of obedience.

We have received many evidences of the unchanging power of the Gospel at work in our own day to change men and communities. The Lord's arm is not shortened that it cannot save. Even where every effort is made by hostile forces to prevent the preaching of the Gospel, the evidence shows that when the whole congregation—its minister and every member of it—is committed to the task of witness, nothing can stop its advance and that just when the power of Satan seems overwhelming, the Church is granted new discoveries of the power of God.

We give thanks to God for the growing desire in the churches of Eastern Asia for unity in the common life of Christ's Body. We rejoice in the steps which have already been taken to this end in several of our countries. But we acknowledge with shame and penitence that we continue to sin against the Lord in presenting a divided witness to the world He came to save. We believe that God has called the churches of Eastern Asia to a special part in the fulfilment of our Lord's unceasing prayer that we may all be one, that the world may believe, and we earnestly call upon all our churches to pray and work that His will may be done. The conversion of the world is the work of God. We are but His servants, and our greatest task is to give ourselves, with the whole Church, to unwearying prayer that the peoples of Eastern Asia may turn to Him and be saved.

THE FUTURE OF MISSIONS IN CHINA.

A Statement from Foochow, Fukien, China, received in Boston December 27, 1949, addressed to The Congregational Christian Churches of America.

"Why should I keep on giving to missions in Communist China?" Are you one of the many church members in America who must be asking yourself this question? If so, we, the American Board missionaries of Fukien, would like to answer it for you, as we begin the fourth month of life under the new government, and enter the one hundred and third year of missionary work in Fukien.

"Freedom of Worship" and "Protection for Foreigners" were two of the slogans which were posted in proclamations a few hours after the occupation of Foochow by Communists on August 17, 1949. Later in the week when church leaders called on the new government, they were assured that churches and Christian schools and hospitals would not be interfered with, but encouraged to continue work. Party leaders have acknowledged that they have made mistakes in governing other parts of the country which they intend to avoid here. Without attaching undue significance to such statements, we wish you to know that, to date, all churches, schools and hospitals have been able to continue, and missionaries have been able to live and work much as before.

Meanwhile Christian institutions and individuals need financial help as never before. We believe it is the duty and privilege of the older churches to give this help to the newer churches, and to do it in increasing measure because of the new position of the church. The Chinese church, while becoming progressively more independent, is still far from self-supporting. Under the new regime all classes alike are in economic straits due to increased taxation and reduced earnings. Church members are less able than formerly to give to the church. School enrollments are greatly reduced, because parents are unable to pay school fees. The sick cannot pay for hospitalization. Thus the resources of these institutions are greatly reduced, while at the same time they are trying to make available to the poor as much free tuition and hospitalization as possible.

Missionaries are still wanted and needed. In line with a long-standing policy of the American Board in

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions
MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor
637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Woman's Convention Year Books have been mailed out to each church woman's group. Read them and use them so that you know what they contain.

Miss Virginia Brinkley reviewed the mission study book, The Seven Stars, at the meeting of the W. W. Staley Missionary Society of Suffolk Christian Church Monday evening.

Mrs. Carl Wallace, Spiritual Life Superintendent for North Carolina Women, has recently mailed out a set of worship services to be used in our Women's meetings. These are very helpful and very useful. Our thanks to Mrs. Wallace! (Any groups interested in receiving this set may write to the Convention Office at Elon College.)

"FAITH FOR OUR TIME."

World Day of Prayer is one month away—February 24, 1950. It comes toward the close of Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, when Churches and Synagogues all over the country will be stressing world brotherhood. Let us each urge our ministers to recognize Sunday, February 19, as Brotherhood Sunday and point out the significance of the World Day of Prayer as the climax of that week, when prayer for world peace and understanding will be carried around the world in ninety-two countries this year.

If World Day of Prayer chairmen and committees have been laying their foundations well for February 24, they have:

1. Arranged place of meeting.
 2. Planned publicity and displays.
 3. Held a retreat for leaders from each church.
 4. Ordered literature from headquarters.
 5. Planned the Services for Church women, children and, where possible, an evening service for men and women.
- Here are the suggestions for February:
1. As your Governor and Mayor for proclamations designating Friday, February 24, as World Day of Prayer.

2. Call your committee for a second Retreat for prayer and planning at which

- a. See if all necessary preparations have been made.
 - b. Present the projects, so that each member may be well informed as to the use of the offerings.
 - c. Send a letter with a poster, to each minister in the city.
 - d. Approach radio stations and give them suggested Spot announcements and the call for World Day of Prayer.
 - e. Ask each leader to have a prayer group in her church in preparation for World Day of Prayer. The number attending the World Day of Prayer Service should grow each year. This group may be increased by more education and experience in a prayer group in each church.
- f. Plan a meeting for the leaders and all participating in the service and have a complete rehearsal the day before, as well as prayer for the observance.—Taken from The Church Woman, January, 1950.

ORDER MATERIAL FOR WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

If you have not already done so, you should order immediately literature for the World Day of Prayer—from the United Council of Church Women, 156 5th Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. The booklet on "Helpful Hints for Committees" is all you will need to help plan your service. Start now so the service may be as impressive as possible.

The theme for the observance of the World Day of Prayer this year is "Faith for Our Time."

Today as we look out on a disturbed world, where many are embued with the spirit of pessimism let us as Christian women look ahead and hope and pray for a peaceful world—as the portrait painter sees the portrait on his unfinished canvass—let us see ultimately peace in a troubled world.

In 1941 Dr. Alexis Carrel, one of our great scientists said, "Prayer is that one can generate." Try to imagine if you will the energy that can be the most powerful form of energy generated by Christian women all over the world as they meet together and pray together on February 24!—(Last two paragraphs quoted from a letter by Mrs. Robert B. Campbell, Hickory, North Carolina.)

A FAMILY BEGINS THE NEW YEAR.

Last evening we were talking as a family about our anticipations for the New Year. The effervescent daughter of the house began by saying, "Let's everyone be agreeable to everyone every single minute. And, O Mommy, let's raise the allowance!"

Michael followed with a suggestion that we plan many things to do together—such as the time we went as a family to see "Life With Father." As he put it, "Every two weeks let's do something big—something special!" There were suggestions of family picnics, fishing trips, and more opportunities to look at the family films. Michael said: "I like to watch us grow, and see our old pets again, and especially Daddy's color film of changing the guard at Buckingham Palace." Margaret Jane began marching up and down singing.

Michael interrupted: "Quiet! I'm trying to plan next year!"

There were suggestions of ways to improve the Manse: Let's take linoleum from bedroom floors now that we no longer paint and do chemistry experiments there; let's build a new pingpong table; let's re-arrange the recreation room; and finally, Margaret Jane: "Let's do over the whole house and make every inch of it attractive!" Michael: "Remember, it's one of the oldest houses in town." Margaret Jane: "That doesn't matter. It can be old fashioned attractive." Lewis: "I don't want anything done to this living room. I think it is the most comfortable living room anywhere."

The only individual anticipation came from Michael: "I'm looking forward to joining the Church. This is the year for me." When he was questioned about it he seemed to feel that it had to do with growing up, attaining status, and being very important. Then he added: "I expect to know more Bible and to be able to read better books. You know I haven't been able to read the kind of big books that I have wanted to read." (He's had eye difficulty.)

After Michael and Margaret had gone to bed, Lewis and Mark decided that they would set up Michael's elec-

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

A-B-C-D . . . A-B-C . . . A-B . . . A . . . how many times have you said them? It isn't very popular nowadays to say them, but many children learned the alphabet before they learned any words and all of us have played with blocks marked D-E-F and looked at books with G is for Goat, H is for Home; I is for Ink, etc.

Last week I was browsing in the library. Do you know browsing? That's when you look at books, read a little, look some more and finally stop browsing and make a choice. I made a choice. I saw a book called The 26 Letters, written by Oscar Ogg, and it came to mind that you readers might be interested in this history book. Yes, it tells the history of the alphabet from A to Z and how they developed, beginning with the drawings of the cave animals made by cave men long, long ago.

There are many pictures in the book and some of the letters look very queer. I turned the book upside down to try that angle and they looked just as funny. Finally there was a page that had neat columns that showed the growth of these letters. Just as you grow from size 1 to 4 to 8 to 12; so the letters grew.

The Phoenicians made a sign that looked like our question mark without the dot and the Greeks turned it into a roof top but the Romans turned it on its side and it became our L. The Egyptians made a wavy mark for water and it finally became our M, which does look something like a wave of water, doesn't it?

Mr. Ogg described the pens that have been used. The earliest ones were stick or stone. Then the stylus was used. It was "pen-like" but certainly not like the free-flowing ball points we use. He also tells of the kinds of books and materials used for printing and the development of printing.

The most beautiful writing ever done, was that of the monks in the Christian monasteries where they copied by hand the books of the Bible, the psalms and songs then in use. Not only did they copy the letters but they drew beautiful illustrations in rich color and deep gold. The capitol letter beginning each first paragraph was especially pretty. Smaller capitals marked the paragraphs that followed. Copies of these illuminated books are to be seen in museums and are most worthwhile to see.

He ends his delightful book with this reminder: "Always write carefully whether you write large or small.

And that's all."

THE DIARY HABIT.

By ANNIE L. GAETZ.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Mother, Mother, he's come! he's come!" shouted Glen, as he rushed into the kitchen, quite regardless of muddy feet.

"Who's come?" I enquired, perhaps not very graciously, for I had just washed that kitchen floor.

"The robin has come, and he's five days earlier than last year. I can prove it by my diary," he added, bringing out the book for my inspection.

When Glen was eight I bought him a blankbook. It was of good paper and had a substantial cover—this was his first diary. In the beginning, I gave him a little help with regard to its use. I suggested that at the top of each page he write the month and year, and, in the margin, the days of the month; also, that he leave an unused line between each entry. I insisted that he write neatly, and I helped him to understand what sort of things would be worth recording. For these, he at once began to watch.

At first, his entries were very simple. Opposite one date was the word crocus; following another, was gopher; after a third, was robin; and following still another, was bluebird. Since he was interested in sketching, he insisted on making a drawing to illustrate each entry where possible. This caused him to look at objects more carefully.

"Mother," he asked one day as he was enjoying the early pages of his record, "now I have covered up the names, can you tell which of these two birds I intended for a swallow?"

I was obliged to confess that I could not. He then showed me a more recent drawing of the two, and it was quite easy to distinguish the long slender form of the graceful swallow.

"I can draw better now," he said with satisfaction.

This was not all. As Glen had progressed in school, the entries in his diary had become more explicit. He had learned to notice and to put into good English the interesting, amusing, and unusual happenings of everyday life, both indoors and out. He soon found that every day provided him with something worth recording.

When Herman, a younger cousin of his, visited us, this little boy became so interested in the diary, that, with Glen's help, he started one of his own. His initial entry was under the month of November, and read: 28, First Snowstorm. To his great delight, Glen showed him how to draw a magnified snowflake.

My son is eleven now, and his diary is one of his most prized possessions. It has taught him to be observant, to be exact, to record accurately and to select the illuminating details from the non-essentials. It has developed his ability of self-expression, too, enlarged his vocabulary, given him a deep interest in nature, and proved a delightful pastime.

In years to come, Glen's diary may be of occupational value to him. Should he develop journalistic ability, and this seems likely, his record will always prove a reliable source of information. In any case, the diary will remain a rich storehouse of reminders of happy days. By all means, encourage a child to keep a diary.

SHALL WE BE "MODERATE"?

I am emphatically opposed to any suggestion that we abandon the support of total abstinence from alcoholic liquors and henceforth favor and encourage a policy of habitual moderate indulgence. This way destruction lies. There can be no compromise in this fight. We must take our stand upon the basic principle of total abstinence. . . . The current plea for moderate drinking is nothing more or less than an indication that our wet friends are scared to death over what new experience with the liquor traffic is demonstrating. We are moving right back into chaos, and these Wets know that this means a swing of public sentiment back to Prohibition. The Wets want to forestall this, and so they resort to this miserable and dangerous subterfuge. The whole thing should be fought as we would fight a snake. Keep up the good work.—John H. Holmes, D. D.

There are only four things that are really worth-while: to gain wisdom, to do good, to be kind and to have faith in God.—Earl Riney.

NEVER UNDERESTIMATE THE POWER OF A WOMAN.

There is an old saying that "the first million is the hardest," but the United Council of Church Women doesn't believe it.

Beginning this month, presidents of state councils of church women, in cooperation with the United Council's headquarters staff at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, will start making up an Ecumenical Register of Church Women—the first Million, they call it. They expect to reach the million mark by mid-November.

The project is planned as a demonstration of church women's interest in the new National Council of Churches of Christ and in the ecumenical church—"the whole church in the whole world."

The Register will list names, addresses and denominations of the first million church women who want to stand up and be counted. They will be included in the official register when the United Council, along with six other interdenominational agencies, merges in the National Council the end of this year.

"If there are others who wish to add their names after the First Million are registered, they will be gladly accepted," explained Mrs. B. W. Hamilton, chairman of the Registration Committee, "but the only big effort now considered is for 1950. This is not intended as an annual affair."

Names will be taken through state and local councils of church women and will be finally totaled at the United Council's National Biennial Assembly in Cincinnati next November. This will be the church women's final meeting as a separate body before they join the larger organization.

Women signing the register will each give a dollar as a token of their interest, Mrs. Hamilton said, and the money will be used as a means of bringing about greater understanding and cooperation among the women of various church groups.

The project originated at the national board meeting of the Council in Los Angeles last October, when denominational and state council presidents received a letter from Mrs. T. O. Wedel, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Wedel had heard the debate in earlier sessions on what the church women were bringing to the new National Council. "Not bishops or build-ups," one delegate phrased it, "but millions of devoted women."

The problem was that somehow no one had ever counted, exactly how many women made up the United Council. Mrs. Wedel, in her letter, suggested the women be listed and each of them, paying only a dime, help secure financial backing for their part in the National Council.

The delegates' first response when they heard the letter read was a hushed silence.

"We had a real sense of the presence of God in our midst," Mrs. Harper Sibley, Council president, said afterwards. "We had a conviction of the Holy Spirit moving among us and moving us."

Then action began. "Let's start now," one delegate said. She came forward with a dollar bill to the front table, and wrote her name on the blank side of a program. In a moment every woman in the room was pressing around the table, putting her name on the list, her dollar beside it.

Between then and the end of the year, discussions in New York, in Kansas, in California, in half-a-dozen places across the country, gave the project clearer shape. This month and next, meetings in the states will initiate the project locally, and envelopes will be distributed, inscribed with a special prayer of thanksgiving for church unity.

By next November's meeting, the Council expects that the Register will have the names of a million or more women to be counted for the Church of Jesus Christ.

Their dedicated dollars will also be ready for use—in projects postponed before for lack of funds; in providing leadership and help for the states, to enable their councils to grow in Christian usefulness; in enlarging the sphere of women's work in the church, in promoting an understanding of the ecumenical church; in participation in the World Council of Churches through the Commission for Women's Work; and the church women add, "in readiness for the unexpected opportunities that will arise under God's guidance as we work together in our new unity."

CHRISTMAS ECHOES.

The American Board sends a Christmas letter to those who share in its mission.

Blessings abound where'er He reigns;
The prisoner leaps to lose his chains;
The weary find eternal rest,
And all the sons of want are blest.

Where Christ has been preached in Africa, in China, in India—this is true. It is true in Japan, the Philippines, in Micronesia and Mexico. It is true in Europe and the Near East.

People have found a more abundant life because Christ has come to them and dwelt among them.

Listen to these voices at this Christmastime:

From India—"In the past two years the atmosphere of this district has changed and improved, because of the opening of the Christian College."

From the Near East—"I am just a villager, and don't know much about religion, but I know the work of that doctor is the work of an angel. I live because he visited me."

From Japan—"All of a sudden the black iron wheels of the earthquake came rushing upon us . . . and then, as if from a corner of heaven, the Christian messengers in white came for our rescue."

From China—"Until recently children had no place to play except the streets. But mission schools have set the way, and government more lately is following on, to take the children off the streets and into playgrounds."

From Africa—"In this community, two Christians are the leading personalities. Where there is dissension in some quarters, the Christian central force is a God-send. Grateful for the church, we know the difference it makes in villages like this."

And so, to you who by your prayers and gifts have enable Christ to come to the lonely regions of the world, to you who have given so much to the lives of people through your Christian concern and sharing—to you we send our greetings. And we bid you be of good cheer; where Christ is born anew, the blessings He brings enrich the earth.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS LAW ON RIGHT TO WORK.

The Supreme Court of the United States recently upheld an Arkansas "right-to-work" law which makes it a crime to use force or threats to keep a worker from any lawful job.

Justice Jackson delivered the 8-0 decision, with Justice Douglass taking no part.

Justice Jackson said the Arkansas act does not "infringe the right of expression of views in any labor dispute."

Rather, Justice Jackson added, it "fairly apprises men of ordinary intelligence that for two or more to assemble and by force or violence prevent or attempt to prevent another from engaging in any lawful vocation . . . is unlawful."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR.

LESSON IV—JANUARY 22, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Be faithful unto death, and I will give you the crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.

LESSON: Acts 6:8-15; 7:54-60.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Peter 1:3-9.

A Powerful Lay Leader.

This man, Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was a layman. He was one of the seven men who were chosen by the apostles to take care of ministering to those who were in need in the Christian community or the Christian Church. These seven men are usually referred to as deacons, although the record in Acts 2 does not so state, or refer to them as deacons. But they were set apart to what seemed like secular duties by prayer and the laying on of hands, and thus the secular was transformed into the sacred. Stephen was a lay leader, commissioned and consecrated to the business affairs of the church.

But he was no ordinary layman. He was a man of unblemished character, a man full of faith and the Holy Spirit. He was also a man of superb evangelistic spirit. He became a faithful and a flaming witness for His risen Lord. And he began in a simple way to bear his witness in the local synagogues and perhaps even on the streets. At first the members of these synagogues, orthodox Jews, of course, discussed the matter with Stephen, but they soon found out that they were no match for the man on two grounds. They could not match his wisdom, nor could they match his spirit. He had a great mind and he had a great heart, and things happened wherever he went. These Libertines and Cyrenians and Alexandrians and those of Cilicia and Asia knew they were licked. "They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." (Acts 6:10.)

Fighting Truth With Force.

These men, like men of preceding and succeeding generations, tried to crush truth with brute force. Like the accusers of our Lord Jesus Christ they bribed witnesses to lie against Stephen, and they stirred up the people against him, appealing to the mob spirit in the multitude. They set up false witnesses who said that they had heard him blaspheme against both the temple and against the law of Moses, two very sacred things to the pious Jew, and they accused him of plotting against the temple and the law of Moses. There was a core of truth in their charges because Stephen had undoubtedly referred to both the temple and the law, and had probably proclaimed the superiority of Christian faith over the formal observances of the temple and the ritual. His defense before the council reflects this fact. The point of the story is that men, refusing to face and to acknowledge the truth, sought to destroy the truth with force. This has been a common practice through the centuries. We had striking evidence of it under Hitler's regime. We have striking evidence of it today as reports leak out from behind the Iron Curtain of how the Communistic dominated countries of Eastern Europe are attempting to suppress the truth by every means, except by meeting the truth with truth. Here as always under the circumstances, they are meeting truth with force, blind, brute force.

The Law of the Mob.

The crowd gave heed unto Stephen as he made his "apology" which means in the sense in which it is used, his "defense." It is a calm, carefully and clearly presented case for the spiritual nature and the imperious demands of the Christian religion. There was strange power in his words and an even stranger light on his face—indeed his face looked "as it were the face of an angel." Finally in desperation, driven by their deep sense of conviction, they rushed upon him, gnashing their teeth like a wild animal about to attack its foe, and dragging him outside the city walls—it would not be the right thing to take his life within the city walls—they beat him to death with stones. As a matter of fact the Jews did not have the right to inflict the death penalty, whether within or without the city walls. But what did that matter to a mob? What does anything matter with a mob? When the mob spirit lays hold of men they shrink at nothing, and they do things that as individuals they would never think of doing, and they do things that as individuals they regret to their dying days. A mob of men, ordinarily self-respected men, will lynch a man as a mob when hardly a single man would even think of taking a human life under any circumstances. This mob spirit lays hold on men in lesser things too. Young and old all too often are dominated by the law of the herd instead of by the voice of conscience. It takes courage to listen to, and to obey the still small voice.

The Strange Ways of God.

By a strange coincidence, which was really not a coincidence at all, when the members of the mob laid aside their loose garments so that they might with better accuracy and with more power throw the deadly stones, they laid these garments at the feet of a young rabbi whose name was Saul. The sight of that young man, Stephen, with that strange light on his face and those strange words on his lips, "Lay not this sin to their charge" went straight and deep to his heart. He never could get away from it. It is quite likely that it was the beginning of that mysterious process by which this man Saul came to be Paul through his meeting with Christ on the Damascus Road. In any event when years later Paul wrote to his friends he mentioned the matter in more than a casual way. It had been etched deeply in his mind and on his heart. God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform.

How God Helps.

A critic once asked Joseph Parker when he was only a young minister what God did for Stephen when he was being stoned to death. Forthwith Parker replied that God enabled Stephen to say, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And he added that in working that miracle of forgiveness in the soul of the dying Stephen, God did more for Stephen than if He had sent a legion of angels to protect him from the physical harm and death. That reply goes to the heart of the matter and emphasizes something that we all too often forget or overlook.

A Christian Death.

As Jesus died He said, "Father into thy hands I commend (or commit) my spirit." He knew whom he had believed and he was fully persuaded that God was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day. And as Jesus suffered he said, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." Stephen in like spirit said, "Lord lay not this sin to their charge."

And when he had said this "he fell sleep." Stephen did not die. To be sure they broke his body and ended his physical existence. But they could not do anything to Stephen's spirit with stones or any other thing.. And he simply fell asleep, to awaken in newness of life with his Risen and Everliving Lord. Stephen know that because Christ lived, he, too, would live. O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory? Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord."

MISSIONS IN CHINA.

China, we are continuing to turn over more and more responsibility for administration and planning to Chinese leaders. Yet, it is a fact that those leaders in all phases of the work are still very dependent on and eager for the advice and cooperation of missionary colleagues. The hope is repeatedly expressed that all missionaries who possibly can do so, will remain to work with the Chinese church in this new era. Our remaining depends on the continued giving of church members throughout America.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

eric train for him on a permanent tale in the basement—and together get im a new engine for Christmas.

We've learned the hard way about family conferences. We've learned that they must always be about something worth while (in the estimation of children); each idea once accepted must be carried out; gripes or complaints may come in—but the conference itself must be about something constructive and positive. No matter how difficult it may be to find time in a large and busy family we have discovered that Michael was right when he said: "Nobody should ever do anything big about anything without consulting everybody!"

FALL ENROLLMENT AT HARTFORD SEMINARY.

Forty-eight Protestant denominational groups are represented among the 217 students currently enrolled at the Hartford Seminary Foundation. Thirteen foreign countries and 37 States have furnished the 120 men and 97 women now enrolled in the three graduate schools of the Foundation.

Enrollment in the Hartford Theological Seminary is 75, and in the Hartford School of Religious Education, 79. "In the interest of doing the most effective work we can at the graduate level," Dean Willard T. Carter said, "we try to limit the enrollment in each school to 75." He pointed out that the number of students in the Kennedy School of Missions, now 63, is always determined by the action of the various mission boards in sending appointees to Hartford for specialized study.

Members of six Congregational groups among the students in the Foundation total 61. Other students include: Methodists 66, Presbyterian and Reformed 14, Lutheran 11, United Churches 9, Episcopal 6, Eastern Churches 3, and other denominations a total of 26. Five students belong to non-denominational local churches. Also enrolled as special students are one member of the Jewish faith and one Roman Catholic.

Foreign students are led in number by those from China, a total of 7, followed by Lebanon 6, Germany 4, Canada, India, Norway, and Scotland 3 each, the Philippines and Syria 2 each, and Brazil, Egypt, Finland and Turkey 1 each.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

You have herewith our final report for 1949. You have done well because 1948 was one of our biggest years, yet in 1949 you gave $347.99 more than in 1948. Thank you so much in behalf of the boys and girls here. They have tried to write many notes of thanks themselves, but even so they have asked me to tell everybody thanks for the big Christmas. Wednesday night, January 4, we had a big get-together of all the children and their matrons. We sang several songs out of the books which our Lynchburg Church gave us. Ann Truitt sang a couple of solos (which the children liked very much), I led them in prayer, then I talked to them about being thankful, getting down to real work in school, and told them the "whys" and "wherefores" of Sunday school and church. I tried to tell them how to be somebody, and suggested that they work hard at it now all the time. Sounds pretty drab—my part of it I mean—but they seemed to like it, and so many of them said please let's have these meetings more often. At least I began at exactly 7:00 and closed in one-half hour.

The staff members gave Mrs. Truitt and me a beautiful cooker, and we were so tickled with it we went right to Burlington on Christmas Eve and purchased some of the things it was recommended to cook to see if it did all that was claimed for it. It did, and we were thrilled. About one of the biggest gifts I received was from little Mattie who came up to me New Year's Day and said, "Dr. Truitt, I was going to get you a Christmas gift, but there was nothing good enough for you that I had money enough to buy!" If you knew the dear little girl who said that to me, and if you could have seen how sincere she was, you wouldn't smile.

What we need here is a contribution from every Sunday school in the Southern Convention every month. If you could know what I know about this Children's Home you would want your Sunday school to give one Sunday's offering each month. It is good for your children for them to be taught such generosity. God will bless their lives, and your church in this benevolent giving if you faithfully follow through on it.

I have made five charts—one for each conference. And I have made columns from January to December, following the name of every Sunday school. By looking at that chart any time I can tell whether your Sunday school is sending in its monthly offering—and how much. My secretary says there are many Sunday schools which never miss. How about yours? See that your Sunday school takes an offering every month and sends it in—either to the Convention Office or to me—in both cases you will be given full credit for it. It is good to have your Sunday school represented even though its amount may be small. The orphanage was planned and designed with the idea of every Sunday school contributing a monthly offering. When you have finished reading this letter check on yours and see if it is keeping its contributions coming monthly. Thank you and God bless you for every nickel, dollar and dime; for every gift, and card, and letter; and for every prayer and every kind word you have so graciously given. Support your church, your pastor, your missions, your college, and every enterprise of your church, and may you have the best of everything.

VALUE OF A SERMON.

are often both tangible and invisible. Let the preacher—and the church member—who has such moments of doubt in regard to the value of preaching, visualize his community without churches and all the influences that go with them, and he will realize that sermons accomplish far more than is usually credited to them.

ROY D. COULTER.

Ministers should not be merely like dials on watches, or milestones on the road, but like clocks and alarums, to sound the alarm to sinners. Aaron wore bells as well as promegranates, and the prophets were commanded to lift up their voices like a trumpet. A sleeping sentinel may be the loss of the city.—Bishop Hall.

In Memoriam

BOYETTE.

On September 28, 1949, our heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom called home Mrs. W. J. Boyette who was a faithful member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church.

We, the members of the Society, offer the following resolutions:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful member.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the divine will of our heavenly Father.

3. That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the great comforter who said, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

HARRELL.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church wish to pay tribute to the memory of our member, Mrs. Dempsey Harrell, who departed this life August 27, 1949.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

2. That we extend our love and sympathy to her family and pray God's blessings may comfort them.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

CROSS.

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, wish to pay loving tribute to Mrs. J. D. Cross who died November 23, 1949. She was a faithful member as long as her health would permit.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we miss her in the fellowship of our Society, we will always cherish the memory of her friendship and faithful service.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for comfort.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

NURNEY.

Whereas, it pleased our Heavenly Father who always acts wisely, to call home Mrs. George W. Nurney on June 30, 1949, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church offer the following resolutions:

1. That we try to emulate the high Christian standards and high ideals of service and kindness which were her daily living.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for comfort.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

HAYES.

On November 7, 1949, death removed from our midst Mrs. Annie Blanchard Hayes. She was a faithful member of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church as long as her health would permit.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That God doeth all things well and we bow in humble submission to His divine will.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to her family and commend them to the great Comforter who said, "Let not your hearts be troubled."

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

JOYNER.

Mrs. Mollie Nelms Joyner passed to her eternal reward on November 14, 1949. She had been a life-long member of Bethlehem Christian Church and was a regular attendant until she became ill. We deeply mourn the loss of this friend and member and shall always cherish her memory. We commend her example of love for God's Kingdom to all who knew and loved her.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we realize God doeth all things well and bow in humble submission to His will.

2. That we rejoice in the triumph of her release from the burden of pain to enter into life more abundant to be forever with the Lord.

3. That we extend our sympathy to her loved ones and commend them to our Heavenly Father's love and comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our church records, a copy be sent to the family and one be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. J. E. HARRIS,
Mrs. TOM POOLE,
Mrs. ANNIE R. SMITH,

SAVAGE.

On May 14, 1949, a beloved and loyal member of the Bethlehem Christian Church, Mr. T. U. Savage, was called to his heavenly home. He was unassuming and humble, but firm and steadfast in his devotion to Christian principles and practices. We mourn the loss of this friend, but being assured that he has entered the joys of the blessed, we are humbly resigned to His will.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we have lost a faithful member and that his fellowship with this church will ever be a sacred memory.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to his loved ones and commend them to our Heavenly Father's love and comfort.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our church records, a copy be sent to the family, and one be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. TOM POOLE,
Mrs. ANNIE R. SMITH,
Committee.

THE STUPIDITY OF PROFANITY.

Not only is profanity a violation of the Third Commandment, it is also a sign of inferior manners and a limited vocabulary. The efforts which some people make in trying to justify the use of profanity are so stupid that they hardly require mention, much less discussion.

Many people seem to be unconscious of the words they use when they employ profanity as a vehicle of speech. However, that fact does not clear them of guilt or give any quality to expression of which profane words are a part.

The prevalence of profanity among people today is little short of shocking. Professional men and men in high-ranking positions often do not hesitate in the use of profanity in conversation. Much as we dislike to admit it, we are forced to say that women in many walks of life are little better than men in this regard. I suppose there is no sound argument in favor of one standard of life for men and another for women, for God has not ordained such, yet it seems very strange and coarse for women to use profanity. We naturally compliment them by assuming that they live on a higher level than profane speech.

A great surprise frequently comes to a person when he hears some member of a church, prominent in local church official circles, use profanity. It is difficult to understand the thinking of such a person and his conception of the Christian way of living. In many such cases, it is not a mere "slip of the tongue," it is a practice all too frequent in everyday conversation.

If the effects of profanity, when indulged in by a member of the church, could be confined to that person, it would not be quite so serious as it is. In addition to the effects of profanity upon the church member using it, the person reflects unfavorably upon his church. Often people outside the church measure the church by what one of its leaders does.

The person who uses profanity brands himself in a more serious manner than he may realize.—Everette E. Harris, Associate Editor of the Telescope - Messenger in The Telescope-Messenger.

THE DOCTOR

By Mrs. Rose Upton Bascom
253 Concord St., Framington, Mass.

As I was walking in the hospital where I spent several days recently, I met a fine nurse holding a bottle of whiskey on her uplifted hand.

"Have some?" she question.

I stopped and said, "Do you know what is the population of the U. S.?"

"No," she replied.

"One hundred and forty million. Do you know how many drinkers there are in the U. S.?"

"No," again she replied.

"Sixty million drinkers. Do you know what Americans spent far alcoholic beverages in 1949?"

"No," she said.

"$1,004,566,000.00. Do you know what Lincoln said about our country in times of slavery?"

"No," again she replied.

"No nation can exist half slave and half free. Do you think we can exist as a nation half drunk and half sober?"

She didn't reply and I was offered no more whiskey.

Another nurse said to me, "God surely sent you here."

Southern Pines Presents Pastor a New Car

The Editor told the Publication Office not to put "his" picture on the front page. But it is such a good looking car and such a happy looking pastor and wife and church group that we couldn't help it. So just remember that it is Pastor House and not Editor House this time.

News Flashes

Dr. John G. Truitt was the guest preacher last Sunday at our Sanford Church.

The Editor attended the meeting of the Mission Board held at Bay View, Norfolk, on Monday.

Rev. O. D. Poythress announces that a cooperative training school will be held in the South Norfolk Church next week.

Norfolk's Fourth Annual Preaching Mission closed Sunday night with a record attendance of 66,207 during the week. Total collections were $9,328.60. Dr. Joseph Sizoo was the concluding speaker. A 1951 Mission is assured.

Dr. N. G. Newman preached at Oakland, Chuckatuck, last Sunday. Young people of the church conducted the devotional service. It is announced that the parsonage committee of Oakland and Berea Churches have decided on a temporary parsonage for their new pastor, Dr. H. S. Hardcastle.

The marriage of Miss Betty Estelle Blow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayland Lord Blow of Whaleyville, to James Wesley Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Live C. Lewis, also of Whaleyville, took place Sunday afternoon, January 8, at one o'clock at the home of the Rev. R. E. Brittle, the officiating minister, on the North Carolina Highway.

Through the generosity of Deacon E. W. Neville of our Church at Chapel Hill the home of the Convention Superintendent now has planted around it beautiful shrubbery. Brother Neville gave of his time and his connection with a good nursery concern to make this beautiful shrubbery possible. Mr. Neville is interested in his own church and is one of the most faithful members of our Chapel Hill Church.

ARE LAYMEN IMPORTANT?

Laymen are the most important preachers in Congregationalism. The entire work of the church rests upon the initiative, the good-will and the up-with-the-sleeves kind of hard work which they do. This is what the laymen from Arlington, Virginia, have to say.

Every church should be proud of its laymen. Most churches recognize them on one Sunday morning during the year and especially on the day when it is necessary to deal with the financial plight of the congregation. For three years the Rock Spring Church has given increasing recognition to the laymen during the vacation of the minister. The idea originated in the executive committee of the congregation and has been carried out each year by the deacons and ushers.

Within the congregation we have found that lay sermons are preached by businessmen, engineers, advertising men, "Y" secretaries and a retired Methodist Circuit Rider. After the month is over the usual reaction is "They all had something different to say." From what has been recalled the laymen did not shrink from large undertakings, they dealt with problems of national resources and of human resources. One layman talked about Church Union with a deep religious conviction. Another discussed the matter of our Civilization and whether or not it was really getting better basing his thinking on the text, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

A stranger came to the church during the month and indicated that he was willing to join the church because he thought that there must be something to a church where the laymen were able to preach and carry the full responsibility while the minister was away. So what the laymen said is really not so important. The impression they have made goes beyond mere words and has its effect in the congregation and on strangers in the midst.—Paul R. Hunter, Minister, Arlington, Virginia.

JULIA WILLIAMS BECOMES BRIDE OF JOHN MATTHEWS.

Mrs. Julia Powell Williams, daughter of Mrs. H. Richard Powell of Drum Hill, N. C., and the late Mr. Williams became the bride of John Rogers Mathews, also of Drum Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Mathews of Gates County, N. C., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Jones in Gates, N. C.

The Rev. R. E. Brittle, pastor of the Bethlehem Christian Church, performed the ring ceremony before an altar arranged with pine, magnolia, white roses, white camelias and lighted candles in silver holders.

The processional wedding march fram Lohengrin and the recessional march by Mendelssohn were played by Miss Norma Riddick of Whaleyville.

Just before the ceremony Miss Conrad Jordan of Whaleyville sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

LETTER OF APPRECIATION.

Smithfield, Va.,
January 6, 1950.

KIND EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

I enjoy THE CHRISTIAN SUN and feel hurt that I am not able to help support the various causes for which it stands. I pray the Lord will put it into the hearts of those who can, and will, do all they can to support every phase of work, especially the Jacksons, the orphanage and the college, etc.

Yes, like a house on fire—if I can't help put it out, I will sound the alarm. Faith and works based upon prayer and the Eternal Word of promise unto you and to your children, and to them afar off (the Jacksons) are not without its reward, if given the right-of-way. May all be thrifty in working for the Kingdom to come and His will be done in 1950.

MRS. MARGARET R. PULLEY.

CALLING A MINISTER.

Things to Remember.

There are some things to be held in mind always. First—We do have recognized academic and educational standards for Congregational ministers. The equivalent of a college degree plus a seminary training has been set as standard. Second—The State Conference office can get for you the record of any Congregational minister in a very short time. Third—The State Superintendent does not have power of placement. Churches must and do choose their ministers and the ministers should remember this. Fourth—The resources of the State office are available to every church as it makes search for a minister and every church making such a search needs that help. Fifth—There is no such thing as a "string of candidates."

The Process.

When the minister resigns, the first thing to be done is the call of a church meeting to act upon the resignation. This action ends the pastoral relationship. In the same meeting a Pastoral Committee should be elected. It becomes the duty of this committee to search for a new minister and when

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

NOTICE OF PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The Executive Committee of the Executive Board of the Convention in special session on January 9, 1950, considered proposed changes in the Convention having to do with the duties of the Treasurer (Article VIII, Section 4, page 36 of the 1948 Manual) which now reads as follows:

The Treasurer shall receive all funds through the Convention Office for the Convention and denominational enterprises, except for Conference interests, give receipt therefor, keep an accurate record of the same, shall deposit such funds in a depository designated by the Executive Board; shall disburse designated funds to Boards, Institutions and other agencies at regular intervals on order of the Superintendent, and shall disburse funds for Convention obligations on order of the President of the Convention. He shall make reports to the semi-annual meetings of the Executive Board, to the biennial sessions of the Convention, and at such other times as may be requested by the Executive Board or the Convention. He shall be adequately bonded and his accounts shall be audited annually as determined by the Executive Board.

VOTED: "That Article VIII, Section 4 of the Constitution, having to do with the duties of the Treasurer, beginning immediately after the semicolon and continuing through the remainder of the sentence, be amended to read as follows:

shall disburse funds for the Convention obligations as provided by the budget approved by the Convention or its Executive Board; shall disburse designated funds to Boards, Institutions, and other agencies at regular intervals; and may disburse for Boards and agencies their funds upon order of proper official of respective Boards or agencies. (The balance of the section remaining the same.)

VOTED: "That the Superintendent request the Secretary of the Convention to insert the above proposed amendment in THE CHRISTIAN SUN ninety days prior to the Southern Convention meeting, as provided by Article XV of the Convention Constitution on amendments.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Welcome, Dr. O'Neill

"God works in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform." An Irish lad by the name of Will Barnes O'Neill decided to become a preacher. That was natural and appropriate, for Ireland has produced many good ministers of Jesus Christ.

There was a time when ministers felt they had to go abroad in order to complete their theological training. Now the trend is slowly reversing itself. Young Will Barnes decided to try his fortune in America so he crossed the mighty blue and enrolled at Drew Theological Seminary. There he was trained in the arts he has pursued so effectively in his subsequent ministry.

Dr. O'Neill served churches in Montana, New York and Florida before going to Holland, Virginia. Under his leadership at Holland the setting for worship has been greatly enhanced. His virile and prophetic ministry has been felt throughout the community. The Eastern Virginia Conference and the Southern Convention are indebted to that Irish home which gave a son to the ministry.

Having completed his ministry in Holland last Sunday, Dr. O'Neill will preach his first sermon as pastor of our Sanford (N. C.) Church on Sunday. We congratulate pastor and people on a mutually happy choice. Dr. O'Neill will enjoy serving this loyal congregation in their church with its newly added facilities. The church will enjoy fully the mature ministry, the crusading spirit, delightful accent and liturgical finesse of Dr. O'Neill.

Having preceded Dr. O'Neill to Eastern Carolina Conference by a few months, the editor exclaims: "Welcome, Neighbor!"

Is the Bible Out of Date?

The Bible is not out of date for those who have eyes to see and ears to hear. It is not out of date for those who have the faith to test its precepts realistically.

Here is the story of Bethany Presbyterian Church in Haddon Heights, New Jersey. Under the leadership of the Rev. Jarvis S. Morris, the Parable of the Talents was reenacted. His congregation built up a borrowed $850 into a profit of $2,500 over a period of six months. Ernest Denter, nine, took $1 and earned $50 selling his mother's cupcakes. Leroy Dugan, a business man, took $30, rented a deep-freeze unit, bought wholesale meats for sale to neighbors and made a $60 profit. The pastor put $10 into a vegetable garden and it brought in $175. His wife conducted an art class. Other women sold plants, baking and sewing. Children ran lemonade stands.

The Bible should be lived as well as read. In too many instances the church has been as reluctant as the world to test the precepts of the Bible. There are a few obscure passages in the Bible, but there are many that are clear, practical and capable of infinite illustration and fulfillment. The Parable of the Talents could bring new life and vigor to many of our churches. Who is willing to try it?

Obituaries

One important function of a church paper is the publication of obituaries. Many ministers and families are eager to see that no details are overlooked in local arrangements for a funeral, but have no compunction of conscience concerning the church-wide interest in the deceased.

Christians are those who believe in and practice the communion of the saints. They neglect no opportunity to further the fellowship and communion of the saints. One small but indispensable way to do just this is to prepare an appropriate obituary on the passing of a saint.

Some families have been grieved when no mention of their loved one appeared in the publication to which they were subscribers for years. A minister has not completed his responsibility when the benediction has been pronounced at the graveside. An obituary notice should be forwarded without delay to the church paper.

Obviously, a publication of our proportions could not publish voluminous obituaries for every member of our churches. In many instances a simple announcement of funeral services will suffice.

The Master said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father in Heaven." The preparation of an appropriate obituary may be the last opportunity to let the knowledge of a good life shine, that others, being reminded of those good works, may glorify our Father in heaven.

After failing to get an obituary in, resolutions are in order. The usual formula, "That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication," is appropriate for the minutes of the resolving group and the copy sent to the family, but superfluous for publication. The monotonous repetition of this phrase in countless resolutions is an unnecessary burden in publication, and should be stricken from the copy sent for publication.

Alcoholic Myopia

By BISHOP EDWIN HOLT HUGHES.

The near-sighted persons are able to see clearly some one thing that is close to their eyes without beholding the many things in the farther distances of the scenery. A tree "seeable," but not the forest. The lamp-post shines plainly, but the cluster of stars in the skies dulls in concealing farness. There is, also, a mental myopia, and this of a kind that can be cherished and cultivated. In dealing with the beverage liquor traffic in this current period, many thousands of people have achieved this myopic limitation. For them, there is only one direction in life's compass, and not even the largest and most visible weather vane exists for them.

Of course, as hinted, this tendency is not confined to any one interest or cause. We all know men who are fanatical about golf, about baseball, about football, about tariff, about the New Deal, about the stock market, about types of literature, and even about fox hunting, with forty people, forty horses, forty hounds, pursuing one poor little animal in the name of sportsmanship! When this mood turns against some way of life, it becomes positively furious. Just now, antagonism toward a political party or emphasis may become violent and virulent. All of us have recently seen partisanship, Republican and Democratic, that are far more fanatical than the feelings shown by the most eager foes of rum. Perhaps a frequent definition might be put into this form: a fanatic is one who conscientiously favors a conviction in the moral realm against an appetite that is harmful or for a traffic that gives return of revenue. A silver dollar held before the eye can hide the vast sun!

III.

Some time ago, a judge, speaking in his personal capacity, stoutly proclaimed his indignation against the temperance extremists who would restrain him because there were men and women who did not know "how to handle their liquor." Declaring that he—though a fairly regular drinker—had never been drunk; had never disturbed society by the use of liquor; had lived up measurably to the ideals of citizenship; had become utterly weary of the cranks who would invade his liberty, and that he would thereafter break forth in rebukes for the moral assailants! Indeed, this threatened program sounded like a proclamation of verbal intemperance! Here again, we find myopia. This judge needed only a looking-glass large enough to show what he regarded as an admirable example. In this big reform he was what the philosophers would call a "solipsist," that is, a man who thought he was the only thing in the world. All other people were illusory. The view was that when your desire for liquor seized upon you, it was right to regard society as just yourself. Yet the great St. Paul, long ago condemned that psychology and insisted that in the matter of "food" and "drink" we were under obligation to consider others. The myopia that sees only the immediately-at-hand self, is a dangerous approach to moral blindness.

III.

There is, also, a constant tendency to regard each tragedy coming from rum's use as a single and isolated thing. A scholar once declared that it would be a correct literalism to translate an early sentence in the Bible thus: "It is not good for fact to be alone." In many realms one fact is morally joined by a thousand facts. When we find a single witness, a chorus of witness will crowd into the courtroom of life and will give corroborating testimony. There are some examples in the present liquor situation.

IV.

Recent headlines in the daily press tell of feminine tragedies brought on by alcohol. One records the fact that a grandmother killed her grandson when he came home drunk, and in a threatening mood; another, the story of a posse seeking a girl involved with a boy in a murder, and fleeing from a scene where empty beer cans, whisky bottles, and glasses littered the ground; another, the sordid tale of a 19-year-old drunken maid held in the stealing of a baby. The myopic observer may affirm that these cases are lonely things, yet the truth is that they have become frequent and common. One who clips from the dailies the accounts of tragedies that are caused by drink, affecting innocent victims and guilty imbibers among women; or one who consults psychiatrists concerning the visitors to their parlors; or one who looks either into prison records or into the lists of the sanatoria for the alcohol-ridden among women, will not lack for evidence of a growing destruction. Of many defenders or neglectors of the liquor facts, it could be truly said, "Having eyes, they see not."

V.

A kindred myopia exists in relation to automobile injury or mortality. That smashed machine by your roadside with anxious crowds gathering, and with the hospital ambulance shrieking along its race for the wounded, is not an isolated thing. It is a part of a long procession of disaster—and the procession often reaches its dreadful climax with a hearse. The viewers of the traffic courts are so plentiful as to be incontrovertible; and the statistics would be still more appalling if vigorous influence did not succeed in changing the words "drunken driving" to "reckless driving." We read in the Los Angeles Times, "Woman Driver Given 180 Days for Driving When Drunk"; or in the Raleigh Times, "Auto Runs Wild, Six Persons Hurt," the wildness being communicated to the automobile by a drunken Marine sergeant who disgraces his noble group; or in the South Bend Tribune, "Motorist, 22, Fined $110 on Drink Count." These stories are constant. They have been written in practically all our towns. For those who want a cure for their "near-sightedness," there are countless telescopes that will give black revelations. Do you desire the records revealed or concealed? Are you wholly determined to be partially blind?

The Margaret Mitchell case is a vivid and recent illustration. The gifted authoress is smitten on Atlanta's streets by an automobile driven by an intoxicated driver. A movie illustrating this tragedy is not likely to be placed upon the screen! If it were, the man at the wheel would have to be shown in the early film as the man at the bar! The title would not be "Gone With the Wind," but "Gone by the Alcoholic Storm." The effect of liquor would not then be represented as tiny whirlwinds of dust on the roadways, but rather by a rushing cyclone that disappeared into upward clouds to reappear to move destruction in thousands of places.

Certain readers will peruse the above and be quick to give the writer an uncomplimentary name. Let it be so. The retort is that myopia is a distinct physical limitation, and that proposed mental and spiritual myopia will not make a favorable entry for any recording angel of the soul's life.

It is not enough for a gardener to love flowers; he must also hate weeds.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

TRAINING SCHOOL IS HELD AT SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The Rev. Lelia Anderson of Yankton, South Dakota, a field representative of the Congregational Christian Churches under the Department of Christian Education, is one of the speakers at the Leadership Training School of the Suffolk area of the Congregational Christian Church. Classes started Sunday at 2:15 p. m. at the Suffolk Christian Church.

Miss Anderson, whose contagious smile and friendly approach win the cooperation of all who work with her, specializes in helping rural communities make religion vital in daily living. She prefers to pioneer in difficult jobs, especially the kind of thing that people say "can't be done."

Born and reared on a farm in Illinois, she attended a country school in which she later taught even before going on to high school.

She attended Monmouth College and Ileria Junior College in the Ozarks. Later she went to the University of Chicago where she won her M. A. and B. D. degrees.

While studying at Chicago, Miss Anderson did supply preaching. During the past five or six years she has been doing religious education work in the South Dakota Conference of Congregational Christian Churches.

Other speakers of the Training School are Revs. W. Millard Stevens of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, William J. Andes of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Duane Vore of the Suffolk Christian Church. Stevens is giving a survey of the New Testament, Andes a course on how to improve Sunday Schools and Vore on Youth Work.

Courses and Teachers.

212a "Teaching Children in the Church School"—Teacher: Miss Lelia Anderson, Yankton, S. D. The following topics may be considered in this course: (1) What is a lesson? (2) How does a teacher prepare for a class period? (3) How may lesson materials be used? (4) Materials and methods which help children to grow religiously.

311a "Teaching Youth." Teacher: Rev. Duane Vore, Suffolk, Va. This course deals with such matters as how learning takes place; how to use lesson materials; how to supplement these materials and relate them to the ongoing experiences of the group; how to deal with actual problems and needs of the group.

122a "A Brief Survey of the New Testament." Teacher: Rev. W. Millard Stevens. This course will help students get a picture of the contents of the New Testament by studying the books in groups, such as the Gospels, the letters of Paul, other letters, and Revelation. Also, the question will be considered, "What is the relation of the New Testament to Christianity?"

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

TRUSTEE MEETING.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College will meet in mid-year session Tuesday, February 14 at 10 a. m. The committee on finance, committee on faculty, and other committees will report to this meeting. The Alumni Association will be asked to submit a detailed report on the new Memorial Gymnasium now nearing completion. This is a very important meeting of the Board. Issues will be presented that will require careful consideration and definite decisions. Ministers, local churches, and individuals who may have matters of interest to the college to present are given the privilege of submitting the same to the president in advance of the meeting.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN COLLEGES MEET.

The annual meeting of the Council of Congregational Christian Colleges was held at the Netherland Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, on January 9-12 in connection with the sessions of the Association of American Colleges. Dr. L. E. Smith, President of Elon College, presided over the C. C. C. C. gathering with President Walter Giersbach of Pacific University as Vice-President. The Secretary of the Council, President J. Clark Graham, was unavoidably detained. Dr. Bryant Drake, 19 LaSalle St., Chicago, Illinois, was elected Acting Secretary for the meeting. From the headquarters of the Congregational Christian Church Dr. Harry Stock, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, was in attendance for all or part of the sessions. Meetings were held throughout the day on Monday, January 9, followed by a breakfast Tuesday morning. After an interval to permit attendance on the sessions of the Association of American Colleges, the C. C. C. C. meetings were resumed on Thursday morning and continued throughout that day with a joint session with the E. and R. college presidents that afternoon, these being also in annual convention. Adjournment was taken late Thursday afternoon after all C. C. C. C. officers were continued in office for another year.

Various matters came before the C. C. C. C. for consideration at this time; including the effects upon the Congregational Christian colleges of the merger with the E. and R. church; the status of Congregational Christian junior colleges, also of those colleges not belonging to an accrediting association; the relation of the Congregational Christian colleges to the Home Mission Board and other church agencies; and the more active and direct support of the church institutions of higher education by the church at large.

It was voted by the C. C. C. C. to request the Department of Christian Education of the Congregational Christian Church to determine which colleges are to be included in the term "Congregational Christian," also that a plan be worked out in connection with representatives of the E. and R. church, either before or after the merger becomes effective, whereby the church at large will be asked to carry on a campaign designed to supply larger financial support to the colleges included in the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed groups. It was also voted to invite the A. M. A. colleges as well as the theological seminaries operating under Congregational Christian auspices, to become members of the C. C. C. C. with a view to making the Council a more effective instrument for Christian education as carried on in those institutions of learning operating under the auspices of our denomination.

The next meeting of the Council of Congregational Christian Colleges will be held in January, 1951, at the call of the president.

WILLIAM MOSELEY BROWN.

THE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN COLLEGES.

The Association of American Colleges met in annual session in the Netherland Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, Ohio, January 9-11. The theme for the meeting was "Great Teaching." A number of reports and addresses bearing on this theme was given. President Gaines of Washington and Lee University spoke on "Great Teaching Plus." President Gaines is a magnificent speaker and always arouses the interest of his audience. He contended that the overplus of great teaching was not of the intellect but of the heart, that the teacher's passion for his job aroused in his student a desire for things beyond the realm of his knowledge. Wednesday morning session was given to the consideration of the financial needs of present-day higher education. President Stassen of the University of Pennsylvania addressed the Association on "The Relation of Business to Education." He emphasized the acute necessity of additional financial support for many of our colleges. In his argument, he presented the destiny of private enterprise and freedom of instruction as one and the same. He called attention to "Corporate Giving" and insisted that it is good business for corporations to give support to our privately endowed institutions. The President of the National Association of Manufacturers added his word of commendation for the support of free education by the corporations of our country.

It is wholesome, I think, when business through its representatives senses its opportunities in the matter of the support of higher education, and such, that business takes a part in the support of our non-tax supported colleges. This would seem to be an opportune time for our colleges to make a careful analysis of their holdings and determine their minimum needs for the continuation of their programs of instruction and the expansions required to meet future needs. A clear-cut, convincing statement of their affairs to present the same to businessmen and corporations for co-operation in securing the necessary funds to meet needs as ascertained by careful investigation. It is quite possible that our colleges move along at a far too slow a rate and with far too meager support simply because we have not taken time to analyze our needs or had the courage to make our request. The colleges do have needs. Men and women do have money with which to meet these needs and they will contribute if the needs are presented clearly and convincingly.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

It is almost proverbial that a bad start is prophetic of a good ending. In the case of the support of the college by the church, it is earnestly hoped that this prophecy will come true. Our report for the first week in the new year is not very auspicious. May it be the seed of an abundant harvest as the weeks and the months pass. The matter of financial support

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

MISSIONARY APPOINTEES.

Mr. and Mrs. David Albert Bergmark of Brooklyn, New York, former Massachusetts residents, have just been appointed as Congregational Christian career missionaries under the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Mass., for service in the Near East. They will be stationed in Istanbul, Turkey, where Mr. Bergmark will take over the post of Treasurer and Business Agent for the entire American Board Near East Mission.

Since 1946 Mr. Bergmark has been Executive Secretary of the historic Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, Congregational, in Brooklyn, New York, Dr. L. Wendell Fifield, minister.

A World War II veteran, Mr. Bergmark trained at Quonsett Point, R. I., and served with the U. S. Navy, part of the time in the Bureau of Aeronautics at Washington, D. C., and after the war for a period in the History Writing unit of the Chief of Naval Operations. Prior to the war he was with the New York Telephone Company in Brooklyn for seven years.

The Bergmarks with their three children—Julia 8, Pamela 6 and David 2—hope to sail early in the spring for Turkey.

At Plymouth Church, where the first two pastors were Dr. Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. Richard Salter Storrs, Mr. Bergmark has had complete supervision of the extensive church plant covering half a large city block, administrative supervision of a Day Nursery and has worked closely with Dr. Fifield on numerous community projects. Mrs. Bergmark, in addition to her full-time job as a wife and mother, has aided in the Church School, sung in the choir and has been the Devotional Chairman of the Woman's Guild.

"HERE AM I, SEND ME."

Miss Grace Marling Robertson, daughter of Mrs. A. J. C. Robertson, 742 Harrison Avenue, Beloit, Wisconsin, has been appointed a career Congregational missionary to Japan by the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Massachusetts. Miss Robertson will join the faculty of the Glory Kindergarten Training School, a Christian institution in Kobe, Japan, which teaches Japanese women how to be good kindergarten teachers.

Born in Rutherford, New Jersey, Miss Robertson was educated in the Beloit High School, the Chaff National College of Education, University of California and Ward Business School.

She goes to Japan with over eight years of background experience as a teacher in both kindergarten and primary grades in the public schools of Monroeville and Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Madison, Wisconsin.

Miss Robertson is a member of the First Congregational Church of Madison, Wisconsin, Dr. Alfred W. Swann, minister. Her interest in Christian foreign service began early. When she was in her teens she visited a missionary aunt in Cairo, Egypt, thus coming into personal contact with Christian missions on the field. The idea of becoming a missionary herself was further stimulated by the career of an uncle who was for many years a distinguished missionary in Northern Rhodesia.

Last summer Miss Robertson visited Holland, working with Dutch, German and American students in a Summer Work Camp where she dug potatoes by hand eight hours a day and "built friendships and memories and understandings which should last a lifetime."

Next month Miss Robertson will go to the Yale Institute of Far Eastern Languages and study Japanese and hopes to sail for her work in Japan in July or August.

BIBLE STUDY BOOK CHANGED.

There are no further copies of Purdy's book on the Gospel of John—the book which has been recommended for use this year. Instead, the book, These Are Written, by James E. Sprunt, 25c, may be used. This book may be ordered at the same address, Committee on Women's Work, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., Henry Grady Building, Atlanta, Georgia. It is reported to be very good and well liked by those who have used it.

WINSTON-SALEM WOMEN SPONSOR SUPPER.

The Woman's Association of Winston-Salem is sponsoring the serving of a Laymen's Fellowship Supper on Saturday evening, January 28. Laymen from Congregational Christian Churches and Evangelical and Reformed Churches in this area are invited. Profit from this supper will be applied on a fund which the women are planning to use for improving the pastor's study. A Standing Committee for making extra money reports each month and presents a new idea for making money, and this money is applied on the project. Last month, the women made aprons to sell, and the previous month they auctioned off pot plants.

MISS ANDERSON SPEAKS BEFORE BURLINGTON WOMEN.

Miss Leila Anderson, Field Representative of the Congregational Christian Churches, under the Department of Christian Education, spoke to about fifty women of the Burlington Church who gathered for the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary held at the church on Monday. She spoke of the influence the home has in the Christian training of the family, gave aids and helps to use in the Home Program. She also spoke of, and displayed, books and material pertaining to her subject.

During the business session which followed Miss Anderson's talk the news of the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Robinson and children was discussed. They are expected some time this week, but Mr. Robinson is not to assume church responsibilities until February 1. The women expressed delight over their early arrival and made plans to help make their change of home comfortable.

A real fellowship luncheon was served in the church dining room by Circle No. 4, under the leadership of Mrs. Earl Cates.

SUGGESTIONS FOR WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

The theme, "Faith in Our Time," should begin to appear everywhere and can be repeated in newspaper, on radio and in theatre, as well as in churches. People who never come to church are groping for that "Faith." May the World Day of Prayer help them to find it. For helpful and meaningful observance, note these suggestions:

1. Clear dates now with all important organizations in town.
2. Make your local observance sound irresistibly attractive.
3. Use the two filmstrips Thy Kingdom and The March of Missions ($2 each, purchase price—National Headquarters).
4. Circulate them in various departments of every church. Many clubs would use them.
5. Start your series of releases to local newspapers. Include dramatic stories from The Speakers Sheet. Lead up to stories of your local observance.
6. Approach theatres for use of The Call and Prayer on screen and in lobbies.
7. Arrange for window displays in business houses.
8. Then—send the story of what happened to National Headquarters.

Radio.

Besides spot announcements, plan carefully a four- or six-week series on "Faith." Tell human-interest stories of what it has meant to lives around the world, and in your community. Take good material to your local radio persons for consultation.

Sunday, February 19, 10:30 a. m., EST, CBS—Rev. Harriet Louise Patterson on "The Church of the Air" for: The World Day of Prayer.

Films and Visual Aids.

Film strips, motion and sound pictures and slides can be used to good advantage in programs:

1. To add inspiration to a worship service.
2. To furnish the basis for a discussion.
3. To motivate a group of Christian action.
4. To give background information.

* * * *

The January 1950 copy of The Church Woman contains several excellent articles on race prejudice, prayer and race, and so forth. Also a fine civil rights map of America explains just what states have discrimination, segregation, or no legislation regarding race. This map may be ordered in cloth for $2.00 and paper for $1.00 from Oceana Publications, 461 West 18th St., New York City, and would be a fine supplement to any program on race.

CYPRESS CHAPEL.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church met Sunday night, January 8, with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bunch. Mrs. J. W. Jones presided.

Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Roy Brinkley. Miss Nettie Harrell offered prayer. The society voted to buy a T. B. Bond. The president reported ten boxes sent to the shut in people in the community.

Mrs. G. C. Mann taught the Bible Study from the Book of St. John. Mrs. Roy Brinkley presented a program with Mrs. Paul Parker reading "New Year's Resolutions."

Mrs. Melvin Brinkley read "Shield of Faith." Mrs. J. P. Byrd read a poem, "Let Us Forget." Mrs. Grady Brown, a poem, "A Half-Mile from Churen."

Mrs. G. C. Mann gave the benediction. The society adjourned to meet in February with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Parker. The hostess served delicious refreshments.

An eminent surgeon was one day sent for by the Cardinal Du Bois, Prime Minister of France, to perform a very serious operation upon him. The Cardinal, on seeing him enter the room, said to him, "You must not expect to treat me in the same rough manner that you treat the more miserable wretches at your hospital." "My Lord," replied the surgeon, with great dignity, "every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence is pleased to call them, is a Prime Minister in my eyes, for each is one of God's poor." — Rev. W. W. Landrum, D. D.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS & GIRLS:

One of the nicest things about our church is its garden. Just across from the Sunday school is the lovely garden belonging to and cared for by the Church of Wide Fellowship.

There are many kinds of trees: arbor vitae, cedar, pine, holly and dogwood. There are shrubs and ivies. There is a green velvety carpet of grass . . . yes, right now, because our town is a winter resort.

A dignified looking sun dial tells the hours and many fat robins come to gossip and twitter. Squirrels chase back and forth and up the trees while an occasional mole dares dig a tunnel under the grassy lawn.

Benches invite passersby to stop and rest awhile and enjoy the quiet of this beauty place. A sign tells that the garden belongs to all and that they are welcome to stop.

At Christmastime there was a lovely manger scene in the garden. The background was of straw and before it stood the manger, the shepherds around the Holy Family and a grazing sheep. Many people paused to see this scene.

The garden has been here a long time. It was made possible by the thoughtfulness of some people. I tell you about it because I think many churches could have have one. Just a little plot will hold a few shrubs or flowers. A bird bath, a plaque of St. Francis the patron saint of the birds, or a niche with a religious figurine would make a beauty spot worth visiting. Many city churches need such a place. It would be a good project for junior boys and girls. If you come to the mid-Southland, please visit our garden.

"BRING A HORSESHOE!"

By IRMA DOVEY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"What does she mean—'bring a horseshoe'?" seven-year-old John was asking Kenneth as they left the schoolhouse.

"Oh, you know—one of those round thing you find in barns," Kenneth answered. "They put them on horses' feet sometimes."

John Still looked worried; blocks of wood and oatmeal boxes for drums would be easy to bring for the rhythm band, he reasoned—but a horseshoe!

As I stood by the window listening, I was amazed. Were horses now so rare that horseshoes were almost entirely unknown to children? It seemed impossible.

These children had read, with ease, material about helicopters from their little newspaper that morning. They talked of them intelligently and knew they were in use for rescue work and in helping to solve traffic problems. They knew about kodachrome pictures, about deep-freeze units, and radar. They were familiar with many things of which, at their age, I had never heard. Diesel engines, the radio, and zipper fastenings for snowsuits, for example, had not, of course, been known to me as a child, yet by the boys and girls of today they were taken for granted.

Are you keeping up with your children? Should you give more thought to changes? Or are you content to continue using a horse-and-buggy set of concepts in this rapidly changing world?

If you consider which terms have gained additional meanings, there are many that come to mind. There is "backing up." I heard a child of three use the phrase recently in speaking of a train. Somehow, to me it will always bring up a picture of a team of horses straining back against the doubletrees; that was my earliest percept of the expression. The children of today never had that mental picture. To them "backing up" may mean gliding easily backwards in a car, a bump and then a dizzying reversal of direction on a train, or stepping backwards.

In order to read understandingly, a student must know the various meanings of different words. This comes with experience. For instance, when the little child, reading from his first reader, sees the word duck, his past environment will define that word for him. He may think of a small waddling bit of yellow down; he may see a full-feathered bird floating on a pond; possibly, he may visualize a roast upon the dinner table. It is less likely that he will see the waterfowl as Wordsworth described it—a speck "darkly painted on the crimson sky" or that he will call to mind a kind of cloth, or think of the motion of dodging down suddenly.

Different meanings for the same word have long been accepted in our language, but during the last few decades new meanings and new words themselves have increased with great rapidity. Television, jet propulsion, atomic energy, and new mechanical devices of all kinds have brought many new words into common use. If we would keep up with the times and use these terms as readily as do the younger generations, we shall need to do a lot of reading and to have an up-to-date dictionary at our elbow.

When it comes to modern concepts for old words, learning is likely to be slower for the adult than for the child, because of the tenacity of old ideas and wonder at the new discoveries and inventions. A child accepts these things as natural—to him they are commonplace.

At times it seems that some adults who grew up in another age will be left behind—will live in a world apart from their children and grandchildren—and they will unless they make an effort to learn, not only new words and their meanings, but new concepts and new ideas behind familiar words.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

of the college by the church is considered, I am sure, a privilege as well as a responsibility. It is a joy to contribute for the support of an institution that is progressively helpful to the churches from which it receives support. It is the purpose of the college to return to its churches leadership for the pulpit and pew that is capable and effective. We are proud of the Elon College graduates who are serving in our Convention as pastors, church officials, Sunday School superintendents, and teachers. We hope to increase this number year after year. Your support given Elon College will not be fruitless.

YOUTH WEEK SCHEDULED.

"God Designs—Youth Builds," is the topic for the Seventh Annual Observance of Youth Week, scheduled for January 29-February 5, 1950.

Becoming increasingly popular, the celebration is sponsored by the United Christian Youth Movement and its 40 member denominations, 38 church and youth state councils, and 18 national youth-serving agencies.

"The first part of the theme is reminiscent of the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam which considered 'God's Design and Man's Disorder,'" stated Dr. Isaac K. Beckes, executive secretary of the U.C.Y.M. and director of young people's work for the International Council of Religious Education. "It recognizes the sovereignty of God in today's world.

"The second phrase is a challenge to action. It calls young people to let God work out His designs through their promoting first, last and always the interests of His kingdom."

The youth observance begins with Denominational Day on the first Sunday and closes with Interdenominational Day on the last Sunday. Appropriate worship services for each occasion are provided.

Encouraging the widespread practice of having youth members lead church services and events, Dr. Beckes points out that this year special emphasis will also be given to Bible study, leadership education, visitation, a community-wide social event, family night, church night, and youth fellowship night. Special resource material is provided by the U.C.Y.M., Christian Endeavor and cooperating denominations.

Youth Week is celebrated in cooperation with the International Society of Christian Endeavor which has observed this period for 69 years as the birthday of Christian Endeavor.

WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA YOUTH RALLY.

Liberty, N. C.,
January 8, 1950.

DEAR FELLOW MEMBERS:

The Western North Carolina Conference of the Youth Fellowship Rally will be held in Seagrove, North Carolina, at the Christian Church, January 29, 1950.

As you no doubt already know, the Youth Fellowship Rallies are held every fifth Sunday. The last meeting was in Liberty, October 30, 1949. We are hoping to have a large crowd and a very interesting program.

The Youth Fellowship has a trophy which will be awarded on the percentage basis this time. So please check the roll before you come and report the number on roll and the percentage attending.

Seagrove, North Carolina, is on Highway 220 about 12 miles south of Asheboro.

Everyone please bring your own picnic supper. Seagrove will furnish the drink.

It is of great importance that your young people attend this rally. Please pass this letter on to the proper persons and urge them to attend.

Yours very truly,

NAOMI RAY, Secretary,
Western North Carolina
Youth Fellowship.

ATTENTION!

OBJECT: $600.00.

That sounds like a big object, doesn't it? It is, too! But don't you think we can do it? I do—that is, if we make up our minds to. Someone once told me to be careful what I set my heart on for that thing I should surely have. Well, many of us young people in the Southern Convention have set our hearts on raising $600.00 for P.O.W. (Project, Overseas Worker) and we have great hopes for this project. Just think what it will mean: If we are able to raise the necessary money we will be able to send one of our own young people to an International Work Camp. Many of us would like to be able to have this great experience; however, it is impossible for all of us to go. We can, though, contribute to help someone go for us. This young person will go as a goodwill ambassador, missionary, builder of world peace and a cementer of friendship between our young people and young people of France or Germany or whatever country our representative goes to.

I said that many of us set our hearts on this project, but it is necessary to do more than this. Many young people throughout the Convention must become vitally interested in the project and set their hearts on raising the $600.00.

Some of our young people have responded well to the project. Perhaps others have not heard too much about it. At a recent Rally in the Valley of Virginia the young people made a distinctive contribution of $33.62. We need more such generous contributions and here is one important fact: we need the contributions right away. It will be impossible to choose the young person who is going until we are sure that we have the necessary funds. If we are to carry this project through it is necessary that we choose the young person soon so that he or she will have time to fill out papers take physicals, and shots, get the information required for the trip and to do all the other things that must be done before leaving this country.

This project in itself is a great cause. It will do much to help further the work of the Church throughout the world. Not only is P.O.W. great for this reason, but it is a symbol of a welding factor in our Southern Convention Young People. Our young people were re-organized in 1946 and since then we have been growing in our work. Here is an opportunity for us to take together a

UNTO ALL MEN.

LESSON V—JANUARY 29, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you; and lo I am with you always, even to the close of the age.—Matt. 28:19-20.

LESSON: Acts 10:17-20, 24, 34-43.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Rom. 3:21-30.

The Unfolding Drama of the Gospel for All.

From the beginning God had it in mind for all men to hear and to have the good news and to find salvation in Christ Jesus. But it took men a long time to understand this breath-taking truth, and to act accordingly. Indeed there are many today who will tell you openly and some time rather boastingly that they do not believe in missions, that we ought not to send men and women to save the heathen, or to waste these precious things on other peoples. But this is not in keeping with the mind of God or the teachings of Christ. Christianity is not for a few people but for all people. It is universal in its claims both as to time and space.

It is interesting that even the disciples and the apostles came slowly to this view. In the beginning they thought of Christianity as primarily for the Jews, the "chosen people." They did not think of it as for the Gentiles whom they called "dogs" and regarded as unclean because they did not give heed to the rites and forms of the Jewish faith. The lesson for today is one of the acts in the unfolding drama whereby Christianity passed from the conception of the limited into the conception of the universal, of how what was regarded as a local sect cast aside its swaddling clothes and became world-wide. It is a story simply, but dramatically told, and it seems with too many lessons to be included within the brief space allotted to these Notes. Its richer meaning can be discovered only by reading the entire chapter—Chapter Ten of Acts—as written by Dr. Luke, the beloved physician.

Scene One.

Scene No. 1 is laid in the city of Caesarea. A Roman centurion, a soldier in charge of one hundred men in the Roman Army was engaged in prayer. He was a convert to the Jewish faith, a man of sterling character, of generous heart, and of religious habits. As he was praying he had a vision in which an angel bade him to send to Joppa for a man whom he had never seen and had never heard of, who could tell him the things that he needed most to do and wanted most to know. Soldier that he was, a man of action, he immediately dispatched three men to Joppa for this man, Peter, Simon Peter.

Scene Two.

Scene No. 2 is laid in Joppa, the oldest town in Palestine, now called Jaffa, located on the seacoast of the Great Sea. Simon Peter, in that section on a "tour of inspection" of the evangelistic work which was being done by the disciples who had been scattered by the persecution, was stopping in Joppa, being the guest of a man who was a tanner, another man named Simon, by the way. This fellow lived on "the other side of the tracks"—a tanner just did not move in select circles among the Jews. This man, Simon Peter, was also praying. Coming home for dinner and finding it not ready, he went up on the housetop, that is, on the flat roof of the simple home, and he, too, began to pray. And he, too, had a vision, a strange and disturbing vision. A large sheet full of all kinds of creeping things was let down from heaven three times, and three times Peter was commanded to "rise, kill and eat." Good Jew that he was, Peter stoutly resisted, asserting that he had not eaten anything common or unclean, that is, unceremoniously unclean. And then the vision vanished, he woke up, and began to think about the strange happening. Even while he was thus thinking the three men whom Cornelius had sent were at the door inquiring for him. They forthwith told him the reason for their errand. Convinced as he was that there was something beyond human planning in it, and taking along "certain brethren" for safety and surety's sake, Peter went to Caesarea, a distance of about thirty-two miles.

Scene Three.

Scene No. 3 is laid in Casarea again. Cornelius was a man of faith and obedience. He believed what the angel had spoken unto him, and he had his whole household with him awaiting the coming of Simon Peter. He gave Peter a warm welcome and told him that the folks were all there "before God, to hear all things that are commanded of God." A much dumber man than Simon Peter would have known that God was in it all. And Peter, illuminated by the Holy Spirit, got the point at once. He quickly put two and two together and got four. He saw in an instant that Gentiles, no man anywhere was common or unclean. He saw that a man did not have to become a Jew in order to become a Christian. He saw that God was no respecter of persons, that is, that He played no favorites among men, but that "in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him."

And forthwith Peter began to preach. We have, of course, only the barest outline of his sermon. But its theme, as usual, was Jesus Christ. The Big Fisherman told about the earthly ministry of Jesus, how He went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed by the devil. But as usual he also told about the sacrificial death of his Master, of His Resurrection, and of His Lordship. He preached with persuasiveness and power.

And before he had finished his sermon the Holy Spirit fell upon all those who were listening to the word. Peter's companions could not understand it all—here were Gentiles receiving the Holy Spirit direct, here were Gentiles receiving the grace of God even as did the believing Jews. But Peter got the point. His eyes were opened. He called for water—one wonders if on this occasion the folks were immersed!—and baptized them in the name of the Lord. There came to his mind, and with new meaning the words of John that the day would come when they would be baptized with the Holy Spirit. This was it. He knew it, and he proclaimed it, and defended it.

TAKE HEED!

Take heed, O Friend, lest the day come when the stars, now fighting their courses for thee, shall fight against thee. In that coming day of sackcloth and crimson moon and falling stars, one thing shall survive the dissolving heavens and melting elements: It is the blood-bought Church of the living God.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS FOR A BEGINNING CHURCH LIBRARY.

At the last meeting of the Board of Christian Education, I was asked to have published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN a list of children's books for a beginning church library. After writing to each of the members of the Children's Division of this Board, I submit the following list, which includes suggestions from members of the Division:

Tell Me About God, Tell Me About Jesus, Tell Me About the Bible, The Bible Story of the Creation, Prayers for Little Children, My Own Book of Prayers—By Mary Alice Jones; published by Rand McNally.

The Nursery Series:

Mitsui, a Little Girl of Japan; Kembo, a Little Boy of Africa; Esa, of Nazareth; Ah Fu, the Chinese River Boy; The Three Camels; Rosita, a Little Girl of Puerto Rico—Published by Friendship Press.

The Farmer and His Field—Chalmers; The Song the Shepherds Heard—Entwistle (Both illustrated by Elsie Anna Wood and published by Thos. Nelson & Sons, New York).

The Little Golden Books—Published by Simon & Schuster (Some are religious subjects, some are not, but all are good 25c value).

The Golden Christmas Book—Published by Simon & Schuster. Highly recommended are the series of eight books by Laura Ingalls Wilder; all stories of a real pioneer family: Little House in the Big Woods; Little House on the Prairie, Farmer Boy, On the Shores of Silver Lake, On the Banks of Plum Creek, The Long Winter, Little Town on the Prairie, The Happy Golden Years.

Stories to Begin On—Rhoda W. Bachmeister.

Once There Was a Little Boy—Dorothy Kunhardt.

God Gave Me Eyes—Ellen Signer and Olive Burt.

Martin and Judy Books (Vols. I, II, III for 4-, 5- & 6-year-olds)—By Verna Hills and Sophia Fahs.

My Bible Book—Janie Walker (for the first Bible).

A Child's Grace—Constance Bar-rister.

When Children Ask—Marguerite Bro (for parents, teachers, etc.).

Consider the Children: How They Grow—Manwell & Fahs (also for parents, teachers, etc.).

Through the Bible—Theodora Wilson (good Bible story book for eight-year-olds on up).

The Egernier's Bible Story Book (good Bible story book for older ones).

Prayers and Graces for Small Children—Quail Hawkins.

Thank You, God—Vivien Bremner (praise and prayer for little children).

Growing Up—A continuation of above, by same author.

A Picture Book of Palestine—Ethel L. Smither (Cokesbury Press, $1.00).

Creative Activities—Rebecca Rice Pilgrim Press, $2.75; (directions for making things for all ages).

The Mission Study Books currently used. This year's books:

The Watch Goat Boy—Gertrude Jenness Rinden.

Toshio and Tama—Anne M. Halladay.

Sandy and Mr. Jalopy—Edith J. Agnew.

Where the Carp Banners Fly—Grace W. McGavran.

Tumbleweed Boy—Eleanor Hull.

Blueberry Acres and other stories by Alice Geer Kelsey.

There are many other good and worthwhile books. However, if a church is just beginning a library, it could not buy all of them. Even this list is probably too large for many churches, and it will have to be trimmed down.

A list of books in general for a church library just beginning was also sent to me, and I shall include it here, in case anyone is interested in that:

The Fun Encyclopedia—E. O. Harbin.

Handy I and II—Lynn Rohrbough. Worship Programs for Intermediates.

Worship Services in the Fine Arts—Alice Bays.

Christ and the Fine Arts—Maus.

The World's Great Madonnas—Maus.

Thirty Stories I Like to Tell—Maus.

Famous Hymns With Stories and Pictures—Elizabeth H. Bonsall.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The Revised Standard Version of the New Testament.

Children's Religion (magazine).

Young People's Packet—Southern Convention Young People.

Youth Fellowship Kit.

Junior Hi Kit—Pilgrim Press.

Journal of Religious Education.

After the library is started books could be added on devotional and worship materials, family life, poetry and hymnology, Bible helps, entertainment, novels and additional books for the age groups. It would be helpful to make a mimeographed list of all the books and send it out to all church members. Books should be checked out systematically just as they are in the public library and someone should be responsible for checking, using card files.

CAREY ANDES.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN PENAL INSTITUTIONS.

New developments in adult religious education include use of Bible and other courses in state penal institutions, it was reported during the fall committee meetings of the International Council of Religious Education.

Since last January more than 700 men at San Quentin penitentiary in California have completed at least one course in the I.C.R.E. "Learning for Life" study program. Each course runs for 18 class sessions.

Appropriate certificates of recognition are being made available to those who complete such studies in the name of the I.C.R.E. and the state council of churches, according to Rev. Richard E. Lentz, I.C.R.E. director of adult work and family education.

Three other California prisons are initiating the program, and church council officials are conferring with similar institutions in Connecticut, Indiana and Missouri investigating the possibility of introducing the same kind of program.

Learning for Life courses selected by the prison chaplains for use in this adult religious education program are: "Introduction to the Bible," "The Christian Faith and Way," "Faiths That Compete for My Loyalty," "Our Times—What Has the Bible to Say," "Prayer," "How to Meet and Master Adversities," "A Faith to Live By," and "Protestantism."

The Learning for Life study program is also being used experimentally in noon-hour industrial programs in Philadelphia and Indianapolis under the direction of local councils of churches.

The Orphanage

DEAR ORPHAN'S FRIEND:

I am greatly concerned about, and earnestly praying for the record made when the month of January is closed. I have made a chart of all the churches in the Southern Convention, and a column for each month in the year beginning with January. I hope every Sunday school in the Convention will send an offering—whether large or small—for the Orphanage. Ask your Sunday school treasurer if he has sent one in for January. Please do not let the first month lapse without that Sunday school offering. Thank you.

What a fine report we have this week! I am proud of it, and I am greatly encouraged by it. So many people have done such good things for these dear children—your children they are—as a part of the great church of which we are all a part. Here at the orphanage we are especially indebted to a group of women in the Burlington Church, led by Mrs. W. W. Sellars and Mrs. Harold Ingle for much painting, cabinet-building and decorating which they have done already and are still doing on the main building. They have spent much time and money on their project. In the same manner many churches throughout the Convention have been especially eager to clothe one or two children and this, too, is greatly appreciated. Mainly such figures cannot be totaled up in the reports as they pay these bills themselves. But it all counts, and it speaks well for your love for these little ones. May God bless everyone of you.

Please pray for these boys and girls—pray that we may lead them into a full and happy life. Pray that we may keep them from having any handicap of inferiority, and pray that they may have a big and fine attitude toward rendering back to the world lives of real usefulness and happiness. How it thrilled Mrs. Truitt and the writer, and how it thrilled us all to see the Elon High School girls' basketball team come out victorious over Graham High School with one of our own girls, Janet Beers, making eighty per cent of the points scored against their opponents. Their opponents were unbeaten up to this game. It took good steady going in the tough spots to do this. I pray that our girls and boys may learn always to be good at the game of life, and I know you do, too. Thank you for all your help. It gives them a chance to make good.

CALLING A MINISTER.

he is found to present him to the church, in a regularly called business meeting for his election to the pastorate.

The first duty of the Pastoral Committee is to gather a list of possible candidates. The State Superintendent should be consulted, and no matter where the list of names comes from, the State office should be allowed to check the record of every man before the committee.

The Contract.

It is advisable that in the matter of arranging the business side of a call the committee should be specific. It is not good form to ask the prospective candidate what he wants or "What will you come for?" There should be no salary haggling. The committee should know specifically what the church proposes to pay the minister and state it clearly to the man who in turn should not attempt to bargain but should accept or reject the specific proposal when the church has stated it. When the committee and the prospective candidate have reached agreement, and the candidate has been presented, then the whole congregation should vote upon the call, which in turn should be presented in writing and should include every item of the agreement. A call may read something as follows:

"The . . . Congregational Church of . . . extends a call to Rev. . . . to become its pastor at a salary of $. . . a year, with free use of the parsonage. The church will grant . . . vacation with pay, will pay . . . per cent of the minister's annuity, and will pay moving expenses. A Recognition Service shall be arranged at mutual convenience soon after the beginning of the pastorate. The pastorate may be terminated by either party to this agreement by the giving of ninety days' notice, otherwise, the tenure shall be continuous."

This agreement, when voted, should be recorded by the church clerk as part of the permanent records of the church and an attested copy given to the minister.—Supt. Harold Skidmore in Michigan Conference News.

You have a shilling. I have a shilling. We swap. You have my shilling and I have yours. We are no better off. But suppose you have an idea and I have an idea. We swap. Now you have two ideas and I have two ideas. We have increased our stock of ideas 100 per cent.—Gregg.

In Memoriam

REIDEL.

We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Holland Congregational Christian Church, submit the following resolutions of respect for Mrs. R. H. Reidel, who died Saturday, December 10, 1949.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. We have lost a loyal and faithful member in the death of our oldest charter member.

2. We wish to express our appreciation for her strong Christian character, her consecration to God and her church and her devotion to her family and friends.

3. We extend our deepest sympathy to those loved ones in our mutual loss.

Mrs. T. R. JONES,
Mrs. J. R. DARDEN,
Mrs. A. J. HOLLAND,
Committee.

STOVALL.

Mrs. Martha Bray Stovall, daughter of John A. and Sarah Seate Bray, was born on October 25, 1860 in Halifax County, Virginia, and passed away December 12, 1949, at the age of 89. In 1910 she married George W. Stovall, who preceded her by death in 1929.

Mrs. Stovall united with Union Christian Church, Virgilina, Virginia, in August, 1885, and remained a loyal member during the rest of her life. At her passing she was the oldest member of Union Church.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Nannie Dixon, Nathalie, Virginia, and by one half-sister, Mrs. Beulah Tuck, also of Nathalie; by two half-brothers, John H. and Bernette Bray, of Nathalie.

Funeral services were conducted on December 14 at Union Congregational Christian Church by Dr. C. E. Newman and Rev. M. W. Andes. Burial was in the town cemetery.

We give thanks to our Father God for this servant, recalling all in her that made others love her.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

"There is reason to believe that this may develop into a national study program through respective state, county and city councils," Mr. Lentz told the I.C.R.E. Committee on Religious Education of Adults.

Expansion of the program for use in veterans' hospitals, homes for the aged, professional groups of men and women, merchants' groups, and farmers also is contemplated.

The Learning for Life program is a program is a series of suggested electives and has previously been limited to adult groups in local churches and interdenominational organizations.

RECLAIMING OUR CENTURY.

"Reclaiming Our Century Through Christian Teaching" will be the theme of the 28th annual meetings of the International Council of Religious Education and of its 17 associated sections.

The meetings will be held February 12-18, 1950, at Columbus, Ohio, in hotels, churches and public buildings of the city, according to Dr. Roy G. Ross, general secretary.

Last year more than 1,300 religious educators, mostly professional, attended similar meetings in Columbus.

The sessions will begin with an evening mass meeting sponsored jointly with the Franklin County Council of Churches on Sunday, February 12, at Memorial Hall on the theme "Reclaiming Our Century." An outstanding public figure will be secured as speaker.

The theme of the meetings will be continued at an All-Council Fellowship Luncheon in the Grand Ballroom of the Neil House on Tuesday (Feb. 14) noon with the address by Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio.

Other events scheduled for the week include a joint session on Monday evening at the Neil House Grand Ballroom with a program on the theme, "Twentieth Century Unlimited: A Visual Presentation of Cooperative Christian Education;" three-day meetings of the 17 sections; meetings of the major committees of the I. C. R. E. leading up to business sessions of the Board of Trustees, of the Commission on Educational Program and of the governing body of the Council itself at the end of the week.

CHURCH SCHOOL WORKERS' AFFIRMATION.

I am teaching because—

I believe in God and in his purposes for mankind. I believe in the power of God that can come into young lives and, through them, transform society.

I believe in Jesus, and that the Way he lived and taught can become the way of abundant living for all peoples, if the youth of tomorrow's world learn to practice it today.

I believe in the Church, as a fellowship of working Christians who have an important job to do. I am thankful to have a share in its work.

I believe in the educational work of the Church. I have faith in educational evangelism, in the possibility of bringing young persons to know God, and of leading them into ever closer relationships with Him.

I believe in children and youth. I think of them as intelligent, and capable of sharing God's purposes for them. I believe in the methods which will encourage them to develop their growing abilities, and which will offer them the best resources of past and present—the Bible, the Church, the Christian heritage, and the lives of Christian persons.

I believe in myself. I have faith that in spite of my weaknesses and faults, God can and will use me to do his work if I but give myself wholeheartedly to his cause.—International Journal.

Board Appoints Associate Treasurer

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions announces the appointment as Associate Treasurer, of E. Carl Thiessen of 14 Mount Ida Street, Newton, Massachusetts, with international headquarters at 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts. Mr. Thiessen, who since 1942 has been Comptroller and Assistant Treasurer of the Atlantic Monthly Co., will begin his new duties February 1.

MR. THIESSEN

A graduate of Harvard College, A. B., Cum Laude, Class of 1930, where he majored in history, government and economics, Mr. Thiessen later took special work in accounting at Walton School of Accounting and did advance study in auditing, accounting and business law.

Born and reared in Rocky River, Lakewood, Ohio, Mr. Thiessen was active in athletics and dramatics throughout high school and college, playing basketball, and doing cross country running. An extra curricula pastime was sculling, which led to one of his present hobbies, that of amateur sailing.

Mr. Thiessen comes to his new post from a background of varied and valuable experience in financial and investment circles. He has been associated with several business concerners in Boston including Russell, Berg & Co., Investment Counsel; Boyden, Yardley & Guay, CPA; United Business Service, Boston, and Poor's Publishing Company, Wellesley. From 1941-42, Mr. Thiessen operated his own business as an Investment Consultant, and was a part time associate of David L. Babson & Co.

A layman active in church work, Mr. Thiessen is a member of Eliot Congregational Church, Newton, Massachusetts, where he is a trustee of the church's invested funds and a member of the Finance Committee.

In his new position, Mr. Thiessen will be associated with Mr. Harold Belchar, treasurer.

A splendid Program has been arranged. This is an opportunity of which every minister and lay leader should avail himself, if it is at all possible for him to attend

News Flashes

Our issue for February 9 will be devoted to a presentation of Elon College.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger of Sayville, New York, preached Sunday at Newport News.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held at Franklinton Center, February 2.

The Annual Mid-Winter Meeting of the Home Boards will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, February 13-16.

Rev. Robert Lee House is preaching first and third Sunday evenings at Hope Mills Church, near Fayetteville.

Has there been a news item from your church in THE SUN recently, Mr. Pastor? If not what is the reason—"modesty" or just plain inertia? Let us hear from you.

Two of our ministerial familie shave held "Open House" recently: Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Council of Norfolk on Sunday, January 1 and Dr. and Mrs. Roy C. Helfenstein of Richmond on Sunday, January 15.

The Pilgrim Fellowship Rally of the Western North Carolina Conference will be held Sunday afternoon at Seagrove Christian Church. C. Baxter Twiddy, Jack Schoffner, Pattie Lee Coghill and Mrs. Walter Hall will speak.

Timothy Chang is scheduled to speak during the morning service at Union Church, Virgilina, the second Sunday in February, according to an announcement by Rev. Mark Andes.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle was the guest speaker at a fellowship supper held in Sanford on Tuesday evening. Approximately 150 people paid $10 a plate for the benefit of the building fund for the Sanford Church.

The death of Rev. J. H. Warren of Norfolk has been reported. Mr. Warren had served Methodist Churches, traveled as a Chataqua lecturer, and supplied Congregational Christian Churches in the Norfolk area. He was pastor of our Ocean View Church before it was moved to Bay View. He organized the Little Creek Church in 1936. Mr. and Mrs. Warren lived at 9016½ Cottage Toll Road at the time of his death.

Laymen are urged to attend the Layman's Rally and Banquet to be held at Elon College, Sunday, January 29. The Rally will begin at 3:00 p. m., and the Banquet will be held at 6:00 in the College Dining Hall. Speakers will be: Mr. Walter A. Graham, Director of Laymen's Fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches, New York; Mr. Thomas L. Moose, Chairman of Southern Synod Laymen; Dr. Martin L. Goslin, Evanston, Illinois. More than 300 men from the Convention are expected. Be one of them!

HOLLAND CHURCH HONORS PASTOR AND HIS WIFE.

On December 22 the Sunday school of the Holland Christian Church held its annual Christmas Party with a program by the children of the Primary and Beginners Departments. At the conclusion of the program Santa Claus, in the name of the church, presented Dr. O'Neill with a new pulpit gown made of heavy silk faille trimmed with velvet, and at the same time gave him a very generous purse of money.

Mrs. O'Neill was presented a florists corsage box containing a most unique corsage made of five-dollar bills arranged artistically with evergreen and holly berries. Numerous other personal gifts were given, all betokening the affection and esteem in which the pastor and his wife are held by the congregation. Dr. and Mrs. O'Neill are leaving Holland after eleven years of a most successful pastorate during which every department of the church has been greatly strengthened.

Many are the improvements in the exterior and interior of the church and parsonage which have been wrought under the skilful guidance of Dr. O'Neill. The grounds were carefully graded and seeded and a most attractive signboard, rich in symbolism, was erected. A fund has been established for the further beautification of the lawn.

The beauty of the interior has been greatly enhanced by a remodeling program which provided a divided chancel and a center aisle. Memorial gifts by various members of the church included a rich maroon dossal suspended from an oak valance and faced with orphreys; an altar complete with linen cloth and paraments; on the altar may be found a beautifully etched brass cross, candelabra and vases. The chancel furniture includes two clergy benches, a lectern and Bible, and a pulpit. In the main sanctuary have been placed a baptismal font and prayer desk. New lights of the lantern type were installed and a broadloom carpet harmonizing in color with the dossal completely covers the floor.

The basement was also remodeled to provide more adequate facilities for classrooms, ladies' parlor and kitchen. The entire basement area has been covered with asphalt tile. A new oil furnace has been installed.

The parsonage, too, came in for its fair share of renovation and improvement. It has been repainted inside and out, asphalt tile laid in the kitchen and a cold-wall Frigidaire installed in the pantry; also an oil furnace put in recently.

It is with deep regret that Holland loses its pastor to Sanford, North Carolina, but the prayers and best wishes of the Holland community will follow Dr. and Mrs. O'Neill to their new field of service.

THE CHRISTIAN WORKERS CONFERENCE.

This is to remind the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and members of our churches and Sunday schools everywhere that the third annual Christian Workers Conference is to be held at Elon College from January 29-February 1. A splendid program has been arranged. This program brings to the college and Southern Convention four outstanding churchmen of our fellowship. This is an opportunity that every minister, Sunday school superintendent and church official should take advantage of. Please remember the dates and arrange to come.

CITY CHURCH CONFERENCE.

How can Protestantism interest the golf-minded, auto-loving city dweller as well as the over-crowded penny-pinchd slum dweller in the Church and religion?

These are a few of the problems which are being tackled by more than 400 church and mission leaders at the National Convocation on the City Church at Columbus, Ohio, January 23-24, according to the Rev. Ross W. Sanderson, acting executive secretary of the Joint Commission on the Urban Church.

The first national and inter-denominational Protestant gathering of its kind in twelve years, the meeting is sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, the Home Missions Council and the International Council of Religious Education.

In announcing the city church conference, Dr. Sanderson said a lot of Protestant work in the cities has "been piecemeal, sectarian, stereotyped and inadequately organized."

"One reason Protestant churches have failed to meet the challenge of the city," he continued, "is because they know so little about it. The city church has too often been an organism without adequate knowledge of its habitat."

The Convocation is being held, he said, to assist Protestant city church leaders to develop "a unified, dynamic strategy to deal with the complexities of modern city life."

Special reports on minority group church life will be made at the gathering, he said, and will serve as the basis for discussion and action. These reports will describe Chinese, Japanese, Negro, and other minority churches in urban areas.

The delegates, who represent more than 30 Protestant denominations, will delve also into such typical big city problems as juvenile delinquency, crime and race relations, Dr. Sanderson added.

Described by Dr. Sanderson as primarily a "working conference," the gathering will assign delegates to ten seminars, covering a wide range of subjects. These include the church's relation to social welfare institutions; urban church planning and group relations, along with the church's role in large scale housing developments, urban neighborhoods, good residential areas, and in changing racial and population districts.

Major speakers on the program include Dr. H. Paul Douglass, director of the Committee for Cooperative Field Research, of the Federal Council of Churches, who will report on recent surveys in urban churches; Dr. Sidney E. Sweet, dean of Christ Church Cathedral, St. Louis, who will deliver the keynote address, and Prof. Samuel C. Kincheloe, of the sociology of religion department of Chicago Theological Seminary.

CZECH CHRISTIANS URGED TO KNOW NEW IDEOLOGY.

A thorough understanding of "today's official ideology" as well as knowledge of the Christian faith and Church organization, were cited as essential for the continued functioning of the Church and for the effectiveness of individual Christians by a conference of Evangeliske Dilo, a laymen's movement in the Czech Brethren Church.

Aiming to win and educate Christian laymen for more intensive work in Church and public life, Evangeliske Dilo issued the following directive, which was published in "Kostnické Jiskry," the Prague interdenominational Protestant paper.

1. The times we were in are and will long remain very serious. We must do everything possible to ensure that all members of our local congregations increase their knowledge of what the Church is and what is its mission. For this it is necessary that all the members, parish boards and community representatives, youth leaders, Sunday school workers, teachers of religion, workers in women's circles and other workers in the vineyard of the Lord should undergo an intensive and systematic training in the knowledge of the Bible, of Christian faith and of the organization of the Church. Let us have no hesitation in inviting lay

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Andes and Colclough

The Rev. W. J. Andes of Winston-Salem has served for a protracted term as treasurer of the Board of Publications. Considerable time is required to keep the books, write checks, answer correspondence, and attend meetings of the Board. All this has been done by Mr. Andes in addition to his regular pastoral duties. This devoted service, all too often taken for granted, is legal tender in God's economy. Through the cooperation of many devoted servants of the church, our paper is published week by week. Thanks to Billy Andes for duty well done.

Mr. George D. Colclough, treasurer of the Southern Convention, now serves as treasurer of the Board of Publications. For an ever-enlarging number of our constituency, the name Colclough has become synonymous with the strength, integrity and progress of our church institutions. We rejoice in the leadership which has been and is ours today.

The Mission Board Meets

Difficult decisions must be made by the Mission Board. A limited and inadequate amount of funds must be allocated among many deserving appeals for help.

The Mission Board of The Southern Convention met last week at Bay View Church in Norfolk. This church has received mission aid. The Reverend Johnson Griffin is pastor of the church. There is a lively interest among the constituency and the Sunday school attendance is taxing the facilities of the present building. Unless new space is added soon, the school may forfeit its place of educational leadership in the religious life of the community.

The Board gives pastoral aid here and there in order to establish, strengthen and perpetuate important pastorates. Salary grants are made on stipulated conditions, and the amount is decreased from year to year.

Appropriations were made for building aid at Burlington, Greensboro, Sanford and Windsor. Of necessity, these appropriations were small. They are tokens of interest and will give some lift to these new building projects.

Members of the Board drove out to the site of Old Providence Church. Under the leadership of the Rev. O. D. Poythress, new lots have been secured in this rapidly growing community. The South Norfolk Church and others in the Norfolk area are being urged to assume responsibility for the development of a New Providence. Those who have watched the phenomenal growth of the South Norfolk Church under the dynamic guidance of Mr. Poythress, are optimistic concerning this new development.

Our commitments and responsibilities for operation and promotion, for work administered by the American Board and the Board of Home Missions, continue unabated. A commendable record of missionary giving has been set. The total for home and foreign missions during the past year was $49,564.78. We thank God and take courage.

Diagnosing the Dollar

Today's dollar is just less than a 60-cent dollar. The dollar 50 years ago was a $1.94 dollar. If trends of the last 50 years continue in the 50 years ahead, the dollar's worth by the year 2000 is to be 18c." This diagnosis is given by the U. S. News and World Report.

The description of the defunct dollar continues: "The dollar of today, in other words, is worth less than a third as much as the dollar that people were spending in 1900. A dollar at the end of the next half century in the light of past trends, may be worth less than a third as much as the present dollar."

Admittedly, the dollar will buy less today. Prices have advanced. On the other hand, a dollar can do things today which no previous dollar could do. Today's dollars can buy an electric washing machine, typewriter and sewing machine. Those potent dollars of 1900 could not equip a home with automatic thermostat controlled heat or the modern electric dishwasher. The home, farm, office and church can have efficient equipment for their dollars which no previous generation could enjoy. While we may lament the cost of living today, we should rejoice in the multiplied and specialized services which may be had today in return for our modest dollars. Drugs, physicians, iron lungs, television, air transportation, and a veritable host of commodities and services may be had with our contemporary dollars. Just think what a blessing a jeep or a refrigerator may be to a missionary! Mass production has placed many essential items within reach of those with modest incomes.

The stewardship of one's dollars becomes an exciting adventure today. Dollars can perform miracles, save lives, proclaim the gospel: Put your dollars to work now!

Another Glimpse Behind The Bamboo Curtain

*Veteran Missionary Laura Cross
Writes of Life Under the New Regime
From Peking, North China—*

As a rule we just don't know whether any letters go out or not. I certainly feel like Longfellow must have felt in his poem, "I shot an arrow into the air." I suppose I should be satisfied if it falls to the ground somewhere. This one is getting to you by way of friends going soon to Hong Kong.

I guess there are about 1,000 foreigners in all here now. Of these I imagine less than 200 are Americans, with nearly as many British. By far the largest number are Russians, for many of them from Harbin have now come down since the war. This last month we foreigners have had to register at the police headquarters. It certainly was a fag. We had to stand in line one morning for an hour to get my four blank, then go home and fill four big sheets out in Chinese, attach six pictures and go back to get an appointment for an interview. I went for my interview on a morning when there was an alert signal and so I had to go off and come back an hour later, spending the whole morning again. The interview was a bit of fun. It isn't often you get an interested audience for half an hour just to listen to you talk about yourself. I can't believe but that they got a good deal of knowledge they never had before about all everyone was doing out here. Whether they believed it or not is another question. But I have no reason to believe they didn't believe what I told them. As one of our folks says the only thing is to tell the truth every time and finally they'll learn that we mean it when we say we speak the truth.

Life is busy these days meeting grads who come in. This afternoon I was talking with one of this year's grads who is leaving tomorrow to work in the country two stations from here. She is to go to a government school to get trained in government procedure and then she starts out to help organize youth corps in the villages. She is a little whizz at managing school affairs. She ran a whole school for children in our church last summer. She was the leader of our Christian Fellowship last year. I asked her if she was giving up her religion. She said that she would not be anti-religious but she didn't know yet how she would come through her thinking. I was so sorry I didn't have more time to talk to her but hope she will come in again before long.

In spite of all difficulties and upsetting conditions there is a real thrill in being here these days for one cannot but feel that something is being done. It is part of the great struggle going on for the common people to get more power. Many of our Christians have allied themselves with the new movement socially and economically and are trying to help inject their Christian spirit into the organization where they are working. We as Christians have to understand the life of our times and so if we are wanting to help China today we must fit into the society about us. It's not always easy—when you hear the youth corps play their drum and cymbals for their folk dances, a tum-tum-tum-tum-tum-tum, over and over again all day long and into the night. And if they aren't at it, the workers in the garage nearby are at it, or the the army next door. Someone is always at it. About the only thing that has stopped all these outdoor sports has been the heavy rains. You really like to see it going on and you are thrilled that folks are having such a good time. But when their good times start at five in the morning and go on all day and scarcely stop until eleven at night, then we feel that perhaps some of us are getting old. I, for one, am glad I'm living off in a side street where there is not so much noise.

I imagine you are wondering what the future of Bridgman Academy is. I wonder that, too, sometimes, but for the present it looks to me that we have a big opportunity to do a good piece of work. Our religious work will have to be tied up to the church rather than in the school activities direct. But we can still live our religion and have our personal relationships and we are not curtailed in our personal relationships yet. It is going to be a big problem how we can finance our students for so many who formerly had money for fees have none now, and so any scholarships that are available will be very welcome this coming year. It seems to me that this will be one of the best ways to show our real interest in the Chinese. After all Christianity is bigger than any nationality and should be able to fit into different ideologies. We may find in the future it can't but at present it seems possible, and so I hope that you at home will support us as long as we can keep going.

RICHMOND PREACHING MISSION.

Nationally known names released for the Preaching Mission of the Richmond Ministerial Union—at The Mosque, and at Grace and Holy Trinity Church, next door—February 12 through 19, include:

Miss Margaret T. Applegarth, traveling lecturer for the World Council of Churches and author of interdenominational study books for young people; who will address a special mass meeting for women on Sunday afternoon, February 19, at 2:30 o'clock, in Grace and Holy Trinity Church.

The Rev. Dr. Pierce Harris, pastor, First Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga., who preaches to overflow congregations each Sunday morning and night. For four and one-half years he has contributed regularly a column to the Atlanta Journal, widely clipped and quoted.

The Rev. Dr. Ellis Adams Fuller, president, The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., and formerly head of the Baptist Home Missions Board. In the latter position he led in reducing substantially a debt of $2,500,000.

The fourteen highly placed speakers set for the mission include: Dr. William H. Alexander of First Christian Church, Oklahoma City, famed youth leader and speaker; Congressman Brooks Hays of Arkansas, leader in fights for clean elections and proper race relations; Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president United Lutheran Church in America, and a world figure; Dr. George A. Buttrick, Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, and author of note; Bishop Beverly D. Tucker of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, whose jurisdiction has made great strides since his incumbency from 1938.

While centering on The Mosque, the mission will use Grace and Holy Trinity Church for special meetings and for overflow congregations. Noon-day area meetings will be held daily throughout the city 12:30 to 1:00 p. m., with local speakers of note, except for the downtown one, utilizing one of the visitors.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL. Burlington, North Carolina.

Those who attended the Leadership Training School, which was held at the First Christian Church, Burlington, North Carolina, January 8-12, are very enthusiastic over it.

This school was sponsored and participated in by the following Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Christian Churches in Alamance County, Berea, Bethel, Bethlehem, Burlington Congregational Christian, Burlington Evangelical & Reformed, Carolina, Concord, Elon College, Graham, Haw River, Hopedale, Long's Chapel, Mebane, Mt. Hope, Mt. Zion, Shallow Ford, St. Mark's, Union, and by three from Guilford County: Apple's Chapel, Brick and Gibsonville.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Educational Director of our Southern Convention, served as dean and deserves much credit for its success. She was assisted in planning the school by a committee representing the various churches.

Beginning Sunday afternoon and continuing through the next Thursday, a two-hour session was held each day. This included a short devotional period under the direction of Rev. W. P. Smith of Haw River, North Carolina.

Seven courses were offered. Although four of these were designed primarily for Sunday school teachers, there were three others for people interested in other phases of church life. An excellent faculty was on hand throughout. Each member was well qualified for his or her work both by training and experience.

Mrs. D. J. Bowden of Elon College, who has studied extensively in the field of Christian Education and worked with young children, led the course for teachers of pre-school children. It was entitled "Teaching Beginner Children."

Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, a highly successful Primary Superintendent and author of articles on primary work, taught a course, "Teaching Primary Children."

Miss Leila Anderson, Field Representative under the Department of Christian Education, was sent to us by the National Office to give the course on "Teaching Juniors." Since Miss Anderson is especially interested in the preparation of curriculum material, it was our privilege to have her display and explain to the entire school some of the valuable materials available for all divisions.

Miss Dorothy Foltz, Educational Director of the Community Church, Elon College, taught the course for leaders of young people, "Teaching Youth."

By popular demand a course for the young people themselves was given. It was led by Miss Helen Holt, Julian, North Carolina. Miss Holt is a very successful leader of the young people of the Evangelical and Reformed Churches. The title of this course was "The Young People's Society Program."

"How to Improve Our Sunday School" was conducted by Dr. W. W. Sloan, Head of the Department of Christian Education, Elon College.

Another one of our Elon College professors who gave of his time and ability was Dr. Ferris Reynolds. He taught the "Life of Christ."

Not only did the people enjoy these classes because they felt they were receiving inspiration and practical help, but they enjoyed the fellowship that prevailed. Between sessions the first afternoon, a fellowship tea, under the direction of Mrs. William Sellers, was held in the basement of the church. About 175 were present to greet old friends and to meet new ones.

The initial enrollment was satisfactory, but the fact that it increased as time went on made it all the more so. About 150 registered, though there were many more who attended one or more sessions without enrolling. Over one hundred certificates were awarded those completing one of the seven courses.

The highlight of "Commencement Night" came with the announcement that Mrs. A. P. Cole of Burlington Christian Church would be awarded a diploma, she having received certificates for sixteen similar training courses.

REBUILDING THE CHURCH.

An Adventure in Churchmanship

By J. L. McCORISON, JR.

Many church buildings in America belong to the architectural "reign of terror." Abandoning the simple and rugged lines of earlier years, these later creations lacked beauty to commend them, or to excite among strangers an inquiring curiosity about the spirit and purpose of the people who worship habitually in them.

Meeting houses of this period are too often inexcusably ugly, burdened with ornamental extravagances, and strongly reminiscent of wooden chimneys and other architectural make-believe.

No more than do clothes make the man, does architecture make the Church. Even here, it is "the spirit that giveth life." In many instances, however, errors in design, rooted in limited notions of what the Church should be and do have been incorporated in rigid structure. Too many churches are trying earnestly to serve the religious needs of a community in buildings inadequate in spacial arrangements, severely limited in equipment, and lacking in eye appeal. How to remedy inherited situations of this sort has long troubled trustees, church boards and pastors.

At Westfield, New Jersey, the trustees of First Congregational Church took a realistic view of their problem. The needs of the parish were first surveyed. Engineers then examined the foundations, walls and roof structure of the existing church building. An architect was employed to make an independent study of structural needs and to present preliminary sketches for the rehabilitation of the present edifice. That was five years ago! Since that time other studies have been made. Earlier reports of engineers and architects were re-examined and the vexing problem of heating the plant was thoroughly analyzed. From these studies it was apparent that a complete reconstruction of the building was imperative. A fortunate and generous gift made it possible in 1948 to begin operations, and during the summer of that year the construction of the first unit of the rehabilitation project was begun. On Sunday, December 26, 1948, the Chapel of the Holy Spirit was appropriately dedicated "to the glory of God, to the service of man, and in loving memory of Olive Pearson Patch." The sermon was preached on this occasion by the Reverend Don Ivan Patch of Dorset, Vermont, who for ELON COLLEGE OPENS NEW ALUMNI MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM.

By LUTHER N. BYRD.

One of the finest small-college sports centers in the South, and perhaps in the nation, was opened on Saturday night, January 14, when Elon College played its first basketball game in its new Alumni Memorial Gymnasium, which has been erected as a memorial to the Elon alumni who lost their lives in World War II.

The gymnasium, a magnificent brick and steel structure, erected and equipped at a cost of approximately $240,000, lacks still certain finishing touches, and the opening games with Catawba served only as "house-warming." The dedication and formal opening will probably be held at the 1950 commencement after the classrooms, shower rooms and other facilities have been completed.

President Leon E. Smith and other Elon College authorities had long realized the inadequacy of the old gymnasium in North Dormitory, which had been in use since 1913, and dreams of a new indoor sports center began to take shape in the form of plans more than a year ago, when efforts were started to raise funds for the building.

Once the drive was launched, the alumni, students and faculty all rallied to the cause and raised approximately $125,000 in gifts and pledges. This was enough to launch the building program, and ground was broken for the gymnasium in March, 1949. The cornerstone was laid as a feature of the annual Alumni Day on May 28.

Construction was pushed through the summer and fall, and a second intensive fund-raising campaign was launched in Alamance County and Burlington on November 1, which has netted more than $50,000 to date. An outstanding gift during this second drive was one for $20,000 by the Burlington Foundation.

This made possible the virtual completion of the structure by the New Year and set the stage for the "house-warming," which attracted 2,250 people, the largest crowd that ever viewed a basketball game in this section of North Carolina. Included in the crowd was a large group of newspaper and radio men, who joined the general public in praise of the gymnasium.

All hailed the opening of the Alumni Memorial Gymnasium as a great step forward for Elon College, not only for the fact that it provides ample accommodations for the crowds who wish to see basketball games and other sports events in this area but for the fact that it makes possible an ever-increasing program of physical education and intramural athletics for the students of the college.

The gymnasium, which is of fireproof construction throughout, is 186 feet by 136 feet in its outside dimensions and offers a clear floor space of approximately 15,000 square feet. This floor space offers space for one full-size varsity basketball court and, in addition, three slightly smaller practice and intramural courts and six volley ball courts.

The main floor is surrounded on all sides by a permanent balcony, with permanent seats for 2,000 spectators. In addition, modern roll-away bleachers at both sides and both ends of the playing floor, will seat 2,592 persons, giving a total capacity of almost 4,600 for athletic events. The placing of chairs or benches on the playing floor enlarges the capacity for conventions or similar gatherings to about 6,000 people.

Beneath the balconies are two large classrooms for physical education, four faculty offices, four shower rooms, four locker rooms, storage rooms, ticket offices and rest rooms. There are six entrances and exits, and the architects estimate that a capacity crowd could clear the building in five minutes in an emergency.

In discussing the new gymnasium, President Smith estimated the construction costs at $198,000, plus an additional $11,000 for grading the grounds and for construction of sidewalks. Installation of equipment and furniture will run the total costs to $240,000 for a building which can be a source of pride for Elon College and its friends throughout the Southern Convention.

THE PURPOSE OF COLLEGE DAY.

February 5 has been designated as "College Day" in the churches of the Southern Convention. The purpose of this day is to provide an opportunity for pastors and Sunday school officials to better acquaint their congregations and pupils with our College; presenting its work and purposes.

Coming at the conclusion of National Youth Week, College Day is designed to give special recognition to all students; to remind them afresh of their great heritage, and to challenge them to dedicate their best talents to the attainment of skills in moral and Christian living as well as in academic achievements. The Christian colleges are still the bulwarks of democratic freedom and the inspiration for Christian living.

ORDER OF SERVICE.

CALL TO WORSHIP:

Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.
Show me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths. Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: For thou art the God of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day.

HYMN: "O Master, Workman of the the Race," "Now in the Days of Youth," or some other appropriate selection.

INVOCATION AND THE LORD'S PRAYER.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE OF COLLEGE DAY.

READING OF THE SCRIPTURES: John 14:6, II Timothy 2:15, or Romans 12.

OUR DEBT TO THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

LITANY FOR STUDENTS:

L: Eternal God, who hast promised us the liberty which follows after truth, grant that keeping the commandments of Christ, we may have the mind of Christ and be free, as He was free.

For all who guard the truths which were known of old, that, as good stewards of that knowledge, they may confirm us in simple and righteous living:

P: We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

L: For those who seek for new truth, that, believing more light is yet to break, they may be sustained in their searching by the faith that thou art, and that thou art the rewarder of them that diligently seek thee:

P: We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

At Home and Abroad

THE LEAVEN OF THE GOSPEL.

K. P. Lin, principal of Union High School, Foochow, China, now studying in the United States, appraises the place of the Church in his native China:

The Church has accomplished more in China in 100 years than it did during the first 200-300 years in Europe. The ferment of the Orient today is the result of a seed the Church has planted, working out into the old civilizations—the value of human personality, the sacredness of life, the elevation of womanhood and children, service to fellowmen and a new world view. You will ask what some of the contributions of the Church to China are. Well, it is too long a list to enumerate. Let me just take one—the unbinding the feet of Chinese women—that alone was worth all the cost and more. Take another—the first school in China was a church school.

Although no one can tell what the future will be for our Church, I believe the Chinese Christians will stand loyal to Christ. We realize the present moment is a critical moment in the history of the Christian Church. It is significant that the present crisis in China is an opportunity masked in danger. It takes prophetic insight, missionary zeal and divine courage to utilize danger and make it an opportunity. Even if there is darkness, "it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness."

GOLDEN JUBILEE CELEBRATION.

A double celebration took place January 7 at the Christian Medical College in Vellore, South India, it was announced by Miss Sarah Scudder, executive secretary of the Vellore Christian Medical College Board here.

The day marked the golden jubilee celebration of Dr. Ida Scudder, pioneer American medical missionary who is the founder and president emeritus of the college. "Dr. Ida" began her medical work in India in 1900, and is still active in retirement. Before Indian Independence she was decorated by the British government for "distinguished service to the welfare of India and her people."

Part of the celebration, according to a cable received, was the official opening of a new physiology and biochemistry building at the college by the Governor of Madras, and the dedication by the Maharani of Bhavanager of additions to the nurses' building at the college's general hospital.

Vellore is supported by some forty Protestant denominations in North America, Britain and Australia, and is a training center for Christian doctors and nurses for some 900 missionary medical units in India.

The college, founded in 1918, is internationally known for its pioneer work in leprosy research and treatment, and is noted for its training

The new 1950 Yearbook of the American Board is available for 50c from Mr. Harvey Meeken, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts. It is an invaluable aid in understanding the total work of the Board, gives biographical sketches of all missionaries, historical highlights of all missions, and countless other data that will be of use.

Also available is the new Visual Education Catalogue of the Visual Aids Department of the Missions Council, listing all films, slide sets and filmstrips available from any of the five Missions Council depositories. The catalogue may be secured from 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts, or 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York.

in women's surgical and obstetrical care. It has also done special research projects in pathology, radiology, neurology and infectious diseases.

The hospital can care for approximately 500 bed patients, while the clinical services have a total attendance of over 126,000. In addition to the regular clinics, the college staff has mobile medical units that give general medical care and preliminary leprosy treatments and perform minor operations for villagers in a radius of 25 miles around Vellore.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF WORLD COUNCIL ACCLAIMS FULL STATUE OF ASIAN CHURCHES.

Hailing the growth of the "Younger churches" of East Asia to the "full stature of mankind in Christ," the Central Committee of the World Council has pledged that the Asian churches will play their full part in every aspect of the Council's work.

In a message to the East Asia Christian Conference meeting at Bangkok, Siam, December 4-11, the Central Committee cited the "immense revolution" which is taking place in the area.

We have followed with deep interest the progress of the nations of Eastern Asia in political independence and in full participation in the life of the family of nations. Already these nations have made new and notable contributions to the life of the world. At the same time, the churches of Eastern Asia have been emerging, with memorable rapidity, from a position of dependence on the Western churches from which they took their origin into the full stature of manhood in Christ, and into independent membership in the world-wide fellowship of the Church. Almost every country in Eastern Asia is now represented in the family of the World Council of Churches by at least one member church. For all this we thank God.

The immense revolution which is taking place in Eastern Asia has not left the churches unscarred by suffering. In many parts of your area fierce and internecine conflicts are still raging. We pray that the Father of all nations may over-rule these conflicts to the furtherance of His purpose of all love for all men, and that He may use suffering to cleanse and strengthen His Church, and to glorify His name through the testimony of the triumph of faith over adverse circumstances.

The tidings we have received from your churches have heartened and inspired us. Where conflict has been at its bitterest, Christians widely separated in national and political allegiance have been able to meet as children of the one Father, and in their deepest differences to recognize and to maintain their oneness in the faith of Jesus Christ. Where the Church has been face to face with an unknown and menacing future, Christians have of their own free will decided to remain and to serve their brethren as witnesses for Christ in whatever new forms of society may emerge from the uncertainties of the present time. We rejoice in the assurance that you and your churches are in the hand of God, that He of His grace will supply your every need and that by His strength He will make your strength equal to every new trial and to every new opportunity.

The older churches, too, are passing through times of testing and per-

THE FAMILY LIFE DEPARTMENT.

What do all children need?

Miss Katherine Lenroot, Chief of the Children's Bureau of the United States, has answered this question in the following statement: "A good home, with loving parents, a healthy start in life, schooling up to the maximum of his powers, companionship with other children free of barriers of race, class or creed, an opportunity for self-expression and spiritual growth, full opportunity for useful work in trade or profession, and a chance in adult life for a reasonable measure of security for himself and family."

"An opportunity for spiritual growth"—this is our deep concern as Christian mothers. The Family Worship Together is one of the three quarterly booklets which the Christian Education Department of our denomination is recommended to teach religion in the homes. This booklet is ready for use now, and it can be obtained for fifty cents, at the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts. The booklet contains stories and pictures of families who have worshipped together in the morning, at meal times, in the evenings, and on special occasions. Prayers, table graces, poems, hymns, resource lists, and directions will help the family establish their own habits of worship. Order this now. You will find it equally as interesting as the booklet The Family Celebrates Christmas, which was sent to the Family Life Chairman of each Conference in November, asking them to pass it on to you for your local chairman.

Another thing—will the chairman of Family Life in each local woman's group make a survey of the number of families in your church, obtaining the following facts?

1. Number of children in each family.
2. Number of teenagers and adults.
3. The average attendance of each family at church service.
4. Their participation.
5. Number of families in your church having Family Altars.

This information will be helpful in designing the program for our Family Life Conference, which our president, Mrs. O. H. Paris, told us about in her informative December News Letter.

Local Family Life Chairman, will you direct any question on this Department to your Conference Superintendent. I am sure she will be glad to assist you. If I can be of any assistance, please let me know.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

February 24, 1950.

"Thy Kingdom Come"—a worship type of film strip, may be ordered from the United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, New York. It is fine to use in any program, but especially recommended to use in a retreat or preparatory meeting for the World Day of Prayer. It could also be used in the program for the World Day of Prayer. Order your programs, if you have not already done so, from the United Council at 5c each and posters at 5c each. The Call to Prayer leaflets are 10c per hundred.

Through error, the price of the new Bible Study Book, These are Written, was reported as 25c. It should have been 30c.

Send Friendly Service gifts. February and March are good months to send these. The two projects are Migrant Centers in Florida and Miss Angie Crew in Japan. See the Year Book for list of gifts. In sending food and used clothing to Japan, a special rate would apply if you would send it as "Relief Package." It is about 6c a pound, and your postmaster can tell you about it.

Mrs. Garland Spratley, chairman of Interdenominational Cooperation Department of Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, attended the executive committee meeting of the Virginia Council of Church Women which met in Richmond, Virginia, on Thursday afternoon and attended the meeting of the United Council of Churches on Thursday evening and Friday.

Union Ridge Church (N. C.) has recently had one of the women's circles to sponsor friendly service gifts to the Jacksons. They obtained used X-ray film from the hospital, cleaned it, and sent it to the Jacksons to be used in the windows of Han Mei School. Dick Jackson had asked for this in one of his letters. The film is not expensive and may be easily obtained. Perhaps other groups could do this for the Jacksons.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee A. Peeler of the E. and R. Church of Arlington attended the meeting of the Virginia United Council of Churches on Thursday evening and Friday in Richmond. Mrs. Peeler, president of Arlington Council of Church Women, attended the presidents' meeting of the Council on Thursday afternoon. (The picture of Dr. Peeler's church appeared on the front page of the January 12 issue of THE SUN.)

The following quotation is from a letter from Dr. Hiroshi Hatanaki, Kobe College, Japan, who had received a package from the children in our own Winston-Salem Church:

"Since returning home, I have been kept busy, speaking in many places about the impression I received in your country. I came home last night from a four-day trip and again I am going out this afternoon to another place to speak about your country. I suppose I have spoken more than a hundred times, besides preaching in my own church, in different places.

"The Christian work, I wish I could say is making good progress. After the war closed for a while, people were flocking to churches, but I am a little afraid that there is a little drop now. I think a real effort must be made. Otherwise, we shall never have a true democratic and peaceful nation.

"We need your prayers."

MISSION SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING.

The Young People's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church met Monday night, January 16, at the home of Betty, Fred and Rudolph Byrd.

The meeting was called to order by the president. The Society made plans to present a program during Youth Week. This service will be on Sunday night, February 5.

Two chapters of the Mission Study Book were taught by Rev. Earl T. Farrell.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

From time to time Mr. C. B. Riddle of Washington sends me material in the form of articles, newspaper clippings and magazines that he thinks might be helpful in planning for this page. It would be nice if others followed his example.

One of the hobby magazines gave directions for making walnut dolls and I am passing them on to you with a few changes.

To make a girl, take an empty walnut shell, with perfect edges, a piece of thin wire about 16 inches long, another piece of wire about 8 inches long, glue, cotton, some strips of cotton cloth, yarn and trimmings for her hat, such as beads or feathers.

Bend the long wire in half, and in the bend twist some of the cotton. Rub glue on the inside of the nutshell halves and on the edges. Put the cotton into the halves of the shell and hold it tightly until it is set. If you will look closely at the nutshell you can find which end has a slight space and the wire will go through that. Secure the other piece of wire to the body with a strip of cotton cloth, wind and twist until secure, also wind around the neck, body and the legs. Bend hands and feet. Now you are ready to dress your doll.

If she is an old fashioned lady, make her pantalettes, a petticoat and then a blouse and overskirt. Sew the clothing firmly to the padded body frame. A bonnet or hat may be fashioned from an old piece of felt and you can make her a wig from wool yarn, embroidery thread or even real hair combings. Glue these to the head before putting on hat which may be held in place with dab of glue. Finish her face as you like—use ink for eyebrows and eyes and fingernail polish for mouth, or paint the whole face with oil or tempera paints. Complete your doll by adding tiny felt shoes or by painting the toes of the feet. If the feet are spread far apart the doll should stand without difficulty.

Elizabeth A. Fisher designs these dolls and sells them, and she wrote the original article. I wanted to share it with you because they will make extra-special Valentine gifts for a favorite friend or can be used as favors at a party. Next week I'll tell you how to make the boy to go with your girl.

APPLIED EDUCATION.

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

I was a house guest recently in a home where there is a small boy who is attending kindergarten. He is an eager, lovable youngster, and he gave me the impression of being uncommonly contented and happy. I soon discovered at least one reason for this.

He would come home from kindergarten bubbling over with interest about the games he had learned that day or the things he had done. Often he was holding a sheet of paper on which was a drawing he had made—a purple house with a yellow chimney and green doors, a daisy with an enormous stem, or a man with head, long legs and arms but no body.

No matter what his mother was doing, she would stop to hear about the new game or to admire his work. I was so glad. I could not have borne it if that glorious enthusiasm of his had been dampened by a lack of response from the one he loved most.

But Mrs. Stone went further than that.

Roddy's picture was pinned to a prettily-framed piece of canvass that had been hung on the wall for just such purposes. Now Daddy would see it when he came home. I would smile on myself as I watched the youngster walk by it with an elaborate effort of unconcern and noticed how his eyes gave a proud, sidewise glance at it as he passed. He had done something, and his achievement had been recognized and honored.

One day he brought home a flag he had made of paper. "Mother," he asked, "could we put it in the window?"

"In the window?" she repeated, considering, I supposed, where it would be the least conspicuous—theirs was a beautiful, well-ordered house.

"Yes, Mother. Could we put it in the front window where folks could see it? Could we, Mother?"

"Of course we could, darling," she said impulsively, and she helped him attach it to the pane with Scotch tape.

The pleasure in his face was reward enough, I thought for what some housewives would not have tolerated.

Another afternoon he returned with a small, red paper basket. "This is a basket I made," he said. "It's to put things in. Could we put something in it, Mother?" he asked anxiously.

"Well—let's see," his mother said.

"Matches?" he asked.

"Do you think we should put matches in a paper basket, Roddy?"

"I guess they might burn it all up," he said reflectively, after a moment.

"I guess they might," she agreed. Then she asked, "Could you make some more like this one?"

"Sure I could!" he answered.

"Then I've thought of something," She smiled. "You make one for Mrs. Jackson, one for Daddy, and one for yourself. This one will be for me. Tomorrow night for dinner we'll put little candies in them and put them by our plates, and it will be a party. You have some colored paper among your things."

The delighted smile on Roddy's small face showed how he felt about the use to which the baskets would be put.

"You go to a lot of trouble," I commented later, "but what a lot of pleasure it gives Roddy!"

"It does, doesn't it? I want him to be happy. But there's more than that to it. We, as a family, talk about the things we do. I may speak of a different way I've prepared something for the table, or it may be about some new curtains I'm making. His father tells us of things that he has done at the office. I want Roddy to feel that what he does is important, too. Then I have another thought about it. These are very little things, I know, but I believe the words 'applied education' are not too big for the idea back of them. I've thought this method of treating what he does might get him into the habit of trying to put to a practical use the things he has learned at school." She looked at me appealingly.

"I am sure you are right," I said promptly. "Because these are 'little things,' as you say, many mothers don't realize what wonderful opportunities they afford for character building. Such experiences often have an influence on a child's life quite out of proportion to their apparent significance."

"If we fail, the cause of free self-government throughout the world will rock to its foundations." This terse statement made by Theodore Roosevelt many years ago, takes on new meaning in the modern world of today. Will we fail?

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP HOLDS MEETING.

The Holy Neck Pilgrim Fellowship held its regular meeting Wednesday night of last week in the home of Margaret Harrell. The meeting was presided over by Billy Parker. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Anne P. Umphlett who used "Forgiveness" as her topic. The February meeting will be a Valentine Party at the church hall. Billy March, Mary Virginia Lewis and Aubrey Holland will serve as the host group. The group voted to sponsor a supper in March. The program was a discussion on the topic, "What Shall I Do With My Life?" led by Mrs. Umphlett. Quite a lengthy discussion took place and most of the members present took part.

Members present were: Misses Lois Crutchfield, Florine Gomer, Audrey Holland, Mary Davis, Geraldine Rountree, Mildred Ann Carter, Margaret Harrell, Mary Ellen Copeland; Mrs. Anne P. Umphlett and Mrs. June O. Davidson, Counsellors; Billy March, Billy Parker, Thurman Wilkins, Harry Lee Weaver, Joseph Hamilton, Delman Felton, Dean and J. H. Carter, Jr., and Willis Eley.

Others present were: Misses Dorothy Darden, George Lee, Emma and Mamie Norfleet Harrell, Mrs. Emmett Harrell, Miss Allie Lee Norfleet and Mr. Lonnie Wilkins.

YOUTH WEEK AT FIRST CHURCH, NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

Special services will be sponsored by the Youth Group, beginning Sunday, January 29. Monday evening there will be a Quiet Hour Program at 7 o'clock. On Thursday at 8 p. m., there will be an interdenominational banquet, and on Friday at 6:30 a Fellowship banquet. On Sunday, February 5, Christian Endeavor Day will be observed.

FIRST REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE OF NATIONAL TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION COUNCIL.

Forasmuch as there is widespread confusion concerning the exact meaning of "Temperance," and

WHEREAS, the American people, despite a slight decrease in alcohol sales last year, are still consuming 132 per cent more of beer and 400 per cent more of hard liquor, per capita, than during the early period of Repeal; and

WHEREAS, many of the great TV and radio chains will undoubtedly accelerate the 40 per cent increase through the glamorous use of suggestive wet dramas; and

SINCE, The Temperance Forces of America are now convinced that victory over the evils of alcohol must be obtained through creative Christian action; now therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, by the members of the National Temperance and Prohibition Council,

1. That we, and all of our cooperating agencies, unequivocally take our stand for total abstinence, and declare this to be the true definition of Temperance.

2. That while we welcome the full and fair revelations of science on the actions of alcohol in the human body, we charge our people to remember that the scientific and physiological aspects of this narcotic drug must be interpreted in the light of their ethical and moral effects upon men and society.

3. That we request all denominations to agree upon some annual day of Commitment, when the people of every faith shall be challenged to take this high ground of personal total abstinence.

4. That we heartily commend those States and Colleges which are establishing Departments of Alcohol Education, and urge that a systematic plan of education be adopted in all the Public Schools of America, thus using every possible means of so impressing the facts of alcohol upon the consciousness of men that our youth may be enlisted in new adventures of wholesome living.

5. That we heartily commend the rapidly increasing number of courageous ministers whose congregations are receiving fearless and positive presentations of Truth concerning the Christian's attitude toward alcohol.

6. That we encourage every participating member of The National Temperance and Prohibition Council to renew emphasis upon the importance of, preparation for, and effective follow-up of World Temperance Sunday.

7. That we express appreciation to the Chairman, the Secretary and the Executive Director, Bishop Wilbur E. Hammaker, Dr. George W. Crabbe and Miss Elizabeth A. Smart, respectively, and to Dr. Clinton Howard, for the magnificent preparation and promotion of these "the most beneficial meetings" of the Council.

NEW IDEOLOGY FOR CZECHS.

workers, and let us give them every opportunity of work and education.

2. We are aware of the fact that we no longer live in an atmosphere of liberalism and that the entire country is experiencing far-reaching social and economic, spiritual and moral changes, as a result of the teaching of Marxist-Leninist ideology. A knowledge of what is the source of these changes and an understanding of today's official ideology is necessary in order that the Church as a whole and the members of the Church as individuals know how to carry over into the new social order the great spiritual values of the Christian Church in general and of our Reformation in particular.

3. Negation for negation's sake is sterile. Only a definite, clear and courageous confession of faith in Jesus Christ, only a true service of Christian love and mercy amidst the strained public life of today can make out of our country and nation a place reflecting the kingship of Christ. The danger for the Church lies not only in the world, but in its own unwakefulness and carelessness, and above all in the selfishness of its members.

4. Let us guard ourselves against the identification of our struggle with the Roman Catholic Church's political position and its present struggle. We must not take advantage of the present campaign in order to attack the Roman Catholic Church, but we must not forget either that the present struggle of the Vatican against Communism and the Soviet Union is a political one: it is no struggle for the purity of the Church of Christ or for the genuineness of the apostolic testimony. It is our task to watch and pray, in order that we may know when it is necessary to speak forth and submit the world to the judgment of the Word of God, and when to carry to the sick man of today the word of help, consolation and spiritual healing.

Sunday School Lesson

THE FIRST GENTILE CHURCH.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 5, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: In Antioch the disciples were for the first time called Christians.—Acts 11:26.

LESSON: Acts 11:19-26; 13:1-3.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 42:5-9.

Starting New Fires.

The persecution of the Church in Jerusalem scattered the disciples far and wide. The persecutors thought they were putting out the fire; instead they were scattering it. For those members of the Early Church had "hot hearts," they were men with burning hearts, and everywhere they went they started a new fire. "They therefore that were scattered abroad upon the tribulation (or persecution) that arose about Stephen traveled as far as Phoenicia and Cyprus and Antioch speaking the word. . . ." Thus the Christian movement grew by leaps and bounds.

But Only Among the Jews.

The men with burning hearts shared the good news with others. But only with the Jews—"speaking the word to none save the Jews." Like many people even today they thought the gospel was for the privileged few, but not for all people. Of course Peter had learned better through his vision, and his visit to the home of Cornelius. But the Christian Church was slow to grasp the universal sweep and sway of Christ's gospel. Alas that there are still many Christians who do not believe in foreign missions.

Breaking Across the Barriers of Race and Religion.

"But there were some of them, men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Greeks also, preaching the Lord Jesus." These men, more liberal in mind and spirit than their fellow-Christians broke across the bounds of race and religion and preached to the Greeks. They just could not believe that the grace of God was simply for Jews, or that men had to become Jews before they could become Christians. They made Jesus, the Lord Jesus, the central theme of their preaching. "And the hand of the Lord was with them." When they gave themselves to make known the grace of God to others, God made known in fuller measure His grace to them. The preaching of the Lord Jesus to the peoples of other races and religions has been attended by many signs of His presence and power.

Barnabas, "A Walking Delegate."

News of this unusual work of grace filtered back to Jerusalem, and the brethren there wanted to know more about this movement. They accordingly sent Barnabas as their friendly ambassador, or their "roving delegate" to take a look at the thing that was going on. He was an ideal man for the assignment, a good man, full of the Holy Spirit, and of faith. He had already demonstrated his worth in the Church at Jerusalem. His name was symbolic of his spirit and ministry—"a son of consolation, or of exhortation." He made the long trip from Jerusalem to Antioch and saw at first hand what was going on.

Rejoicing in Another's Success.

When Barnabas saw what was going on, the work of grace, "he was glad." Big-hearted fellow that he was, he rejoiced in another's success. Lest one should think that that is what was to be expected it might be said that is not what one always finds. There is a lot of jealousy among Christian workers, be it said to our shame. It is sometimes hard for a minister to "be glad" when a fellow-minister is having splendid results in his field, especially if it is a neighboring field. It is hard for some churches to rejoice in the growth and success of other churches, especially if they are churches of other denominations.

Wanted—More Help.

The situation at Antioch soon grew out of hand. The Spirit of God was so active and the grace of God was so manifest that Barnabas, consecrated and hard-working as he was soon saw that he was not going to be able to handle it. He just had to have another man to help him, an assistant pastor as it were. Whom should he get? Where was the right man to be found? He thought of that young man, himself a blazing ember for God, the young man in behalf of whom he had interceded at Jerusalem when the apostles did not take much stock in him because of his past record. This young fellow was doing a good work in Tarsus, so Barnabas forthwith set out for Tarsus to get Saul or Paul as we now know him. We do not know what he said to the young preacher, but we do know that he got his man. And the older man, Barnabas and the younger man Paul teamed up in work in Antioch, for a whole year together. What a team! And what results!

Soul-Winning and Soul-Building.

When the evangelists, the writers of the gospels refer to winning souls they say, "preach"; when they describe work among believers they use the term "teach." It is a description of the double function of the church. It is to seek the unsaved, to help the unsaved to find the Lord Jesus Christ and to confess Him. But it is also to teach the new converts and the old believers and to help them to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Christians.

"And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." As a matter of fact that is a sufficient name for the followers of Christ.

plexity. The World Council of Churches is setting itself to its task of strengthening the churches everywhere for the proclamation of the World of God and the doing of His will in this time of crisis. For the fulfilment of this task, we desire the fullest cooperating of the Younger Churches in all the work of the World Council. Already we have profited greatly by the contribution of your churches to the life and thought of the World-Wide Church. We know that we have still very much to learn from you. The disturbed state of the world and financial stringency have made it impossible for us to do as much as we would, in fostering our close association together. Perhaps you think that we have done less than we should. But we desire to assure you that, at every meeting held in connection with the World Council, one of the most constant concerns is that the Younger Churches should be fully integrated into everything that the World Council is trying to do. We hope that many suggestions will come to us from your conference as to how this full cooperation can be most speedily and most effectively secured.

You are constantly in our thoughts and in our prayers, as we believe that we are in yours. We work ceaselessly for the manifestation of the full unity of the whole company of Christ's people in the world. But we know well that that unity is not a human achievement, it is already a Godgiven reality in Christ. When you and we, separated as we are by space and distance, enter into the sanctuary, we meet one another as brethren, united in one faith, one Lord, one baptism, in the common task of witness and service, and in the joyful expectation of the manifest triumph of the Kingdom of God, which God will bring to His own appointed time, and in which you and we together are by faith already part-takers.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

So far in January (January 21) I have heard in one way or another from 28 churches or Sunday schools: Valley—Mt. Olivet (G) $28.46, New Hope $17.59, Palmyra $3.00, Wood's Chapel $20.35; Eastern North Carolina—Oak Level $28.00, Pope's Chapel $6.00, Youngsville $25.00; Eastern Virginia—Berea (Nans.) $19.00, Newport News $11.30, Christian Temple $128.20, Rosemont $50.00, Oakland $28.63, South Norfolk $42.78, Suffolk $2.50, Waverly $10.00, Windsor $10.00; Western North Carolina—Bennett $5.55, Hank's Chapel $30.00, Pleasant Grove $5.00, Seagrove $25.00, Shiloh $22.85; North Carolina and Virginia—Burlington $225.26, Happy Home $17.32, Hines Chapel $8.00, Lebanon $9.21, Monticello $25.75, New Lebanon $25.00, Reidsville $22.00. Have not heard from Sunday school treasurer of all the above, but amounts came in from some source. All Sunday schools which have taken money for the orphanage please send same promptly so it will show on the January Chart. Thank you.

What a fine report again this week! How about that $810.85 for this week. Please help us get ready to clear out some storage rooms and make space for a few more children. There are more than twenty children pleading for acceptance. Some of the cases are most pathetic. One of the "bitter pills" about this job is saying no. Help us say yes to the most needy of them soon. Again thank you.

If every Sunday school will take one offering per month and send it in promptly it will steady our income so we can repair broken and battered rooms, make more space, and do a better part by the fine boys and girls as well as employ an additional matron and take more helpless little ones. And if you do not know it we shall have to build a new milkhouse or fall below Grade "A" in our milk product and for double reasons we cannot let that happen. And if you do not know it we shall have to do something plenty expensive about the sewage in this small town or have major trouble. The orphanage's share will be plenty. You may as well know we need your help and need it right along steadily every month.

My heart is thrilled with the number of churches and organizations which are helping us buy needed new clothing for the growing children. There is nothing static about their need, and thanks—double thanks—to so many people who understand that. A very good thing it is to take a child under your care and help us buy shoes, overshoes or boots—so necessary for the little folks who walk to school in rain and mud on cold mornings, and proper clothes. We need an extra matron in charge of all clothing and able to cut and sew, alter and mend, as the case may demand. Some generous business man could get a big thrill out of putting these little boys and girls into his benevolent thinking for this year of 1950. Every Sunday school could get a real thrill out of seeing a good record made each month during 1950. Let us see what the record will be when January is over.

REBUILDING THE CHURCH.

many years had served as pastor of this church.

Within a month of this dedication, action was taken at the Annual Meeting of the Church to proceed at once with the re-construction of the meeting house itself. A finance program was authorized and the trustees were instructed to proceed with the architect to complete preliminary drawings for the proposed building. Through the Division of Church Building of the Board of Home Missions, the services of Curtis R. Schumacher were made available to the church for the week of March 6 to 13, 1949. In the meantime, intensive work was initiated preparatory to financing the project. Committees were organized, brochures prepared and printed, letters were written, and frequent releases given to local papers. Mr. Schumacher trained the workers and on Sunday afternoon, March 13, the appeal was made to the people.

The finance program will cover a two-year period and approximately $125,000 will be needed to complete the reconstruction. Of this amount nearly $85,000 was realized in cash or pledges that first Sunday afternoon. It is anticipated that gifts for named memorials and a supplementary appeal in the spring of 1950 will provide the balance of the necessary funds.

The people of the church have at successive meetings, studied, suggested revisions, and finally approved the drawings submitted by the architect through the Building Committee and the trustees. Specification have been completed and bids are soon to be called for. Construction work is scheduled to begin on or about March 1, 1950.

The design of the new edifice is in the spirit of the 18th Century Colonial architecture of New England. A handsome portico, surmounted by a lofty and graceful spire provides the dominating motif. A deep chancel will replace the present choir area. The organ is to be rebuilt and located to the right of the chancel. The nave will be altered to provide a center and side aisles. Church offices are included in the plans which also contemplate a complete rebuilding of the basement. — Middle Atlantic Conference Edition, The Missionary Herald.

One does not have to argue for the beauty of the rose, the compelling power of the sonata, nor the grandeur of the sunset.—Nichol.

In Memoriam

GREENE.

It is with deep sorrow that we, the members of Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church, record the passing of our loved sister, Mrs. Grizzell Greene, on the 26th day of August, 1949.

We shall always cherish the memory of her friendship and her loyalty to her church. Realizing that God doeth all things well, we bow in humble submission to His will and pray that God's promises may give the bereaved family comfort and consolation in the loss of their loved one.

Mrs. J. O. DAVIDSON,
Mrs. R. T. JOHNSON,
Mrs. L. B. GRICE,
Committee.

WEST.

On January 5, 1950, Holy Neck Community was saddened by the loss of our friend and brother, Little Judson West.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church of which he was a life-long member, has lost one for whom they mourn.

2. That we let our will be lost in God's will in dealing with His children.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and love in their loss and commend them to our heavenly Father for comfort and peace, realizing that His grace is sufficient for all our needs.

Mrs. J. O. DAVIDSON,
Mrs. R. T. JOHNSON,
Mrs. L. B. GRICE,
Committee.

TEAGUE.

On October 22, 1949, Mrs. Daisy Fowler Teague, age 68, passed away. She was a faithful and devoted member of the Durham Congregational Christian Church. We shall miss her and wish to express our appreciation for her beautiful life.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we recommend her example of faith and love for Christ's Kingdom to all.

2. That we cherish the memory of her unselfish, patient, cheerful services to her family.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one placed in the permanent church record, and one sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. D. M. ESTES,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Committee.

BECK.

On October 16, 1949, Mrs. Mattie Munday Beck, an active religious worker in the Congregational Christian Church, passed to her eternal reward. We deeply mourn her loss and wish to express our love and respect for one who served so faithfully.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we hold in lasting memory her love, enthusiastic loyalty, and devoted service to her Master and Church.

2. That we express gratitude for having worked with her in Christian fellowship, and that we cherish the memory of her friendship.

3. That we recommend her example of faith, devotion, kindness and joyfulness to others and that we strive to emulate her quiet, unassuming manner in living to abundant life.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; one placed in the permanent church record, and one sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. D. M. ESTES,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Committee.

CARDEN.

Rev. J. S. Carden, 86, well known, retired minister of the Southern Convention, passed away on November 25, 1949. He had served as an active pastor in various North Carolina churches for almost fifty years. The success and influence of his ministry have been far reaching.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That the Durham Congregational Christian Church has lost one whose Christian spirit and influence will be greatly missed.

2. That we recommend to others his high Christian Standards, his ideals of service, his humble attitude and his love for humanity.

3. That we hold in loving memory the achievements of his long, consecrated life to the work of the Lord.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; one to The Christian Sun for publication; one placed in the permanent record of the church.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. D. M. ESTES,
Mrs. ROBERT S. SMITH,
Committee.

ADDRESS OR SERMON.

PRAYER:

Our Gracious Heavenly Father, we thank thee, that in thine infinite wisdom and love, thou hast endowed us with minds which are in some measure capable of understanding thine eternal purposes. We thank thee for the devout men and women, who through the ages, have sought to understand thy revelation, written in the nature of the universe, in the hearts of men, and in the Bible. We thank thee for all those who as they have apprehended thy truth; have sought to teach others also. We pray that thou wilt guide and bless those who study and those who teach thy revealed will, in our own Elon College and in all other institutions of higher learning. We pray that they may not only have the true knowledge of thee; but that they, with their spirits attuned to thy Spirit, may help us to walk more perfectly in thy ways; through Jesus Christ our Lord. BENEDICTION.

POSTLUDE.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

January and February have been designated as College Period by the Southern Convention. This gives pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and teachers an opportunity to tell their people about our college, its needs and program of service for the church. They tell us that the college—education—does not have an appeal. I question the statement. I do not believe that the constituency of the Southern Convention is so constituted as to respond only to pathetic and unfortunate conditions, but I do believe that it has good judgment and is able to determine values. Certainly, the college is the one institution that the Southern Convention has beyond the local church to prepare its leadership for pulpit and pew. Without trained leadership today no institution can hope to continue and make progress. It is only through personality that ideas are conveyed and opportunities are created. It would be well for our church to center its efforts on the support, the improvement, and continued progress of our college.

Even though January and February is a period for instruction, there is certainly no law against contributions. To date contributions for the college have been few and small. This is an appeal to the churches and Sunday schools to rally to the support of the college and make possible the continuance of the program of training for the church.

Another Hears and Heeds the Call

In an impressive service at the First Congregational Church of Hartland, Vermont, Sunday evening, January 29, at 8:00 p. m., Miss Mary Elizabeth Rowden, R. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Elmer Rowden of Woodsville, New Hampshire, will be commissioned as a career missionary in Turkey under the American Board of Foreign Missions. Rev. Donald L. Osborn, minister, will preside and read the Scripture Lesson.

MISS ROWDEN

The Commission will be conferred by Miss Margaret Blemker, Secretary of the American Board for the Near East, and because Miss Blemker recently served in Turkey, she will also give a Welcome to Turkey.

The Commissioning Sermon will be preached by Rev. Richard F. Beyer of the Congregational Church in Springfield, Vermont, on the subject, "In Thy Hand and In Thy Heart." The Prayer of Consecration will be made by Rev. Max H. Webster, Burlington, Vermont, Minister and General Secretary of the Congregational Christian Churches of the State of Vermont.

The Charge to the People will be made by Rev. Edward S. Treat, Burlington, Vermont, Associate Minister of the Vermont Congregational Christian Conference.

Miss Rowden was born in Woodsville, New Hampshire, and is a graduate of the local high school. She studied at the University of New Hampshire and then took her nurse's training at Hackensack, New Jersey, Hospital School of Nursing. In 1949 she secured her B. S. from Marlboro College, Marlboro, Vermont.

For a year Miss Rowden was Assistant Supervisor of the Surgical Ward and Surgical Nursing Instructor at the Hackensack Hospital, but in 1948 she went to Marlboro College to become the college nurse.

Miss Rowden will be assigned to Gaziantep, Turkey, and will work at the Azariah Smith Hospital, founded in 1880 in memory of an American Board pioneer mission.

The hospital where Miss Rowden will serve is in an interior rural state where there are only about 200 beds available for the medical and surgical care of its more than 280,000 population. Sick folk come from hundreds of miles around to this center of healing.

HUNG UP

By Charles A. Wells

Self-seeking and moral irresponsibility can bring the progress of this nation to a grinding stop. While only a few may have carried their selfish efforts into the realm of criminality, the loss of integrity, confidence and respect in our official life is appalling. We do not refer just to the five per centers in Washington—that is but foam on the waves. Special investigations have revealed that the nation-wide network of gambling and racketeering is now so formidable that civic officialdom has become intimidated and dominated by these evil influences over an alarming portion of our national life. It is not enough to blame this entirely on the crooks themselves. They could not long exist were it not for wide support among the people of America who are their patrons. The greatest fault is that so many of us try to get something for nothing. "Give nothing, create nothing, get all we can." If that keeps up, it won't be the Communists who will wreck the country; we'll wreck it ourselves.

News Flashes

Rev. Duane Vore will address the Suffolk Woman's Club Friday night at 8:00 o'clock.

"Dangerous Corner" was presented by the Barter Players in Whitley Auditorium at Elon on Tuesday evening.

Rev. James Haley, president of the Elon Ministerial Association, is serving Damascus and Mebane Christian Churches.

Dr. Victor Anthony of Benns Methodist Church reviewed the book Missions at the Grass Roots Monday night at Oakland Church, Chuckatuck, Va.

Rev. Carl Wallace, an Elon ministerial student, has been called to succeed Rev. Thomas Sutton as pastor of a group of churches near Franklinton, N. C.

At 7:16 this morning (Wednesday) the "Mighty Mo" was floated from the mud bank in Chesapeake Bay. Will Congress be as successful with the "Ship of State"?

Work has begun on the new educational building at our Durham Church, according to a statement by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, and the construction of the walls has reached the second floor.

Rev. Walter Hall announces that Timothy Chang will speak at Albemarle Sunday at the morning service. The young people will have charge of the service and Elon College Day will be observed. The Ladies' Missionary Society will conduct the evening service and Timothy will show pictures of Shaowu.

Rev. R. A. Whitten reports a large and enthusiastic Churchmen's Fellowship Meeting at Martinsburg, W. Va., on January 23. This dinner meeting was sponsored by the Evangelical and Reformed laymen, with Congregational Christian laymen in attendance as guests. There were seventy-two present.

Dr. Jesse H. Dollar completed his ministry at the Elon Community Church last Sunday. A service commemorating the occasion of a full-time ministry and program will be held at Liberty Spring Church Sunday, February 5, at 11:00 a. m. Dr.

Dollar, the new minister, will preach on the subject: "The Future Belongs to God."

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill reports that there has been fine cooperation in the observance of College Day. If it is impossible for your church to observe it on February 5, because of Youth Week or other activities, why not observe it at some other time during February. Programs are still available. It is hoped that churches not having preaching services on February 5 will order programs and make special plans for College Day observance at the Sunday School hour or at some other time.

A LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

Foochow, China,
January 2, 1950.

DEAR FRIENDS:

This is just a note to follow the long letters we burdened you with at the year's end. Timothy's young brother, Simeon, was here for lunch today. He and I (Dorothy) went to call on their sister, Yaying, in the tuberculosis ward of Union Hospital.

She was singing when we went in! But her news was really not as gay as that. She had hoped to be able to resume her studies this coming semester because she looks and feels so much better. But the X-ray shows her lungs to be the same. The painfulness of the injections has decreased somewhat; and she's glad of that. We all wish there were more recent word from her family in Shaowu.

We are very grateful for you Southern Convention folks' response to Yaying's need. We have just recently received the copies of THE SUN which contain Timothy's letters of last summer; and so are just learning of your generosity and Timothy's appreciation.

It is good to be able to catch up a little on your activities in women's societies, youth fellowships, churches and Sunday schools. Especially heartwarming is news of the United Evangelistic Advance. What promise 1950 holds with such a plan as that! We shall remember you and your advance in our prayers. May 1950 bring rich blessings to each of you.

Affectionately yours,
DICK & DOROTHY.

BIBLE CLASS HEARS DR. I. W. JOHNSON.

The Friendship Bible Class of the Liberty Christian Church met Tuesday night of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Savage with Dr.

I. W. Johnson teaching the Bible lesson taken from the Book of Psalms.

Mrs. Savage presided over the business meeting while Mrs. Wesley Harrell was in charge of the worship service. A solo, "I'll Live for Him," was sung by Mrs. Parke Brinkley.

The class welcomed two new members, Mrs. Clifton Holland and Mrs. Edward O'Berry. It was decided that the class would hold a covered dish supper at the church in February.

The following committees were named: Church Supper—Mrs. W. L. Turner, Mrs. W. T. Harrell, Presley Duke, Luther Wilkins; Flowers—Mrs. William Lowe; Program—Mrs. L. W. Wilkins, Parke Brinkley.

ATTENTION, CHURCHES IN NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

All churches of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference are urged to send leading representatives (attendance isn't limited) to the following Institutes of Evangelism:

Reidsville Area—Rev. T. G. Humphries, chairman, February 12, 1950: Reidsville, Happy Home, Mt. Bethel, New Lebanon, Howard's Chapel, Kallam Grove.

Danville Area—Rev. M. T. Sorrell, chairman; February 13: Danville, Lynchburg, Ingram, Pleasant Grove, Liberty, Lebanon, Hebron, Union (Va.).

Winston-Salem Area—Rev. W. J. Andes, chairman, February 14: Winston-Salem, Pfafftown, Tryon, Ashville, Belew Creek, Salem Chapel, Elk Spur, Rocky Ford.

Greensboro—Dr. W. E. Wisseman, chairman, February 15: Greensboro (First), Greensboro (Palm Street), Hines Chapel, Monticello, Pleasant Ridge and Calvary Christian in Greensboro. This meeting will be held at Calvary Church, T. Bowers, pastor.

Union Ridge Area—Rev. Kenneth Register, chairman, February 16: Union Ridge (N. C.), Graham, Bethel, Concord, Mt. Zion, Haw River, Long's Chapel, Mebane, Carolina, Hopedale, Durham.

Shallow Ford—Dr. W. W. Sloan, chairman, February 17: Shallow Ford, Berea, Burlington, Bethlehem, Apple's Chapel, Elon College Community Church, Gibsonville, Zion.

Each Institute will start at 7:30 p. m. and close at 9:00 p. m. The churches will meet at the "Area Church" as named above except Greensboro area will meet at Calvary Church. W. J. ANDES.

Wrought by Prayer

By FLORENCE GORDON

Editorial Assistant of Foreign Missions Conference

"More things are wrought by prayer," sang Tennyson, "than this world dreams of."

Only God can assess what has been wrought by the prayer that has gone up from millions of hearts on the World Day of Prayer, the first Friday in Lent, since its inception in 1887. The Day began, as good things have a way of beginning, in a very small way, but by now the sixty-two-year-old institution is observed in about ninety countries all over the world. The Foreign Missions Conference sends the uniform program, well in advance, not only to countries with which we are all familiar but also to some we are coming to know better, like Tanganyika and Tobago, Antigua, New Hebrides and the Fiji Islands. There the program is translated into many tongues. The United Council of Church Women distributes the program in the United States, where it is observed by thirteen thousand communities.

There has never been any special stress on the money side of the World Day of Prayer, for from the first the fact has been emphasized that it is a day of prayer. But prayer issues naturally in giving. In 1927, headquarters in the United States received $70 in spontaneous gifts. In 1949, World Day of Prayer offerings in the United States alone totaled over a quarter of a million dollars.

Here the offerings are divided equally between home and foreign mission projects. Other lands make their own decisions where to apply their offerings, but in every case the gifts are used constructively to fill some great human need, material and spiritual, and the list of causes to which they are applied gives a revealing insight into the world vision of the Christian groups involved.

God alone can measure the power of the world-wide prayer, but it is permitted to us to see the earthly side, the monuments of one kind and another raised by different colors, many races and national backgrounds, as they use their offerings year by year. Every type of educational, medical and social institution is included, and personal ministries to all sorts and conditions of men. In a very real sense, the continuation and extension of these institutions and services has been wrought by prayer.

There are eight interdenominational Christian colleges for women in the Orient which for years have looked hopefully to the World Day of Prayer for a portion of their budget for their ongoing program. The word "ongoing" is a particularly significant one when it is applied to the three in China, Gingling College, Cheeloo and Yenching; with the aftermath of the World War to reckon with, and inflation, and Communism, going on has meant a real struggle. But all three are going concerns today, with good enrollments and gallant spirit. In them are being trained many leaders greatly needed by the New China. In Tokyo Woman's Christian College women are being prepared for the roles which they will play in the Japan of the future. Women in Japan have "come out of the Kitchen" and into the Diet. They need education to meet their widened responsibilities.

The four colleges in India also have unparalleled opportunities to train leaders for the new day. The Women's Christian College, Madras, in the south, and Isabella Thoburn College in the north, offer general courses of high standard; Saint Christopher's Training College fits college graduates for educational work, Vellore Christian Medical College for medicine and nursing. The famine in South India has highlighted especially the need for the nutrition work and home economics done at Madras and Isabella Thoburn. The brave plan of Independent India to offer free education to its masses calls for an enormous increase in the number of trained teach-

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

REPORT ON THE CHRISTMAS FUND.

The Rev. Frank J. Scribner, Secretary of the Ministerial Relief Division of the Board of Home Missions, writes: "My very sincere personal thanks go out to all who have contributed to the Christmas Fund for ministers, widows and children in need. I know well how the calls upon the churches have multiplied this year and I am the more grateful that, among the other urgent appeals that have come to you, you have not forgotten our Veterans. Each year checks go out to about seven hundred needy persons in our National Fellowship, to carry the spirit of Christmas Day and the assurance that the church has not forgotten its veteran servants. And each year a fund is reserved to meet unforeseen but inevitable emergencies as they arise in the lives of our less fortunate ministers and their families. We closed our books with total receipts of $102,139.68. This amount, which is subject to minor corrections, exceeds last year's total by a little more than $900."

Here is occasion for hearty satisfaction. The Board of Superannuation of The Southern Convention channels its funds through the Ministerial Relief Division of the Board of Home Missions. Thanks to all who share in this commendable enterprise. Blessings on all our superannuates.

CONCERNING THE JACKSONS.

Two letters have come from Framingham, Massachusetts. Dr. William Allen Knight, author of "The Sign of a Child," writes: "I have read the article in The Sun about the Jacksons' leaving Shaowu with deep interest. Fifty years and more ago the church of which I was then pastor ordained Mr. Hinman, sent him and his wife to Shaowu, and provided for their support there. . . . So we touch hands in service!"

A letter from Miss Dorothy E. Bascom carries this statement concerning the same incident: "I could visualize it all, for I took the same trip once—although never by truck. I remember taking a launch just where they did."

Thank God for all who touch hands in service—and in prayer! The early church was undergirded by prayer and service. Times of danger and hardship served only to accentuate this divine activity. These are days of testing, but our far-flung circle of friendship is unbroken. We are not alone. There are many allies in our crusade for righteousness. Unseen ties bind many hearts together. The fellowship of kindred minds is a world-wide experience.

SANFORD AND SEAGROVE.

Tuesday evening of last week was a memorable occasion in the Sanford Church. It was a realization of a dream: a dream that had been rather carefully and thoroughly harnessed. The assembly hall of the new educational building was effectively decorated as a fellowship supper (banquet) was served to approximately 150 people. Mr. A. H. McIver, who had had not a little to do with the entire project, was the genial toastmaster. Recognition was given to those who had special responsibilities for the entire enterprise. The new minister and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Will B. O'Neill were present for special recognition. Greetings were brought from local ministers and churches. Dr. H. S. Hardcastle was present as the guest speaker with a jest for every gesture. The happy idea of charging a minimum of $10 per plate (a scheme which is neither patented nor copyrighted by the Sanford people) and the generous donation of the food and labor by the ladies enabled the church to realize more than $1,700 from the occasion. Before and after supper there was an opportunity to view the brick veneering or face-lifting on the exterior and the various features of the interior. Classrooms, a parlor, kitchenette for youth or buffet suppers and the minister's study give to the church new and adequate facilities for an educational program. The next thing on the Sanford building agenda is a parsonage of corresponding material.

YOUTH WEEK was launched by the young people of the Western Carolina Conference last Sunday with a rally at Seagrove Church. The church was filled to capacity with young people. Bill Simmons of Albemarle presided. The Rev. Walter Hall led the group singing and Baxter Twiddy recounted his experiences in Germany. Considerable disappointment was felt over the fact that the scheduled workshops were not held, but the program was interesting and enthusiasm was pronounced. Hanks Chapel won the trophy for attendance. The Rev. Thomas Sutton was host pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton are housed in a new, attractive parsonage and are optimistic concerning the work at Seagrove. A picnic supper in the school gymnasium was a delightful experience for all. A group of young people from Southern Pines, members of the Eastern Carolina Conference, were guests at the Rally. An offering amounting to $52.69 was received for an overseas work project. An all-day Rally will be held on the next fifth Sunday at Hank's Chapel.

Today is your day and mine, the only day that we have, the day in which we play our part. What our part may signify in the great whole we may not understand, but we are here to play it, and now is our time. This we know: it is a part of action, not of whining. It is a part of love, not of cynicism. It is for us to express love in terms of human helpfulness. This we know, for we have learned from sad experience that any other course of life leads toward decay and waste.

What About Our Worship?

By REV. DUANE N. VORE*

Last month Millard Stevens challenged our thinking on the preparation of our sermons. As I thought of what we might consider together today there came to mind the idea that there is another area of our weekly work that ought to receive a little more consideration than it often gets. We do it so often that it becomes routine and like much routine is done with less attention to detail than it deserves. The preparation of an order of service that will direct men's minds to the worship of God is of vital importance to each of us and to our people. I cannot speak to the matter as an authority nor as one who has attained any perfection whatever but simply as one who, like yourselves, senses the need for a more vital experience in worship.

Traditionally our non-liturgic churches have put the sermon as the most important single act in an order of service. All that precedes it is merely preliminary, to be accomplished with as little effort as possible. I am convinced of the sound worth of preaching. If it is well prepared, speaks to the need of the people and shows forth the challenge of the word of God, then indeed, it is of great importance in the guiding of men's minds. But that which goes before it in the order of service ought to be more than just a preliminary. Sometimes we have a sermon that "misses the boat" and the people go forth from that place hungry and thirsty for the things that are of God. There ought to be in the order of service enough of direction toward worship and opportunity for worship so that if the sermon does prove to be a dud they can go out with a sense of having been in the presence of God since they came seeking Him in adoration, in praise, in penitence and in petition, in thanksgiving and commitment. And even if we happen to be one of the most fortunate of preachers, one of the lucky ones who never misses with a sermon, it is foolish to set the diamond of our thinking in a setting of brass. The order of service ought to inspire worship of equal value to the sermon itself.

It is my feeling that usually the whole service can best be built around a theme. Mr. Stevens mentioned last month the value of theme preaching.

That preparation can be carried over into the preparation of the service of worship so that men have their minds pointed clearly toward a specific thing. The seasons of the Christian year, particularly Advent, Lent, Pentecost, the great special days with their emphasis—Ash Wednesday, Maunday Thursday, Good Friday, World Communion Sunday, Brotherhood Week are the source of themes of worship. Our people can learn to use them so that they are seasons wherein men's minds are more carefully and powerfully pointed toward the worship of God; our people can learn to carefully survey and weigh their lives as they seek to serve in the Kingdom if we help them to think more deeply and consecrate themselves more fully in the act of worship. We can use the themes of Christian doctrine, the task of the Church, the importance of personal responsibility as the basis for the order of service and by so doing give men a more comprehensive picture of their faith. We will give them more of the materials with which to build life that is of worth, materials that they want and need but often have missed because they simply were not presented at any time.

There has long been an aversion in most of our churches to the use of symbols within the church itself. We are not averse to the use of symbolism in the remainder of our lives, we use it widely. A handclasp is but a symbol of ones friendly intentions, of one's regard and respect for an individual. A flag is but a symbol of the greatness, the worth, the challenge of a nation and seldom do we look upon it without thinking to some degree of the responsibility that it lays upon us as a part of the nation it symbolizes. Our safety on the highway is governed to a great degree by symbols and we pay attention to them. They have real meaning for us, those signs along the way. Our safety at sixty or fifty miles an hour depends to a degree on how carefully we observe them. Why, then, if they are important in the remainder of our lives, are we so averse to using them in our churches. Oh yes, I know some of the objections, they are Roman, they are idolatry, they are not necessary. The fact remains that religious symbols can give greater power to worship, they can lift men up if men learn to use them wisely. The Cross, for instance, is most certainly a universal Christian symbol. It speaks to us of the devotion of our Master, it speaks of the sacrifice, the service, the redemptive power that were His. The plain cross we use in our churches is symbolic of the risen Christ, of one who could not be held captive by death. Some of our folks will say that they do not need to be visually reminded, that they know all of that and more, too, about our Christ. Yet, the observation of our daily lives may lead us to the conclusion that we need to be reminded more forcefully of His gifts and His commands to His followers. To have a cross before men brings more constantly and more sharply to them the awareness of that which Christ did for man. It brings it down to what He did for me and makes more conscious of what I ought, then, to do in His name. The cross is of worth as a symbol.

The minister, in a sense, is a symbol, the symbol of man's dedication to the service of God, of man's search for an understanding of God's will. When a man stands to speak it is inevitable that some of his individual personality shines through. Men ought to see not an individual but one who speaks and thinks as God's man, as one who strives to lose himself that he may better serve his God. They ought to understand that since he seeks to be God's he will, at times, say things he does not want to say but must, since he is not his own but God's. Greater power can come to preaching if our people learn that we seek to be channels through which God works, that we are but symbols of their own search for God.

The communion table ought to be more than a repository for the elements of the sacrament upon occasion. It is the symbol of our common faith, our common fellowship. It is the mark of oneness in Christ, a symbol of the worldwide fellowship at all times, not just when it has the elements upon it. Its presence urges men to forgiveness, for Jesus said we could never bring anything to God if we had ought in our minds against our brother. Its presence urges men toward a more tolerant understanding of one another. Its presence as a symbol of the fellowship of Christ gives man inspiration, a sense of shared worship with all men who submit themselves to Christ. We, as ministers, have the responsibility of teaching its meaning, we dare not take it for granted that men already know what it means. If we teach them its

"LAYMEN MORE AWARE OF RESPONSIBILITIES," SAYS DIRECTOR OF FELLOWSHIP.

"The laymen of America are becoming more aware of their responsibilities as Christians and are facing the practical aspects of Christianity as being those which make for a happy and successful living. This applies not only to religious life but to economic and social life as well." That's the opinion of Walter A. Graham, national director of the Congregational Christian Laymen's Fellowship. Mr. Graham was the principle speaker at a banquet at Elon College January 29, which climaxed the Laymen's Rally held on that day. His topic was "What's Ahead for 1950?"

Earlier in the day an afternoon program, beginning at 3:00, was attended by approximately 600 laymen. Featured in the afternoon schedule were talks by Dr. Martin L. Goslin, Evanston, Illinois, and Thomas L. Moose, chairman of the Evangelical Reformed Brotherhood. Greetings were heard from Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, and Mr. Graham. George D. Colclough, Chairman of the Laymen's Fellowship, presided.

Dr. Goslin told the group that "The best counteraction against communism is the practice of liberty, justice, love and service. This must not be half-hearted, deluded practices," he continued, "because the communists claim to be practicing these principles also. We know, however, that they are in a distorted form. Americans include these four great principles in the foundation of our whole life. We need to practice them not only in theory but in every aspect of life."

He was followed by Thomas Moose who pointed out that "Man must recognize God's ownership of all things including man. Man will find his greatest happiness in that ownership. The beginning of such acknowledgement must be in the mind because, 'As man thinketh, so is he.'"

A religious movie, "Like a Mighty Army," concluded the program. All five conferences of the Congregational Christian Churches were represented at the rally. Some of the visitors came more than 300 miles to attend.

New officers elected today to the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches are as follows: Chairman, George D. Colclough, Elon College; Vice-Chairman, W. B. Williams, Newport News; Representative on the Executive Board of the Convention, George D. Colclough.

Conference representatives on the Laymen's Council are: North Carolina and Virginia Conference—W. T. Dunn, Lynchburg, Va., J. H. Rountree, Greensboro, N. C.; Eastern North Carolina Conference—I. H. Vickery, Henderson, A. N. McIver, Sanford; Eastern Virginia Conference—Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Suffolk, I. Robinson, Norfolk; Western North Carolina Conference—George E. Gunter, Trinity, Cyrus Shoffner, Liberty; Virginia Valley—Roy A. Larrick, Winchester, Harold F. Rhodes, Linville.

DR. GRAHAM SPEAKS IN WINSTON-SALEM.

Dr. Walter Graham, Penbrook, Ky., President of the Laymen's Fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches, was the principal speaker at a Laymen's rally of the men of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Churches of Winston-Salem and Forsyth County on Saturday evening, January 28, at the Congregational Christian Church in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Dr. Graham spoke on "My Dream Church." He challenged the laymen to a more active work within the local churches. He said, "That all churchmen need to work for a more perfect church in each community."

Others speaking briefly were: Dr. William T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, and George D. Colclough, Chairman of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

E. M. Whitman, President of the Laymen's Fellowship of the host Congregational Christian Church, presided at the meeting. The invocation was given by Boyd J. Delp, president of the Brotherhood of the First Evangelical and Reformed Church of Winston-Salem. Rev. Wm. J. Andes, pastor of the local Congregational Christian Church, led the group in singing. Russell H. Sides, First Church, and president of the Eastern District of the E. and R. Churchmen's Brotherhood, offered the benediction.

Laymen were present from the following churches of Forsyth County: Belew Creek, Salem Chapel, Pfafftown, Winston-Salem, Memorial Evangelical and Reformed Church and the First Evangelical and Reformed Church of Winston-Salem.

The ladies of the host church served a ham dinner to the group.

"CHARTER FOR REFUGEES." DRAWN UP IN AUSTRIA.

A Round-up of the Salzburg Refugee Conference Sponsored by the World Council of Churches—

A three-day conference convened in Salzburg, Austria, by the World Council of Churches from January 17 to 19 to help solve Austria's problem of what to do with 300,000 German ethnic origin refugees "has drawn the attention of the world, for which Austria is grateful."

With these words, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Gerhard May of Vienna, Bishop of the Evangelical Church (Protestant) of Austria, and a leading figure during the World Council's refugee conference, summed up as actually accomplished what its planners had first projected—to focus international attention on the plight of some 300,000 Austrian-supported "Volksdeutsche," part of 12 million people of German national origin who were expelled from Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary following the Potsdam Agreement of August 2, 1945.

Most important single development of the conference was the drawing up of a basic "charter for refugees" in Austria, which urged the United Nations to issue international refugee passports to all refugees. This plan was introduced at the conference by Odd Nansen of Norway, whose father, Dr. Fritjof Nansen, had introduced a similar passport for refugees following World War I. Such passports, Nansen argued, are extremely vital to solving the Central European refugee problem which now threatens the recovery of all of Europe.

A third of a million "Volksdeutsche" refugees who now live in Austria actually have no legal identity, Nansen pointed out. Dependent for support on a struggling, convalescing Austrian economy, the refugees lost citizenship when they were ousted from their homelands after the war. Without passports, they cannot travel—even from one occupation zone to another—in order to seek employment and new homes. Yet, most of them have lived in Austria for about four years.

One hundred and forty Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders sat together during the conference, meeting in the Aula Academica of historic Salzburg University. In effect, representatives of both church groups have now addressed a joint appeal to the whole world to solve the problem of Austria's refugees. Both Protestants and Roman Catholics agreed

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

THE ELON COLLEGE MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM.

Elon College and the general public have been using the new gymnasium during the past two weeks. In addition to the college varsity teams, high school teams of the county and state have played games in the gymnasium. Present indications are that it will easily become the center of attraction in the county, particularly where basketball is concerned. It has ample seating capacity and other necessary facilities to accommodate large gatherings. The new fold-a-way seats will accommodate 2,598 spectators. The upstairs bleachers will accommodate 2,000. It is entirely possible to make an audience of 5,000 entirely comfortable in the building. It hasn't been filled yet but in all probability it will be filled before the spring is over.

The fold-a-way seats are expensive. They cost a total of $19,000.00 installed, which means a little less than $8.00 each. The Alumni Association is undertaking to secure enough friends paying $8.00 for one, or $15.00 for two to pay the cost of the seats. Hundreds and thousands of letters have gone out from the Alumni Office making this appeal. More than two hundred seats have been sold. This, of course, is a long way from 2,500. If you have not bought a seat (one or more) won't you send a letter with a check to the Alumni Office soon? It won't cost you very much but it will greatly encourage our Alumni Secretary and his associates. We must make the first payment of $8,000.00 on or before February 1. To buy one seat or more would be a good deed. Have you done your good deed today?

While the gymnasium is in use (it has been for two weeks) it is not entirely completed as of this date. The painter is still at work but hopes to complete his job soon. The tile company has not completed its job. They are under agreement, however, to complete their contract by Saturday, January 28. The cement contractor has not completed the laying of sidewalks for entrances to and around the building. This should be completed the early part of next week.

The building, its construction and plan, have been pronounced excellent by architects, builders, sports writers and athletic directors from different parts of the country. Naturally, we feel very proud of the building and are certain that this added equipment will mean a very great deal to the college, the county, and all interested in intercollegiate athletic sports, physical education, and education in general. The cost of the building is considerably more than we had anticipated, however, when you consider the size of the building, the present cost of construction and the facilities included, the cost, as many have said, is extremely reasonable. The cost of the building itself will amount to approximately $198,000.00. Grading, building sidewalks, constructing a disposal plant, and furnishings will cost between $30,000.00 and $40,000.00. The total cost of the building when completed with furnishings will be somewhere between $230,000.00 and $240,000.00. By the end of next week, we should be able to give a detailed report showing the cost of the undertaking item by item.

The General Alumni Association through its Executive Committee and General Secretary, Jimmy Darden, have undertaken to erect this building for the college. By all working together, we have been able to secure approximately half of the cost of the building in cash (payments continue to come in). Of the remaining $115,000.00 plus, a little more than $70,000.00 has been secured in pledges which leaves between forty and fifty thousand dollars to be provided. Any contribution from any source and for any amount would be appreciated.

The Alumni Association has assumed the entire responsibility for the cost of the gymnasium. The college, by vote of the Board of Trustees, is cooperating with the Alumni Association in securing the funds with which to pay creditors. The Alumni Association will give the college a note for the balance due and continue to work at this undertaking until the entire amount is paid. The alumni are anxious to do this since this building is erected as a memorial to the Elon College men and women who lost their lives in World Wars I and II. The ones of us whose lives were spared feel that this is as little as we can do as an expression of our devotion to them and to the cause for which they died. It seems entirely fitting that this memorial should be on the Elon College Campus where their paths crossed with ours. We shall always remember them as in the springtime of life full of enthusiasm and hope. Their expectations were as great as ours but unfortunately they were cut off, as it seems to us, at an untimely hour. May God help us to do our duties by them and the cause for which they gave their lives.

NEW SERIES OF ADULT CLASSES.

Elon College will open a new series of night classes for adults on February 7, according to Dr. W. W. Sloan, chairman of the faculty committee on adult education. They will be offered, beginning at 7 o'clock, on Tuesday and Thursday nights of each week until May 4. There will be eight courses from which prospective students may choose. No examinations will be required unless the students desire college or teacher certificate credit for them.

The Tuesday night courses include Oil Painting, to be taught by Miss Lila Newman; Mechanical Drawing, by Prof. Albert V. Coble; a Course in Shakespeare, by Dr. James Howell; and a Survey of the New Testament, by Dr. W. W. Sloan.

Courses to be offered on Thursday nights include Organization and Administration of Physical Education, by Prof. J. L. Pierce; Guidance Theory and Practice, by Prof. J. C. Colley; Parliamentary Procedure, by Prof. J. Earl Danieleley; and Interior Decoration, by Miss Louise Ramsey.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

As a rule when the weather is good during the college period—January and February—attendance at Sunday school and church is good. When attendance is good, collection, as a rule, is good, which means that Elon College will receive payments on Conference Apportionments. We have had good weather during January. We have had good payments from a very small number of churches. In all probability, other Sunday schools and churches have received offerings but their officials have not had time to forward the same to the college. Elon College is on the quarter system this year. Toward the end of the quarter, funds remain low. The winter quarter ends with February. If you have not sent a payment on your apportionment for 1950, this would be a

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

FRANKLIN HAS SPECIAL MEETING.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church held its Thank Offering program Sunday, November 13th, at the eleven o'clock worship hour. Timothy Chang was guest speaker. A large congregation attended and an offering of $100.00 was received for Han Mei School. The worship service was conducted by Mrs. Felton Johnson, assisted by Mrs. Allen Daughtry. The church choir sang "God So Loved the World."

In December, the quarterly meeting of the auxiliary was highlighted with our Christmas party. The Fellowship Hall was beautifully decorated and a buffet supper was enjoyed by sixty members. Immediately following the supper, a worship program was led by Mrs. John M. Beale and Christmas carols made a fitting climax when the offering was received. This will be used to send gifts of $30.00 to Rev. and Mrs. William Q. McKnight at Doshisha University and three C-A-R-E packages to them also.

Sunday night, January 22nd, the members of the auxiliary sponsored another program. Mrs. T. Hayes Holland, President, conducted the devotionals and introduced Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, who capably and interestingly reviewed the mission study book Which Way Japan? Miss Coghill's review was preceded with the film strip "Christ's Work in Japan." We were happy to have members from Holland, Holy Neck, Mount Carmel, Union (Southampton) and Johnson's Grove churches worship with us for this program.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER—FEBRUARY 24.

The Council of Church Women in Winston-Salem are sending a copy of the World Day of Prayer program to each of the city schools in order that the boys and girls may have a service on that same day and help in the prayer for peace. The World Day of Prayer service is not just for women, but for all people. Ministers, laymen, young people, and children who can should attend a service on the World Day of Prayer and pray earnestly for a "world united in peace."

The service for the World Day of Prayer was written by a Japanese woman—Michi Kawai. How fitting that we should have a Japanese woman write the service when we are all studying Japan this year!

The picture of Christ on the poster for the World Day of Prayer was painted by Taikai Sadakata—a Japanese painter. After he became a Christian his yearning ambition was to paint a portrait of the Christ. He said, "If people who see this work of mine are led to see the beauty of Christ and learn to love Him I shall be most blest."

CHILDREN'S SERVICE.

The Children's Service for the World Day of Prayer is quite good. It could be used on Sunday morning for Church School, at a special Children's Service on the World Day of Prayer, or at any suitable time when children are present.

This service includes stories taken from two of the mission study books this year—Blueberry Acres and Where the Carp Banners Fly. It includes the lighting of six different colored candles by different children as they speak a line.

CALL TO PRAYER LEAFLETS.

These could be given out at woman's meetings, church services, or any meeting prior to the World Day of Prayer on February 24th. They could be used on hospital trays on that day and in businesses. They cost 10c per hundred and are fine for distribution. Address: United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

PHILATHEA CLASS OF SUFFOLK MAKES PLANS FOR FATHER-SON BANQUET.

At the January meeting of the Junior Philathea Class of the Suffolk Christian Church plans were made for a Father-Son Banquet to be given by the class on Wednesday, February 15.

Mrs. Edward Johnson presided and appointed the following banquet committee: Program—Mrs. Harvey Brown, Mrs. T. G. Coulbourn, Mrs. E. C. Williams; Devotionals—Mrs. M. E. Williams, Mrs. Stanley Johnson, Mrs. J. R. Baines, Mrs. H. E. Bruce; Tickets—Mrs. D. H. Howell, Mrs. Edgar Bradshaw, Mrs. J. C. Ramsey, Jr.; Kitchen—Mrs. Lyeurgus Barrett, Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. John King, Mrs. Floyd Griggs, Mrs. Venton Rose, Mrs. L. F. Darden, Mrs. S. E. Johnson, Mrs. E. J. Walls; Flowers—Mrs. J. T. Herring, Mrs. James Babb, Jr., Mrs. W. T. Bolton, Mrs. Eddie Hancock, Mrs. J. M. Dailey; Publicity—Miss Tapelle Pruden; Prizes—Mrs. J. L. Byrd, Mrs. J. J. Felton.

Mrs. J. C. Ramsey, Jr., program chairman, presented a playlet entitled "Old-Fashioned School Days."

The following committees were appointed for February: House, Circle No. 4—Mrs. J. W. Rountree, chairman; Welcome—Mrs. A. F. Morgan, Mrs. Ruben Edwards; Visiting—Mrs. Marie Taylor, Mrs. H. E. Bruce.

Devotionals: January 29—Miss Emma Luke; February 5—Mrs. Harry Taylor; February 12—Mrs. W. Edgar Taylor; February 12—Mrs. W. Edgar Bradshaw; February 19—Mrs. D. H. Howell.

FORMER MISSIONARY PASSES.

Mrs. Anna Rathbun Ward, R. N., of Newton Highlands, Massachusetts, former missionary of the American Board in Turkey, and wife of Dr. Markk H. Ward, Medical Secretary of the American Board, died Monday morning, January 23.

Mrs. Ward's service in Turkey, broken by World War I, covered the periods from 1915 to 1918 and 1919 to 1921. During World War I her husband served overseas as a Captain in the U. S. Medical Corps and Mrs. Ward returned to Turkey alone in 1919.

Since 1923, when her husband became Medical Secretary of the American Board, Mrs. Ward has resided in Newton Highlands where she has been active in the Newton Highlands Women's Club; the Newton Tuberculosis Association; the Women's Association of the Congregational Church of Newton Highlands; and the Continuation Club, made up of former directors, secretaries and missionaries of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Congregational, now merged with the American Board.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

This week we shall have the directions for the boy as promised.

Take the same amount of wire, cotton, strips of cloth for binding and the nutshell. Twist, insert and glue the shell as before. Then wind the cloth to hold in place the arms and finish off.

Make your boy long trousers—the kind of material depending on what style you have chosen, black or serge would be fine for a gentleman of by-gone days, but if he is modern use a tweed or a striped material. Tiny pieces of felt may be sewed or glued over the wire feet. Make a coat of felt or cloth. Take three small pieces of white material to look like he has on a shirt. Place a V-shape at the coat collar opening, and place the other two pieces under the coat sleeves to look like cuffs. A tiny piece of colored silk will make a pretty tie or a knotted scarf.

Now you are ready for the head. You can glue his hat on, or give him hair and let him have his hat in hand. Use a fifty-cent piece to outline your brim. Cut a smaller hole in the center and use that piece for top of crown. Then cut a crown of straight material. Whip stitch crown, whip stitch crown top and then crown to brim. If you want a wig, cotton will make an elegant old man and you can add a handle bar moustache.

Paint his face to correspond with the young lady's and you have a happy pair. The directions for the basic dolls will make any kind: Dutch, French, American Indian, Negro, character, colonial or modern.

If you plan to use these for a Valentine center-piece, cut a large heart of red felt, construction paper or cardboard. Glue doily edging to the sides and place your shell people on the heart. Place on your Valentine table.

Very little folks can make people from peanuts—using a large needle with stout thread one can string into shape peanuts in the shell. They may be dressed, and to make them stand, glue the feet to rounds of cardboard. Animals may be made the same way. I once saw a collection of peanut men dressed as Chinese and they were charming.

WHEN GRANDMOTHER TAKES OVER.

By M. LOUISE C. HASTINGS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

When a grandmother is prevailed upon to be the "baby sitter" for more than a few hours, considerable thought should be given to the situation. She, naturally, will not be in the twenties or thirties, and while she may be up to par, it was never intended for a grandmother to care, by herself, for small children or babies for any length of time. A baby under one year of age is, of course, easier to care for than a tiny tot who is creeping or running around.

John and his wife, Susan, needed a vacation. They left Grandmother with the eight-month-old baby and took the three-year-old child with them; this was good planning. In preparation for the trip, the washing machine had been kept very busy—all linen had been laundered, Grandmother's house dresses had been washed, and everything for the baby had been made fresh and clean. Some ironing still remained to be done, but Grandmother had the option about doing that.

Also, they made sure that there was sufficient canned food on the shelves to last ten days, should it be needed, and a little neighborhood girl was engaged to go to the store and run other errands. Everything worked out satisfactorily, for the baby was healthy; and while Grandmother was sometimes quite tired, she managed very well.

She herself planned so as to make things as easy as possible. She had all the baby's belongings brought down from upstairs, and the two lived on the lower floor. The baby was heavy, so it would have been difficult for Grandmother to carry her up and down the stairs.

"I am going to live in one room as much as I conveniently can," Grandmother had told Susan, "and I think I shall choose your attractive, newly-painted kitchen." This was practical, and, too, it kept the other rooms in good condition, thus saving unnecessary cleaning. The bathinet and high chair were brought into the kitchen and only the basket-bassinet was put in the adjoining room. Everything was close at hand. The kitchen was not large, and, while it took many steps to look after the baby, work was reduced to a minimum.

One evening Grandmother had company to supper—she served it in the pretty kitchen with its unusual baby accessories. The guest noticed Grandmother stooping again and again to pick up the toys the baby kept throwing on the floor. She had a bright idea. She asked for a roll of bandage. As what Grandmother gave her was two inches wide, the guest first cut it in halves lengthwise. Then she divided the strips into such lengths that the toys which she tied to each could not quite reach the floor when the other ends were fastened to the high chair and all around the basket-bassinet. Now, when the baby threw the toys out, all Grandmother had to do was to pull up the bandage strips and return the toys. Continual bending over is tiring at any age, and sometimes extra hard for grandmothers. This was a real help.

The next day Grandmother tied toys onto the play pen in the same way. She had planned carefully here, too. The play pen and the baby carriage were on the piazza, close to the glider seat where she could rest and take care of the baby at the same time.

The baby, like many another one, cried when Grandmother went out of the room. It was quite an issue, because there were telephone calls and doorbells to be answered. What could Grandmother do?

She started playing "peekaboo" whenever she left the kitchen. Gradually she remained away for increasingly longer intervals before peeking in. After a while the baby became used to the longer periods without seeing the familiar face. When she had mastered this situation, instead of peeking in, Grandmother called out to her—talked to her from another room—and then, after a time, played the "peekaboo" game again.

But Grandmother let the baby entertain herself as much as possible. She did not talk to her continually.

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

D. V. B. S. ANNIVERSARY.

Plans for an international celebration of the 50th anniversary of Daily Vacation Bible Schools in 1951 will be set in motion during the annual meetings of the International Council of Religious Education at Columbus, Ohio, February 12-18.

The observance "will direct attention to the importance of this part of the summer program for boys and girls, to the need for improving the quality of work done through this channel, and to the churches' responsibility for reaching unreached boys and girls with more and better vacation church schools," according to Dr. Roy G. Ross, general secretary of the I. C. R. E.

Special events suggestions will be prepared for local church and community programs. The study theme for local classes will be on the heritage of the church. Nationwide press and radio publicity is also scheduled.

The observance, if approved, will be directed by Miss Ruth Elizabeth Murphy, I. C. R. E. director of vacation religious education. She will be assisted by children's work directors in the major Protestant denominations.

Started in 1901 among Baptist churches in New York City, the vacation church school movement spread rapidly throughout the country and the world. Denominational home mission agencies gave impetus to the program.

Now there are more than five million boys and girls attending vacation religious classes each summer both in local churches and in interdenominational schools.

WROUGHT BY PRAYER.

ers, especially for village girls, and the health problems of India are always with her.

There are "monuments" of another sort also erected with funds from the World Day of Prayer in the United States. All around the world are magazines, slanted especially to children and women and young people, which exist because women praying together in the United States gave funds to start and to subsidize them. The high school children in India who pore over their magazine The Treasure Chest, the village families in Africa who enjoy the short stories and articles in Listen, the Chinese who find Happy Childhood, The Woman's Messenger and Youth Magazine absorbing, may not think of their reading matter as dependent upon prayer, but it is prayer and its concomitant giving that keeps it coming to them.

Many of the 26,000 foreign students now on over a thousand campuses in the United States have come to know the Committee on Friendly Relations and its helpful services, geared to meet their individual needs from the moment they land here, yes, even from the moment they apply in their homelands for entry to the United States. The World Day of Prayer offerings have a hand in maintaining that work also.

There are other ministries, also, within our borders which are wrought by prayer and prayerful gifts. The Home Missions Council of North America was among the first to realize that those who pick our crops, the agricultural "migrants, too, are men who feel, and not just cogs within the harvest wheel." It maintains work among migrants in twenty-three states. The groups which see a station wagon come in "to cauliflower," or "to grapes" or "to peaches," may not connect the organ and hymn books, the bats and balls, the books and games and motion picture projector, which come out of that well-equipped "Harvester," with the first Friday in Lent, but the fact remains that gifts on that day are transmuted into just such helpful ministries.

The students in government boarding schools for American Indians in Alaska, and in our southern and western states, have a religious activity program under trained directors, and the illiterate Navajos a literacy program, because American women pray together in their home towns. Negro sharecroppers in the south know a fuller life because World Day of Prayer funds make possible institutes for pastors and lay leaders who pass on what they learn to those in the rural churches.

Surely Mrs. Darwin James, who founded the World Day of Prayer when she called upon the Presbyterian women of the U. S. in 1887 to meet in their home communities and pray for missions, never dreamed of so big an outcome to the day that she set in action. More things have been wrought by prayer than Mrs. James could dream of. But Mrs. James did know what personal prayer does for the individual life, and she had the vision to call for offerings to accompany the prayer. The ongoing program of Christian service which grows out of World Day of Prayer giving in the United States alone is a vast and comprehensive one. And in other lands, also, women who meet to pray on the first Friday in Lent, make sacrificial offerings which become living monuments. Canada supports predominantly agencies publishing Christian literature. Many overseas groups give regularly to one or another of the great Bible societies. The women of Teheran, Iran, contributed to hymnals for Japan, and Belgian worshippers gave for the work of Bible women in the Congo. A little knot of village women in Africa sent a C-A-R-E package to Europe.

Last year the women of the United States contributed the paper on which women in Japan and in Germany were able to print the World Day of Prayer program. In both these lands, public observance of the Day had been resumed directly after the close of the war. Significantly, the first offerings of the Japanese women definitely expressed their Christian sentiment: they sent them, they write, "to help rebuild churches destroyed by the Japanese." When they gather in their churches this time, Friday, February 24, 1950, their gifts will be for the education of students in the seminaries, to whom they look to guide Japan toward Christian democracy.

NOTE: This story has been prepared in connection with the World Day of Prayer, which is observed each year on the first Friday in Lent, and sponsored by the United Council of Church Women.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D.D.

THE GOSPEL MOVES WESTWARD.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 12, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: When they gathered, and declared all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles.—Acts 14:27.

LESSON: Acts 13:4-5; 14:1-3, 19-23.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 49:9b-13

The Gospel moved Westward! Thank God that it did!! If we would like to know what life here would be if we did not have the gospel, look at the lands where it has not been proclaimed. Every Westerner ought to thank God again and again, that in the providence of God, the good news moved westward on its way around the world. And it is a thrilling story—this story of the westward march of missions.

Missions a Divine Mission.

"So they, being sent forth by the Holy Spirit went . . ." Missions, like the Church itself did not spring up from the earth, but came down from heaven. The Holy Spirit gave birth to the missionary enterprise. He simply gave fresh impulse to the spirit that was in our Lord in the days of His flesh. It was the Holy Spirit that separated Paul and Barnabas unto the work to which God had called them, and it was the Holy Spirit that sent them forth . . . to proclaim the Word of God.

The Way of Conquest.

Christianity soon came into conflict with stark paganism and evil forces. Scarcely had the missionaries landed on the island of Cyprus before they were confronted by a sorcerer named Elymas, who sought to turn away Sergius Paullus from the faith. But the powers of darkness were put to flight in a dramatic way, and a great victory was won for the Christian faith. Here is a symbol of the secret of conquest against the forces of evil. The early Christians prevailed because they out-thought, out-lived, and out-died the pagan world. Communism cannot be defeated by superior material or military might. It cannot even be contained in that way. It can be conquered only by a superior way of life. It is up to the Christians of today's world to demonstrate the superiority of Christ's way of life over Marx's way of life. Today's world is a ringing challenge to Christians and the Church of Christ, a challenge which every one of us ought to accept in the Master's name. Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the Church in its struggle against Communism.

New Testament Preaching.

Paul's sermon or address in the synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia is typical of New Testament preaching at its best. Like all good preaching it begins where folks are, it has a point of contact. Speaking to Jews, he began with Jewish history. But here as always Paul moves on to Christ. He presents Him as the Promised One of God, the Messiah, the Christ. He makes His death and Resurrection central. He proclaims the gospel as "good news." And he warns men against the sin of unbelief and disobedience and summons them to repentance. His message was "glad tidings" as he told the people at Antioch. But they very fact involved responsibility and judgment. It took courage to say what he said, but Paul "spoke boldly in the Lord." And because Paul honored God, God honored Paul—signs and wonders were done by the hands of the ministers or missionaries.

A Man's Man.

This fellow Paul (and his companion Barnabas for that matter) was a man's man. He faced physical danger and personal injury calmly and courageously. When the fanatical Jews from Antioch and Iconium followed him to Lystra and dragged him out of the city and stoned him, leaving him as they thought dead, he got up, and went immediately back into the city. That took courage, tremendous courage and moral heroism. The fact is that bearing witness to our faith in Christ always takes courage of one kind or another. As someone has said, it does not take much of a man to be a Christian, but it takes all there is of him. There are all too many cowards among professing Christians. It takes courage to live up to our ideals before the crowd. There are not many of us who are going to be dragged out of the city and stoned for our faith, but there are many of us who would have to endure ridicule and suffering and material loss if we consistently and courageously bore our witness to our faith in Christ.

Evangelism and Pastoral Care.

Paul combined the spirit of an evangelist with the spirit of a pastor to a rare degree. He was zealous in his effects to win folks to Christ. And he was just as zealous in his efforts to train them and confirm them in Christ. "And when they had preached the gospel to that city (Derbe) and had made many disciples, they returned to Lystra and to Iconium and to Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that through tribulation we must enter the Kingdom of God. And when they had appointed them elders (older, experienced men) and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed." Remember, these were the cities in which they had been persecuted and beaten. But Paul had the pastoral heart. He was a good shepherd. He was eager to confirm the souls of the believers. And he played fair with them. He told them frankly that it was only through many tribulations that they could enter into the Kingdom of God. One wonders if in our effort to get folks into the church, we do not make it too easy. It was not thus with Jesus. Said He "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

and gave an outline of the work for the next quarter.

Mrs. T. B. White led the devotionals and Mrs. G. E. Rogers gave a report on the sale of cards for the organization.

Following the meeting the hostess, Mrs. F. C. Copeland, assisted by Mrs. George Howell, served refreshments.

Those present were Mrs. E. K. Tyler, Mrs. W. T. Bolton, Mrs. T. B. White, Mrs. J. J. Barlowe, Jr., Mrs. Marion Shaw, Mrs. G. E. Rogers, Mrs. F. C. Copeland, Mrs. H. W. Trump, Sr., Mrs. Gordon Haskins, Betty White, June Bolton, Betty Morrison, Lynn Tyler, Stewart Tyler and Mrs. George Howell.

WHAT ABOUT OUR WORSHIP?

meaning, it will offer them an experience in worship that is of worth.

The offertory is one of the greatest symbols that we have, but too often it is simply a collection of monies. People feel that they are paying for the privilege of worship. If that is all it is, a collection, then we had better take a lesson from commercial enterprise and put up a box in the vestibule. It is never a collection, people are not paying dues or anything of the kind. They are offering a gift to God and it is not a gift by monetary substance. Perhaps one of the reasons people give but sparingly is that we have never taken the trouble to help them realize that they were, in this act, giving their hearts, their lives unto God; that it was not just a question of dollars and cents but of the surrender of self to the work of the Kingdom of God. They must be taught that this overt act of stewardship is a repeated expression of thanksgiving unto God, that they are not giving to the church or the minister but to God. There is nothing more crass than collection, there is nothing more inspiring than an offering of ones whole life unto God that He may use it to the glory of His Kingdom.

The use of symbols when people are trained to use them will point men's minds more fully toward worship and if we as ministers govern ourselves wisely we can help them to find greater worth in worship through the use of symbols. The responsibility is ours.

There are other tools that are used to guide men's minds to worship, to give them food for thought and plans for action.

There is the matter of hymns. How often we choose a hymn simply because it has a catchy tune or the people know it. Hymns ought to be chosen for what they say to the heart of man. You don't read Scripture just because it happens to please the ear, no more should hymns be sung for the pleasantness. Most hymns make a statement of theological belief, they offer some idea that men can take with them, they stick a whole lot longer than many sermons. We ought, then, to be more careful about what we offer for remembrance. It should be something of worth, it should minister to their hearts not just to a sense of rhythm. We object that people don't know them, the great hymns of the church. They never will if we don't teach them new hymns. Here we ought to say that it is important not to use a hymn too often lest it reach the point where it can be sung with no thought or attention to its meaning. Hymns are important and deserve our careful attention, not last-minute choice.

The responsive reading is as much a reading of the Scripture as our reading of the Morning Lesson. It seems to me vitally important that the people have a share in reading as well as in listening. For some of them, unfortunately, it is the only time they read from the Bible. We ought to exercise care in the choice of the passages and help our people to learn to read them well that they may gain strength and guidance from them.

The prayers should be as carefully prepared as our sermon. At this point far too many of us fall down. I do, to my shame. There is more than the Morning Prayer in the service. There needs to be a place for silence. The Quaker idea of waiting upon God is of great value but we are responsible for teaching men to use it wisely. Guided silent prayer can be of definite value in the act of worship once men are trained to offer up their own prayer unto God.

There is definitely a place for a wider use of congregational prayers. I am not convinced that they should be used every Sunday but some of our folks need definite words put into their mouths in order to enable them to find prayer of worth. We can guide men into communion with God, not just conversation before Him. It will take some effort on our part but it will be of inestimable benefit to our people. Our pastoral prayer ought, it seems to me, have within it confession, assurance of pardon and forgiveness, intercession, petition, thanksgiving. Not all of them every Sunday morning but specific prayers that do more than wander around in a spiritual wilderness are essential if our people are to find any worth for their lives in the act of corporate prayer led by one individual.

The music the choir brings and the type of thing the organist does with the prelude, offertory and the organ meditations need to come in for some consideration, too. The minds of men are highly susceptible to music. The anthems, then, ought to be chosen with care and should be of worth, not just melodically repetitious phrases. I know as well as any of you that extreme care will have to be exercised in making suggestions relative to music of the choir. But if men are to find worship then everything that goes into guiding them to it must be carefully prepared and some of the jig-tunes that have been made sacred by the appellation of a title that includes the word "Lord" are not fit to be used in guiding men to worship. If together we learn to bring what is highest and best in glory to God, we as ministers, our choir and our people will find our act of worship of greater worth since we insist on the quality of the tools we use to guide us to worship.

There is yet one other thing that has to do with helping men to worship, that is the building. It makes no difference how large or how small it is, it ought to be clean. Men cannot seek the glory of God in the midst of dirt and the cluttered collection of months. It ought to be relatively comfortable. Rightly or wrongly, men's minds are distracted if they are too hot or too cold, too cramped or too anything else. We can strive to offer them a decent, orderly room in which to worship. It ought to have beauty, and I do not mean that it must be ornate or costly. The wise use of a fine religious picture may add to the beauty of the room but it is not essential for beauty can be found in simplicity as well as anywhere else. It is a relatively simple thing to offer men a clean, comfortable place in which to worship but it requires attention upon our part at times.

I have not offered these words as an authority but simply as one who believes that we should spend more time and more effort in the use of the tools available that men may find greater worth in their worship of God.

SUFFOLK AREA TRAINING COURSE.

There were four courses: (1) Miss Leila Anderson, Yankton, South Dakota, taught, "Teaching Children in the Church School"; (2) Rev. Duane Vore, Suffolk, Virginia, taught, "Teaching Youth"; (3) Rev. W. J. Andes, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, taught, "How to Improve Our Sunday School"; (4) Rev. W. M. Stevens, Norfolk, Virginia, taught, "A Brief Survey of the New Testament."

The attendance was good and it was a fine school. There was a unanimous vote to have a school next year and a committee was appointed to make plans.

A great many of the students were given Credit Certificates having completed the prescribed work.

Mrs. H. P. HARRELL.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

This third report for January brings us to $2,345.91. That is nearly $800.00 per week. And yet there are so many Sunday schools which have not sent in a January offering. Please, every Sunday School send in something for January. January is one of our most needy months, and besides it is good not to have a blank space after your Sunday School in the very first month of this year on the annual monthly chart. Thanks to everyone who is getting right in behind this needy work and doing their best.

Well, last summer I asked that we have 1,000 visitors at the orphanage before Christmas. We had nearly 2,000! Wasn't that fine! Seeing these fine girls and boys brought results, too. Seeing the need here and there about this place is bearing fruit. One Sunday School through an organized class has just been renovating a boys' section of the Main Building. They really mean business, and I wish you could see the big improvement. A Ladies' Society of another church had three lovely chests of drawers installed in another division. Another Sunday School has joined with Burlington in sewing. They asked us to parcel post a few bolts of outing to them, and we have just received back twenty-one pairs of lovely pajamas. And did they have fun getting patterns, cutting and sewing them. To see the need for such help is to get great joy in rendering it.

By Easter I want us to have 2,000 visitors. My suggestion is that you take it up before your Sunday School, and ask it to come in a body on a given Sunday afternoon. Bring your men, women and children. Look over the buildings, the grounds, the farm, the dairy, etc., and then meet with our staff and children in our chapel for a service of worship and fellowship. We shall be glad to greet you, entertain you, and thrill you with a house full of the finest boys and girls and their helpers. Try it a Sunday soon. Let me know what Sunday you choose.

A few coins from every member of your Sunday School will not impoverish you and would mean a new power lawn mower to keep our lawns looking fit and fresh; or buy seed for spring sowing; or would purchase a badly needed rug for the reception room in the Main Building; or would repaint a dozen bathrooms; or would buy new tablecloths for twenty tables; or replace dishes in three dining rooms; or would put new curtains to any number of windows; or place new screens in just as many windows; or would buy several loads of road gravel for much needed road repair on the campus. I dare you to visit us, for if you do you will love us, help us, and make us happy. And what is more we shall help you in turn. Your Sunday School will take on new enthusiasm, new interest, and do a dozen other jobs for yourselves much better.

We need another matron. We could do much more if we had another matron. There is mending, sewing, fitting, and extra care for little ones going undone for the lack of another matron. Every now and then some one comes along and says: Have these porch rockers rebuilt; have this suit of furniture reupholstered; have that clock fixed so it will run; have this road built so I can get in here without getting stuck in the mud, and we get going as fast as funds permit. Food and clothing first, you know. Medical supplies and dentistry, and school books, etc., are always on the priority lists. Insurance and repairs and wages all are "musts," too. But we are going places with these little people and God is richly blessing us through your generous hands. I thank you in His name and for their sake.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

EVANGELISM IN NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The Committee on Evangelism of the N. C. and Va. Conference is taking seriously the "United Evangelistic Advance" during 1950. This program of Evangelism as sponsored by forty different denominations should start our churches to thinking, planning, praying and working.

A "Flying Squadron" will visit 6 different areas of the Conference (as listed elsewhere) February 12-17. On this Squadron Team will be: Rev. Thurman Bowers, leader and chairman of the Committee on Evangelism; Rev. Kenneth Register, speaking on "Mass Evangelism;" Rev. James Allan, speaking on "Visitation Evangelism" (Rev. W. J. Andes is to substitute for him when he cannot be present); Rev. Lawrence Leonard, minister in the Evangelical and Reformed Church, bringing an inspirational message. A chart, "They went forth Two by Two," will be used and a soundfilm strip, "Bringing Christ to the home," will be shown.

All ministers of the Conference are asked and urged to be present for a special "Commitment Service" at their regular meeting at Elon College, February 13, 10 a. m.

The area chairmen are asked to urge pastors of churches in their area to attend the Elon College Christian Worker's Conference. The chairmen are to keep tab of each church and pastor in the area during the year, seeing that the Church does some sort of an Evangelistic Program.

Soon there will be released the number of churches in the Conference that received no members in 1948-49 on profession of faith. Soon we should realize our great need of bringing people to Christ.

CHRIST THE WAY THROUGH.

A distinguished artist lately, speaking to some students on artistic composition, declared it to be a wrong thing pictorially to have a picture of woodland or forest without showing a path leading out of it. When the true artist paints a landscape he invariably gives some suggestion of a path which can carry the eye out of the picture. Otherwise the tangle of trees and undergrowth would suffocate us, or the wide, trackless spaces dismay us. So God ever provides a Way of escape for His children.—Sunday At Home.

In Memoriam

ROANE.

Mrs. Sallye Morrison Roane, a charter member of the Rosemont Congregational Christian Church, Portlock, Norfolk County, Virginia, passed away January 17, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Royal K. Galup, 2902 Morrison Place.

A native and life-long resident of Portlock, she was a daughter of the late John R. and Mrs. Nannie Rowland Morrison, and wife of the late Harry E. Roane. She was a loyal and devoted member of the church, and an active worker in the Sunday school, having taught a Bible Class for over 30 years. Five years ago the class took her name as its own and has since been known as the Sallye Roane Bible Class.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. Royal K. Galup who is Choir Director of the church, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Fannie M. Herbert of Portlock; three brothers, Thomas O. Morrison of Brooklyn, N. Y.; H. R. Morrison, Sr., and A. S. Morrison, both of Portlock, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at the Rosemont Church on Thursday afternoon, January 19, at 3:00 p. m., with her pastor, Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., officiating. A large number of relatives and friends filled the church to capacity for these last solemn and tender offices of faith and love.

Pallbearers were O. S. Mills, H. M. Cannon, D. D. Johnston, A. M. Pugh, W. H. Bradshaw, C. E. Cherry, Jr., E. F. Caldwell, F. J. Richardson and H. L. Bandurant, Sr. Burial was in the Morrison Plot in Magnolia Cemetery, Berkley.

HERBERT G. COUNCIL, JR.

HOLLAND.

We, the members of the Ladies Aid Society of the Windsor Christian Church, wish to pay tribute to Mrs. Price Spencer Holland, who died December 20th 1949.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we try to emulate the high Christian standards and high ideals which were her daily living.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for comfort.

Mrs. SHIRLEY T. HOLLAND,
Mrs. J. C. ROBERTS,
Committee.

FULGHAM.

On September 6th, 1949, Our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom called home Mrs. Janie Rawls Fulgham, who was a faithful member of the Ladies Aid Society of the Windsor Christian Church, as long as her health permitted.

We, the members of the Society offer the following resolutions:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of Our Heavenly Father and try to emulate the high Christian ideals of service and kindness which were her daily living.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for comfort.

Mrs. SHIRLEY T. HOLLAND,
Mrs. J. C. ROBERTS,
Committee.

IN MEMORY OF OUR MOTHER.

It is only fitting that a few lines in our church paper be dedicated to the memory of one who read and enjoyed THE CHRISTIAN SUN for many years. Our mother, Mrs. Annie R. Huffman, was a lover of the church and all it stands for. When a very young girl she carried lunch to her father, one of the carpenters who helped build our present place of worship—Leaksville Christian Church. She felt pride in having had a share in such a great work. Years have passed and that is almost forgotten, but her beautiful Christian character will live on always, as a guide to better living. She was a wonderful mother—cheerful and kind even through her long years in bod. Her loyalty and devotion to God were never in the least questioned. She was a lover of Nature and remarked several times that she would like to get well and stay a while longer with us, but if it was not the Lord's will, she was ready any time the call should come. So on September 23 the bugle sounded and our mother slipped away quietly to her home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. We want also to say "Thank you" to all friends and neighbors for every act of love shown her. We feel a little nearer heaven now than ever before.

"CHARTER FOR REFUGEES" DRAWN UP IN AUSTRIA.

that the Austrian refugee situation has a solution, but only through international interest and outside support.

Such international aid was especially urged by Dr. Stewart Herman of Geneva, director of the Lutheran World Federation's services to refugees. Dr. Herman headed a committee which discussed the international aspects of Austrian refugees. This committee made a recommendation to be given to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, when he is appointed, that the UN should accept responsibility for all refugees.

(At present, the International Refugee Organization, agency of the United Nations which aids displaced persons, makes no provision for the remaining 90 per cent of Europe's refugees—those of Germanic national origin.)

With international planning and funds, Dr. Herman's committee said, Austrian refugees would be able either to resettle inside Austria, or emigrate to other countries, as necessary.

Representatives from voluntary agencies working with refugees, military, governmental and Austrian and German observers also attended the World Council's conference. In addition, pastors and leaders from refugee groups themselves took part in the discussions. For the most part, the refugees representatives urged the conference to ask for both repatriation and restitution for all refugees in their former homes and homelands. Other delegates and observes, however, felt this view to be totally unrealistic, citing that with proper education, refugees themselves would be able to understand why such an ideal is impossible at present.

The Austrian government delegation was led by its Minister of the Interior, Dr. Alfons Just of Vienna, who pedged the good intentions of his country in resolving its refugee problem. Leading a working committee on the task of Austria in this respect, Dr. Just underlined the recommendations of the international committee, stating that outside financial help must be provided if Austria is ever to absorb refugees within its borders.

A third working party on the task of Austrian churches met under the leadership of the Rev. Henry Carter, London, England, conference chairman, and also chairman of the World Council of Churches' Standing Conference on Refugees. Bishop May of the Evangelical Church and the Rev. Georg Traar of Vienna, superintendent of Evangelisches Hilfswerk in Austria, led the Protestant members of the committee, and Canon Dr. Jakob Weinbacher of Vienna, director of Caritas in Austria, led the Roman Catholic delegation. (Hilfswerk and Caritas are material-spiritual aid arms of the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in Austria, respectively.)

Expressing the "greatest joy of my life" in presiding over the meetings, Mr. Carter said the fact that representatives of both church groups could "say to each other in complete honesty that they have worked together in the refugee cause and will continue to work together," was, in his opinion, one of the most heartening developments of the conference.

Secretarial arrangements had been made for members of the two church groups to sit separately and work out individual statements concerning refugees in Austria, but both Protestants and Roman Catholics disdained to do so, preferring to sit together for the remainder of the meetings, in complete agreement.

The World's Greatest Criminal

I am the greatest criminal in history.
 I have killed more men than have fallen in all the wars of the world.
 I have turned men into brutes.
 I have made millions of homes unhappy.
 I have transformed many ambitious youths into hopeless parasites.
 I make smooth the downward path for countless millions.
 I destroy the weak and weaken the strong.
 I make the wise man a fool and trample the fool into his folly.
 I ensnare the innocent.
 The abandoned wife knows me; the hungry children know me; the parents whose child has bowed their gray heads in sorrow know me.
 I have ruined millions, and shall try to ruin millions more.
I am Alcohol.

Called from Connecticut to Carolina

First Church, Burlington, extended a call to the pastor of the First Congregational Church of Putnam, Connecticut. Mr. Robinson accepted the call and assumed responsibility for the new pastorate February 1. A service of worship, marking the beginning of a pastorate, was held Wednesday evening, February 1. The deacons conducted the service and Mr. Robinson spoke on the theme, "Thy Kingdom Come." Open House at the church was observed Sunday afternoon, January 29, where the Robinsons were honored guests. Mr. Robinson preached last Sunday on the subject: "What a Pastor Tries to Do." A service of installation will be held at a later date. Mr. Robinson succeeds the Rev. W. Millard Stevens who now serves The Christian Temple, Norfolk.

NEW MINISTER ANNOUNCED BY NORFOLK CHURCH.

The Rev. Charles C. Thomas of Brewerton, New York, has accepted a call to the First Congregational Christian Church, Berkley (Norfolk), and will assume the pastorate March 1, with his first sermon scheduled for the following Sunday, March 5. He succeeds the Rev. John L. Gwin, who three months ago returned to Chattanooga, Tennessee, to take charge of his father's furniture store.

Mr. Thomas, about 37, has been preaching for 12 years. He has held pastorates in Shallow Well, North Carolina, his former home community near Sanford, N. C.; in Asheboro, N. C.; in St. Lawrence, New York, and in Brewerton, N. Y., from where he now comes.

Married and with three daughters, the oldest of which is five, Mr. Thomas and his family will move into the parsonage on Hardy Avenue in Berkley, March 1.

DR. BROWN SPEAKS TO ELON CLUB.

spoke on "Our Responsibility to the World of the Future" at the regular bi-monthly meeting of the Elon Exchange club last Thursday at Correct Time Inn.

Dr. Brown challenged the club to exert all efforts possible toward accepting responsibilities in making the world a better place in which to live.

NATIONAL BOARDS CONVENE IN CLEVELAND.

Nearly 400 key men and women of Congregational Christian Churches of America, including clergymen, laymen and lay women, will assemble in the Hotel Cleveland, Cleveland, Ohio, February 13 to 16, for the Midwinter Meeting of the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches in America.

The Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches is the educational and promotional arm of the various denominational boards and this year's Midwinter Meeting has as its theme "The Second Mile Is Our Second Chance." In planning the denomination program of missionary education and promotion for the year ahead this meeting will underline particularly the further implementation of The Christian World Mission which is an on-going denominational program with an annual budget of at least $6,280,000. The Program of Planned Education launched in 1949 will continue to be promoted in the churches under the motto, "The Right Tools at the Right Hands with the Right Spirit."

"The Congregational Christian Churches are committed in 17 countries to establish and to help maintain churches, schools, hospitals and community centers as reservoirs of redemptive life, and to train national leaders for them as well as to recruit Christian missionary personnel," says Dr. Albert D. Stauffacher of New York City, Minister and Executive Secretary of the Missions Council, adding, "In the United States they must build churches among unchurched people, revitalize the present churches, recruit and train strong lay and professional leaders and help promote better race relations and Christian citizenship."

The Chaplain of the meetings will be Rev. Harold T. Jones, Minister of the First Central Congregational Christian Church of Omaha, Nebraska.

Keynote Address.

The official meetings of the Missions Council, and its constituent members, begin on Monday evening, February 13, with a Fellowship Dinner at which the keynote speech will be made by Rev. Fred Hoskins, D. D., minister of the First Church of Oak Park, Illinois, speaking on "A Place to Stand."

Among the Highlights.

The American Board sessions will have a luncheon Tuesday noon, February 14, with Dr. Walter W. Van Kirk of New York City speaking on "A New Day in Missions." Dr. Henry Russell Stafford will preside.

Following the luncheon there will be an afternoon Panel with a three-pronged subject, namely: The State of the Church; Communism; and the Relation of Church and State. Members of the Panel will include Dr. Walter Van Kirk, Rev. Angel Taglucop of Cabadbaran, Agusan, Philippine Islands, and Dr. Raymond Bernard Blakney, just back from service among the Chinese in North China and the Filipinos, Moros and Bilaans of Mindanao, Philippine Islands. Dr. Roderick Scott of Fukien Christian University, Foochow, China, will be a resource leader during the afternoon.

On Wednesday afternoon The Board of Home Missions will have an open session with Dr. William E. McCormack of San Francisco, California, president, presiding. The general theme will be "Subsidy for Some: Service to All." A group of selected speakers will present types of work receiving financial assistance and types of services rendered by The Board of Home Missions.

The speakers will include Rev. David Maitland of Madison, Wisconsin, Director of Student Work for the Wisconsin Congregational Conference at the University of Wisconsin, speaking on "Religion on the College Campus"; Fred W. Spalding, layman of Akron, Ohio, on "The Church Came to Us"; George L. Thomas of Los Angeles, California, on "Community Relations in Los Angeles"; Herman H. Long, of Nashville, Tennessee, on "Doorway to the Future"; Rev. Laurence E. Anderson of Glendive, Montana, on "Radio Evangelism in Montana"; John H. Gerlach of Fox Point, Wisconsin, on "Community Penetration"; and E. A. Ulrich of Kenmore,

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

FRANKLINTON AND RACE RELATIONS

The Board of Trustees for Franklinton Center were in session last week. The new director, the Rev. W. R. Brogden, attended the Board meeting for the first time. Dr. Stanley U. North was present to represent the Board of Home Missions. The trustees heard reports of a successful Winter Institute held during January. Plans were made for the continuing program and for the renovation of the property. A budget of $13,000 was set for the current year, with the provision that $2,500 be raised by our white constituency, $3,280 by the Board of Home Missions and the remainder by the Negro constituency. It is hoped that our churches, Sunday school classes or women's societies will find opportunity during the year to forward a generous contribution to this worthy but struggling institution. The treasurer is the Rev. J. P. Mangrum, Franklinton, North Carolina.

Sunday, be it remembered, is Race Relations Sunday. Now for a number of years the Methodist Churches have received a special offering on Race Relations Sunday for the Christian training of Negro youth through their denominational schools. The churches are responding generously to this appeal. There are a growing number of people who desire to give more than lip service to the solution of the race question. An offering for Franklinton would give added significance to the observance of Race Relations Sunday. It would be a convincing expression of good-will to our Negro neighbors. It would assure the minimum requirements for the training of our Negro ministers and lay leaders. Who will respond?

THE INGREDIENTS OF A CHURCH PAPER.

It may be difficult for some people to realize what is involved in producing a church paper. Success, if achieved, is a corporate affair. Success or failure is shared by many. The Editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate stated the case quite well in the issue for January 26.

To produce an acceptable church paper requires teamwork. It calls for a broadminded, sympathetic and progressive board of publication, an able and loyal staff, and generous support from district superintendents, pastors and laymen. It requires talented writers who represent the various causes of the church and others who contribute informative and inspiring articles. It requires local reporters who see that interesting church news gets to the church paper. It calls for committees in local churches that keep before the congregation the importance of subscribing to and reading the church paper.

"The editor is not the Advocate. The Advocate is all of us working together. The Advocate is its readers, pastors, local church committees. It is also those pastors and committees who have never gotten around to presenting it to the people, or who haven't taken the trouble to help tell the story of North Carolina Methodism upon its pages. The Advocate is the thousands of Methodists who fail to subscribe or who through indifferences or carelessness fail to renew their subscriptions."

Substitute Sun for Advocate, Congregational Christians for Methodists, and you have a true description of our publication problem. There is hardly a subscriber who could not help improve The Sun. News, subscriptions, contributions (literary and financial), are the indispensable ingredients of a successful publication. Have you discharged your full responsibility? Help make yours a greater and better church paper. You can do it!

HONORABLE MENTION.

A few people have taken seriously the call for Sustaining Memberships. This list has come to the attention of the Editor: Rev. R. E. Newton, Dr. W. E. Wiseman, Mr. J. A. Kimball, The Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, and the Women's Council of the Christian Temple. Fifteen sustaining memberships have come from the Burlington Church alone. Hearty thanks to these individuals and organizations. They have gone the second mile in Christian stewardship.

If other individuals and organizations would follow these examples our church paper would show a balance rather than sustain a deficit. Surely there are others, equally interested and able, who will respond with sustaining memberships.

You see, we have gone on publishing at the old subscription price of $2.00. Moreover, commissions have been granted to organizations for new subscriptions, and this penalizes The Sun treasury. Is it any wonder The Sun is having "hard sledding"? Think it over. Perhaps you, your family, your class or society could send $10.00 for a sustaining membership. How it would help!

A Sermon

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"I will; be thou clean."

—MARK 1:41.

The disciples had fallen back. They could not allow a leper to come near them. It was unthinkable, and they were not a conceited group either; it just was not done in those days. The leper went his way crying, "Unclean, Unclean." And the people gave him room. But Jesus had not fallen back. When did he ever? It was not like Jesus to fall back from pain and anguish and suffering. The leper was coming toward him. Yea, he is hurrying up to him, begging and falling down at his feet. The disciples must have been horror stricken.

It was a pitiable sight. The poor man lying half-kneeling, and looking up beseechingly into the face of Jesus. Poor man, he is just where we would want him, if any spark of compassion is in us for him. Jesus is still looking at him, and now he says to Jesus, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." May the angels in heaven stoop to hear what Jesus replied! May all the world wait for his answer. It is a very great test. Jesus has healed folks of fever, and has cast out devils, but here is an incurable disease. What will his answer be? Will he say something to lead out a larger faith? Will he develop some sort of approach? Will he appeal first to the established order of things? What will he do? What will he say? "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." "I will; be thou clean."

It does not take in the universe in the same way, but it is just as majestic as the word: "Let there be light; and there was light." One complete command, and the leper is no longer a leper, but a clean and whole man. Leprosy is an incurable disease; and it is used in the Bible as a symbol of sin. Jesus, standing over this man, said "I will." Jesus looking on the sins of the wide, wide world said, "I will." If he cures leprosy will he cure sin, or forgive sin? Did I say this command of Jesus does not take in the universe like the command in Genesis? Well, it does almost, doesn't it? For what heart has not felt the need for forgiveness? How universal the need of a forgiving Saviour is! Yes, looking at the sins of the world, and yet looking at the old rugged cross, Jesus said in spite of its anguish, and its implications, "I will." And that "I will" was for you and me, and the whole world.

I admire that leper. He must have been a mighty man. Perhaps he was brilliant of mind. Leprosy does not attack only the feeble-minded. He might have been one of those who knew what the Messiah should be like, and where he was to be born, and what he would undertake to do. Perhaps he knew the songs of Israel, the prophecies of Amos, and the promises to Abraham. He might have had a wife and children, from whom he was now cast out. Perhaps he had not abandoned himself as yet to the utter hopelessness of his case. His mother might have been still living, and her prayers might have been ascending heaven high,—a mother's prayers are one of life's best insurance policies even today,—and perhaps his wife and children were praying for him. At least as I contemplate this picture I find a man I admire.

I like him because "he came to Jesus." Perhaps you and I have not always done that, but we know full well there is nothing on earth finer. We have done it today. That is the heart-hunger that has brought us here. And we approve of this man's coming to Jesus. We admit that he showed good judgment. Oh! if but the weary world would turn to Jesus! If that poor mother who is worrying her life away about her son would just leave it all at Jesus' feet, or that poor wife who is worrying about her husband would just lay her care at Jesus' feet, or that poor person who is conscious day and night of his, or her sin if they would only carry it to Jesus! What care is yours? What burden do you try to bear all alone with only yourself, have you no friends to whom you can confess it, nor Christ to whom you can take it? Follow this man's example and come to Jesus.

He did not stop at coming to Jesus; he worshipped him. And he was among the very first to do that. Kneeling alone is not always a sign of worship,—not by any means, especially with an Oriental; but I have more than his kneeling to cause me to say he worshipped him,—his words, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." It was beyond human hands to heal leprosy. It required the intervention of God himself to do that! Here then is a great confession of faith. A very complete one. It is as though he were saying, "Thou hast the power of God, or thou art God, and canst therefore cure the incurable leprosy, if it is according to thy will."

There was no "if" in the reply of Jesus. Only from the lips of the leper came the "if." Jesus said immediately, "I will; be thou clean." But I like the "if" as it is here found on the lips of the leper. For it shows an humble spirit on the part of this suppliant. How different some of our prayers are! We have the "ifs" but at another place and in another way: If thou dost not hear my prayer thou dost not love me. Such is not the kind of prayer that brings: "I will; be thou blessed." This leper was saying: "Thou hast the power, and the goodness, and the grace; and it may not be thy will to cleanse, for it may be better that I suffer; but if thou wilt thou canst. I do not doubt for one minute that Thou art the Christ!"

Matthew tells us that Jesus was just coming down from his sermon on the mount when this leper came to him. Perhaps he had heard the sermon, and perhaps he had seen Jesus at other times and places; and the sermon was the final thing that made him believe fully that Jesus was the Christ. Having heard the beauty and glory of his preaching, and having seen the light that lifted from his face, he was ready to fall at his feet, and accept his will for his poor life whatever that will might be! May the world see Jesus in our lives, and hear his words from our lips, and likewise come to him. It should humble us to realize that we are his living witnesses. Can the world see the Christ it needs in us?

There are two men in this picture. The other man is Jesus. The leper showed faith; the Lord showed love,—pity, "compassion,"—he suffered for, and with the leper. He bore our sins on the tree. What pictures the gospel writers paint of Jesus face to face with others! This leper, the sinner of Sychar, Mary Magdalene, Mary of Bethany, the centurion, and Simon Peter, and others. In every case something great happened when they came face to face with Jesus. May we learn to come face to face with him in our daily and private devotions, in our worship in this sanctuary, and

THE ROLE OF THE TEACHER IN EDUCATIONAL EVANGELISM.

By DR. H. H. KALAS, Director,
National Christian Teaching Mission.

The following are some of the ways in which the teacher may carry out her role as an evangelist.

1. The teacher must develop a growing awareness and appreciation of God as a person and as a person whose love is of the same quality and completeness as is the love of the parent for the child, only vaster. This identification of God in his relationship to man, with the normal experiences and love which comes to a child, can be begun very early in life.

2. The teacher must detect the times of special susceptibility or readiness for deeper experiences of religious inclination and new response to the claims of religion upon human life.

3. At certain ages, particularly the junior and junior high school ages, the teacher ought to make direct approaches to the child to induce his special commitment to the Christian way of life, and to bring to consummation all of the things which have been poured into his life, prompting him to a volitional and complete emotional response to what the church has taught about God, about his own conduct and about his relationship to the church itself.

4. At every age, it is the function of the teacher to create within a child the habits of life and attitudes of mind which will cause the church as a constant influence to become more meaningful. The child ought frequently to be introduced to the symbols and activities of the church. He ought to share frequently the high worship of the church and thus be able to atch the meanings of its fullest life.

5. The teacher is an evangelist whenever she performs an exemplary role by the way in which she, herself, reveals loyalty to the church and its ideals.

6. It is the function of the teacher to create anticipations for high moments in the life of the child when that child makes special commitments or receives special recognition for his faith and status in the church. Such experiences as reception into church membership, confirmation, etc., should be given the same high significance as are the commonly recognized high moments of life, such as marriage, graduation from school, etc.

Teachers of a church should be represented on the evangelistic committee of that church to be sure that the total policy and program of the church for evangelism takes into account sound educational procedures.

THE PREACHER.

It was my privilege to attend a conference of ministers at Elon College. Much attention was given to the work of the layman and to the preparation and presentation of sermons. In some of the meetings I was the only layman present and felt like a little lion in a den of Daniels. I did not express my ideas as to the work of the minister but shall attempt to do so now, and shall add some selections from my scrapbook.

The preacher who deals with the great truths of holy character should, to the greatest heights of human frailty, impersonate those truths. There is power inherent in truth; but it is often, like electricity, in need of a conductor to develop it. The preacher who best commends the truth of the Gospel is he who has translated that truth into his own life.

He should, so far as possible, be a real man, a true man, a simple man, great in his love for the truth and for his fellowmen, great in his life at home and in his contacts with divine power, great in his work in the church and in his community, great in his simplicity, great in his gentleness.

"Every problem," says Harry Emerson Fosdick, "that the preacher faces leads back to one basic question: how well does he understand the thoughts and lives of his people? That he should know his Gospel goes without saying, but he may know it ever so well and yet fail to get it within reaching distance of anybody unless he intimately understands people and cares more for what is happening inside than he cares for anything else. Preaching is wrestling with individuals over questions of life and death, and until that idea of it commands a preacher's mind and method, eloquence will avail him little and theology not at all."

My own preacher at our country church walked two miles to the service and two miles from the church to his home. It was my privilege to accompany him on his way home and, while he spoke not a word about theology, by his great personality and amiable disposition he preached a finer sermon than he had delivered in the pulpit.

As to satisfaction and joy in life, the life of the minister can be filled with personal blessedness or with sadness due in some cases to his outlook on life or in some cases to lack of appreciation of service he is rendering. This latter phase is set forth in my first scrapbook selection.

J. D. HUNTER,
Professor at Elon College.

KILLING THE PREACHER.

The church known to me once buried its pastor, and on the following Sabbath held a memorial service in his honor. A large congregation overflowed the house. One speaker told of his worth as a preacher, another of his tender ministrations as a pastor, others spoke of him as a citizen, thought of him as neighbor, father. Finally they called on me to speak. "All of you have said of my dead brother is true. He was a man out of the ordinary and gave his remarkable power to your service without stint or reserve. But if you had, while he was yet alive, filled these pews as you have today, and said of him and to him what you have just said, he would not now be dead. Empty pews broke his heart, and he did not know of the love of which you have been speaking. He died for lack of the things you have today so beautifully said and done."—Dr. L. O. Lawson.

AS LITTLE CHILDREN.

The evangelist who had been engaged to preach during the revival services had arrived and was presenting the Gospel of Jesus Christ in simple, straightforward messages, but with no special flourish of words or gestures. Very few seemed to know that he was known in many lands through his writings in a religious paper which had a large circulation, and was eagerly read by Bible students. Comparatively few attended the services and the remark was made that he was a preacher for children and not for grown people. When the remark came to our ears we thought of the words of Jesus: "Except ye be converted and become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as a little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

Jesus preached in a simple manner using everyday illustrations and the common people heard Him gladly. We are glad that there are ministers of the Gospel who follow the Lord Jesus in their method of preaching, for we want the story of the Gospel told as simply to us as a little child. The big words and flowery phrases do not have the same effect that earnest

NEWSITEMS.

BURLINGTON WOMEN.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Burlington continues to go forward with its work and plans under the leadership of its efficient President, Mrs. M. Z. Rhodes.

In November, Mrs. William Sutton, our Friendly Service Chairman, reported that we had twenty-one bundles for the Pieces for Peace project at the World Day of Prayer.

Our work at Elon Orphanage continues with the redecorating of several rooms and making pajamas for the children. At present, one hundred pairs have been completed.

Money has been given to the Welfare Department of the City to buy clothes for the needy children.

For Foreign Missions, gifts will be sent, as suggested, to Miss Angie Crew at Kobe College in Japan.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, our Spiritual Life Leader, has planned devotionals and study from the Book of John. Each member is urged to attend the Bible studies and read the Bible.

The Auxiliary is sponsoring a literature table in the church. Each member is asked to select and carry one or more of the Devotionals home.

In December, the Auxiliary welcomed Mrs. Allen Gant as guest speaker. Mrs. Gant gave a very beautiful story of a future world into which Peace had come through the inspiration and love of an unknown writer. The story told the real meaning of Christmas and gave all those present a vision of the change that might be wrought in the world today.

Miss Leila Anderson, Field Representative of Congregational Christian Churches, spoke to the Auxiliary in January on "Church School and Home in Cooperation." She stressed the need of training for parents and adults before attempting to teach and train children.

The film, "And Now I See," will be shown at the February meeting.

The Auxiliary is indebted to Mrs. J. D. Strader for the most interesting and inspiring programs.

On Thursday, December 22, Open House was held for the college group from the church at the home of Mrs. W. W. Sellars. Quite a number attended with their dates. Mrs. Sellars is the Editor of the bulletin This and That which is published each month and tells of the work of the Auxiliary.

Open House was held on Sunday, January 29, from four to six to welcome our new pastor, Rev. Henry Robinson, his wife and family.

With Mrs. Graves Holt as Home Work Chairman and Mrs. Harold Ingle, Co-Chairman, the ladies had the parsonage "spic" and "span" with the pantry over-flowing.

We are grateful for the privilege of serving God in this good work and pray his blessings on our Society.

MRS. J. ED KING,
Corresponding Sec'y.

In Portsmouth, Virginia, the women call themselves "The Woman's Fellowship," and the President is Mrs. R. F. Edwards. They recently held a church family supper and Bible study around the tables, before the program in the Sunday school auditorium.

Your Woman's Page Editor has been attending a Recreation Institute in Winston-Salem every night this week. One of the suggestions made was that each meeting, no matter what kind, should include a little recreation. Wouldn't this be a good suggestion for our women's meetings? Perhaps we could include at least one game at the end of each meeting, before or after refreshments. A stunt would be good or some fun songs. A little fun at the end would be good for all of us.

Don't forget to send the following information to Mrs. Garland B. Spratley, Dendron, Virginia, so she may use it for our Family Life Rallies in March:

1. Number of children in each family.
2. Number of teen agers and adults.
3. Average attendance of each family at church services.
4. Their participation.
5. Number of families in your church having Family Altars.

Each local woman's group should appoint a Family Life Chairman to do this, if one is not already functioning.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

If your family owns a pet you know what fun they can be. Dogs are very fine pets. The W. A. Wrights of Pinehurst gave our son a young Welsh terrier at Christmastime. Thus we have become quite dog-conscious.

There are many things to learn about them: the different breeds, how to keep them well, how to feed them and how to teach them manners. If you stop to think, you may recall a dog that reminds you of a playmate: either well behaved or naughty. Naughty or spoiled dogs can't help it, they have been trained that way.

In the beginning you will want to learn how to carry your pet. Hands well under a cat or dog make for a firm grip, and safe handling. Dogs that are allowed to run anywhere and everywhere often make trouble. They aren't too happy. So teach your pet to obey—sit, stay and no!

You can't expect a frolicsome 12-week-old pup to sit the minute you give the command. A good way to teach it is to fasten a leash to the dog's collar and lift the dog slightly off the ground and then push downward. This need not be done in a rough manner, but the dog will soon learn. Or you may place your hand on the middle of the dog's back and thrust him downward.

Stay is a matter of time and repeating. Then you can teach the dog to answer your call to come. A pet who has learned stay can go almost anywhere.

No may be taught by repetition and by catching the pup at the scuff of the neck and saying in a displeased tone. "No." There isn't any need to say, "You bad pup, you must not get on the sofa, you will get it dirty. . . ." Just no does much better.

If we train our pets well, they will love us and respect us. If we treat them well they will respond in kind. God has made many creatures and how fortunate it is that we can share our lives with some of them.

Cats are not as easy to train but I once taught an exceptional cat to walk on a leash and to heel. She also learned to travel in a car by lying in the back window. Patience, repetition and kindness are the main elements.

Keep your pet clean, brushed and groomed. That will pay too. There are often gymkhankas or pet shows at which you may display with great pride your pet and what he has learned.

If you want to learn about breeds, there is a little book called The Red Book of Dogs which I have seen at newsstands and at dime stores. It has descriptions and pictures.

If you have an exceptional pet write me at Box 301, Southern Pines, North Carolina, and it may be published.

UNJUST COMPARISONS.

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"You're just a big lummo, Ted!" My neighbor's voice expressed dissatisfaction and irritation as he spoke to his small son. "Look at David! He pulls himself up and waves to his daddy. All you can do is sit there in your gocart and smile."

Two fathers from the apartment house in which I live were giving their children an airing in the park this warm winter afternoon. Seated with a book on a nearby bench, I recalled that it was not the first time I had heard Sam Gifford compare his baby with the slender, lively child of Stephen Trent to his own child's disadvantage. Baby Ted's face lost all of its animation at the sound of the disapproval in his father's words. The little fellow leaned back indifferently against his pillows, while young David Trent continued an interested investigation of the world around him.

"Somebody ought to tell Sam Gifford what a serious mistake he is making," I thought to myself. Just as I was wondering how to approach him on the subject, I heard David's father ask quietly, "How old is your boy, Sam?"

"About the age of yours, I guess," Sam answered. "Our boy was born in May. He'll be eight months old on the thirtieth of this month."

"That makes him nearly two months younger than David," Stephen went on thoughtfully. "A youngster of that age develops surprisingly in two months."

Sam Gifford flushed. "I hadn't thought of that," he admitted. "Maybe I've been a little hard on Ted, but he's so plump and sturdy it has seemed to me he ought to be keeping up with David."

"That's just the point," Stephen interposed vigorously. "Ted's a good-natured, solid citizen type, built on big lines—just as you are, Sam—while David is small and light as a rubber ball. David should be ready to stand up at an earlier age than Ted. But does anybody expect the big center on a football team to be a star runner?"

"I suppose I have been finding fault with the boy for something beyond his control," Sam admitted honestly. "Ted has always been a good baby—sleeps through the night and never wakes up cross."

"All babies are good if they are well and if they have enough food and rest and have plenty of love," Stephen explained. "Naturally, it baffles a child to be taken to task for something he cannot understand. Such vexations may even start children toward the mental unrest that manifests itself so often in adult life—sorry!" Stephen broke off abruptly. "I didn't intend to give you a classroom dissertation."

"That's all right, Professor," Sam grinned at his friend. "I needed the lecture, and you're just the one—with your knowledge as a child specialist—to give it to me. I'll try after this to be a bit more patient with Ted and let him develop at his own pace. I know mental health is as important as physical wellbeing."

You're right there," Stephen agreed heartily. "If more parents understood the importance of mental health there would not be so many adults with mental disorders crowding our hospitals. Women come to my office wondering if their children are abnormal because they're not little carbon copies of some neighbor's child. Frequently parents are unhappy simply because their children do not show aptitudes the parents expected them to have. Such expressed dissatisfaction gives a youngster an unmerited feeling of inferiority. A child should not be scolded because he does not conform to the patterns set by others. He should receive parental approval as long as he is developing according to his own capabilities."

In this world of unequal things and irregularities we should follow the Master's advice. He went about encouraging. He wasn't a fault-finder. He was a faith finder—a finder of human power and of human excellence.

THE ABSTAINER OF ALAMEIN.

By DEETS PICKETT.

At eight o'clock in the morning, on Friday, December second, Field Marshal the Right Honorable Bernard Law, Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, K. G., G. C. B., D. S. O., said good-bye to the gigantic Lady in New York Harbor who holds aloft the Torch of Liberty he has done so much to defend in his long and distinguished career of service to his country and to free people throughout the world. He must have been, as the country people say, "worn down to a nubbin," by his strenuous visitation to America. The night before, or, rather, that same morning, he had participated in his last press conference at two o'clock—not p. m., but a. m.

The particular interest of the Methodist Board of Temperance in General Montgomery is because of the fact that he is a total abstainer from alcoholic beverages and he doesn't care who knows it. He won his great victories on tea.

When Montgomery took over the demoralized British forces in Egypt, he ordered that no beer be sent to forward troops and although thousands of tons of beer went to Egypt in 1942, when the shipping might better have been used to meet the critical situation, drink supplies were severely cut at El Alamein. After Montgomery took over, the British papers carried the headlines, "Beer for the Eighth Army Stopped by Order; Bullets First in Future." At that time, the cause of the Allied Forces looked black indeed. Rommel, the brilliant German General who made his reputation in the African sands, had pushed back the British troops to the very gates of Alexandria and they could not retreat another inch without facing the probability that the German Army would break through into the East, and create a situation with which the power of the free world could not deal. America came to the help of General Montgomery by dispatching a great number of tanks intended for its own use, only to have the black news come to Washington while Churchill was here conferring with Roosevelt, that German submarines had sent the shipment to the bottom of the ocean. Once again, supplies were hastily gotten together and rushed to Egypt, and on one eventful morning, the whole British line burst into flame and Montgomery started the advance which eventually reached Eisenhower in North Africa and united the forces which crushed

Adolph Hitler's bid for world supremacy.

What a pity it was that the magnificent German troops should have been used in such a cause—a cause fatal to the native culture of their own country as well as to the peace of the world! How blessed that day when Germans will be joined with their kinspeople of the West in an impregnable line against Communism and paganism!

In Europe, General Montgomery commanded the British Armies, and when the Battle of the Bulge was at its height, he commanded also, the American troops on the left of the line. Forces under his command driving up, pinching off the enemy salient and permitting an advance all along the line to final victory.

He was then, and he is today, the outstanding British Hero of the War. The only two criticisms ever made against him as a military commander, are that he refused to be "hale fellow, well met," with other commanders engaged in stupifying themselves with an irritant, anaesthetic drug used as a beverage; and secondly, that he would never move until he had commanding superiority. Once before, a national hero would not enter upon a fatal contest until he had ample supplies, for was it not David, who went to the brook and chose him five smooth stones and, having them in his scrip, advanced, sling in hand, upon the Philistine? David slew Goliath with one stone and when his enemy was dead, he still had four stones in reserve! It is a good military principle.

Field Marshal Montgomery was born on November 17, 1887, at Kennington, London, the third son of the Right Reverend H. H. Montgomery, of Ulster descent. Shortly afterward, his parents left for Australia where his father became Bishop of Tasmania and where he, himself, spent his first fourteen years. He was educated at St. Paul's School, England, and at Sandhurst Military Academy. During his school days, he was outstanding as a swimmer, footballer and cricketer.

In 1944, he was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the British Group of Armies and Allied Armies, Northern France. In 1944-45 he commanded the 21st Army Group, and in 1945-46, the British Army of the Rhine. He was elevated to the peerage in 1946.

On October 4, 1948, Lord Montgomery was appointed permanent Military Chairman of Commanders-in-Chief in Committee, Permanent Defense Organization, of the five Western European Powers.

Mr. Churchill once paid tribute to "that vehement and formidable General Montgomery, a Cromwellian figure, austere, accomplished, tireless; his life given to study of war, who has attracted to himself in an extraordinary measure the confidence and devotion of his Army."

A great soldier and Christian gentleman, and a man whom the entire Christian World can trust in these days of decision.

TRUER THAN HE KNEW.

An editorial in Tap and Tavern has the statement that "the liquor industry has changed the face of America not only economically, but in a social sense as well." The writer did not mean to make such a dire confession, but unwittingly he spoke a truth that ought to be very clear to the American people. It has, indeed, changed America economically and socially.

But the change is not the kind that the writer of the editorial would have us believe has taken place. He pictures a prosperous America economically, and a purified one socially, as the result of legalized liquor.

On the other hand, the change economically has been to deflect nine billion dollars annually from legitimate business to a traffic in liquors that has nothing to offer the American people in the way of material prosperity. It also has brought about such a social degradation as has never been known in our country before. All of the evils of bootleg liquor are still with us, and none of the good that was promised by Repeal has been realized. But innumerable evils that did not exist before have grown up with the return of the legalized liquor traffic.

Even as Pilate spoke truth when he said of Jesus, "I find no fault in Him," so did the editor of this liquor paper speak truth when he said that the liquor traffic has changed the face of America. Neither realized how true were his words.—The West Virginia Issue.

My share of the work of the world may be limited, but the fact that it is work makes it precious. Darwin could work only half an hour at a time; but in many diligent half-hours he laid anew the foundations of philosophy. Green, the historian, tells us that the world is moved not only by the mighty shoves of the heroes, but also by the aggregate of the tiny pushes of each honest worker.

THE FIGHT FOR CHRISTIAN FREEDOM.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 19, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: For freedom Christ has set us free; stand fast therefore, and do not submit again to a yoke of slavery.—Galatians 5:1.

LESSON TEXT: Acts 15:1-6; 22-29; Galatians 2:16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: John 8:31-36.

The First Church of Antioch.

The Church at Antioch was the first church in several respects. It was the first church composed of both Jewish and Gentile Christians. It was the first church in which the disciples of Christ were called Christians. And it was the first church to send out foreign missionaries. It might well be called The First Christian Church of Antioch, and it might well have been proud in a good sense of the things in which it was first.

The First Council.

The very things that gave this First Christian Church of Antioch its distinction, presented it with difficulties. The fact that Jews and Gentiles enjoyed fellowship together in the church, and the fact that so many Gentiles were coming into the church as a result of its missionary activity created a problem. A missionary program always creates problems, problems of men and money and thought and prayer. It requires a readjustment of personal plans and cooperation among men of divergent opinions. It is only dead churches that have no problems.

The problem in the Antioch Church was the problem of the missionary message and of the way of salvation. There were those, strict devotees of the Law who insisted that salvation came through Christ, but that it was also necessary to keep the Law of Moses. They took the position that one must become a Jew in order to become a Christian, broadly speaking. There were others, however, who insisted that salvation came through Christ and was not dependent in any way upon the observance of the Mosaic Law. Salvation was by faith and by faith alone. The discussion became so heated, and the cleavage so marked that it was decided to send Paul and Barnabas, and other of the brethren to Jerusalem to consult with the apos-ties themselves and to ask for an opinion on the matter, which was after all a crucial and vital matter. Thus it is that we have "The First Council," one of the many, many Church Councils held during the centuries, many of them far-reaching in their consequences. But none was more decisive than this first Council at Jerusalem.

The Witnesses are Heard.

Peter speaks first. He tells the apostles and elders again about his experience in the home of Cornelius. He reminded them that God poured out on the Gentiles in an unmistakable way the Holy Spirit even while he was yet speaking to them. They were saved by faith. They were not saved by the works of the Law. Through faith in Christ, God had given these Gentiles the Holy Spirit even as He had given it to the Jews, making no difference between Gentiles and Jews, but purifying the hearts of each by faith. Why should they as men, then, put a burden on the Gentiles which the Jewish Christians themselves were not able to bear? It was clear and convincing evidence.

Then Paul and Barnabas spoke. They recounted what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them and through them, and not through works of the Law but through simple faith in Christ. Again and again men had come into a saving knowledge of Christ through faith, wholly apart from any work of the Law. This evidence, clear and convincing became cumulative. The opponents must have begun to squirm in the face of it.

At last James spoke. He resorted to the Scriptures on which the opponents had based their demands, a tactful and devastating thing to do. He showed how the prophets had foretold this very thing as coming to pass. God himself had ordained that through faith in Christ, the Gentiles should find salvation even as the Jews. It was not by works of law that men were to be justified (made righteous) but by faith in Christ through His grace. That clinched the matter. There was nothing further to be said against the custom of receiving Gentiles into the Christian fellowship of believers without circumcision or any other work of the Law.

A Letter is Written.

The decision of the Council, at the suggestion of James was embodied in a letter to be sent to the churches in which Gentiles were being admitted and in the communities in which Gentiles were being evangelized. As Dr. Erdman sums it up, it stressed three points: (1) Liberty—the Law of Moses needed not be kept, and could not be a ground of salvation. Here is the "Magna Charta" of Christian liberty. (2) Purity—liberty is not license, but a life of holiness, by faith in Christ. (3) Charity—in matters of indifference let us not needlessly offend those who prefer to observe certain forms and ceremonies. It is about the same thing as the motto which appears on the front page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN—In Essentials Unity, In Non-Essentials Liberty, In All Things Charity.

An Occasion for Rejoicing.

"Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation." They had reason to be glad. A division in the church and dissension among the members of the church had been healed. What a cause for rejoicing it is when differences between Christians and dissension among Christ's followers are resolved and the breach healed. What a glad day it will be when we can again have peace and accord within our larger fellowship and the rift caused by the proposed Merger can be healed.

Then again it must have warmed the hearts of these Gentiles to be addressed as "brethren." How much it must mean to the people of Japan and China and Africa and India and the isles of the seas to be called brethren in Christ. But such we are. By one Spirit have we all been baptized into one body. There is no Jew nor Gentile, there is no bond or free, there is no different—we are all one in Christ Jesus.

And these folks were glad because it had been made clear to them that the Christian life is not a matter of the law but of grace. It comes into being, not by observing some ritual or submitting to some ceremony, but by an act of faith in the saving grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. And it continues not by observing the law but by responding to love. For freedom did Christ set us free. We ought to stand fast therefore and not be brought again into the yoke of slavery. But we are not to use our liberty as license, but by love to serve one another.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PROHIBITION.

"Prohibition," according to Bob Considine, staff correspondent of International News Service, in his review of the past 50 years in the January 1, 1950, issue of the Los Angeles Examiner, "gave us our first national contempt for law, and bred the cult of the mob. . . ."

This is not true. Prohibition—or, more accurately, the counterfeit that passed for Prohibition—did no such thing. Insofar as it was enforced, it simply burned down the rat-infested barn of legalization and exposed the rodents to public view. (A Prohibition administration would have destroyed them before they could have found new hiding places, but the wet party then in power did no such thing. It coddled and cuddled and protected them, letting them hide out in speakeasies and night clubs and back-alley bootleg joints until a new barn of legalization could be built for them to burrow into.) Insofar as it was nullified and betrayed by Andrew Mellon, and those above and below him charged with its enforcement, it simply proved that it is impossible to have Prohibition with a wet political party in power.

Official records prove that jails were emptied, flophouses unneeded, Skid Rows transformed into respectable neighborhoods during our so-called "Prohibition period." Drunkenness and alcoholism sank to an all-time per capita low. The great mass of the American people obeyed the law—even though it was being flouted and sabotaged by Presidents and the Secretary of the Treasury.

If we had had an administration in Washington during those thirteen years committed to its enforcement instead of to its destruction, repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would have been as unthinkable as repeal of the thirteenth.

Compared to the trickle of gangsterism and bootlegging that flowed through the dam during Prohibition, the orgy of drink-caused debauchery, degradation, and death sweeping over America today is as a tidal wave. Like ninnies, instead of plugging up the holes in the dam with a dry administration, we tore the whole dam down—blew it to pieces with Repeal ballots.

The lesson we ought to have learned from all this, if we are anywhere near as intelligent as we like to think of ourselves as being, is that we can't have Prohibition with a wet party in power any more than we can have a sunshiny day when the sky is covered with thunderclouds and the rain is pouring down. Sensible people, of course, will get in out of the rain, but slugs and snails and wiggly worms seem to like it. And things will not dry off till the sun comes out again. No more will this nation dry up till the sunshine of a genuinely dry party spreads over the land from the firmament of Washington. How much longer will it take professed Drys to learn this simple and logical lesson?

MONUMENTS RAISED BY PRAYER.

Only God can assess what has been wrought by the prayer that has gone up from millions of hearts on the World Day of Prayer since its inception in 1887. Mrs. Darwin James, who founded the World Day of Prayer when she called upon the Presbyterian women in the United States in 1887 to meet in their home communities and pray for missions, never dreamed of so big an outcome to the Day that she set in motion. More things have been wrought by prayer than Mrs. James could dream of.

There has never been any special stress on the money side of the World Day of Prayer, for from the first the fact has been emphasized that it is a day of prayer. But prayer issues naturally in giving. In 1927, headquarters in the U. S. received $70 in gifts. In 1949, World Day of Prayer offerings in the U. S. totaled over a quarter of a million dollars.

God alone can measure the power of world-wide prayer, but it is permitted to us to see the monuments of one kind and another raised by many races and national backgrounds as they use their offerings year by year.

There are eight interdenominational Christian colleges for women in the Orient which for years have looked hopefully to the World Day of Prayer for a portion of their budget for their ongoing program.

All around the world are magazines, slanted especially to children and women and young people, which exist because women praying together in the U. S. gave funds to start and to subsidize them.

Many of the 26,000 foreign students now on over a thousand campuses in the U. S. have come to know the Committee on Friendly Relations and its helpful services.

Other ministries also within our borders were wrought by prayer and prayerful gifts. The Home Missions Council of North America, realizing that migrants who pick our crops are men who feel, and not just cogs within the harvest wheel, maintains work among them in twenty-three states. The groups which see a station wagon come in "to potatoes" may not connect the organ and hymn books, the games and motion picture projector, which come out of that well-equipped "Harvester," with the first Friday in Lent, but the fact remains that gifts on that day are transmuted into just such helpful ministries.

The students in government boarding schools for American Indians have a religious activity program under trained directors, and the illiterate Navajos a literate program, because American women pray together in their home towns. Negro sharecroppers in the South know a fuller life because World Day of Prayer funds make possible institutes for pastors and lay leaders.

Through the promotion of World Day of Prayer by the North Carolina Council of Church Women, North Carolina in 1949 had 242 observances with an offering of $5,914.15. What will it be in 1950?—North Carolina Church Bulletin, January, 1950.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

We of the Convention are proud of the one-half century of work done by our Christian Orphanage. On a beautiful site—a natural eminence bedecked with oak trees and surrounded by rolling farmlands—a small beginning was made. A single building in appearance much like a college dormitory was built and equipped with bedrooms, living room, office, kitchen, dining room, storage rooms, chapel and basement. Little orphan boys and girls were received. Since that day hundreds of boys and girls have lived here, gone out into the world with a Christian background and have made good in many walks of life. The records show that we can be very proud of them.

Since that day two other such main dormitories have been added, the small acreage has grown through the generosity of the people to nearly three hundred. More than a dozen other buildings have been added and a goodly sized dairy is maintained. Fields have been transformed from practically worn-out lands into productive farmlands. One of the best small children's homes in the State is doing its work of mercy and care. Helpless little folks are given a normal life. They are taught to appreciate life and to make their own contributions to it by learning to live together, play together, work together, and worship together. They attend the nearby public school, attend church and Sunday school on the Elon College campus, and take their place in the normal affairs of a lovely community. Some of them take advantage of a college education at our own Elon. They go from here with gratitude in their hearts for a chance in the world, and with praise on their lips for the orphanage.

The orphanage is staffed with a superintendent, an assistant who is in charge of the farm and who has served for nearly a quarter century; a dairyman who was reared here at the orphanage. Both of these gentlemen love the children, have nice families of their own, and have the work at heart. There are six matrons—two in each building—who do a full day's work every day and part of another day's work every night. I take my hat off to each of them. There is the office secretary who has served efficiently and well for several years.

There are two colored men, both with a real understanding of their work, and favorites of the children, who assist with the general work of dairying and farming.

In addition to the above there is a board of trustees, far-seeing businessmen and women, who take a real interest in the work of the orphanage and see to it that it is kept on a straightforward and businesslike course. These fifteen men and women are elected by the Southern Convention. The orphanage is incorporated by the State, and meets all the tests approved by the State's department of public welfare. Pastors and churches recommend helpless little children, and as expeditiously as possible they are received. Children who need such a home are counted fortunate to be received here. The children themselves like it. Each of us on the staff counts it a real privilege and a sacred trust to have them as our friends and members of our home.

AS LITTLE CHILDREN.

words spoken simply have upon the heart. And we are glad that there are those who take the title to themselves that John the beloved, and loving, uses in his first epistle as he writes to the children of God. It seems almost like a pet name as we read in his epistle: "Little children, let no man deceive you." He must have heard the words from the lips of Jesus more times than he has recorded in his Gospel, and their echo remained in his heart to be used by him in his epistle. How much we need to be like little children and pattern after their innocent ways; following close to our blessed Lord; listening closely for His every word, afraid we may miss something; pressing ever closer to His wounded side and caressing the wounds that were made for our salvation.

John teaches us so clearly the relationship of God as our heavenly Father and we as His little children whose sins have been washed away through faith in the precious blood of Jesus. He first tells us of the fellowship which we may have with God as our Father and with Jesus Christ as our Elder Brother and then he goes on to tell us of the power of the Blood which can keep us from sinning in this present evil world. Jesus prayed for this in His great high-priestly prayer which John records in his Gospel. John also tells us how we, as God's children, should treat our fellowmen whether they be brethren in the Lord or enemies. Love is the dominating theme of the Gospel of John and also of his epistles and he gives it as the basic truth of all Christian character and conduct. How much we need to have this divine love exemplified in our hearts and lives that we may show forth more and more the praises of Jesus who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light. As little children we accept the whole Word of God and our faith takes it all in even though we may not understand the supernatural things which show the divinity of Jesus Christ and the triune Godhead. "And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ."

We love the endearing title which the apostle John has given us and we want to continue to be little children of our Lord ever learning more and more; He chooses our teachers for us among those whom He has called to preached His Gospel, and we need to keep on learning until the time comes when He will call us to the throne room to receive our degrees—the crown of righteousness which He shall give to all of them that love His appearing, the crown of glory that fadeth not away.

In Memoriam

WAMPLER.

We, the remaining members of the Board of Deacons of Antioch Church, wish to submit the following resolutions in memory of our Senior Deacon Brother W. C. Wampler who departed this life June 21, 1949.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we recognize God as the giver and sustainer of life, who doeth all things well and we bow in humble submission to his Divine Will.

2. That we rejoice in the fine Christian life that our departed brother always lived and the deep interest he always maintained for God and His Church.

3. That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy be sent The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be placed on our church records.

O. W. ANDES,
E. F. SHOWALTER.

FARMER.

God in His all wise providence has seen fit to remove from our church Deacon Joseph Hubbard Farmer, who departed this life September 10, 1950. Brother Farmer's going ends a life of service to his church, his family and his friends and life. He exemplified the example of Christ in all the relations of life—as husband, father and as deacon of Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in view of the great loss we have sustained in his removal from us, we express our appreciation of his services as a fellow worker.

2. That our deep and sincere sympathy be hereby extended to the daughter and family of our deceased brother, with the prayer that God will be their help and comfort in this hour of sorrow.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the church record, a copy be sent to the family, and that it be published in The Christian Sun.

ELIZABETH SIPE,
Secretary.

Done by Order of the Deacons of Pleasant Grove Christian Church.

FARMER.

Pleasant William Farmer died September 1, 1949, in Summerville, South Carolina.

The funeral service was from Pleasant Grove Christian Church September 3, 1949, conducted by Rev. R. T. Woodruff, Vernon Hill, Virginia, and Rev. J. E. McCauley, Waverly, Virginia. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Mr. Farmer was the youngest son of Mary Jane Farmer and Pleasant William Farmer, Sr. He was born July 27, 1869. He was never married and is survived by many nieces, nephews, grand nieces, grand nephews, other relations and many friends.

Mr. Farmer was a prominent citizen of Halifax County, Virginia, and had lived his entire life in the Pleasant Grove Church community. He attended Graham Normal College, Graham, North Carolina; also Roanoke College, Salem, Virginia. He joined Pleasant Grove Church when a boy, and there was never a more loyal, nor more faithful member than he—serving the church in many capacities: Sunday School Superintendent, teacher, church treasurer, caretaker of the cemetery, etc. But the office in the church which he showed his deepest loyalty and devotion was that of sexton—serving in that capacity for over forty years and doing most of the work himself. No snow was too deep, no sleet nor rain too bad but that he had fire, and the church was open.

His going leaves a vacant place in our church and community that cannot be filled.

"Servant of God well lone."

Secretary.

FUNERAL OF MRS. LUCY WRIGHT.

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Pierce Wright, 69, were held Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the Suffolk Christian Church.

The Rev. Duane N. Vore and the Rev. R. E. Brittle officiated at the services while interment followed in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Wright was a member of an old and prominent Isle of Wight family and the daughter of the late William N. and Evalina Darden Pierce of Isle of Wight County.

She was a member of the Isle of Wight Christian Church and for the past few months had made her home at 127 Clay Street.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Cotton Moore of Magnolia; two granddaughters, Mrs. Marjorie Moore Madren and Mrs. Evelyn Moore Graham, both of Elon College; a brother, Theodore L. Pierce of Baltimore; several nieces and nephews.

NATIONAL BOARDS CONVEENE IN CLEVELAND.

New York, on "Financing a New Church."

Wednesday evening, February 15, will be devoted to an emphasis on Stewardship and Evangelism with Dr. David McKeith, Jr., of Boston, Mass., Executive Vice-President of the American Board of Foreign Missions as speaker. Dr. McKeith recently returned from an extended visit to Africa and the Near East.

Pre-Session Meetings.

Several other important and colorful Congregational Christian pre-session events will take place from Thursday to Monday, February 8 to 13 at the Cleveland Hotel and will key into the sessions from Monday to Thursday, February 13 to 16.

The Women's State Presidents of the country will meet from Saturday through Monday, February 11-13, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. H. E. Walley of East Chicago, Indiana.

They will study the programs and the tools for promoting the Christian World Mission of the Congregational Christian Churches in 1950; hold a President's Dinner at Schaufler College, Cleveland, Ohio, Sunday noon; and Sunday afternoon hear the messages from Mrs. Olga Golejewski, of Oberlin, Ohio, a DP who arrived in the U. S. A. last September; Miss Janet Chen of China, now at Schaufler; Rev. V. Yinger of Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. Harry F. Nicholson of Akron, Ohio.

The Fellowship of State Superintendents from coast to coast meets from Friday, February 10 to Monday, February 13, and the Council of State and Regional Directors of Christian Education for the Congregational Christian Churches meets from Wednesday through Saturday, February 8 to 11.

Highly Interesting Luncheon.

On Monday noon, February 13, in the Cleveland Hotel, The Division of Church Extension and Evangelism of Congregational Christian Churches will hear a panel of five speakers covering such subjects as the recruiting of new members, training for churchmanship, rural parish planning, daily devotions and United Protestantism's plan. They will include Rev. Nathaniel M. Guptill of South Portland, Me., on "Fishing for Men in Maine"; Rev. Gerald J. Jud of West Haven, Conn., on "Fruits Depend on Roots"; Rev. James E. McLain of Fargo, N. D., on "Let's Quit Guessing"; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson of Bridgeport, Conn., on "A Word in Season"; and Dr. Walter Schlaretzki of Decatur, Illinois, on "What We Must Do To Be Saved."

Representatives in attendance from the Southern Convention include Superintendent Scott, President Smith of Elon College, Editor House, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell and Mrs. John G. Truitt.

MISS CURRY WEDS CHARLES LEE CARR.

The marriage of Miss Goldie May Curry of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Curry of Nansemond County, to Charles Lee Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim H. Carr, also of Nansemond County, took place Monday, January 30, at 12:00 o'clock noon at the home of the Rev. R. E. Brittle, officiating minister.

Liberty Spring Church Has New Pastor

Messages to the Church by Predecessor and Successor

Forty-six years and four months ago today, I preached my first sermon as pastor of Liberty Spring Christian Church. Many things have come to pass in the intervening years. A new church sanctuary, a Sunday School addition with modern conveniences, a Hammond Organ with chimes, are among the improvements. The membership has had a fine increase, and the educational and missionary work of the church will compare favorably with any rural church in the Southern Convention. There has been a fine spirit of cooperation in carrying out a progressive program.

At the end of these years, it is not easy to come to the end of such a long and happy pastoral fellowship. There are many ties of friendship that bind one to such a church and people with an enduring affection.

But when it becomes my privilege to hand over such a delightful opportunity to such a consecrated minister as my friend, your pastor, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, the act of cutting this final official relation, as pastor, becomes easier.

I know better than any other minister what it means to be pastor of this church. With a deep feeling of appreciation I take this opportunity to thank the church for its friendship, love, and loyalty. It is my joy today, to commend your past to you and to suggest that you bestow upon him the same friendly support you have given me.

I congratulate Dr. Dollar and the church for the high honor and privilege they face together. . . . It is my earnest hope and prayer that the future may be filled with spiritual blessings and abundant success for the church and the kingdom of God. The tasks that lie ahead should challenge every one to deeper consecration and the finest spirit of loyalty. This will lighten the burden and put great joy in our hearts.

It would be a great pleasure for me to know that every member of the church will give your new pastor unstinted support in the great work of the kingdom. You will honor your former pastor by giving your loyalty to my successor.

Success to Dr. Jesse H. Dollar on this first Sunday in February, 1950. All through the coming years it is my hope that the fellowship in this church may be so rich in spiritual blessings that someone may congratulate him at the end of a long and successful stay in our midst. God's richest blessings be upon pastor and people.

I. W. JOHNSON,
Pastor Emeritus.

I cannot look forward until I have looked back! I must, and I want to look back, upon the ministry of Dr. I. W. Johnson and his devoted wife, in the light of whose amazing ministry Mrs. Dollar and I are destined to walk in the years to come. It is a ministry unparalleled in my knowledge. That the Johnsons have walked together, served together, planned and executed the marked progress of Liberty Spring, Oakland and Berea for this half-century taxes the imagination. Their hearts have beat as one, and their energies, prayers and hearts have gone out, unrelenting, or else this venture of a lifetime could not have come to its close in the manner so evident in all these churches. Surely they are hearing the Master say, "Well done, good and faithful servants, rest in the joy of thy Lord." All honor to them, and may their joys increase with the years!

Now to look with you at the future. The Dollars can't do what the Johnsons did. Don't expect it. Every minister has his own way of approaching, planning and accomplishing. To compare ways and means would be unfair to both your former and present pastors. That you have stood loyally by Dr. Johnson goes without saying, for no man could have brought you through these years of continuous progress without your willingness to be led and your desire to develop into an outstanding church.

In the past you have been yoked with other churches. Now you must assume the responsibility for your future. It is indeed bright, for you have grown into a great church. Many new responsibilities will be yours, but with each you will have a new and greater opportunity. Your future is in your hands. You can make of it what you will.

I come to you with great enthusiasm for the work. I have great confidence in your ability and willingness to enter this full-time program. A full-time program in any church is much more than "having preaching every Sunday." It is a call to every member to multiply his efforts in time, prayer, giving and doing. I pledge you my utmost. You will get the best I have. I ask only for your best. Only our best, poured into the future of our task will be sufficient. Giving that, under God, we cannot fail. Faces to the future, eyes lifted up, hands to our tasks, hearts on the Altar! Together, let us march.

JESSE H. DOLLAR,
Pastor.

THE RELATION OF OUR CHURCH COLLEGES TO OUR CHURCHES.

By BRYANT DRAKE,
Division of Christian Education.

Congregational Christian Church colleges, with one exception, are legally independent institutions. The single exception is Elon College, which I understand is legally related to the Southern Convention.

When it is realized that the colleges of most denominations are either owned by church bodies or have requirements in their articles of incorporation that a specified proportion of the Board of Trustees shall be appointed by the related church, it is a case for question why our colleges are not more closely bound to their churches. This independence was deliberate so far as the Congregationalists were concerned, for they carried over the theory of autonomy of each church into the sphere of education. There was also an academic faith involved, for many Congregational educators did not wish to risk ecclesiastical dominance in academic matters. However, this may have been a vain hope, for actually early boards of trustees, as well as faculties, were composed almost entirely of ministers and members of our churches.

This policy was productive of free institutions, many of which developed into great institutions. Unfortunately there were disadvantages in this freedom, for the churches felt less responsibility perhaps. Certainly scores of young and struggling Congregational colleges perished for want of support.

Today, we recognize some of the shortcomings of our college policy. We do not wish to repudiate the tradition of freedom from outside pressures, ecclesiastical or other, but we do recognize that in our system there must be the counter balance of connectionalism and fellowship. Slowly we are gaining a sense of responsibility for our colleges, and a realization that the weaker institutions have a just claim for sufficient financial support to guarantee their survival.

However, a few of our colleges, namely, the six colleges associated with the American Missionary Association, receives generous denominational aid, for the A.M.A. holds endowments specifically established for "Negro Education." Comparable support for our other church colleges is still a pious hope, though a sum of $170,000 would be available if Our Christian World Mission were to be raised in full. Unfortunately for the colleges, this item does not have high priority and little or none of it will be available this year.

More and more state conferences give evidence of a sense of responsibility of the church colleges within their borders. Several conferences include modest appropriations to their college in their budgets, and an increasing number of churches contribute or permit college officials to make special appeals to their members. The proportion of Congregational Christian students in the student bodies of several of our colleges is on the increase, which may indicate more interest on the part of churches. The Board of Home Missions through the Department of Higher Education grants small subsidies to all of our colleges, with the the colleges to make better provision for the ministry of religion on their campuses, and the small subsidies which it makes are specified for that purpose. It is not anticipated that the denomination will be able to contribute huge sums to its colleges, but it is intended that insofar as possible the religious programs of our colleges will be subsidized, and significant experiments will be encouraged.

Each college is entitled to a delegate to the General Council, and denominational literature gives publicity to the colleges. For a few years the Missionary Herald has devoted its April number to higher education. The resolution on church colleges at the last General Council was a strong one. As a denomination we are on exception of the A. M. A. colleges which benefit from special endowments referred to above.

The Department of Higher Education seeks to cultivate closer relations with the colleges and to serve them in the name of the denomination. All trustees of our colleges receive occasional communications from the Department. The Department gives some assistance to colleges seeking new faculty, and also serves as a clearing house for the Congregational Christian College Council and the whole body of Congregational Christian colleges, which numbers twenty-three 4-year colleges and two junior colleges.

The churches are especially interested in the religious life of our colleges, and the Department of Higher Education endeavors to promote annual weeks of religious emphasis in all of them. It also seeks to influence record that we are concerned for our colleges; it remains to give measurable and tangible evidence of that concern.

THE DIVISION OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND OUR CHURCH.

By HARRY THOMAS STOCK,
General Secretary.

The Church must constantly renew itself through its ministry to the younger generations. If it is to be adequate for the new responsibilities of a swiftly changing age, it must carry on a vigorous program of education which prepares young people, students and adults for intelligent and daring leadership. The Church has an inclusive and specialized ministry, for all persons, from birth to death.

There are at least three places where this program of Christian ed-

News Flashes

We learn with deep regret of the death of Dr. F. C. Lester's mother on Saturday of last week. The sympathy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN goes to her family.

The Church of Wide Fellowship at Southern Pines, North Carolina, of which our editor, Rev. Robert Lee House, is pastor, suffered a severe fire loss on Monday of this week.

Those attending the Congregational Christian Mid-Winter Meeting being held at Cleveland, Ohio, February 10-17, are: Supt. Wm. T. Scott; Mrs. O. H. Paris, Women State Presidents; Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, The Board of Home Missions; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Executive Committee of the General Council, and Rev. Robert Lee House, Member of the Nominating Committee.

The Managing Editor wishes to extend thanks to the various departmental editors who have relinquished space in THE CHRISTIAN SUN this week that we might bring to our constituency these special messages from our own Church College—Elon. These include: Mrs. W. J. Andes, Women's Work; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Young People; Mrs. Robert Lee House, Children's Editor; Dr. John G. Truitt, Superintendent of The Orphanage, and Supt. Wm. T. Scott. For obvious reasons we include the Sunday School lesson.

VENTION, CONFERENCES AND CHURCHES.

By. WM. T. SCOTT,

Supt., The Southern Convention.

The founding fathers of Elon College sought to establish an institution of higher education which would fit the young men and young women of the churches to take their places in business and church as prepared Christians. Elon has with financial limitations done a job which is a credit to the hopes and prayers of the founders of our college. It is difficult to imagine how greatly Elon has figured in the homes and churches of the Southern Convention. The sons and daughters of Elon have taken their places with honor in every walk of life, but particularly have Elon men and women served our churches.

Take a look at the leadership of the Southern Convention. You will see a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, superintendent and educational secretary, all Elon graduates. So are the presidents of the conferences and of the Woman's Convention, the chairman of the laymen's fellowship, the president of Elon College, the superintendent of the Christian orphanage, the chairman of the Mission Board, Board of Christian Education, and the Board of Superannuation. Over one-half of our churches are served by pastors who received their training at Elon. That splendid group of ministers coming to us from other institutions are in our convention very largely because of the influence of Elon in building churches of sufficient strength to command them.

Elon has not only furnished and inspired leadership but she has been a symbol of intelligent, Christian progress, order and dignity. Likewise, Elon has been the center of the organized institutional life of our churches of the Southern Convention. Since her founding Elon has been the center of our denominational life in the South. The Convention Office is comfortably quartered in a college building as it has been for many years, and these facilities are made available without cost to the Convention.

The Church and Elon are engaged in a common endeavor. They belong to each other. Elon is dependent upon the churches for support and the churches are dependent upon Elon for trained leadership and inspiration. No college of our Congregational Christian heritage so vitally affects the life of the churches of its area as does Elon. Together let us work with and for our common interest—the building of the Kingdom of God on earth.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

SALUTE TO OUR CHURCH COLLEGES

The uses of a college campus are many. Stately buildings and spacious lawns provide an attractive setting for a variety of interests and activities. Tourists linger, visitors muse, students cram, alumni reflect. Athletics vie with academics for time and attention. Here the past and the future come to pointed and exciting contact. The library and the faculty bring a glowing heritage to the threshold of youth. Philanthropy lays its treasures at the altar of learning. Youth arrives. Vocations are selected, knowledge flourishes, friendships blossom, destinies are shaped.

The denominational college campus serves as a happy setting for countless meetings: youth conferences, week-end retreats, convocations, etc. The General Council of Congregational Christian Churches has met in recent years at Oberlin, Beloit and Grinnell.

In addition to its regular academic work, Elon served our constituency in a special way recently through a Christian Workers' Conference. Ministers and laymen came in large numbers. It was a stimulating and refreshing experience. Dr. Martin Goslin came down from Evanston, Illinois, and gave the ministers a comprehensive survey of preaching possibilities. Rev. Ira Black schooled the ministers in the proven techniques of visitation evangelism. Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein brought the wisdom of his fruitful and mature ministry to those who grapple with the problems of counselling and administration. Surely our ministers are more worthy servants of Christ as a result of this conference which was held on the Elon campus.

Elon serves its matriculated students, calls alumni and friends back for games and conferences, then projects itself in countless ways. The Elon Singers, who begin their tour of Eastern Virginia this week, give exquisite testimony to the aesthetic side of college life. The reciprocal arrangement of taking people to Elon and Elon to the people is commendable.

Elon has a department of religion, but does not offer graduate work in religion. It is fortunate in that it is located near one of the major schools of religion in America, Duke. While it is anticipated that a number of Elon ministerial students will go "into the far country" for seminary training (Chicago, Hartford, Yale, Union, Vanderbilt), there are many advantages in studying nearby. Close friendships may be formed with great scholars on the Duke faculty, and this close and helpful friendship may be renewed at frequent intervals as one ministers in this area. The South is rapidly developing institutions, theological as well as otherwise, which compare favorably with those in other sections of America and the world. In this we rejoice.

Increasing attention is being given to our Congregational Christian colleges. Among them stands Elon. With joy and gratitude we salute Elon. May God make all these institutions effective instruments of His purpose.

REPORT FROM CLEVELAND

Protestantism is taking the first step toward being "saved" by "confronting the secularism of this age unitedly" but it has got to get down to brass tacks and recognize that "sin not only hurts us who do it and those against whom we sin, but sin is primarily directed against God," declared Rev. Walter Schalaretzki, D. D., speaking February 13 at the Luncheon of the Extension and Evangelism Division of our Church in Cleveland, Ohio.

He continued: "It is stated that we have lost many elements in our population—faculty and students of the university world; the business world; youth and labor. Union laboring men feel that they do not need us, 'common labor' feels we have nothing to give them. No denomination can stand against this tide, nor all denominations doing their best separately. So we are confronting the secularism of this age unitedly."

The people of the Protestant churches must make a deeper study of the divine aspect and resources of the Biblical way of thinking and living, said Dr. Schalaretzki. "Throughout the church an upsurge of life always has flowed from a renewed appreciation and acceptance of the Biblical way of thinking and living. We need to find it again. We recognize that sin hurts us who do it and those against whom we sin. The Bible writers saw that dimension which escapes others, that sin primarily is directed against God."

The New Testament is "excited about the Good News. The heart of the Good News is that God has done something and stands ready to do it for everyone who believes the News. . . . Man alone cannot achieve salvation from sin. 'By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God.' What God wants to do in salvation is incomparably deeper than liberalism has recognized. Paul never ceased proclaiming that God wanted not to improve our characters, but to make us over.

"We are not alone in our endeavor to change life for individuals and for the world. God is in the struggle. Indeed, it is He that works in us and through us. It is His kingdom that men may enter and it must be by His methods and His resources.

"The church and its ministry feels downcast before the stupendous problems of today. Into our ears should sound again the words of one who spoke for God when the Chosen Nation was being torn from its roots; 'Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, the Lord, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of His understanding. . . . They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.' By relying upon God's unsearchable mind and unwearying strength, we must and will be saved."

Further reports from the Midwinter Meetings at Cleveland will be given next week.

ELON COLLEGE CHOIR, DIRECTOR AND ANNOUNCERS

The Elon College Choir Broadcasts a Program of Sacred Music each Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, over WBBB, Mutual Network. This Program has been given continuously for three years.

COLLEGE CHOIR TO SING IN VIRGINIA AND NORTHERN STATES THIS SPRING.

The Elon College Choir, which in recent years has earned recognition throughout the Eastern United States for the excellence of its performances, will make two personal appearance tours within the coming six weeks.

The choir, under the direction of Prof. John Westmoreland and with Prof. Fletcher Moore as accompanist, will leave next week for the first of two trips scheduled for it, a trip which will carry the singers to Eastern Virginia for six performances. This trip will start on Friday, February 17, and will come to a close on Sunday, February 19. The bookings for this trip have not been announced, but the appearances will carry the singers into several of the leading Congregational Christian Churches in the area of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Newport News and Richmond.

Once this trip is completed, the leaders and members of the choir will begin preparation for the more extended tour, which will carry the Elon organization on an eleven-day trip into the Middle Atlantic and New England states.

This trip will be made during the annual spring holidays, the singers being scheduled to leave on Friday, March 3, and return on Tuesday, March 14. During that time they will present their musical programs in thirteen Congregational Christian Churches in the northern states.

These two trips duplicate to a certain extent the two tours made by the Elon Choir last year, and the group was received with appreciation and praise wherever they appeared at that time. Press notices were particularly high in their praise during the New England trip last spring, and churches in that area are looking forward to another appearance of the Elon musical group.

WE APPRECIATE.

Elon College wishes to express appreciation to the Board of Publications of the Southern Convention and Editor Robert Lee House for assigning this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to the college for information purposes. The college is presenting herewith a number of articles from officials, ministers and laymen of our entire Church, as well as members of the Elon faculty and student body. We covet for these articles careful reading. They contain information concerning the physical plant and curriculum, with special emphasis on Christian education in particular and higher education in general.

WHAT THE NEW GYMNASIUM MEANS TO PHYSICAL ED- UCATION PROGRAM.

By J. L. PIERCE,
Athletic Director.

There comes a time in most people's lives when a cherished dream comes true. For many people, the successful completion of the construction of the Elon College Alumni Memorial Gymnasium has been a realization of their dreams. The construction of this building has been a joint effort of students, faculty, alumni and friends of the college, and for that reason it means a great deal to a large number of people, and not least among these, the present student body. Recently a student affectionately referred to it as "that half acre of steel and concrete." It is truly something they are proud to show to their friends and families.

When the present physical education program had its beginning in 1942, the physical education facilities of the college consisted of the football-baseball stadium, the football practice field, two worn-out tennis courts, and the one playing floor in North Dormitory. The only dressing facilities were the varsity and visiting team dressing rooms in the basement of North. For the first few years the program for men and women, consisting of service classes (gym classes) and intramural sports, was conducted as well as could be expected with these facilities. The men and women dressed in their dormitory rooms and reported to the old gymnasium or to the stadium for their classes.

About the time the recent war was over, the college announced a curriculum leading to a Bachelor of Arts degree in Physical Education. In order to provide the necessary training for this degree, adequate laboratory facilities were needed. The first addition was the playing field called the "Intramural Field," which is located behind the new gymnasium and adjacent to the new power house. Last year two important additions were made. The first was a dressing facility for men with baskets and lockers which was set up in one of the rooms in the basement of North Dormitory. This gave the men (dormitory only) a place where they could dress in uniform for their classes. All of this equipment will be transferred to the new gymnasium when the shower rooms are completed. The second addition last year was the construction of three fast drying Tenico Commander Tennis Courts in the area adjacent to the new gymnasium, and to the rear of Cedar Lodge. We began using these courts in April.

Even with these improvements we were still unable to meet the needs of the students. We were using the playing floor in North Dormitory from 8:00 a. m. until 9:00 p. m. during the winter and even then many students did not have an opportunity to participate. This was particularly true of the young ladies and the day students. The completion of the new gymnasium is going to help us to meet these problems and to reduce or eliminate the use of North Dormitory as a gymnasium at night. When all equipment is installed in the new gymnasium, we will be able to have most of our professional training classes, all service classes, including those for women, all indoor intramural sports, as well as our intercollegiate basketball program, both varsity and junior varsity, in this building. In addition there will be ample office space for the staff, and storage space for all equipment.

Perhaps the most important contribution this building will make is that we will now be able to concentrate the activity of the Department in and around one building. For the first time we will be able to offer to the entire student body, including day students, a balanced and well-rounded physical education and health program. There will be sufficient dressing facilities so that each student will have an individual basket for his or her uniform and equipment, and the use of a locker for his or her clothing while participating in any physical activity, whether indoor or outdoor. The basket and locker rooms will be open for the use of the students during the entire day. This should mean a great deal to the young ladies and day students since no dressing facilities have been available to them previously. I think the day students will particularly appreciate this since their participation in the program has been limited because of the lack of this type of facility.

The students and staff of the department are grateful for this new facility and will always have a tender spot in their hearts for those who have made it possible for them to enjoy using it.

WE ATTENDED ELON COLLEGE.

By MRS. W. E. WISSEMAN,

(Daughter of Dr. C. H. Rowland.)

My father and mother were among the first students in the early days of Elon College. My father came to Elon to prepare for the ministry. And since training at a theological school was the exception rather than the rule then, his training at Elon completed his study for the ministry. As a Christian minister in the Southern Convention for over 40 years, he always expressed his gratitude to the leaders and teachers who taught and inspired him while he was a student at Elon.

Some twenty-five years later my two sisters and I studied at Elon and graduated from there. Just as my father had prepared for the ministry, so I prepared for work in religious education. At this time, not only were there fine Christian teachers at Elon, but the physical equipment had been greatly improved. There was on the campus a building dedicated to the use of Christian Education. We had training in theory, and we also had practice teaching in the week-day school of religion. So many times today as I teach in our Sunday school and work with various groups in our local church and throughout the Convention I give thanks for the training and the inspiration I received at Elon.

THE ELON COLLEGE FOUNDATION.By DR. W. M. BROWN,

Professor of Social Science.

The Elon College Foundation was chartered in 1945 under the laws of the State of North Carolina. There were fifteen incorporators, including the Secretary of State of North Carolina, the President of the Southern Convention of the Congregational Christian Church, the President of Elon College, the President of the College Board of Trustees, and a number of prominent business and professional men.

The purpose of the Foundation is to function as the "right arm" of the college, so to speak, in broadening its base of support and widening its circle of contacts. Its charter provides that all of its resources are to be used for the benefit of Elon College solely. It is prepared to administer trust funds of all kinds with this end in view. It welcomes contributions and bequests from all friends of the college and is prepared to work out such arrangements for the administration of these funds as the prospective donors may desire. Donations may be either restricted or unrestricted, but, in all cases, they must be used for the benefit of the college. Restricted donations are used for such purposes as the donor specifies. Unrestricted donations are used for college purposes in accordance with the best judgment of the Foundation trustees.

Since June 1, 1949, the writer of this article has filled the office of Executive Secretary of the Foundation. Present Foundation trustees are as follows: Hon. Thad Eure, Secretary of State of North Carolina, President; Oscar F. Smith, Norfolk, Va., Vice-President; Clyde W. Gordon, Burlington, N. C., Secretary-Treasurer; Garland Gray, Waverly, Va.; S. T. Holland, Windsor, Va.; Dr. W. H. Boone, Durham, N. C.; Dr. L. E. Smith, Elon College; Dr. John G. Truitt, Elon College; Dr. Darden W. Jones, Franklin, Va.; J. Dolph Long, Graham, N. C.; W. C. Elder, Burlington, N. C.; W. H. Scott, Franklin, Va.; R. S. Dickson, Charlotte, N. C.; Reid Maynard, Burlington, N. C.; and Allen Gant, Burlington, N. C.

The Foundation welcomes contributions and inquiries from all friends of the college, especially its alumni and the members of the Congregational Christian Church. Purposes for which these contributions may be made specifically include: new dormitories, a new dining hall, the president's home, general endowment, endowed professorships, purchase of laboratory apparatus and equipment, library books, scholarships, student loan funds, retirement fund for faculty members, endowment of the Christian Workers' Conference and other conferences held at the college from time to time, and any other related purpose as may be desired by the donor. Those wishing to make bequests will be supplied with complete information on this subject if they will communicate with the Executive Director. Provision is also made for the setting up of annuities to be paid during the lifetime of the donor, also for the taking out of insurance policies naming the college, through the Elon College Foundation, as the beneficiary.

Correspondence regarding any of the above matters should be conducted with the Executive Director, Box 276, Elon College, N. C. Contributions may be sent either to him or to Mr. Clyde W. Gordon, Secretary-Treasurer, Burlington, N. C.

ELON COLLEGE—A FORCEFUL WITNESS TO THE POWER OF OPTIMISTIC HOPE.By DR. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN,Pastor, Congregational Christian Church, Richmond, Virginia.

The story of Elon College, in its rustic setting among the large oak trees which gave the school its name, reads like a romance. It is the story of consecrated, aspiring and sacrificing men and women who believed in God and in the importance of Christian higher education; and who launched this educational enterprise with little other than faith to justify their hope. But, from that small beginning, the institution has developed into what is now one of the best of the smaller colleges in the entire country, having a large and unusually attractive campus, a commodious and impressive group of modern college buildings connected by ornate open cloisters—ivy covered walls and artistic landscaping, all in verification of the words so often quoted from the pen of the poet, Keats, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

Elon, with its present annual enrollment of 1,100 students (including adult education and summer school), as from the school's beginning, lays its major emphasis upon scholarship and citizenship. It believes that a student's character quotient is equally important, if not more important, than his intelligence quotient. A finer group of young people would be hard to find anywhere than the young people on Elon's campus. And the personnel of the able faculty impresses visitors to the campus with the good fortune of the students who are privileged to have such worthy and well equipped leaders to direct them in their quest for knowledge.

I have visited Elon numerous times from 1920 to 1950 and have marvelled at the phenomenal advance the college has made in the past decade. The major secret of this unparalleled advance lies largely in the vision and tireless service of Elon's consecrated president, Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, whose motivating ambition from the beginning has been to promote every interest of the school to its greatest realization, to raise every standard of the school to the highest level, and to safeguard the institution's future.

THE DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION.By FERRIS E. REYNOLDS,Chairman, Department of Philosophy and Religion.

What is there that can enter into a man without making a hole, yet can tear out his heart and reduce his behavior to a sub-human level? A vicious idea can do it. From the experience of the past two decades, we have learned what ideas can do with individuals and with nations. There was a time when it was taken for granted that behavior was the most important thing about a person. Ideas and beliefs did not matter. "Let a person believe whatever he likes, but teach him to behave." That blundering policy left the door open for clever tyrants who were keen enough to discern that ideas are the natural parents of action. By controlling the flow of ideas into people's minds with propaganda, they were able to control their behavior.

Observations of these facts have served to establish the conclusion that ideas, systems of belief, philosophies of value are of first rate practical importance. The major conflict of our day is a conflict between ideas—ideologies. Almost every newscast that we hear suggests that our basic ideas and beliefs are being attacked in almost every part of the world. Democracy is on trial for its life in a way not hitherto recorded. Who would be foolish enough to imagine that these rival philosophies of life have no influence within our national boundaries? Ideas—even false ones—have a power of penetration that must be respected. What will be the outcome

CAMPAIGNING FOR GYMNASIUM FUNDS

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCENT, 1949

Secretary of State Thad Eure broadcasts the "Kick-off" for the house-to-house Campaign in Alamance County for funds for the new Gymnasium. The Gymnasium was finished early this year and the cash subscriptions and pledges received so far have been most encouraging. However, there is need for others to participate, that the entire cost may be soon liquidated.

COLLEGE TRAINING FOR THE MINISTRY.

By DR. STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Chairman, Committee on Ministerial Education.

Elon College was organized and established by the Southern Christian Convention. The purpose as outlined in the action of the Convention was to educate young men for the Christian ministry and to prepare young men and young women who would serve as lay workers in the churches to serve more efficiently in their lay capacity.

What is Elon College expected to do for the Southern Convention candidates for the ministry? There are four phases of the training which constitute the very minimum requirements which should rightfully be expected. It should be borne in mind that even though the Convention has voted that all candidates for the ministry should have three full years of seminary training; it authorizes the conferences to grant full ordination to candidates who have graduated from an accredited college, provided all other requirements are met.

In the first place, we would say, that the college owes it to the candidate for the ministry to acquaint him with a working knowledge of the world in which, and to which, he is to minister. His ministry will be deeply influenced by the thought trends, political, economic and social, of the world in which he will do his work. History, literature and art are not only the interpreters of the past, they are expressions of the ideals upon which the future is to be built.

The college must impart to the candidate for the ministry a working knowledge of the Bible in its English translations. The average person's knowledge of the Bible is all too often limited to the easy and the obvious. It will never do for the minister's knowledge of the Bible to be confined to a few "garden spots" of the Bible. The college should turn the feet of the young minister into the path that leads to a comprehensive knowledge of the Bible.

The college should introduce the candidate for the ministry to the vast realm of Church History which covers nineteen hundred years. If one would know something of the infinite power of God, he can find it best expressed in the account of the difficulties, trials and dangers through which God has led his church. All ministers should know Church History, and our own ministers should know the history of Congregational Christian Churches.

In the light of the situation which we face in the Southern Convention, the college must teach the candidate for the ministry the fundamental principles of homiletics. The minister must know how to prepare sermons and deliver them effectively. A lifetime is all too short to master that art.

The college's responsibility in educating the candidates for the ministry has been set forth in this general outline, in order to say that judged by these standards, Elon College is not failing to fulfill one of its purposes, as set forth by the founding fathers. It has been our privilege to have a part in the examining of many candidates for the ministry who have graduated from Elon College, and the recommending of them for ordination. We would bear testimony to the excellent way in which Elon College is meeting the responsibility of training candidates for the ministry.

TEACHER EDUCATION AT ELON COLLEGE.

By J. C. COLLEY,

Head of Department of Education and Psychology.

Although Elon College, located in the town of Elon College, North Carolina, is a liberal arts college, it has nevertheless, since its founding in 1889, made a very commendable contribution to the education of young teachers. Many hundreds of Elon's graduates have gone out into the field of teaching in both private and public schools in North Carolina and many other states of the Union.

Elon College has been justly proud of its contribution to the ever-present need for well qualified teachers. Its graduates are making their marks as teachers, principals, supervisors, and superintendents in many progressive school systems.

The college offers a substantial number of courses in the "professional field"—all the way from general psychology to philosophy of education. Numerous courses are offered as electives in education, as well as the courses which are generally required for the North Carolina Class "A" Certificate, or comparable certificates in other states.

Arrangements have been satisfactorily worked out with the Elon College Public School, in Alamance County, and with Burlington City Schools, and with other surrounding schools, wherein Elon's student teachers procure their practice-teaching under the supervision of competent critic teachers. The College and its Department of Education and Psychology endeavor to keep constantly on the alert to remain abreast of the sound trends in teacher education.

During the last two years Elon College has offered on-the-campus courses in adult education in evening classes. Numerous in-service teachers have availed themselves of the opportunity to take additional new or refresher courses for self-improvement or for certificate-renewal credit. Further, the College has continued to offer several courses in the professional field during both summer school terms. Both undergraduates and teachers have always registered in these courses in large numbers.

The college has undertaken to procure at all times competent and experienced instructors for its courses in the field of education and psychology. The instructors have had rich and varied experiences in the field of public school work before entering into the field of higher education.

The present senior class will have approximately 75 young, well-trained teachers. They will, in the main, enter the high school field of teaching, although some of them will offer their services in the upper grammar grades. There is a great dearth of teachers in the elementary field in North Carolina and the other states. Elon College would like to have more young ladies taking courses in elementary education. In North Carolina, as well as most of the other states today, teachers in the elementary field receive the same salaries as do high school teachers.

A teacher-placement service is operated for the beginning teachers who go out from Elon College. This service has been efficiently operating under the supervision of Professor A. L. Hook for a number of years. Many principals and superintendents communicate with Professor Hook for information on young candidates for teaching positions or visit his office and arrange to interview the young applicants.

In teacher-education Elon College offers another of its many services to community, state and nation.

ELON COLLEGE—AN APPRECIATION.

By DR. JOHN WALKER,

Member, Board of Trustees.

Elon College is an Institution in which the members of the Congregational Christian Church can take pride. There is a spirit abroad on the campus which commends itself to every visitor, whether the stay is long or short. You have the impression that sound academic work is stressed but that the amenities of the Christian life are not neglected. I have always been impressed by the comradeship between the faculty and students and by the wholesome friendly social atmosphere.

Elon College seems to have a much closer relation to the churches than other so-called denominational colleges. The college seems to have a concern for the churches and for church life, and the churches of our communion and fellowship in Virginia and North Carolina seem to have a very real concern for the college. It is my hope the Congregational Christian Churches all over the country will take the increased interest in Christian education on the college level and in particular in Elon College which is such a sound and worthy Christian Institution.

THE MINISTERIAL STUDENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

By C. BAXTER TWIDDY,

Ministerial Student, Elon College.

The ministerial student at Elon College is part of the greater fellowship of those preparing themselves for the service of the church. No longer is this service confined to the ministry but rather is extended to all those desiring to become Bible teachers, missionaries, religious education directors, student workers, promoters of religion through radio and movies, etc. It is the duty of Christian colleges like Elon to fully dedicate their institutions to the best possible training available. Every effort must be made to fulfill the obligations of Christian colleges.

In the Department of Religion there are three professors who teach the varied phases of religion—Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds, Dr. D. J. Bowden and Dr. W. W. Sloan. From these three professors the ministerial student majoring in religion, receives his instruction.

Not every ministerial student who comes to Elon majors in religion. Instead, a person might select a major which is closely related to religion. For example the study of history reveals great patterns in the story of mankind which helps to better appreciate the multiplicity of man's desires. The non-religion major thus expects to receive specialized training at seminary, and therefore devotes his energies, while at Elon, to broad areas of learning as afforded in a liberal arts college. This does not mean that the college should not guide and assist these people in religious matters. Expert adult guidance is equally important to every ministerial student.

Field work is open to the ministerial student. Some of our churches in the Southern Convention are served partly, and in some cases wholly, by student pastors. Student Summer Service, under the auspices of the Southern Convention Office, is an extracurricular activity for the ministerial student.

The Ministerial Association, with Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds as sponsor, meets on Monday nights. The organization's purposes are to serve as a center for fellowship and to provide special programs and speakers.

Much of the individual training for the ministerial student comes from his own initiative. Also it is the privilege of the ministerial student and the Ministerial Association to use its Christian influence on the campus.

ELON AND THE CONVENTION.By JOHN G. TRUITT,

President, The Southern Convention.

Within the past year I have spoken before each of our five Conventions, and one of the very encouraging things has been the number who told me of their attending Elon. Many of the leading workers of the Southern Convention's churches were trained in other institutions, and that is good; but as they work side by side with those from Elon there are no unfavorable comparisons. A majority of our pastors are Elon men. The president of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, Dr. Stanley C. Harrel of Durham, is an Elon graduate; the president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, Rev. R. E. Brittle of Suffolk, is an Elon graduate; the president of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, Rev. R. T. Grisom of Jonesboro, is an Elon graduate; Dr. F. C. Lester of Asheboro, president of the Western North Carolina Conference, is an Elon graduate. Although Rev. R. A. Whitten of Winchester is not an Elon graduate, he is doing an equally fine job as president of the Valley of Virginia Conference.

As far as I am concerned, looking at the roster of pastors and workers in the Southern Convention to see how many Elon men or women are found there is no indication that Elon is better than some other college; it simply shows how much she has contributed to our church. My predecessor as president of the Convention, Dr. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro, was not an Elon man. I hear some Elon enthusiasts saying, "Yes, but his wife, his two sisters-in-law and his father- and mother-in-law were Elon graduates." Even so, Dr. Wisseman is maintaining his own integrity!

Suppose I take another course—perhaps I didn't get along so well at that one. When I go to see the president of Elon, I find an Elon man whose wife is also an Elon graduate; if I go to the Convention office to see our superintendent, Dr. William T. Scott, I find an Elon man whose wife is also an Elon graduate. And while there I find Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, educational secretary of the Southern Convention, an Elon graduate as well; and the layman treasurer of our Convention, Mr. George D. Colclough, is an Elon graduate as is his wife.

Many key men in the college, as well as in all places in our churches within the Southern Convention, are not from our college—and this is as it should be. I feel certain, however, that thought is given to this by nominating committees, because out in life it is not the college but the person that counts. I am merely citing these things so we may see that the "founding fathers" of Elon did not dream in vain of making a contribution to our Church and the churches through the college.

The president of the Woman's Convention, Mrs. O. H. Paris; the chairman of the Board of Superannuation, Mr. D. R. Fonville; the president of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage, Mr. V. R. Holt; the chairman of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, Dr. W. H. Boone; the president of the Southern Convention Mission Board, Dr. F. C. Lester, and the chairman of the Board of Christian Education, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, are all products of Elon.

Although the well-known editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Rev. Robert Lee House, is not, our managing editor and publisher, Mr. John T. Kernodle, is an Elon graduate.

As I have stated, leading places in many phases of our work are filled by those trained in other colleges. But I have tried to paint a picture showing you that Elon College is doing a fine piece of work. It takes its place along with other colleges. It merits and deserves the support of the churches founding and owning it. It is a church college in the very finest sense of the word. I live in the college town and see the students, faculty and neighbors. I know first-hand that it is doing a great and good work, and should be helped by every church and pastor in our Convention.

ALUMNI OFFICE.By JAMES F. DARDEN,

Alumni Secretary.

March 10, 1950, will mark the fourth anniversary of a full-time secretary of an alumni office. Four years ago there was an alumni office, no equipment—only a list of about eighteen hundred names and only a little over fifteen hundred with the correct mailing address. For some years Mr. George Colclough has kept the alumni association together but could not give his full time to the job because of his duties as field secretary. After he left the employment of the college, the files were not kept up to date and many were misplaced.

Now we have an office with up-to-date equipment. Over five thousand dollars in office equipment, including a new addressograph machine, graphotype for making addressograph plates, filing cabinets, letter folder, multilith machine, typewriters, etc.

The office is located on the first floor of the Alamance Building next to the Dean's office and across the hall from the President's office.

The correct mailing addresses of hundreds of our alumni have been found and added to our mailing list. A twelve-page alumni magazine is published four times a year and mailed to over four thousand Elon alumni. Nearly $12,000 has been contributed in alumni dues to the support of the alumni office during the past four years. In addition to this amount, over $70,000 has been contributed by Elon alumni to the gymnasium fund. The alumni have been instrumental in raising much of the additional $45,000 that has been contributed for the gymnasium. In addition to the cash raised, the alumni have pledged over $25,000 towards the gymnasium.

This is only part of the story. No one can measure the renewed interest of our alumni that can be attributed to the alumni office. Yes—the Elon College Alumni Office is now big business. The board of trustees and the administration are to be complimented on having the courage and foresight to support the establishment of an alumni office and to see that the funds are provided with which to run the office until it can pay its own way. The time is not far away when the alumni office will support itself and have additional funds with which to provide the college in its expanding program.

ELON COLLEGE—AN APPRECIATION.By JAMES F. ENGLISH,

State Superintendent, Connecticut.

To those of us who have come to know Elon College since 1931, this acquaintance has been not only a pleasure but also a source of great inspiration.

From visits to the campus, friendships with alumni and students and news of the progress of the college I have come to have high regard and deep affection for Elon. It is indeed a source of encouragement to watch the college grow and at the same time remain true to the ideals of its founders.

I like its spirit as well as its achievements in scholarship and growth. The forthright endeavor to make the most of every opportunity and to develop its spiritual, intellectual and material assets calls for high praise.

Faculty, students and trustees have already earned the gratitude of our entire fellowship.

OUR CHURCH COLLEGE.

By MRS. JENNIE WILLIS BRADFORD,
Alumna and Member, Board of Trustees.
(Daughter of Dr. J. O. Atkinson.)

The founders of our early American Colleges were for the most part religious men. The charters of nearly all the early colleges stated explicitly that it was their aim to promote the Christian religion. The inscription that may be found over the doorway of Columbia's Earl Hall exemplified this purpose: "That Religion and Education may go hand in hand and character grow with knowledge." Such were the aims and purposes of the founders of Elon College and down through the years her able leaders have endeavored to carry out these ideals. After the Christian Church in the South had been established, there was the realization of loyal and devoted friends and loved ones of the need and importance of a church college. Those religious men and women of the previous century fully recognized the importance of Christian education, they were far sighted enough to be aware that the religion of the future would depend even more upon the spiritual insight and understanding that Christian education brings. A well known educator has said, "The hope for the future lies in education—in the schools, in homes and in more effective programs of education in the churches—and for the realization of this hope the influence and leadership of the church college are more needed than ever."

With the knowledge that Christian education is vitally important it is a fact that our church college provides religious training for our young people that state colleges under our fundamental laws cannot offer. There is a great deal of knowledge in the world that is misapplied. Knowledge acquired at a church college is more likely to be properly applied because of the religious training of the student. Our college is prepared to train and give to our ministerial students such courses as are necessary in the preparation of their great and important life work in the church and the world. Young people can get in our church college well planned courses that are essential in the training of young men and women for Christian leadership in the many important phases of our church work. The world today is in a serious, turbulent condition. No civilization can stand permanently until it is based on spiritual principles and brought into harmony with the will of God.

The need in our country and the world for trained Christian leadership seems more necessary than ever before.

Elon College was founded to train leaders in the Christian way of life and to strengthen the spiritual life of the church in our country and the world. May these ideas and ideals continue to be imbued in the character and development of our young people, for through Christian education as our church college provides will come a greater faith of all peoples and the knowledge that these ideals are the only guide for organizing the affairs of men.

ELON SERVES CHURCH WOMEN.

By MRS. O. H. PARIS,
President, Woman's Board,
Southern Convention.

In this and former College issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, many of us have written concerning the contribution Elon has made and is making to our church leadership through trained ministers, laymen, teachers and Christian workers. Indeed, I doubt if there is scarcely a church in the Southern Convention that does not in some way benefit from Elon's contribution. Elon students—legion they are—rise up to call her blessed because the training and inspiration received while at Elon has given them a fuller and more abundant life.

While recognizing all this, we overlook the fact that the facilities at Elon are ours to use for the asking—grounds, buildings, equipment and staff. It has come to be headquarters for all activities of the Southern Convention. I wonder sometimes how we would get along without this convenience. Just about all our meetings, large and small, are scheduled to be held at Elon College. It has become a habit in the women's groups to say, "We'll meet at Elon," knowing full well that the welcome sign will be hanging out.

So, as President of the Woman's Convention, I want to express for myself and for the women of the church a genuine appreciation for the constant use we make of the physical plant of Elon College. We are grateful to Dr. and Mrs. Smith, the faculty, the office staff and all those who contribute to our comfort and need.

Right now our church women are fast planning for our Annual School of Missions to be held at Elon June 13-15. You know, and I know, that there is work, worry and expense attached to entertaining a group like that. Yet, all our committee had to do was clear the dates with Dr. Smith. When we arrive on June 13, all will be in readiness—dormitories, meals, maid and janitor service, baggage boys, rooms for book display and classes with a lot of gracious hospitality thrown in for good measure.

Yes, Elon serves in many, many ways, and as I said to my Church School Department today—the fifth Sunday—it deserves our best support. Any investment we make in Elon College comes back to the church almost one hundred fold.

ELON SERVES THE CHURCHES OF THE CONFERENCES.

By REV. ROBERT A. WHITTEN,
President, Virginia Valley Central Conference.

An attempt to measure the extent or manner in which Elon College serves the churches of the various Conferences requires more than casual thinking or a hasty appraisal. As one looks back upon the history of both the college and the churches he finds a relationship binding them together as one.

The churches of the Convention gave birth to the founding of Elon College. Through self-denial and sacrifice they made possible an institution worthy to be known as a part of our great church. An institution dedicated for the purpose of training young men and young women not only in art and science, but the value of Christian living, surrounded by Christian influence and under the guidance of the church. Elon College, from its beginning, began immediately to serve the churches by preparing young people for life, sending them back into the churches to minister in the work of Kingdom building. Elon College has made a great contribution to the progress of the churches in the Southern Convention, for which the churches owe a debt of gratitude.

A majority of the ministers of the Valley of Virginia have come from Elon College where their training under Christian influences better fitted them for their work. Missionaries have gone to mission fields at home and abroad after having been prepared for their important task at Elon College. Then, too, men and women have gone from Elon College to the school room where many of them have made names that will long be remembered in the teaching profession; others gave themselves to no less important places by becoming homemakers. Some entered the business world or other professions and the majority by far have served the churches well in their day and generation.

Last, but not least, young people who have been privileged to mingle with students on the campus of Elon College, and to sit in class under the inspiration of great Christian teachers who nobly served in the moulding of Christian character, must surely have returned to their tasks with greater love and devotion for the church.

WE ALSO SERVE.

By D. J. BOWDEN,
Dean, Elon College.

College days are not mere preparation for life, says the educator; they are life. And for the pre-ministerial students in Elon College this is particularly true. Some of these men, having had experience in the preaching ministry but recognizing need for further education, come to us in their mature years seeking growth and guidance. Many of them continue to serve in the active ministry throughout their entire collegiate career. The majority of our pre-ministerial students during recent years, however, have come from the armed services or directly from secondary schools. As these men reach their junior and senior years they are often called to serve churches in nearby communities, sometimes for temporary supply, but often as pastors with full responsibility. They are eligible for licensure to preach only after having satisfactorily completed two years of college work, and are not ordained until they are graduated. As they enter seminary work many of them continue to serve these same churches. Others are called to churches nearer to their chosen seminaries.

Members of the college faculty have also been called often into pastoral service. In previous generations the names of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. W. C. Wicker and others have been associated with the founding and growth of many churches in the Southern Convention. Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the College since 1931, was also pastor of the Elon College Community Church for a period of fifteen years. Since 1942 several members of the religion faculty have held pastorates in nearby communities. The writer has supplied in several churches and been pastor of others during these years. At present Dr. F. E. Reynolds and Dr. W. W. Sloan are serving Providence Memorial and Shallow Ford churches respectively.

During the past year, in addition to many temporary supplies, approximately fifteen churches in the Southern Convention have had Elon students or faculty members as pastors. Were it not for this aid the Convention would find itself unable to meet the demands for leadership in churches of this area, and the service rendered has made possible both growth and progress which could not have been attained without this leadership. One of these churches, for instance, ten years ago, was able to hold only two morning services per month, paid its minister $300 annually and maintained an annual budget of less than $500. Today this same church which has been served largely by Elon students and faculty members has a budget of nearly $4,000, services every Sunday morning, and an attendance record double that of ten years ago.

Thus we also serve!

DIVISION OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND OUR CHURCH.

Education must function. The church building itself is the first of these. Through a curriculum of Christian instruction, worship, fruitful fellowship and neighborly service to those in need, children, young people and adults must receive an ever-widening understanding and experience of the Christian religion. The Division of Christian Education provides curriculum and program material and leadership education for the church schools and youth fellowships of all of our churches.

But the home must again function as a primary agency of Christian nurture. Before the child goes to church school he must have breathed the atmosphere of Christian affection. Through reading, prayer, sharing in family fun and work and neighborliness he ought to be guided into the development of Christian attitudes and habits of life. The Division of Christian Education is making available quarterly booklets for the use of parents and children in their homes.

Congregationalists and Christians early saw the necessity of maintaining genuinely Christian colleges, in which the ministry of the home church could be continued by Christian faculty members. These colleges were founded to assure an intelligent Christian leadership, professional and lay, for both the churches and our common society. Such institutions stand in the center of a continuous process of Christian education: they take the young people from our homes and churches, build on the Christian foundations already laid, and try to send them back to the communities and churches of the nation to be the Christian leaven in society. The Division of Christian Education is greatly concerned to strengthen these Christian colleges in this day of secularism in higher education.

DEPARTMENT OF PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION.

of this global conflict of ideas? The answer is not certain. A more practical question is: What defense is there against attacks upon our beliefs and standards of value?

It is common sense, is it not, that the way to oppose an idea is by use of a superior idea? Adequate beliefs are not inherited or accepted, they are achieved by thoughtful experience. A fortified person, then, is one who knows why he believes what he believes. Being able to give good reasons for the faith that is in him, he is not easily shaken. Who can be safe from propaganda except the persons who "know better"?

If these observations are accurate, it follows that training for life in our day is not merely training in the arts of making a living. Trained persons must be able to deal with ideas, beliefs and standards of value. They must have a working knowledge of the great ideas of our Christian heritage. It is not enough that they believe in the principles that have made our people great, they need to know why they believe. Merely to accept a philosophy of life that puts the individual at the center of all considerations of value, will not suffice. It is necessary that persons make that philosophy their very own by study, thought and experience. Those who are trained in this manner are not only fortified against the attacks of other philosophies, but they are equipped to take the offensive in our modern conflict of ideas.

At Elon College, the Department of Philosophy and Religion seeks to provide that kind of training for the students. Courses are offered in Bible, the history of thought, ethics, logic, and the philosophy of religion. Every student takes at least two of these courses and many of them take more. The administration and other members of the college faculty feel this urgent need of the time for training in these fields which are not directly related to the task of earning a living.

THE DEPARTMENT OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By W. W. SLOAN,
Professor of Bible and Religious Education.

Elon is definitely a church college. It believes in Christian Education. The department of religion is the strongest in the school. Each of its three teachers not only holds the academic degree of Doctor of Philosophy, but is an experienced ordained minister with the professional degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

Elon College was founded to serve the people and the churches of the Southern Convention. It endeavors to develop in each student a Christian philosophy of life. In addition to providing a Christian atmosphere, Elon expects every student to take at least two courses dealing with the content of the Bible in order that he may know the background of Christianity.

But Elon also serves the church by training church workers, both volunteer and professional. Additional courses in Bible, philosophy and Greek are often taken by students who plan to go into work not directly related to the church. Nearly all students who plan to serve the church in the pastorate and the mission field, as educational directors or as week-day teachers of religion, major in religion and philosophy. Most of the pastors of the Southern Convention are Elon graduates.

Methods of teaching religion and putting it into practice must be learned along with Bible and philosophy. Elon offers three courses that are definitely classed as religious education: Principles of Teaching Religious Education, Young People's Work, and Curriculum of Religious Education, particularly of the Sunday school. These are practical courses dealing with actual situations as well as the interests of the students. Each student is expected to get first-hand experience in some phase of church work while taking these courses. Problems he discovers for himself are discussed and suggestions are made by fellow-student as well as the instructor.

Although students taking these courses are not all preparing to work with Congregational Christian Churches, educational and worship materials developed by our denominational Christian Education Division and our Pilgrim Press are carefully examined.

In Elon's department of Christian Education the pages of our Bible become alive. Many young people who come to us do not know where Palestine is or who Paul was. Despite Sunday school experience or church membership, many of them do not know Christ or his purpose. The instructors find a great satisfaction in seeing the students putting aside their childish ways and growing unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.

Some of our students become members of the church for the first time while at Elon. Others discover the joy of Christian service and while here dedicate their lives to full-time Christian activity. Some come not knowing what they believe, if anything, and go out to preach the gospel. Elon is definitely a church college.

ELON COLLEGE—AN APPRECIATION.

By DR. MARTIN L. GOSLIN,
First Congregational Church,
Evanston, Illinois.

Having been educated myself in a church school I know something of the deep and abiding values of the spiritual nurture that can accompany the academic training in such institutions. I hold this in contrast in my own experience with a number of years spent in state and secular colleges and universities. I know what Elon College can and does mean to its students and the enriching of their spirits. I have never seen a more devoted group of alumni, men and women who truly look to their Elon days as that part of their life which laid the foundations of their Christian living! What a lasting and far-reaching influence this school has had on the churches, the schools, the citizens of the Southeast! I am sorry that I myself could not have had this radiant and friendly Christian educational advantage in my own years of training. My warmest regards and highest admiration belong to this fine college, its administration, and its faculty!

ELON COLLEGE OFFERS CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By LUTHER N. BYRD,
(Elon College News Bureau.)

Elon College, now in its sixtieth year of service under the auspices of the Congregational Christian Church, offers to the youth of the Southland and the entire nation an opportunity for a college education under conditions and surroundings designed to exert a Christian influence.

Founded in 1889 and operated since that time under the sponsorship of the Southern Convention of the Congregational Christian Church, the college has long been recognized as one of the better small colleges in the South, and present prospects point to ever-increasing service to the church and public.

The college is located in the heart of Piedmont North Carolina, seventeen miles east of Greensboro, and four miles west of Burlington, and draws the great majority of its student body from North Carolina and Virginia, although virtually every section of the United States is represented in its student registration lists.

The spacious Elon campus, rendered beautiful by the natural splendor of its native oak and hickory, is enhanced in appearance by carefully placed shrubbery and by the massive brick walls which gird its boundaries. Away from the roar of city of life, its very atmosphere of quietude contributes to habits of study and the development of better manhood and womanhood.

Hit hard by a disastrous fire, which destroyed much of its plant in 1923, the college was rebuilt with modern, fire-proof buildings, the five structures in the central unit being connected by arched colonnades that lend a cloistered air of charm.

That same fire in 1923 resulted in financial difficulties, which threatened disaster during the depression years, but Dr. Leon E. Smith, long an outstanding Congregational Christian minister, was called to the helm as president in 1931 and in the succeeding nineteen years has piloted the institution from its maze of debt to a solid financial foundation today.

President Smith cleared the college by 1943 of its huge debt, which totalled more than three-quarters of a million dollars at the time of his inauguration. At the same time and during the succeeding years, he has taken the lead in increasing the endowment by $146,000 and so directed the fiscal policies that the institution today has sound investments, over and above endowment and plant, that total $165,000.

The college is now in the midst of a ten-year expansion program, designed to raise $2,000,000 for buildings, campus improvements and endowment, and the total has passed the $600,000 mark, with six years yet to go on the campaign. Latest step in this improvement program was the construction of a magnificent new gymnasium and physical education plant at a cost of $240,000.

The faculty of Elon College this year boasts forty-two members, all PLANING A CHURCH IN A PAGAN CITY.

(TEMPERANCE.)

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 26, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: You are not your own; you are bought with a price; so glorify God in your body.
—I Corinthians 6:19-20.

LESSON: Acts 18:1, 8-11; II Corinthians 6:14-18; 7-1.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Chronicles 16:23-29.

Of All Places, Corinth!!!!

"After these things he departed from Athens, and came to Corinth." If Paul had not had unbounded faith in the power of the gospel of Christ, and unlimited love for Christ, he never would have gone to Corinth to preach the gospel. For Corinth was a city of wealth and worldliness and wickedness—a center of paganism. In those days the word "Corinthian" was a synonym for immorality and everything shameful. Paul knew this, too. He knew that Corinth was rocky soil in which to plant the seeds of the gospel. And he confesses later in a letter which he wrote to his friends in Corinth that when he came to them, he came "in fear, and in much trembling" (I Cor. 2:3). But he came nevertheless. He knew that the gospel was the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

The Seed Takes Root.

Like a good sower, Paul began to sow the seed—casting it out and letting it fall where it would. He did not try to speak with excellency of speech or with the wisdom of the world. He determined simply to preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified. He did not speak with enticing words of man's wisdom, for he did not want men's faith to stand on that, but upon the power of God. But because he did speak in simple words about Christ and Him crucified his words were with demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Some of the seed fell on good ground. And it took root, sprang up, and grew. That seems strange in a way—the gospel taking root in wealthy, wicked, worldly Corinth. But it is not so strange after all. The stark paganism of Corinth had of itself created a hunger for the things of the spirit. Men cannot long be satisfied with mere pleasure, and especially sensual pleasure. And as Paul preached the love of God made known in Jesus Christ through His death on the Cross, God opened the hearts of a man or woman here and there, and the Church was born in Corinth. "And many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized." One of them was Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, but most of them were humble people, many of them from the lower walks of life. As Paul himself later wrote, not many noble, not many mighty were called in Corinth.

A Word of Encouragement.

The going was not always easy in Corinth. It is not easy for the gospel to make an impression in a big, wicked city like Corinth than was. And Paul might well have become discouraged. Perhaps he did get down in the dumps. In any event, the Lord appeared unto him in a vision by night and gave him words suitable for his need. "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to harm thee; for I have much people in this city." What a lift it must have given the apostle to know that God had not deserted him. And to learn that God had much people in that wicked city of Corinth. Paul did not know about many of these people. But the Lord knows those who are His own. God has many people in all of our great cities.

A Word of Warning.

"Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord." Jesus Himself said that His followers were not to be taken out of the world. But He did make it clear that His followers had to have the world taken out of them. They were to be in the world but not of the world. They were to keep themselves unspotted by the world. There can be no fellowship between the works of darkness and the followers of Christ. Christian living demands purity of life. There are too many professing Christians whose lives deny their profession. When a person joins the church it ought to make a difference in his way of living.

Perfecting Holiness in the Fear Of God.

The Christian life is a process, not an accomplished fact. We are to grow in grace and in a knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. We are called to be holy but it is a matter of perfecting holiness, and perfecting holiness in the fear of God. Beware of those folks who claim perfection! But thank God for those who go from strength to strength, whose desire is to perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord.

Good Folks in Bad Places.

Yes, Corinth was a wealthy, wicked, worldly city. It was a den of iniquity and a center of immorality. It was a bad, bad place. But there were good folks there. Even as a lily grows out of the muck and mire so did there grow and bloom even in the evil environment of Corinth, the flowers of radiant Christian lives. Folks can be good no matter where they live. But they can do it only as they are saved and kept by the power of God. "He that is in us is greater than he that is in the world." "To as many as receive Him, to them gives He power to become the sons of God."

with a background of training and experience which guarantees the best in instruction in all branches of the broad curriculum, which leads to the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science. In working for these degrees, Elon students are offered a wide range of choice in selecting their fields of major study, with ten separate and distinct departments to guide their efforts.

The enrollment for the fall quarter of 1949-50 term included 739 regular students and 100 special students. There were also more than fifty enrolled in a series of night classes under the Adult Education program of the college.

Elon offers these students, in addition to their regular courses, the opportunity to participate in varied extra-curricular activities, including varsity and intramural athletics, student government, dramatics, college journalism, public speaking and clubs that cater to diverse interests, all activities being under the supervision of qualified faculty advisers.

With such an opportunity for study, and with Elon College offering a liberal program of student aid through scholarships, part-time work and student loan funds, there is no reason why ambitious young people in the area of the Southern Convention should fail to secure a college education.

Elon College Plans for the Future

By DR. L. E. SMITH, President

The growth of Elon College has been interesting and stimulating. In a little more than a half-century it has grown to be an outstanding institution of higher learning and one of the more influential four-year colleges in the South. It is a liberal arts college with emphasis on Christian education. Its student body, co-educational, exceeds eight hundred. It has a splendid faculty of forty-two members with acceptable training and experience. It offers an inclusive curriculum sufficient to satisfy the needs and meet the demands of a student body desirous of extensive preparation in various fields preparing for leading business undertakings and professional positions.

For the past fifteen years, the college has been able to meet current financial demands, make substantial additions to its equipment, and add modest amounts to endowment. Its needs for additional buildings, equipment and endowment are immediate and pressing. To meet these needs the college, together with the Board of Trustees, alumni, church and friends, is conducting a campaign to secure two million dollars. The campaign has been in progress for about four years. Approximately $600,000.00 has been secured. The campaign will continue until the goal set is reached and our dreams for the college are realized.

Christianity and Democracy in China

"The present hope for China lies in the fact that the Chinese Communist movement is not a foreign invasion forced on the Chinese people but a native movement. It is partly the Chinese revolutionary desire for a better life. Its present program is revolutionary rather than Communistic," said Dr. Roderick Scott, Congregational Christian missionary educator just back from Foochow, China, speaking at the American Board of Foreign Missions panel in Cleveland, Ohio, as part of the Midwinter meeting of the Congregational Christian Missions Council.

"This program has two main aims, both dear to all Chinese hearts," continued Dr. Scott, "namely, to reform the condition of the farmer's life by giving him ownership of his land, and to establish China's equality with western nations. The first would wipe away feudalism; the second would destroy imperialism. Because the new government promises these reforms and, also, because it brings peace after twelve years of war, the Chinese masses, not themselves Communists, feel hopeful.

If in the future the Chinese Communists should change their present policy and set out to communize the Chinese, there would still be hope because of the difficulties in the way. These obstacles are so great as to force the Chinese Communists to alter the party line a great deal. Among these difficulties are (1) the temper of the Chinese people. The Chinese cannot be pushed around. They are a middle-of-the-road, reasonable people who will not respond to propaganda or regimentation. There will be (2) great difficulty in bringing the Chinese and the Russian people together and, at the time, in breaking the friendship between the Chinese and the Americans. There will be other difficulties, also.

"Hence, from the political standpoint the American government should recognize the new regime in China in due course so as to keep the majority of the people inside the western world where they can be influenced for democracy. From the religious standpoint, the American churches should continue to support their missions in China as Christianity is now and may in the future be an important factor in China in resisting Communism."

News Flashes

Dr. John G. Truitt has been asked to read and comment on selections from his book of poems Across the Years by several civic and woman's clubs recently.

Rev. John Harvey Sunburn was ordained to the Christian ministry on Sunday, February 19, at 3:00 p. m., at the Third Congregational Church in Waterbury, Connecticut. Mr. Sunburn, known to many as Jack, was formerly pastor of Salem Chapel and Belew Creek Churches, near Winston-Salem.

FIRE! FIRE!

There has been widespread interest in the fire which broke out in the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines on Monday afternoon, February 13. The original church, which had been used for Sunday school, was severely damaged. Fire departments from Southern Pines, Aberdeen and Pinehurst brought the flames under control just in time to save the new church sanctuary. The entire church was filled with heavy smoke and no part escaped the smell of fire. Devoted members stood vigil through the night to protect the building and prevent recurring flames. Many faithful hands assisted in scrubbing and cleaning the sanctuary for the Sunday service of worship. The Sunday school met in the high school. A building committee has been appointed to study the needs and resources of the church and bring recommendations to the trustees. The members are grateful that their sanctuary was spared and that the church was adequately covered by insurance.

LECTURE AT DUKE.

An interesting and well attended lecture at Duke University under the auspices of the Duke Divinity School Library Lectures, was given by the Rev. Dr. John C. Trever, Director of the Department of the English Bible, The International Council on Religious Education.

Dr. Trever's subject was "From Ancient Scroll to Modern Bible." The lecture will be in conjunction with the exhibition of three Hebrew scrolls lent by His Eminence, Mar Athanasius Yeshue Samuel, Metropolitan and Archbishop of Jerusalem and Trans-Jordan.

The lecture was given in Page Auditorium on the evening of February 16, at 8:15 o'clock.

The scrolls exhibited comprised three of the ancient manuscripts whose discovery has caused a sensation in the archaeological world for the light which they are expected to throw on Biblical studies. The scrolls shown were the Book of Isaiah, the Habakkuk Commentary and the so-called "Sectarian Document," all dating from the pre-Christian era.

EVANGELISTIC INSTITUTES IN THE N. C. & VA. CONFERENCE.

The "Flying Squadron" is flying this week in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Leading the Squadron is Rev. Thurman Bowers, pastor of Calvary Church in Greensboro and Happy Home Church, near Reidsville. Ably assisting Mr. Bowers were Kenneth Register, James Allan, and Lawrence Leonard of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Every church in the Conference is asked to have representatives at these meetings. In order to contact every church, the Flying Squadron made a trip to Asheville on Tuesday night, February 14, following the meeting in Winston-Salem. Arriving in Asheville late at night, the Squadron rested until a meeting of representatives of the Asheville and Tryon Churches on Wednesday morning.

Wednesday night, February 15, saw the Squadron back in Greensboro at the Calvary Church and on Thursday night at the Shallow Ford Church and concluding their trip on Friday night at the Union Ridge Church.

Outstanding in this period of Evangelism Institutes was the Inspirational and Dedication service held at Elon College on Monday, February 13, with Rev. Lawrence Leonard speaking and Dr. J. G. Truitt conducting the Dedication Service.

REPORT FROM CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

On February 15 we completed three months of service at the Christian Temple in Norfolk, Virginia. These have been both interesting and inspiring. We are deeply grateful to the fine people of this church for a beautiful and useful building in which to worship and work, and to Dr. L. E. Smith for his vision, faith and years of hard work which made the Temple a great church. We are also thankful for the ministry of Dr. H. S. Hard-castle and Rev. Peter Young which helped the church to continue to grow in spirit and vision. We have a great heritage at the Temple, for which we are most grateful.

During these three months we have been more than pleased with the presence each Sunday morning of a large and growing congregation and a Sunday school attendance which averages about 322. Two weeks ago, Sunday, February 5, we were all thrilled as fourteen men and women came to the altar and were welcomed into the membership of our church. These added to those received at Christmas make a total of 20 men and women who have joined this church since we came here in November. We expect to receive at least 75 more by Easter.

The people have been most kind to Mrs. Stevens and me. At Christmas the church presented up with a $100 bill, in addition to many individual expressions of love. These are fine Christian people and we like them. We extend to our people in the Convention a very cordial invitation to visit the Temple when they are in Norfolk.

A NEW NASH.

Our family would like to tell SUN readers of an experience which came to us a few days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Nelson, members of the Winchester Church, took our 1948 Ambassador Nash and gave us in exchange for it a new car, another Ambassador Nash, streamlined with power to go. For this substantial expression of loyalty and love for this pastor and his family and for the cause of Christ we are most grateful. We shall endeavor to keep in mind as we seek to serve, that these devoted friends will have part in such service.

We congratulate our beloved brother Pastor House and his family on their good fortune of a similar nature. Surely such tokens of appreciation of service rendered is evidence of loyalty to the Church of Christ by all those who have helped lighten the work of busy pastors.

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

THE RECORD OF THE CHURCHES OF THE SOUTHERN CONVEN- TION FOR 1949.

The Annual and Yearbook materials for the churches of the Southern Convention have been assembled for 1949, and they are now in the hands of the printers. The statistics reveal some facts which may be cause both for encouragement and concern; encouragement particularly in local and benevolent finances and in physical improvements; concern in our record is evangelism, church extension and Sunday school enrollment.

In local finances the churches of the five conferences raised $658,389 as compared with $680,264 a year ago (with several churches not reporting). For missions, Convention enterprises and miscellaneous benevolences a total of $152,754 was raised as compared with $136,226 a year ago. On Convention apportionment in 1949 our churches paid $82,188 on a total goal of $85,041 as against $72,875 a year ago. The total apportionment paid for Convention and Conference causes was $85,753 as compared with $78,781 in 1948. In addition to these figures the Woman's Missionary Convention contributed $13,508 to Home and Foreign Missions on their goal of $15,000, and they gave $3,202 for Relief and Reconstruction on a total of $6,005 raised for this cause by the whole Convention.

For church building repairs and on indebtedness 116 of the 195 churches reported a total of $264,483 spent. Included in this figure are new parsonages at Sunbury (E. Va.), Seagrove, Sophia Pleasant Ridge (W. N. C.), Belew Creek and Salem Chapel (N. C. & Va.); new buildings at Wake Chapel (E. N. C.), Danville, New Lebanon and Tryon (N. C. Va.), and possibly others. The value of church property increased from $3,390,750 in 1948 to $4,301,182—properly added to these physical assets of the Convention might well be included Elon College's plant valued at more than $2,000,000, and the Christian Orphanage of near a quarter of a million dollars. Twenty-four churches reported a total indebtedness of $108,412.

The amount reported paid for pastoral services was $197,066, a gain of approximately $17,000 over 1948. The average salary for full-time pastoral service is now approximately $2,500 per year, but in this average it should be borne in mind that a large number of our full-time pastors receive between $1,800 and $2,200, including missionary aid. There are 97 pastoral units and there are but 69 parsonages in the Convention.

The financial figures seem to indicate better physical plants, more adequate salaries, and a substantial increase in gifts for others.

We are becoming more "respectable" in many respects, but our record of new members received does not show a spiritual concern and vigor which we ought to possess.

In 1949 our churches with 34,278 members to start with received but 1,600 new members during the whole year (767 on Confession of Faith). We lost 1,153 by death and removal, giving the Convention a net gain of only 447, making our total membership 34,725 at the beginning of the 1949-50 conference year.

On Confession of Faith during the past year 120 churches received but 767 members, 57 churches received none and 18 churches made no report. In total membership 90 churches reported gains over the previous year, 68 reported losses, 17 church remained the same and 20 made no report.

It takes a minimum number of members to maintain a church adequately. The size of our churches raises some serious questions. The 1949 statistics show that we have 27 churches with memberships under 50;

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE TASK OF THE GENERAL COUNCIL'S NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The major work of the Nominating Committee is accomplished during the Mid-Winter Meeting preceding the General Council. The writer served on the Committee which met in Cleveland, February 11-14, preparing for the General Council elections at the Cleveland meeting in June. Our readers should be interested in the personnel and procedure of this committee, for it is an important clue to the understanding of our denominational machinery.

The persons designated in the By-Laws of the General Council to nominate the Nominating Committee are: the moderator, assistant moderators, the president of the superintendent's conference and the chairman of the women state presidents. This group must submit its nominations to the Council for approval. Six of the twelve members of the Committee are to be named each biennium. They are chosen with reference to the six who are holding over for another two years, so that the entire twelve shall be representative of (a) the entire country, (b) ministry and laity, (c) different ages, and (d) especially of those persons who have the widest possible acquaintance in the denomination.

The Chairman of the Nominating Committee during this biennium is Marlowe Anderson, the wife of Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, who serves in the United Church of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Other members of the committee are: Rev. M. Russell Boynton (Mass.), Rev. Wm. J. Faulkner (Tenn.), Rev. R. L. House (N. C.), Mr. Frank H. Korab (Kans.), Rev. Harold N. Skidmore (Mich.), Mrs. Claude C. Kennedy (Minn.), Mrs. G. W. Nethercutt (Ill.), Rev. N. M. Guptill (Me.), Pres. James F. Findlay (Mo.), Mr. Veo F. Small (Wash.), Rev. Paul W. Yinger (Calif.).

What, someone may ask, were the positions to be filled? They were six members on the Executive Committee of the General Council, five members on the Corporation for the General Council, seven members for the Committee on Credentials, six members on the Council of Social Action, eight members for the Commission on Interchurch Relations and Christian Unity; eight members, the Department of Ministry; fourteen members and alternates, The Federal Council of Churches; three members and alternates, the World Council; seven members, the International Congregational Council.

In seeking a truly representative personnel, the committee solicited suggestions as to men and women available and qualified for positions of denominational leadership. The committee began its work with this valuable data: a geographical list of present officers, commissions and committees; a list of vacancies to be filled, together with the holdovers from the previous biennium; a survey covering the past eight years indicating those of our fellowship who have served on important boards and committees, suggestions from state superintendents and other officials giving sufficient information named to enable the committee to determine his fitness for a given position.

Certain guiding principles are observed rigidly by the Nominating Committee: geographical distribution, regional representation, reasonable distribution between laity and between men and women, rotation to avoid duplication.

For our guidance the distribution of our total membership was studied and chartered by districts. The percentage of membership nationally is: New England, 397,679, or 33.6 per cent; East, 121,345, or 10.2 per cent; South, 70,170, or 5.9 per cent; Middle West, 294,679, or 24.9 per cent; West, 180,054, or 15.2 per cent; Pacific, 103,047, or 8.7 per cent. The percentage basis of representation was followed carefully in making nominations.

Is the South represented fairly and adequately on national boards? The answer may be inferred by glancing at the list of those from the Southern Convention who have served on national boards since 1942; J. H. Dollar, H. S. Hardcastle, S. C. Harrell, R. C. Helfenstein, F. C. Lester, J. H. Lightbourne, W. T. Scott, H. S. Smith, L. E. Smith, J. G. Truitt, Mrs. John G. Truitt and Mrs. W. E. Wisseman.

In order that the Council may have an opportunity to consider the slate submitted by the committee in this highly important nominating work, the list is submitted at least one day before it is voted on by the Council.

Dr. Raymond Walker has written this concerning the philosophy of a Nominating Committee: "In reality, the Nominating Committee is a process of democracy, although the superficial observer might say that the great power given to it is an abrogation of democracy. The alternative to such a committee would be nominations from the floor, or by self-appointed individuals or groups. Chance and carelessness, and perhaps self-seeking, would largely enter in. The theory behind the Nominating Committee is that having been chosen respectively, it can better look over the whole field of possibilities, and with deliberation and intelligence select those best qualified to serve as officers and on committees of the Council. In the give and take of a small group it ought better to express the sober judgment of the Council than that large body can discover and express such judgment for itself."

The most precious thing anyone—man or store, anybody or anything—can have is the goodwill of others. It is something as fragile as an orchid. And as beautiful! As precious as a gold nugget—and as hard to find. As powerful as a great turbine—and as hard to build. As wonderful as youth—and as hard to keep.

—Amos Parrish.

"HE THAT BELIEVETH."

A Sermon

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
F. Ph. S. (English).

The race is producing many weaklings. Comparatively few men and women are rising to the peace and power of the greater manhood and womanhood. One of the principal reasons for this human mediocrity is the persistent refusal to interpret religious beliefs in the light of new knowledge. People no longer have confidence in many of the old interpretations of religion. The ships of thought have drifted far from the anchorage into the fogs of doubt. We are too lazy to analyze religion or to search knowledge for the sake of discovering truth. We are afraid to walk right up to the mirror and examine what is to be seen there. Our convictions are undetermined. We have not the will to believe.

Life, to the majority of humans, is merely a pulse and thrill, sense and blood. Men and women never will attain the life of wholeness if it shall not be possible to make them realize their duty to develop, each one, his or her potential power. Men and women must be stirred to see that vision of power, to live up to the best which was shown in Jesus Christ. It will help us if we look backwards towards human beginning and if we look forward to its actual or possible achievement and we must remember that every successful human life may have one, probably more than one, birth, death and resurrection if it is to enjoy the life of the ages.

The human has become worthy of survival because of three factors, his fitness in his earthly environment, his superior capacity for progress, and his mastery of nature. These characteristics have proved the superiority of man to all other forms of life known to this world. He has evolved survival values as it were. He has become adapted to receive "life more abundantly."

The Creator glorified the dust of the ground by making from it a tent in which life might dwell. God put upon the animal the crown of humanity. He made a kind of life visible to itself which surpasses all other kinds known on earth. It is apparent that there is a vast difference between the most cultured monkey, if we may rightly use such a term, and the lowest human, although some men seem exceedingly eager to press their claim of direct relationship. How much more the difference between the cleverest ape and the most truly cultured man! How wide is the gulf between the one and the other! What measure may we use to help us to know the difference?

The measure has already been set before us. Human fitness, progress, and mastery—these are the inherent traits which have put man above all of the works of God's hand in this world. Can it be supposed that God's creative work reached its zenith when He made the human? It cannot be doubted that man has advanced from the lower plane to what he was and is. May he not again rise by God's grace and power from what he is to something still higher? Man has sought earnestly for demonstrable proof of life's becoming human. Proof is not yet forthcoming. The birth register of the human is one of the secret things which belongs to the Most High. But that upward movement did take place. Man has the capacity for further progress and it seems evident that the next step in his development is when he becomes immortal, when he enters into the everlasting life.

When a man is born a new creature in Jesus Christ, does not the development of immortality begin right there? The ancients hoped and sought—often vainly—for immortality. Some of the wisest insisted that man is inherently immortal. The Holy Scriptures reveal a vague consciousness of immortality on the part of some of its characters but in their conception of immortality the life to be was not equal to the life which is. Personality was shadowy and lost its powers of determination; it possessed existence and activity but had no power. It may be that there is an immortality of that kind but surely it is less to be desired than the life we are now living.

The ideas of immortality prevalent among the Hebrews were not unique but common among many peoples. Indeed, some foretokens of the life beyond have never been absent from human thought. Man, too, has always believed in some sort of God. Immortal, however, as generally conceived, was not a rising but a falling, not an expansion, a development, a glorification, an existence truly, but an uncertainty. Too, there were multitudes of men and women who had only a yearning for continued life but not definite hope of it.

The Peripatetics rejected immortality. The Stoics usually admitted the soul survived until the conflagration. Some like Panaetius denied even this. The Epicureans were apostles of annihilation. Lucretius, another Omar Khayyam, contemplates blank nothingness and extinction of all desire. Many of the Roman thinkers concurred without contradiction in denying all moral nexus between this life and the next. Catullus, the Shelly of antiquity, anticipates one perpetual night closing down on his love for Lesbia and on sadder occasion by his brother's grave takes an everlasting hopeless farewell. Pliny maintained that death is an unbroken sleep from which there is no awakening, the desire for immortality arising entirely from human vanity.

Many of the ancient funeral inscriptions are for the most part hopeless. They represent largely the scenes of this life and of past happiness. They are not concerned with the future. Some of them are frivolous and even immoral. "I was not, I became." "I am not, I care not." "While I lived I drank as I pleased; you who live, drink." "Baths, wine, indulgence corrupt our bodies but they constitute life." "Eat, drink, enjoy yourself, then join us." "What I have eaten and drunk, that I take with me; what I have left behind I have forfeited." "While I lived I lived well, now my little play is ended, soon yours shall be, goodbye and applaud."

The poems of Greek anthology, especially the later ones, are with a ray of hope. Death brings the peace of nothingness and takes us from the ills of life. The burden of these pieces is "vanity of vanities, all is vanity." As death may snatch us away at any moment, let us then quaff the cup of pleasure now. The only regret at the end is that of having lost any opportunity; for the rest, all is laughter, all is dust, all is nothing. All life is a stage and a game. Learn to play it without seriousness or bear the consequences—that is the despondent and disheartening record which one reads and yet in those very expressions one finds indicated the longing for something more and better.

LAYMEN AT WORK

MEN HEAR OF CHURCH WORK.

Some 75 men from Martinsburg, W. Va., Kearneysville, Shepherds-town, Winchester and Woodstock, Va., heard the Rev. Kenneth Kohler, executive secretary of the Evangelical and Reformed Brotherhood, tell of the work which men have done for their congregations and of opportunities open for support of the church in a practical manner.

He was the only speaker at a gathering of the men at Big Springs dining room south of the city, coming to Martinsburg on January 18 from Philadelphia just for the meeting which followed a country-ham dinner served by the management.

Introduced by the Rev. Dr. A. M. Gluck, pastor of Christ Reformed Church, whose brotherhood and Men's Bible Class sponsored the inter-sectional gathering, he gave specific instances in congregations where valuable and extensive work had been done by the men. These included instances of where recreational facilities had been provided, money for missions had been raised, where laymen had aggressively taken the lead in wide projects, and how active laymanship had brought the spiritual phases of the work into the realm where laymen regard their practical experience as most valuable.

The speaker has been acting as associate secretary of the brotherhood in the East with Philadelphia offices. On the following Tuesday he and his family started by motor for St. Louis where he became general secretary for the denomination, with headquarters there.

He is a graduate of the theological seminary at Franklin and Marshall, is a native of Baltimore, has done missionary work in China, and held pastorates before going to the brotherhood executive work. He said he had visited this Valley previously.

on February 5, with a recognition service for all school students. A number of young people were present from every grade from the first through the twelfth, together with one college student. The young people of the church participated in the service by furnishing special music, reading the scriptures, leading the responsive written in the special bulletins furnished by the college, one young person led the morning prayer, and the Young People's class was the choir for the morning service. One young lady, Miss Betty Sue Baker, was received into the church and received the sacrament of baptism.

The young people of Union Grove are planning a Week-end Youth Revival for February 17-19. Services will be held each night at 7:00 with Max Vestal, of Elon College, doing the preaching. The Cheerful Four quartette will give special music each night. All are invited to come.

The Spoon's Chapel Church observed College Day on February 5, at the night service—7:30. Young people furnished special music, led the responsive as contained in the special Elon Bulletin, led the evening prayer, and participated in the recognition service for all school students. The college was presented as our own school to pray for, love and support. The pastor suggested that when we were tempted to criticize the college, at that time would be a good moment to pray for the administration, faculty and students. A genuine appreciation of Dr. L. E. Smith and all who help him to make our college all she is together with a resolution that all of us will support Elon is in order.

Pleasant Ridge will observe College Day on February 12 at 11:00. Young people will furnish special music, read the scripture lesson, lead the responsive as contained in the Elon Bulletin, lead the morning prayer, and be the choir for the service. Miss Patsy Brown and Mr. Tommy Shoemaker have been working with the young people as leaders for this service.

The Pleasant Ridge young people will sponsor a Week-end Youth Revival March 24-26. Max Vestal of Elon College, will do the preaching and the Cheerful Four quartette will give special music each night.

A number of our young people attended the Youth Rally at Seagrove recently and had a wonderful time of fellowship.

Several of our men from Union Grove and Pleasant Ridge attended the Laymen's Rally at Elon and were much impressed and encouraged by the large number of men present and the apparent interest of the men in the work of the Southern Convention. Mr. Sybrant Pell of Pleasant Ridge was elected as secretary-treasurer of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention.

Sincerely yours,

CLYDE L. FIELDS,
Pastor.

A GLOBAL MARSHALL PLAN.

Rt. Rev. William Scarlett, St. Louis, chairman of the department of international justice and goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, commended Senator Brian McMahon's proposal for a global Marshall plan as a "bold, imaginative and constructive approach to the problem of delivering the peoples from the nightmare of the atomic warfare." "I am sure," he added, "the people of our churches will respond warmly to the spirit and purpose of your proposals."

The text of Bishop Scarlett's personal message on February 3 to Senator McMahon was made public at the office of the Federal Council in New York. The Executive Committee, which alone speaks for the Federal Council on matters of policy, does not meet again until next month.

The text of Bishop Scarlett's telegram to the Senator follows:

"I heartily commend the statesmanlike emphasis in your address of yesterday on the grave issues raised by the prospect of the hydrogen bomb. The address portrays correctly the tragic consequences of unchecked international rivalry in weapons of mass destruction. Your proposal for a global Marshall Plan, including international control of atomic energy is a bold imaginative and constructive approach to the problem of delivering the peoples from the nightmare world of atomic warfare. To harness the creative energies of men and the God-given energies of nature in the struggle against poverty, ignorance, disease and despair, offers our best hope of fellowship, the one sure preventive of war.

"There can be no escape from our present great peril unless our people and the other peoples are willing to think and dare greatly in behalf of a positive program for peace. I am sure that the people of our churches will respond warmly to the spirit and purpose of your proposals."

It takes a highly intellectual individual to enjoy leisure. . . . Most of us had better count on working. What a man really wants is creative challenge with sufficient skills to bring him within reach of success so that he may have the expanding joy of achievement. . . . Few people overwork; plenty overeat, overdrink, overworry. . . . The basis of mental health for the average adult is more work, provided the work is not mere drudgery.—Dr. Jay B. Nash,

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE AND WORLD PEACE.

People have grown weary of war—whether it be a “Cold War” or a “Hot War.” During the last thirty-six years the whole world has either been at war or preparing for war. During these years we have fought two world wars with devastating effects to all. Men, women and children have been slain, not only by the thousands but by the millions. Millions of others have been maimed for life. The rest of us who have not suffered bodily harm are burdened, almost unbearably so under the compulsion to repair damages and pay for the sustenance and comfort of war casualties and their dependents.

In addition to human casualties the economic values of the world have been damaged almost beyond repair. Cities, towns, and communities have been literally destroyed. The United States has not suffered the effect of war within our own borders other than the sending of men and materials to fight in other countries. Our country is referred to as the greatest and the richest nation on earth. In many ways our claim to be the greatest nation on earth might be sustained but to say that it is the richest nation on earth could not be sustained even by the most eloquent. True, America does have enormous and valuable resources but there are other nations that are richer by far in natural resources than is the United States. The difference is that the natural resources of our country have been developed to a far greater degree than have those of other great nations. Whenever the human resources of a country are more highly developed it necessarily follows that material resources would likewise be more highly developed. If the human resources of China, Asia, and Russia are developed the natural resources of these nations will be correspondingly developed.

As the nations of the world compete in their upward strides toward more intelligent and complete development of their total resources, it would be well to take stock and see where we are going. Since the development of natural and material resources depends on the development of human resources, it is highly important to see that human resources are developed along proper lines and in dependable spheres. It is still true that a man's acts are determined by his thoughts, that his thoughts are determined by his training and the information in hand. Education is the key to the development of human resources. If the fruits of a man's life are to be profitable to civilization, his education, his training must lay the foundation for that contribution. If his education is materialistic, pagan and selfish, the fruits of his life will be in keeping. It is not enough to say that the young people of our day are educated, trained in the arts and sciences, but it is our responsibility to see that their education is Christian, and this does not mean that the content of education is to consist only of theology and the aspects of religion, as important as these may be, but to see that the whole content of education is saturated with the spirit of Christianity, that strives for the redemption and the regeneration of man that society of which he is a part may be altruistic and benevolent.

The world will never be free of war and its horrors as a result of war. War has never settled anything. We thought that the allies won in both World Wars I and II. From this day, if we look backward or forward we are convinced that we did not win either. The war will never be fought that will end wars. The only way to end war is by the mighty sword of education—Christian education. If this weary world of ours is ever to find peace, lasting peace—peace that will bless the hearts of men, it will find it in education—Christian education. This is our hope and our responsibility. May God forbid that we the Christian citizens of the United States shall suffer our church colleges, Christian institutions, to perish for the lack of financial support.

THE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION OF ELON COLLEGE.

By WARREN JOHNSON,

Ministerial Student, Elon College.

The Ministerial Association here at Elon College is comprised of those male and female members of the student body who intend to enter the Christian ministry, religious education, social service, or medical missions. At the present time the Ministerial Association is comprised of twenty-four young people who plan to devote their lives to full-time Christian service. The Association has at this time as its faculty adviser, Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds, chairman of the Department of Religion and Philosophy at Elon College.

The group meets regularly every Monday night for a period of discussion, worship and fellowship.

Since the beginning of the school year in September, a committee has been at work planning for the setting-up of what we have termed “Caravans.” These “Caravans” are each composed of four or five ministerial students. It is their job to visit the various churches of our denomination and help their young people to become better organized so that they might be enabled to make a definite contribution and be an asset to their church and community.

The young people of the various churches are given suggestions as to how they can aid in their local churches' work. The possibility of organizing a young people's choir, or joining the senior choir if one is functioning, is one of the many ways young people can contribute to their local church.

Suggestions are made regarding the preparation of programs for the youth meetings, and topics and materials for discussion are offered.

Last spring, one of the “Caravans” from the Ministerial Association visited a fine group of young people in our church at Southern Pines, N. C. It is hoped that this spring the Ministerial Association will again be able to carry on its “Caravan” work.

On February 5 of this year, which was designated as College Sunday for our denomination, a number of students from the Ministerial Association assisted in telling the congregations of some of our churches about the work of our future leaders of church, community and state.

The Ministerial Association of Elon College is not only a source of help and practical experience for its members but it acts as a service to our local churches as well.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The churches of the Southern Convention should count it a privilege to support its college—Elon College. We should refresh our minds of the vision, the efforts and sacrifices of the members of churches of other days.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

LOCAL NEWS.

Our Women Observe the World Day of Prayer.

Here are some of the ways in which local women's groups in the Convention are observing the World Day of Prayer:

At Union Ridge, a joint service is being held, with Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregational Christians participating. Rev. Tucker G. Humphries will be the featured speaker at the service which begins at 7:30. Mrs. Kenneth Register is chairman of arrangements.

* * *

Elon College is planning a formal service at 10:30 a. m., with a special speaker on "Prayer." Students, community and all are invited. Organ music will be played from 2:00-5:00 in the afternoon and chimes will ring on the hour. The auditorium will be open all day for prayer.

* * *

The Greensboro Council of Church Women is planning a service from 10:30-12:30, with Dr. Hornell Hart of Duke as special speaker. The printed service will be used and Dr. Hart will speak following that. This is, as usual, an interdenominational and interracial service, and all nearby churches in and out of town are invited. It will be held at the First Presbyterian Church. Mrs. M. T. Garren is president of the Greensboro Council of Church Women.

* * *

Winston-Salem will have a service from 11:00 to 12:00 a. m. at the First Christian Church. Chimes and bells in various neighborhood sections of the city will ring. The printed service will be used, and music will be furnished by Winston-Salem Teachers' College. This service will be interracial and interdenominational, and is sponsored by the Council of Church Women. A service has been mailed to each of the city schools, with a letter suggesting its use on World Day of Prayer. Mrs. W. J. Andes is President of the Winston-Salem Council of Church Women.

* * *

Hank's Chapel will hold a service on Friday evening of the World Day of Prayer at the church. Mrs. John G. Truitt of Elon College will be guest speaker.

* * *

In Burlington, the service will be observed in cooperation with other churches of the city, and will be at the Lutheran Church.

OTHER LOCAL NEWS.

Durham women held an open meeting is December and the children gave an interesting program on the migrants. It was a "White Gift" service and 107 packages were sent to Florida. The offering amounted to $17.20. This was sent to Miss Allen to be used for migrant work. World Community was also observed and packages and an offering were sent.

MRS. R. J. KERNODLE.

Hank's Chapel women are supporting a full-time missionary couple in China, husband and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Chin Hsien Bao, $15.00 a month. Working through the women, the church now has more CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions than ever. This year we have adopted a boy at the Elon Orphanage to care for.

MRS. TOMMIE FARRELL.

Burlington women have their regular Mite-Box Opening in March. The film, "And Now I See," shown recently to the women at the Auxiliary meeting, made them realize more than ever that each one must have a part in making, not only our own community, but the whole world a place of Christian living. The Mite-Box money goes to missions. We hold a regular monthly Bible Class at the church at 3:30. Certain chapters of the Gospel of John are studied each time under the leadership of one of the local women.

On Monday, March 6, the Auxiliary will meet at the church—Circles meet at 10:30 a. m., General Meeting 11:10, Fellowship, and Luncheon at 12:30. The program for this meeting will be a tableau based on Dr. Frank Laubach's The Silent Billions Speak.

REMEMBER THESE DATES.

Our Spring Rallies will be in the form of Family Life Institutes and only one will be held in each Conference. Please note date and time in each Conference:

Tuesday, March 21—Virginia Valley (Place to be announced).

Thursday, March 23—Eastern Virginia at Oakland Church.

Tuesday, March 28—North Carolina at Elon College Church.

Dr. Paul Reynolds, chairman of Adult Department and Family Life of our National Christian Education Division, will be guest speaker. Dr. Reynolds will also be on hand for a Young Adult Conference to be held in Winston-Salem, March 25-26.

CYPRESS CHAPEL WOMEN MEET.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel met on Sunday night, February 12, with Mrs. Paul Parker at her home on the Wilroy Road. The president, Mrs. J. W. Jones, presided. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Henry Rountree from the sixth Chapter of John. The Society was then favored with a duet by Mrs. Grady Brown and Mrs. Paul Parker. There were 17 members and three guests present.

The Society accepted an invitation from the Bethlehem Church Society to join with them at their church to observe the World Day of Prayer on February 24.

The president read a card of thanks from the Elon Orphanage for a box of clothing and toys for little Bettie Jane Rowland for Christmas.

Mrs. G. C. Mann taught the Bible lesson from the Book of John.

Mrs. Roy Brinkley gave an inspiring program with Mrs. Grady Brown, Mrs. Paul Parker, Mrs. Henry Rountree and Mrs. J. P. Byrd taking part.

The meeting closed with prayer after which the hostess served delicious refreshments. The meeting next month will be with Mrs. G. C. Mann.

REPORTER.

STEWARDSHIP FILM.

The Southern Convention Office has two copies of the splendid 16 mm. sound film, "And Now I See," for use in the churches of this area. It has been very popular and both films have been shown a number of times in the last few months. Would you like to use it in your church? If so, please ask for it several weeks ahead of time by writing to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, North Carolina.

If your church does not have a sound projector you may be able to borrow one from your school or from your county agent or a business concern. This is a great opportunity for all churches who are interested in using good films.

FAMILY WORSHIP.

The Family Worships Together is the second in a series of family books prepared by our Christian Education Division. Some of you used The Family Celebrates Christmas. This one is especially designed for use during the Lenten period and should be in the homes of all of our Sunday school families with children in them. It may be ordered from The Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts, and costs 50c. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman of our Greensboro, First Church, has just taken orders for 18 copies of it there. It is an inexpensive, beautifully printed book along with its fine contents. Order your copy right away.

Do your contemporaries, our modern men and women differ from those of the past on this question of immortality. We ought to ask that, not of our neighbors, but of ourselves. "Do I believe that I shall live? Do I believe that whatever happens I shall be myself; and that no time shall come when I shall not be myself? How shall my life in this present affect my life in that forever? Do education, experience, conduct condition my future? If my life is to continue indefinitely what kind of life is it going to be? Is it going to be bigger and better or poorer and worse? Is it to be a perishing life or a flourishing life? Is the old idea the correct one? Shall I go around like a fluttering flying shadow, fading and falling by and by, or am I just dust and ashes piled up and painted, some whim or fickleness or fantasy of the machinery of things?"

These are all safe and sane questions. What is the use of concerning ourselves about a thousand and one other questions with these unsettled? Why strive, struggle, aspire, achieve? Why have operations, ambitions, ideals? Why be and do as humans if it is all at an end, in ten, twenty, thirty, sixty, ninety years? Why not raven and fatten like any other beast if we are only beasts? Why not, eat, drink, and be merry today if tomorrow we are to be food for worms and that only?

But if man be more than mole, mule, or monkey, if he shall continue to live, how shall he live? Shall we be lesser or greater, weaker or stronger, poorer or richer, when we change? It will help us perhaps if we endeavor to understand the relationship of death to life and the relationship of Christ to death.

Let us consider the relationship of death to life. We shall be greatly assisted if we remember that the human has qualified to live because he has proven his fitness by his superiority, his capacity to make progress, and his power to control. And then we ought to decide if there is any life other than that which puts on the garments of earth. Is there no life save that which manifests itself through material forms?

Now then, what is death and what are its effects on human life—human life, which has qualified and proved itself potentially capable to continue to live? The human body is the vehicle or instrument of flesh or clay or dirt if you please, a mass of cells and that mass of cells is shaped suitable for the revealing of the power and quality of the life which we call human. If that vehicle or instrument of body is wasted or is injured by accident or disease in any way or at any time it hinders the manifestation of life, if one's lungs are impaired by tuberculosis, one's brain by concussion, one's life functions less efficiently. If one takes the teeth out of the saw, one cannot saw.

Life must, to show its power and quality on earth, manifest itself through earth. You can disconnect the machine from the power but the power remains. You have always thought of death as a cessation of life. It is not a cessation, it is a separation. One breaks a lighted electric lamp into a thousand pieces, but one does not destroy the electric current. One's body deteriorates and disintegrates and becomes a million particles of dust blown by the wind hither and thither, one can no longer show oneself as before the body was dispersed, but the self does not deteriorate or disintegrate. One remains oneself.

We have been fooled about the relation of death to life by our hazy convictions, the result of careless thinking. We have been accustomed to think of the body and the life as one and the same and yet we know we can have a body with animal life without human life. We can preserve the body for a thousand years and the physical elements are there but the life and the spirit leave it and are not there. Flesh and spirit are not synonymous. The dissolution of the body is not the end of the human.

The body may undergo a change as the result of decomposition but the elements of it are destroyed. An organization of the material may be altered but it is impossible to reduce it to nothing. No method has been devised for the destruction of matter of any kind; therefore, if it is impossible to destroy matter is it not a rather ridiculous assumption that the spirit or the life of the self may be destroyed? There is no ceasing to be of the stuff which composes the body; likewise, there can be no extinction of personality.

The Bible of the Christian makes this great affirmation, "Christ hath abolished death," "death hath no more dominion over us," and in that sublime passage where Paul states the arguments on this matter he uses illuminative words, "The dead will be raised incorruptible of decay and we shall be changed." However, he qualifies his statement saying that these blessed results benefit only those who believe in Christ. Here we have the suggestion that immortality is surely a universal thing, but there are types of, or kinds, of immortality. Death, the blind fury with the abhorred shears, severs the ties between flesh and spirit and the unbelieving pass into one type of immortality and the believing into another.

He whose life has consciously become cultured in the way of the Spirit becomes a partaker of the Divine Nature, "In most solemn truth I tell you that he who listens to my teaching and believes in Him who sent me has life of the ages and does not come under judgment but has passed over out of death into life." The issue is here stated very clearly to all understanding minds. Just as somewhere in the endless files of time the dust began to be shaped, began to live, and that which began to live became animal and that which had become animal became human, that which had been human by reason of its fitness, ability to progress, or mastery, qualified, because he had developed the powers of self-determination, God has willed to him the opportunity to choose or refuse his type of eternal life.

Christ is the creating and the re-creating spirit of God working in the universe. The dust becomes animate because of His urge, "All things came into being through Him and apart from Him nothing that exists came into being." If we believe in Him, if we have opened the door to Him,—if we house His spirit, we shall walk in His way, the glory shall shine forever in us and through us, and men shall see and know, "He that believeth in me shall never die."

Youth at Work in the Church

W. N. C. YOUTH FELLOWSHIP HOLDS RALLY.

On January 29 the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship held its regular rally at Seagrove Christian Church. It was one of the best that the conference had seen for a long while. Attendance was around 250. The program was well planned and executed under the leadership of Bill Simmons, president of the conference organization. At the point in the program when an offering was to be taken for the work camper fund, Bill challenged the group. He asked that the offering be the largest received from any group thus far. Later in the afternoon we learned that $52.69 had been received! Our thanks go to the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship. Will there be a conference which will top this amount?

We are anxious to have the $600 on hand by the end of this month. It is necessary for the person selected to go to have his application forms sent to the work camp committee in New York as soon as possible. When we are sure of final success, we shall begin to select some young person from the Convention.

Melva Foster, Missionary Action Chairman, closed her article, which appeared on this page several weeks ago, with these words: "We can do this great thing if we all work together, so let's go!" That is the spirit that we need. Send contributions to: John G. Truitt, Jr., Box 157, Elon College, North Carolina.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY OR- GANIZED AT HENDERSON.

A young people's society was organized at the Henderson Church recently. There are strong organized Sunday school classes for young people, but this group will hold its meetings on Sunday night. The following officers were elected: Edison Forsyth, president; Bill Umphlett, vice-president; Janet Abbott, recording secretary; Betty Rawls, corresponding secretary; Bill Masters, program chairman; Laura Ann Seamon, treasurer; Elizabeth Newman and Odell Rawls, membership and visiting chairmen.

They planned all of their programs through Easter when they organized:

REIDSVILLE PILGRIM FELLOW- SHIP.

The Reidsville Pilgrim Fellowship met for a business meeting February 3, with Mrs. Effie Chilton and Mrs. Stella Somers. There were twenty present. Mrs. Mary E. Ware presided, and plans were made for a business and social meeting the last Friday night in each month.

Programs for the Sunday night services were planned, a list of which will be announced by the chairman at each monthly business meeting. Also a list of visits to be made to the homes of shut-ins where a program is held. Several homes visited already have greatly appreciated these programs.

Miss Myrtle Dyer was appointed chairman of the cheer committee. It was requested that names of any shut-ins within the entire membership of the church be presented to her, in order that she may send cards to each of them.

It was voted to send $5.00 to the overseas workers project. A committee was appointed to select a play to be given by the Fellowship and to report at the next meeting.

Bonnie and Albert Madren were appointed to report activities to the local paper and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Prompt attendance was urgently requested of all members of each of the meetings. The meeting was closed with prayer by the pastor, Rev. Tucker G. Humphries.

MRS. BONNIE MADREN.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE E. N. C. CHURCHES.

The next Rally will be held at the Morrisville Church on Sunday afternoon and night, March 5. Registration will begin at 2:30 in the afternoon. The program will close about 8:00 p. m. at night. Details of the program will be given later. The Morrisville Church is located on the old Durham-Raleigh road. Morrisville has a rather recently organized young people's society and the president is Miss Emma Lou Holt.

J. F. Hilliard from the Morrisville Church met with the Eastern North Carolina young people's officers to plan the next meeting.

HOLLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH HAS YOUTH SERVICE.

A service in observance of Youth Week was held in the Holland Christian Church, Monday night, January 30 at 7:30 p. m. with young people of South Quay Baptist, Holland Baptist, Holy Neck Congregational Christian, Holland Christian Churches and Somerton Friends Meeting attending. Hugh Waite, president of the Holland Pilgrim Fellowship, presided and gave the welcome address.

After the singing of "Lead On O King Eternal," prayer was offered by Ernest Jones, of the Friends Meeting. Betty Louise Smith, representing the Holland Baptist Church, read the Scripture lesson. A duet, "What Shall I Tell My Master?" was sung by Margaret Harrell and Audrey Holland of the Holy Neck Church, accompanied by Mrs. June O. Davidson, Sr.

The message of the evening was given by Rev. W. A. Grissom, pastor of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church. "Just As I Am, Thine Own To Be," was used as the Consecration hymn.

Dr. Luther B. Grice, pastor of Holy Neck Church, was in charge of the Communion Service. He was assisted by Rev. Henry L. Foster, pastor of the Holland Baptist Church, James R. Stein of the Friends Meeting, Mr. J. P. Dalton, deacon of the Holland Christian Church and Rev. Grissom. "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," was the closing hymn.

Luke Gardner and Clifton Daugherty of the South Quay Baptist Church served as ushers. Mrs. J. L. Rawles, counsellor of the Holland Pilgrim Fellowship was in charge of the program.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Was there ever a boy who didn't some time or other want to be a fireman? I suppose not. In our town, there is an opportunity for young men to become members of our fire department and last week we saw them in action as they set to work to save our church from fire.

It isn't easy to be a fireman, be it a volunteer or a regular one. It takes a good, strong, healthy body. It takes strong arms and legs to climb ladders, and to hold the heavy hose. It takes a quick, keen mind to size up situations, quickly see what needs to be done, and it requires the ability to take directions and to work with other people. If all the firemen tried to put out the fire according to their ideas—well, maybe the fire would not be quenched very quickly.

This was the first time I had ever seen a volunteer fire department at work. They were wonderful! They followed directions under the fire chief, they forgot about themselves and thought about their fire-fighting. They acted as if they fought fires every day. In a big city like Richmond there are professional fire fighters who study firefighting, drill and earn promotions. They are organized under captains, battalion chiefs and the head fire chief. He is the man who rides to the scene of fires in the shiny red car with his siren going full blast. But not so in our town. They came on foot, a few with the engines and some simply stopped their work miles away and came to save the building.

When the fire was over, they did not stop. They began to clean up, pump out water, and set up fans to blow away the smoke. And all of this was because they like excitement, like to help their fellowman, and, too, they promised to help put out fires. They considered it a duty.

God gave us fire. It is one of our greatest blessings. Without harnessed heat we could not cook, keep warm run trains and many other things. But it can be our worst enemy if it gets away from us. It is our duty to keep it working for us and not against us.

But should a fire break out, it is very comforting to know that there are men, firemen, who come to our rescue and pour on water and chemicals until the fire has stopped. Girls do not make good fire fighters as a general thing—they are usually too excitable. If any of the boys reading this hope to be a fireman some day begin to train now in those essentials: quickness, strength, a spirit of co-operation and alertness.

And a great big thank you to firemen all over our nation who protect us and help us every day and night.

CHILDHOOD DETERMINES HOW HAPPY THE MARRIAGE.

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"While dining at the home of a friend the other day, a very refreshing incident occurred," said my next-door neighbor, who is always interested in the younger generation. Several of us were knitting in her living room. "After a delicious dessert," she continued, "Ned, her grandson, exclaimed, 'Mom, that's a yummy pudding! Will you ask Freda whether there will be some left for her if you should let me have another serving?' I said to myself, 'Ned, you're a thoughtful lad! This isn't the first time I've noticed your thinking of others.'"

"It's a joy to see boys and girls who have been taught unselfishness," Mildred Barker responded. "May I tell a story about a mother who, thoughtlessly, encourages lack of consideration? I was a guest at this home not long ago. Her son Tom, like Ned, thought the dessert—only this was lemon pie—was something out of this world. 'May I have another piece of pie?' he asked his mother. 'Certainly,' the mother replied, and then to the maid she said, 'Mary, bring Tom another serving of dessert.' Mary looked embarrassed and stammered, 'I'm sorry, but I made only one pie for all of us.' 'Mary, please bring Tom the pie,' his mother insisted as if she had not heard."

"What a contrast in environment!" Marian Collier, a former teacher and now the mother of three young children, shook her head. "That mother forgets that the most serious mistake a parent can make is in yielding to the temptation commonly known as spoiling. Instead of educating our children to life's requirements, we truly spoil them when we indulge them in every wish. A spoiled youngster yearns for habitual pampering. In this case, Tom will be hurt by his mother's lack of consideration for Mary."

"Also, the boy's future family," the wife of a child psychologist announced. "A happy marriage has its foundation in childhood. The characteristics that make a fine personality—emotional maturity and stability, unselfishness, strength of character, courage and good sense in meeting life's problems, and extrovert habits generally—contribute to the securing of a good husband or a good wife and to preserving a happy, well-adjusted marriage."

My next-door neighbor, who had begun the discussion, smiled her approval. "Surely, teaching 'extrovert habits' is a good foundation for a child's future happiness, and the selfish person is the one who hoards his love, talents, energies, his material 'treasures,' and suffers from their excess," she philosophized as she knitted. "We must teach children to share and share. How much melody there would be in life if we were automatically nice to everybody, like—well—like Henry Jones, down the street. No wonder he's a popular boy!"

"Being awake to opportunities to help is a habit, and what a dividend-paying one it is!" remarked Jane Farley."

As she spoke, the pretty mother of three looked at her watch and began saying "Good-bye" to her friends, adding, "I'm going home to concentrate on those extrovert habits." Tucking her knitting into her bag, she smiled over her shoulder when she reached the door and said, "I want three of those 'automatically nice' sons-in-law!" We could hear her gay laughter, but we knew she meant what she said.

Yes, it rather startles young, future parents-in-law to realize that the achievement of a happy marriage for their small Bob and curly-haired Mary Sue has its beginnings in childhood.

Politeness costs nothing and gains everything. Nothing is ever lost by a man's politeness—except his seat on the bus or car.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

EPHESUS, A CENTER OF CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

LESSON X—MARCH 5, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Be strong in the Lord, and in the strength of his might.—Ephesians 6:10.

LESSON TEXT: Acts 19:1, 8-10, 18-20; Ephesians 4:25-32.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 55:6-13.

The Lure of the Difficult.

"Paul, having passed through the upper coasts (country) came to Ephesus." He was not afraid of the hard places. He was not afraid to match his religion against the hardest places in the pagan world. In last Sunday's lesson he was in Corinth, a center of wealth and worldliness and wickedness. Today's lesson finds him in Ephesus, an even larger city of great wealth and size, and although it was not as notorious as Corinth for immortality, it was steeped in stark superstition and dark paganism. What could one man, a comparatively unknown Jew, do in such a situation? The thing that counted with Paul was the fact that there were folks there, folks with deep spiritual needs, folks who did not know the grace of God in Jesus Christ, folks who needed to be redeemed by the living Christ, and mobilized in His service. Furthermore Paul saw the strategic importance of cities. He wanted to plant churches in all the centers of influence in the world, so that from them could radiate the influence of the gospel. The Christian Church follows a sound strategy when it plants churches in cities. And it makes a mistake when it retreats from needy areas in cities.

Spiritless Christians.

Surprising as it may be, Paul found certain disciples in Ephesus. But they had not received the Holy Spirit since they believed. They had been changed ethically but they had not been blessed spiritually. Under Paul's sympathetic and skillful guidance these believers were brought into a new and deeper relationship with Christ and they received the Holy Spirit in fuller measure. There are multitudes today who need a fuller baptism of the Holy Spirit, which comes from complete surrender and complete obedience.

Hardened Hearts, Disobedient Wills.

Paul preached the gospel for three months in the synagogue, speaking the things concerning the Kingdom of God. Then as now the seed fell on different soils. Some who heard believed and obeyed and were blessed. But others "were hardened and disobedient" and spoke evil of the way. Jesus was always warning men about how they heard. It is dangerous business to hear the truth and to refuse to obey the truth. There is such a thing as becoming "gospel hardened." One who refuses to listen to the truth, or one who disobeys the truth he knows is turning the light that is in him into darkness. And how great is that darkness! On the other hand he that doeth the truth cometh to the light. He that followeth Christ shall not walk in darkness.

Confession and Changed Lives.

Paul presented the gospel in a simple and direct way, but it came with power. Many believed, and they confessed their sins, and declared their deeds. There is great value in the confession of sins as the Catholic Church has long known and as the Protestant Church is finding out. Confession to another and to God has a cleansing, inspiring effect. We ought to confess our sins, confess them in detail, confess them without reservation. And then we ought to claim the forgiveness which God has so clearly and graciously promised. As a pastor the writer has had people to come with some great burden of sin or some sense of guilt on their hearts, and as they "talked it out" and as they confessed their sins, there came a great sense of relief and a great peace of mind and soul.

But confession should be followed by changed lives. Confession has its fruitage in conversion of conduct. The people of Ephesus not only confessed their sins, they changed their lives.

Need—A Burning of the Books.

When the people of Ephesus confessed, they came clean. Many of them had books, some of them valuable books which were filled with things that were in conflict with their new faith. Forthwith they brought the books and made a huge bonfire in a public place. It was an evidence of true conversion. Their repentance had gone to the root of things. There was no compromise with evil in their lives. No wonder they got a blessing.

We need a "burning of the books" today, need it badly. There are many books and magazines and other pieces of literature on the newsstands and in our homes that ought to be burned. And among them are some that find their way into the hands and into the hearts of children. A Christian ought to give attendance to reading the right kind of literature.

Marks of Christian Living.

In a letter which Paul later wrote to his friends at Ephesus he stressed several marks of the Christian life: truth, self-control, honesty, clean conversation, and kindness. The new man in Christ walks in a new way in life.

A LENTEN MESSAGE.

By REV. H. E. ROBINSON,
Pastor, Burlington Church.

Two experiences of recent days will illustrate what I have to say in these pre-Lenten days. The very first Monday morning I came down to the study, our janitor was cleaning up fallen plaster. The trustees were at work repairing faulty drains. Much effort and expense were required to install a whole new drainage system around our entire edifice. Old water damage within the plant has yet to be rectified.

The second incident I want to mention is a film, seen by a number of our people, "And Now I See." The message of this picture was the great need of the world and the key position the local church must play in meeting that need.

Lent is a time to do two things. The damp of the world's swamps seeps into our souls turning the fire of faith into a feeble, smoking lamp. Lent should lead us back to the sources of truth and light, into the fresh clean companionship of Christ.

But Lent is more than personal purification. Lent should purify, but it should also be a time for unveiling our eyes to see the tragic need of the world which should lay heavily upon our hearts.

Shall we not—all of us—pastor and people, set up this dual goal for ourselves: a personal quickening of the spirit; an outreach of love to those in need whoever and wherever they are? If we can achieve these objectives, even in a limited way, Eastern morn will bring a victory like even to the Resurrection of our Lord.

MR. JONES, MEET THE MASTER. Sermons and Prayers of Peter Marshall. Fleming H. Revell Company. New York. $2.50.

These unconventional sermons should have a wide reading among the ministry and laity. They are addressed to the man Peter Marshall preferred to call "Mr. Jones," to the ordinary man of the world. Incidentally, the sermon from which the title is taken is a temperance sermon. One item of special interest for ministers who write their sermons (if there are such today!) is the special typography used. The sermons are set up just as Peter Marshall took them into the pulpit, with striking phrases listed separately for emphasis, or to indicate the steps to a climax.

Here is the language and unique style of Peter Marshall. The front-piece carries his picture. The distinctive thing missing is the burr to his R's, his Scottish accent.

Dr. Marshall died at the age of 46. He was rated by some as one of America's greatest preachers. Others thought he was over-rated. Some thought he was humble; others detected a vein of conceit.

Revell has rendered a distinct service to the Christian world by publishing the sermons of Dr. Marshall. Read his book for its fresh eloquence, its picturesque phraseology, its kaleidoscopic picture of life, its consummate presentation of the Master of Men.

LET'S READ THE BIBLE. Kenneth Clinton. The Macmillan Company. New York. $2.00.

Many of our readers know Dr. James R. Clinton. His contributions have enriched our columns. Not so many of us have known his son, Kenneth. The present volume, the author's first, is significantly and appropriately dedicated: "To my father and mother whose devotion to the Bible and knowledge of its truths were spread richly in our home."

Numbers of us lack knowledge and skill in using the Bible. Our tendency is to venerate rather than to utilize the Bible. Kenneth Clinton can help us. He faces frankly the neglect of Bible reading, analyzes the causes, evaluates the difficulties, then leads his readers up the "Stepping Stones" to the mountain peaks of Biblical knowledge and appreciation. Parents and Sunday school teachers will profit greatly by his plan for purposeful reading, individually and collectively. Ministers will find particularly helpful the sections on "The Bible and Life Experiences," "What Questions the Bible Asks," "The Bible and Public Worship" and the Appendix: "Planning Our Reading."

It is a pleasure to command this intensely practical book to our readers. No more appropriate gift could be made to a minister or Sunday school teacher.

THE WESTMINSTER STUDY EDITION OF THE HOLY BIBLE. The Westminster Press. Philadelphia. $10.00.

Although large and somewhat expensive, this Edition has many commendable features. Introductory articles, chapter and paragraph headings, the Scriptural characterization of each book, copious footnotes, the poetic form for poetry, a complete concordance, a chronology, a set of maps in full color, and other aids to Bible study contribute their special values to a book that really adds one library to another.

This quotation from the jacket seems to be a fair statement: "Prepared by scholars from different Protestant denominations, the Study Edition makes clear to its readers how the Bible came to be, and what the Christian Church believes about it. More than that, its every page is expressive of the conviction that the Bible, rightly understood—can speak to modern man the very word of God that he needs."

One could wish that all our pastors and church school teachers had access to this book. It is one of the miracles of grace that we have so much Biblical scholarship concentrated in one volume.

PILGRIM EDITION OF THE HOLY BIBLE. Oxford University Press. New York. $4.50.

This Edition was a grand idea. No, it is neither a Congregational nor a Pilgrim Press publication. Why didn't they think of it? Yes, the idea is good. It is a Bible with simple notes especially adapted for young pilgrims. Isn't that just what they need? It is, but this Edition is a disappointment. It is the kind of thing one would have expected a generation ago. The results of modern Biblical scholarship are largely ignored. One is surprised to find the indiscriminate use of the proof-text method. New Testament meanings are read back into the Old Testament. The introduction to Genesis states that "It tells of the beginning of God's work of saving sinful man through the death of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ."

Many ingenious explanations are set forth for the young pilgrims. For instance: "There are two periods of time, each of which may have been thousands of years long. One of them took place between the time when the earth was first created perfect (Gen. 1:1) and when it was laid waste (Gen. 1:2, first sentence). The other period of time took place between the moment when the earth was laid waste and the re-creation. The story of the re-creation begins with the second sentence of Genesis 1:2." The theology of the Pilgrim Edition will not be satisfactory to those who espouse modern Biblical scholarship.

THE SEXUAL CRIMINAL. A Psycho-analytical Study. J. Paul de River, M. D., F. A. C. S. Chas. C. Thomas, Publisher. Springfield, Illinois. 281 pp. $5.50.

The author has for many years specialized in the study of sexual criminality as a member of the police department of the City of Los Angeles. During the war he served on a committee for such study with the armed forces. Out of this vast experience he has taken a series of case-studies to illustrate the account: sadism, masochism and the psychological aspect of criminal investigation.

Sexual crime being on the increase, the author relates its rise to the diminution of social controls generally, because spiritual values have been put aside and religion displaced by "pseudo-intellectual and pseudo-scientific conglomerations of half-baked superficialities" posed as "philosophies of life." Every virtue, every strength, has its opposite negative. Thus sexual criminality is a component part of crime in general.

A pseudo-liberal religion and social-melioration, which see the race of men improved by a mechanically material improvement in their way of living thus misses the essence of religion and social philosophy. Freedom and restraint are component parts of one whole, in the sex life as in all the social being of man.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Almost anything can happen here. Something new has happened. Two groups of church women enjoyed "Open House" in our main building—one group as hostesses and the other as guests. My, what a fine time they had! It was a very real party with the lassies and matrons of the main building helping to serve, and to show one and all about the building. It was such a lovely way for many people to get acquainted with each other and to see what is being done to make this a real home, and what yet needs to be done. Miss Hattie Brakefield, Miss Lola Lackey, and the girls would wish me to thank the ladies for their thoughtfulness.

Did I tell you about the men from Suffolk who had dinner with the children and their matrons in the Baby Home? Well, they were here. Mrs. Truitt, John, Jr., and I ate with them, too. And it was a good time for the boys and girls who quietly took their places about the tables just as they are taught to do and when every head was bowed repeated together the thanks to God for their dinner. I was sort of surprised myself that they didn't ask me to "say grace," but the two matrons, Mrs. Nancy Whitt and Mrs. C. C. Branch, had decided that everything should be as nearly like the regular thing as possible. The men from Suffolk were: Messers. W. A. Daughtrey, L. S. Burton, O. J. Rountree, John C. Ramsey, Jr., J. Leonard Byrd, J. T. Judkins and C. W. Jones. Mrs. Truitt and I were so happy to see them and to have them see what is going on here. Who will be next?

Since the beginning of the year we have had representatives of many churches and Sunday schools here from each of the five conferences, but I cannot name them all because they were coming and going during the Laymen's Conference, and we were thrilled to have them everyone. Last week a very kind gentleman and his wife sat across the desk from me and told me how they wanted to help clothe one of our girls, how they wanted to buy something for all the children to use, and how they wanted to dress up one of the boys' rooms. I chose the girl for them, and they are on the job.

People are so good to us here. Fifty-one churches have responded since January 1. Many others will do so before February is over. Our report this week is a good one, and I have faith in the churches to believe it will be equally as good next week. These boys and girls are worthy. They are thirsty for friendship and love. They touch my heart as they make so much out of so little. They love one another, and when they go away for a short visit to some class or friend they return with joy to be back home. Two high school girls told me this week what a fine visit they had just had with the Albemarle Church, but added: "How good it was to get back home." And I could see they meant it. Pray for these children that right here may be in the making some of tomorrow's leaders in things that are highest and noblest. When you remember that eighty-six thousand meals have to be served the little folks in a single year, that it takes more than a thousand dollars to buy their shoes for a year, and that with bad rainy weather the expense for clothes mounts, please cooperate with your Sunday school in that monthly offering—for a nickle or dime from many people will be the measure of success here for them.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

Under the spell of their vision they arose and built for us a college. They were lacking in numbers and wealth but they were not lacking in faith and courage. They performed a heroic task. We, today, enjoy the fruits of their labors. In our abundance of resources, we should arise and extend that which they built. There is nothing that will hinder us other than the poverty of faith and the lack of courage. May we be inspired as we face a challenging task and a magnificent opportunity. Your college needs your support.

WORLD-WIDE PRAYER MEETING.

"Faith for Our Time" is the theme of the World Day of Prayer to be celebrated this year in more than 10,000 communities across the country on the first Friday in Lent, February 24.

The World Day of Prayer was originated in 1887 by an American woman, Mrs. Darwin R. Jones, who asked women of the Presbyterian Church to pray together on a specified day for mission work in this country. The day became an annual event in which other denominations joined.

This year it will be celebrated by Christians in 92 countries, from the Fiji Islands, east of the International Date Line, to the arctic and tropical regions on the other side of the meridian and prayer offerings will help support mission work around the world. Offerings last year in the United States alone amounted to over a quarter of a million dollars.

In American communities the service will be celebrated in churches, hospitals, factories and homes. A special prayer for world brotherhood will be shown on the screens of motion picture houses, and radio broadcasters and mayoral proclamations will urge citizens to observe the day.

The service, which is translated into hundreds of languages and dialects, reads in part:

"No one can legislate peace for the world if those in it are not at peace with themselves; no one can arouse strife in the world if each man is at peace, first with God, then with himself.

"Peace is in our hearts and not in our military might; peace is in strength of spirit and not in weapons; peace is within and not without. Nor can any one of us seek peace for ourselves to the exclusion of others."

This year's service was written by a Japanese woman, Miss Michi Kawai, YWCA leader and founder of a girl's school near Tokyo; and the poster for the World Day of Prayer, depicting the kneeling Christ, was painted on silk by a Japanese artist, Mr. Taikai Sadakata.

In Japan, World Day of Prayer offerings last year were used to help rebuild churches in Asia that had been destroyed during the war; this year the money will help train Japanese students for Christian work.

Celebrations of the day in this country are sponsored by the United Council of Church Women and its state and local councils which represent some 10,000,000 church women of over 80 Protestant denominations.

Offerings in the U. S. support in-terdenominational mission work both here and abroad: help for the nation's estimated 2,500,000 migrant agricultural workers, for rural Negro sharecroppers in the South and for American Indians in the Southwest; support for eight Christian colleges in India, China and Japan, and for literature for thousands of the world's newly literate people; and welcome and guidance for the 26,000 foreign students in this country.

Mrs. Welthy Honsinger Fisher, author and lecturer who is the United Council's chairman for the World Day of Prayer, is at present on a visit in the Middle East. She is assisting in plans for the celebration of the day in countries there.

RECORD OF THE CHURCHES FOR 1949.

48 with memberships between 50 and 99; 77 between 100 and 249; 32 between 250 and 499; 8 between 500 and 999, and one with more than one thousand members.

The fact that our churches have been established for long periods of time makes these figures serious. We are not growing! This brings us to the conclusion that our evangelistic passion is not glowing, and large numbers of our people have moved to new communities. This latter condition is reflected throughout the whole nation, because over 50 per cent of the American population has moved within the past ten years. While the population in North Carolina and Virginia has increased only about 7 per cent and 11 per cent respectively during that period, great numbers have moved their residences to new communities within the area. We organized no new church last year and have established no new church in growing areas of population during the past ten years, with the exception of Bay View in Eastern Virginia, Asheboro in Western North Carolina and Zion in North Carolina and Virginia, and the organization of Zion only was really effected during that period.

There has been nearly a 50 per cent turnover in pastors during the past year, and this circumstance has no doubt affected the work of the churches. But the more serious aspect of this fact is the dire shortage of pastors. We are not recruiting enough candidates for the Christian ministry to take care of our normal needs. During the past year we experienced a net loss of ten pastors through death, retirement and removal from the area. None was graduated from seminary and only two from college. Elon College is admirably equipped to help us solve this acute problem, but our college is dependent upon the cooperation of Christian homes and churches. To meet our normal needs for pastors we ought to be enlisting fifteen ministerial students per year, and at least five each ought to be graduating from college and seminary every year.

Our total Sunday school enrollment is but 22,320, only about two-thirds as many as are in the membership of our churches. We need to strengthen this phase of our work. The coming of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill as Educational Secretary of the Convention, with her major emphasis upon Christian Education and Young People's Work, ought to result in much improvement here.

The work of the women of the Convention continues to be perhaps the most healthy aspect of our Convention, and the increased activity of the Laymen's Fellowship promises great things for our church.

Three major emphases—Evangelism, Stewardship and Church Extension—now under way for 1950 can make our record much more healthy. Our people are called upon to give active concern and participation in the United Evangelistic Advance, and in the Enrollment of Tithers as a definite expression of Christian Stewardship. These two great emphases can give us a new vigor, and they can supply sufficient funds with which to establish new churches, and with which to give adequate support to missions at home and abroad, to Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, aid to our retired ministers, Christian Education, and to the other enterprises of our church. May our record for 1950 exceed that of 1949.

BOOK REVIEWS.

For the technician in the field, the author gives invaluable keys toward understanding of the sex criminal and his acts: for the police officer, the law and the psychiatrist. There should be added the clergy, though that did not apparently come to the thinking of the writer. Ministers deal with more youth, in this related field, than does any other group of professional persons. They could learn to profit from the experiential wisdom of this outstanding student of the subject.

A Church Is Born

That was the end of my Sunday morning golf. I had joined a church!" said Fred W. Spalding, Congregational Christian layman from Akron, Ohio, who spoke before the opening meeting of the Congregational Christian Board of Home Missions during the Midwinter Meeting in Cleveland.

Coming from the lovely little community of Fairlawn on the extreme western boundary of Akron, Mr. Spalding succinctly and with humor, told of how a church was born in the midst of a growing "white collar" community and has now become "a place to anchor in an uncharted sea . . . a fellowship with the greatest man of all time, Christ our Lord."

The church at Fairlawn started with just a Sunday School for the children under the direction of national and state Congregational Christian leaders. Then a parsonage was purchased and a minister came to Fairlawn. Each of the 61 children in the rapidly growing church school was then urged to bring their parents to church and it was at that point that Mr. Spalding and his neighbors lost out on their Sunday morning golf.

"June 6, 1946, was the fatal day for the first 49 members," said Mr. Spalding. "They formed the chartered group of Fairlawn Congregational Community Church. That was the end of my Sunday morning golf. I could no longer say it was just a church school—I had joined a church."

The little group worked hard, organizing, forming boards and committees and securing teachers. What they lacked in numbers and experience they made up in vision and determination.

"Some folks were not too anxious to join our fellowship because they did not feel that a school, which was the building in which we were holding our services, was the proper place in which to worship. They informed us that when we put up a building they would come and join us."

Two years after they had formed the chartered group Fairlawn Congregational Community Church had purchased three acres of land for a building.

Then came a hard blow. Their pastor left for another field. This crisis tested the calibre of the new congregation.

No one even thought of quitting," said Mr. Spalding. "While the pulpit committee went to work to secure a new minister, we used any person we could get to fill our pulpit. A Rabbi took one Sunday, a Public Relations man from one of our large industries the next, and even the Mayor of Akron gave us a hand as well as pastors from other communities."

On January 16, 1949, Rev. Homer V. Yinger came to the Fairlawn Congregational Community Church from a big California parish.

"From that day on our church has been a beehive of activity," said Mr. Spalding. "People saw what was happening and joined with us. Our total membership is now 170. Our Pilgrim Fellowship has 21 members; our Scout Troop 15; our Cub Scouts 65; and our Girl Brownies 40. We have a Men's Club of over 50 active members and a Women's Fellowship equal in numbers. Sunday school classes are held for every age group from two years to high school and we are about to install a Junior Church."

At the beginning the little church had been underwritten by national and state boards, but once on the road with a new pastor the men got together to discuss finances and when they went out for their Every Member Canvass they coined the slogan, "Get Off the Dole."

When the canvassers returned one Sunday afternoon in October they had nearly reached their goal financially and were ready to start out on their own.

"Just what this church means to Fairlawn is a little difficult to say, but I am sure that it means a center of religious and recreational activity for one of America's finest communities. We are on the march and cannot be stopped. We have had our share of disappointments, but we shall carry on and our community will be a finer place in which to live. New friendships are being made every day. New families are moving into new homes. New homes are being constructed. To us our church has a definite meaning. To our new neighbors it means a place to anchor in an uncharted sea. To all of us together it means a fellowship with the greatest man of all time, Christ our Lord."

Reclaiming Our Century

[Abstract of address by DR. GEORGE HEATON, Pastor of Myers' Park Baptist Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, delivered at the 29th annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, February 12.]

The most calamitous and catastrophic half-century of modern history has caused a large number of people to abandon all hope of reclaiming this century. With H. G. Wells, they believe that "the story of the human race is rapidly coming to an end."

There are others who hold to a thin thread of hope that man will maneuver his way out. They think that poor engineering brought us to this impasse, and we have sufficient scientific skill to engineer our way out. By political strategies and scientific experiments they struggle desperately in a last ditch stand.

There is new evidence for hope in the signs of trends, not yet established. My recent visit to two important theological seminaries revealed former scientific, legal, labor and psychology students now devoting their lives to the ministry.

Although we stand at a point in history where we no longer have any margin for error, and where a single mistake might be irremedial, there are many who believe that we will turn the tide. This faith is not in what man can do, but in what God will do if man cooperates. We have witnessed this power at work in India through Gandhi; we have witnessed this power in Stuttgart, Germany, through an industrialist named Samuel Blattert. God is at work to reclaim this century. The God we believe in creatively seeks through physical and moral laws, through his impact upon persons, and the power that can be launched through creative minorities to save every generation. The struggle may not be won, but it can be won.

Certainly it will not be won unless individuals are transformed by the power of God. Certainly the century will not be reclaimed if the church is decadent and impotent. There is, however, a law of social appetite which draws together into corporate expressions like-minded people. The religiously alive will become the fellowship of the church, and the walls of division and smugness which imprisoned its vitality will burst assunder. No man-made strategies can hold back the yearning for corporateness on the part of the religiously alive.

Such a re-awakening would ultimately invade every area of life with persuasive power. Evil has done it; and so can good. The century may be reclaimed or lost; but the position of the Christian is very clear; we must be reclaimed ourselves and strive through the fellowship of the reclaimed to reclaim our century. With one who knows, the battle first hand we say, "There is a foe; there is a fight; there is a victory."

Seagrove Christian Church of the Western North Carolina Conference received five members into its fellowship on Sunday night, February 19—four by profession of faith in Christ and one by letter of transfer.

The Elon College Singers appeared at the Rosemont Church in Norfolk on Sunday, February 19, and at the Suffolk Christian Church Sunday evening. These engagements marked the beginning of a three-day tour of our churches in the Tidewater area of Virginia.

LENT'S MESSAGE.

By C. Rexford Raymond.

Let Lent reveal the solace for our fears;
Our careless ease means mere futility;
Christ's way of life includes Gethsemane.
Communion in the Upper Room still cheers
Our comradeship. Good Friday down the years

Points up to Easter. Still we clearly see Where power and peace abide in constancy;
The crown of thorns can glorify our tears.

Immortal gifts of love we would bestow
On those we loved long since who dwell afar
Beyond the darkling purple sunset sky.
Bereft, we ask our Lord to let us know
How gifts can go beyond the vesper star:
"Go, feed the hungry here," is His reply.

Supt. John G. Truitt of the Christian Orphanage, was guest speaker last week at the Wednesday study club at Burlington. He was introduced by Mrs. Cecil Yarborough, program chairman for the afternoon. The club met at the home of Mrs. E. E. Chapman.

The Rev. W. Stanley Carne, pastor of the First Christian Church in Portsmouth, was the speaker at the weekly meetings of the Men's Luncheon Bible Class (interdenominational) during January. Approximately forty business and professional men attend regularly.

Rev. A. Lanson Granger, a native of Norfolk, and a graduate of Elon and Yale Divinity School, has accepted a call to the First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Va. Mr. Granger is at present pastor of our church at Sayville, New York. He organized the Asheboro Church.

Dr. James R. Clinton conducted a preaching mission at Bethlehem Church, Disputanta, February 12-19. Rev. John Gallo, pastor, writes: "The whole church was spiritually revived and drawn closer to God." Dr. Clinton was one of the instructors at the Winter Institute for Ministers at Franklinton Center.

Twenty-four men and women from our Tryon and Asheville Churches met Wednesday, February 15, at 10:30 a. m. to consider the United Evangelistic Advance. The meeting was held in the recently renovated Asheville Church. Following the meeting, the group met in a fellowship hour at the table for lunch. Members of the visiting "Flying Squadron" were James Allan, Kenneth Register and W. J. Andes.

The Greensboro First Church observed Race Relations Sunday on February 19 in a very practical way. An offering was received at the church service for the rebuilding of a dormitory at Palmer Institute at Sedalia, N. C. This dormitory, housing more than a hundred Negro students (girls), burned recently. Fortunately most of the students were in Greensboro at the time of the burning and no one was hurt.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of The Christian Temple, Norfolk, announces the following Lenten sermons under the general theme, "A Personal Search": February 26—"I Seek a Place to Serve," March 5—"I Seek God," March 12—"I Seek a Redeemer," March 19—"I Seek a Guiding Spirit," March 26—"I Seek the Meaning of Love," April 2 (Palm Sunday)—"I Seek Courage," April 9 (Easter)—"I Seek Hope."

The World Day of Prayer for the churches was observed last Friday afternoon (Feb. 24) in the Holy Neck Church. . . . Prayer services at Elon Community Church were under the direction of Mrs. W. T. Scott. . . . World Day of Prayer Services were held in the Newport News Church as a part of community activity. . . . The women of the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., had their community service with Mrs. R. L. House as leader.

Dr. Jesse H. Dollar is preaching a series of Lenten sermons on the theme, "Looking Toward the Cross." The subjects of these sermons being given at Liberty Spring Church are: February 26—"The View from a Distance," March 5—"Qualities That Clear Our Vision," March 12—"Some Problems We Face," March 19—"The Faith Which Leads Us," March 26—"People We Meet Along the Way," April 2—"Through the Hosannas," April 9—"The Eternal Joy—He is Risen!"

NORFOLK CHURCHES HOLD LENTEN SERVICES.

A series of Lenten Services from 12:15 to 12:45 p. m. daily are being conducted for the churches of Norfolk in Epworth Methodist Church. The schedule of speakers are: Rev. W. Millard Stevens, Congregational Christian Temple, Norfolk, March 6-7; Dr. Theodore Adams, First Baptist Church, Richmond, March 8-10; Dr. E. A. deBordenave, Dean of Virginia Secondary Schools of the Episcopal Church, Tappahannock, March 13-17; Dr. J. Callaway Robertson, Superintendent of the Alexandria Methodist District, March 20-24; and Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson, Professor of Church History at Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, March 27-31. Dr. Joseph S. Johnson is host pastor.

DR. DOLLAR TALKS ON PALESTINE TRIP.

Dr. Jesse Dollar spoke on his trip to Palestine at the meeting of the Friendship Bible Class of the Liberty Spring Christian Church Tuesday night of last week. A covered dish supper was held prior to the business meeting and program.

Mrs. Joseph Savage presided and Mrs. Luther W. Wilkins, using as her theme, "Your Heart," presented the worship service. Mrs. Wilkins also conducted a reading, "God's Purse," with William Harrell, Mrs. Lewis Horton, Mrs. W. L. Turner, Charlie Nichols and James Lynch taking part. Prayer was offered by Mrs. William Harrell.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES IN GROUP THREE (VALLEY CONFERENCE).

By REV. R. E. NEWTON, Pastor.

Mt. Lebanon Sunday School has outgrown our one-room church building. A generous fund has been raised to start the work of building an addition to the church to enlarge the church proper and to build Sunday school rooms. We hope to begin work in the spring or summer.

* * *

Leaksville.—Funds are being raised for the construction of a basement under the church. The need for this improvement has been seen by some of the members for a long time. We are hoping that this will be accomplished before many months. This church was represented at the Laymen's meeting at Elon College, January 29. They gave their reports in connection with the regular church service Sunday morning, February 12.

* * *

Newport.—The Newport Church remembered the pastor's birthday with a food shower the third Sunday in January. Individual gifts of cash were received also. The church roof was recently painted. Additional Sunday school rooms, new rugs, a vestibule and many inside improvements are being planned. The attendance record for both Sunday school and church is good. We believe the church is going forward.

Dry Run.—A title has been secured to a strip of land in front of the church by which a new driveway, more convenient than the present one, may be built. As soon as weather conditions will permit, work is to be started. The interior of the church is to be painted, also. During the war, attendance dropped to a very low mark, but it is beginning to improve again.

Joppa.—This church seems to be taking on new life. The church is undergoing much needed improvements—the walls have been repared, electric lights installed, floors are to be sanded and varnished, the roof painted, the pulpit moved to a more advantageous point in the building and the main entrance changed. For a while it seemed that Joppa would fail, but a few faithful ones have kept the work alive. Now the prospects for the future are good.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THANKS TO TROUBLE?

Can you imagine a monument being erected to a bug? Can you imagine such a thing in our own United States honoring—of all creature—a bug that is perhaps the most destructive pest known to farmers?

Strange as it may seem, there is a monument to the boll weevil (that little nuisance that destroyed two hundred million dollars worth of cotton in a year's time) down in Enterprise, Alabama. It was erected in 1919 and bears this inscription:

In profound appreciation of the boll weevil and what it has done as the herald of prosperity.

The reason for this unusual monument, so we are told, is this: The farmers in that section of Alabama raised only one crop—cotton. When the boll weevil came into the United States from Central America, it began attacking the cotton plants. It did so much damage that much of the farmers' work went for nothing. The farmers could not make enough money from cotton to keep their families alive. Something had to be done and done quickly. Then the idea came that they could grow other crops, and they began planting peanuts, sweet potatoes, etc. They learned that it was possible to realize more money through diversified farming. So they are better off now than they were years ago when they planted only one crop and depended on "King Cotton" for a living. They know now that their soil will grow other crops, and their best plan is to plant several instead of depending on one. Then, if one crop fails they have another to fall back on. The monument is no joke.

W. L. Gibson, Jr., Professor in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at V.P.I., has made a study of "Diversification in Virginia Agriculture." His findings are summed up in this paragraph: "Virginia has a great diversity in agricultural production. A large number of farm products, including poultry, tobacco, dairy, beef cattle, fruits, hogs, vegetables, peanuts, sheep, cotton, grains and flowers are important segments in the State's agricultural economy. It is significant that no one of these enterprises accounts for as much as one-fourth of the total cash income received by Virginia farmers. Furthermore, the leading five enterprises produced only two-thirds of the total farm cash income during 1944-48, although each returned more than 25 million dollars per year. Slogans such as 'Dairyland' or 'The Wheat State' do not adequately describe Virginia's agriculture, for she is a farm-products State with emphasis on the plural."

The facts would be substantially the same for North Carolina. A new economy is emerging in the South. King Cotton is dead. Long live diversification!

The church is the custodian and the beneficiary of this expanding economy. Stewardship should reach new levels. Our Christian World Mission should find generous support from this region. Here is a field for new churches. The blessings of God are manifold. Out of trouble and poverty have come new visions and new resources. Under the leadership of God's spirit we look to the future with eagerness and confidence.

Guest Editorial:

THE DECISION IN BROOKLYN

Judge Steinbrink has thrown a monkey wrench into the wheels that were turning toward union between the Congregational Christians and the Evangelical and Reformed Church—and into the workings of the whole ecumenical movement. Upholding the Cadman Memorial Church in his decision rendered in Brooklyn, January 26, Judge Steinbrink declared the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches impotent "to merge or unite itself with the Evangelical and Reformed Church or the General Synod thereof, or with any other body or organization whatsoever."

Issues of tremendous importance arise from this decision. Has any civil court the right to dictate to a church on matters of polity? An implication of Judge Steinbrink's decision is that since the polity of the proposed United Church of Christ is at variance with the traditional polity of the Congregational Christian Churches, the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches has no right to proceed with the union. Have we not here a dangerous infringement of our long-established separation of church and state?

Further, if this decision stands will it not longer be totally impossible for denominations held together on the congregational pattern ever to unite with each or with other denominations? Can present conversations between the Northern Baptist Convention, and the Disciples of Christ, for example, lead to anything but a dead-end block?

These issues are disturbing. So is the present apparent frustration within our two denominations as we approach the date set for the consummation of our union. So is the breach of fellowship engendered by this trial in the Congregational Christian Churches. But all is not frustration. The impulse to arrest the break-up of Protestantism and reunite in the spirit of Christ these fragments of his broken body is not stifled by an adverse judicial decision any more than the prayer of Jesus "that they may be one" was ever invalidated by the devices of men.

Across the line between our two denominations there has been created during these years of negotiation a fellowship in Christ too strong because it is in Christ to suffer frustration at the carping of critics or the adverse decision of a secular court.

Since the decision was rendered, we have been in conversation with leaders of both the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Congregational Christian Churches. It is as yet too early to know the next steps.

Readers will be glad, however, for the following statement by Dr. L. W. Goebel, president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, written originally to the secretaries of the boards and agencies of the church but released by him for publication:

"Word has just reached me that the decision of the judge in the Brooklyn case has been unfavorable to the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches. I trust that the Evangelical and Reformed Church will not immediately assume that no way can be found to accomplish the task to which we have set our hands for the past ten years. I assure you that the leadership of the Congregational Christian Churches, perhaps in conference with the E. and R. people, will seek a solution to this, for the moment, apparently difficult problem. A recent visitor from the World Council of Churches to America, in making his report, said that Americans act on the principle, 'The difficult we do at once; to accomplish the impossible takes time.' Not as Americans, but as Christians, we are accustomed to attempt what may seem to be impossible."—The Messenger.

A Minister's Responsibility as a Preacher

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Pastor, First Congregational Christian Church, Richmond, Virginia

"The call of God in Christ Jesus" goes out to men and women in every vocation and profession, but "The call of God to the work of the Christian ministry" is singularly unique in its urgency and in the penalty involved for one who refuses to answer the call—the penalty of "Woe is me if I preach not."

Individuals are not called of God into the ministry because of any favoritism; nor is any favoritism to be expected by one who accepts the call. Neither should there be any distinction between the secular and the sacred in one's recognition and thought, for all of human life is sacred. Life and time and whatever contributes to the well-being of individuals (created in the image of God) and of society which is God's major concern, is sacred.

Some men can serve God and humanity just as acceptably, just as worthily and just as definitely as farmers, merchants, teachers, physicians, engineers, mechanics, authors and all the rest as others can serve as ministers or as missionaries. By aptitude, fitness, and liking, God calls men and women into this field of service and that. But in God's call to men to enter the Christian ministry, there is a distinct difference from His call to men whom He would have enter other fields of service. There is a sense of duty before God, a sense of oughtness, a feeling of moral obligation, a compunction of conscience involved in the call to the ministry not likely experienced by those called into other fields of service to God and man.

God's call to other fields of service involves more of a sense of need, a sense of opportunity, a sense of special fitness—all of which will also be found in varying degrees, but not as determining factors, in God's call to the Christian ministry. Only in God's call to the Christian ministry is there likely to be any feeling of oughtness, of duty to God and of moral obligation.

I presume that most of us who felt called of God to dedicate our lives to the Christian ministry accepted the call with very great reluctance. The harder the struggle any man made in trying to stay out of the ministry, perhaps the surer the evidence that he should get into the ministry and the surer the evidence that his call to the ministry was from Divine Headquarters.

Dr. Charles Spurgeon, the great English preacher of a former generation, in his Matriculation Address used to say to his first-year students at the Metropolitan Theological Seminary in London—"Young men, you are here to begin your preparation for the work of the Christian ministry. I trust that none of you has come to prepare for the work of the ministry unless you definitely feel called of God to preach. And with all sincerity let me say to each of you—if you think you can be happy in any other field of human effort; if any of you feel that you could be happy teaching in a school room, working behind a counter, laboring in a shop or factory, or tilling the soil—if any you believe in your heart that you could be happy in any other work than the ministry, my advice to you is to pack up your things and go back home; and do it tomorrow. For the ministry is only for men who have no alternative. It is only for men who cannot be happy outside the ministry."

Dr. Spurgeon was not only a great preacher for his day, he was also a keen psychologist. He was absolutely right in the advice he gave the young ministerial students of his day. It is nothing less than tragic for any young man to decide to enter the ministry because a doting parent, aunt, uncle or other relative has been deeply anxious that he do so. Young men who contemplate entering the ministry as a life work should do so only in response to a sense of personal conviction and a sense of duty before God. But it is not strange that one should marshall up all the reasons or excuses he can conjure in supporting his declination, because there is so much involved. His decision touches both life and death—both time and eternity. What a stupendous responsibility for any man to assume—the responsibility of being a spokesman for God and a spiritual guide for his fellow men!

Well do I remember the struggle I had personally in this matter. And scores of ministerial friends have told me that they experienced a similar struggle even though in a different setting and pattern. It was during my senior year in high school that I rather resented occasional thoughts that tried to lodge in my mind to the effect that I ought to follow the example of my father and his brother in preparing as they did, by going through college and seminary, to invest my life as they had invested theirs in the work of the Christian ministry. I tried to fight off the very suggestion by assuming an attitude of indifference to the church and seeking acquaintance with the so-called "ways of the world."

Those were the most unhappy days of my life. I did not want to be a preacher, because of considerations too numerous to mention. I drove all impulses seeming to be directed to that end from my mind as quickly as I could. But as time went on, thoughts of the ministry "would not out" from my mind. It all made me very uncomfortable. I so wished that I might be left free to do what I wanted to do and to be what I wanted to be—to make my decision regarding my life work in calm deliberation as my pals were able to do in deciding their life work in fields other than the ministry. But an assumed indifference to the church and its message made me increasingly unhappy. So in self-defense I decided that by responding to the challenge of the church I might be able to be freed from the thought that I ought to be a minister.

CONTRIBUTIONS

DOWN IN FLORIDA.

Before we left Suffolk on February 1, I was urged to write a news letter for THE SUN while in Florida. Well, in keeping with that request and promise I am ready to begin.

In the first place it should be stated that this is not a pleasure trip nor a vacation. One objective, while here, is to do some much-delayed work on a manuscript for a book on the life and work of my dear friend, the late Dr. W. W. Staley. In a busy pastorate I have not been able to find time to complete this work of love for him. I am hoping to make much progress on that unfinished work before our return to Suffolk about March 15.

On the third Sunday in June, 1898, I began my pastoral work in Nantsemond and Isle of Wight Counties in Virginia. On the fourth Sunday in January, 1950, I preached my last sermon, as pastor, at Berea Church, Driver, Va. Between these two dates many things have come to pass during my ministry. Funerals and marriages, new members received, church buildings erected and modernized, systematic business methods introduced in the local churches—these are some of the elements in the work of these years. It has been a long period of rich fellowship for the pastor.

It seems strange to be without a pastoral charge. But the rating now is "pastor-emeritus." Two strong ministers have accepted the call to my former charge. They will carry on with joy and greater success. They increase and I decrease. The kingdom moves on while new men fill the places vacated by retirement or death. I am very happy over the entire situation and their success and prominence will have my hearty approval and support. I am glad I have lived to be old enough to become a "pastor-emeritus."

While we feast our eyes upon the beauty of Florida, and find more time for quiet meditation, we find ourselves turning back the pages of memory to review some of the blessings of our fellowship. Some pleasant parties were given, in our honor, during the closing weeks, and some valuable gifts were bestowed upon the pastor and wife. For these and all other favors we are deeply grateful.

During whatever time the Lord grants unto us to live, we shall be glad to render such service to the church as health and opportunity may permit. It will be a joy if I may yet preach, as occasion may arise, and give some Bible stories in the form of book reviews to such groups as may desire this type of teaching. In the meantime here are many good wishes for SUN readers. We may write again later.

I. W. JOHNSON.

FROM OVER AT HIGH POINT.

Our hurried visit to High Point last Sunday morning was a very rewarding one. It was wonderful to see Rev. Ben Joe Earp sitting up in a chair! His condition seemed much improved, and he gave every indication of feeling much better. Although he still spends most of his time resting in bed, he is eager to have visitors find him in a chair.

His grandson proved that he has inherited characteristics of a preacher. He prattled on and on with an endless chain of talk: "Grandpa, when I'm four years old in May, it will be springtime. Then you can get up and go outside and play with me." Grandpa responded with a grand collection of Bible stories to which the youngster listened with rapt attention.

At Sunday school on Sunday morning the little folks in the primary department surprised me by singing "Happy Birthday to Margaret." Then I told them that my mother and I had always celebrated our birthdays on the same day, because I had been born on my mother's twenty-first birthday.

There is no finer welcome than that which comes from the people in a church at home. That's the way the folks at High Point make a visitor welcome. For the morning worship service one of the ladies of the church asked Kelsey, Jr.—our nearly-four-year-old son—to sit with her while I sang in the choir. From there I had a chance to watch the child as he listened to Rev. Madren's fine sermon on Amos, the greatest of all prophets. (As we sang, my mind flashed back through the years and I could see all three of Dad's girls sitting in various church choirs of the churches where Dad has ministered.)

very busy. A special meeting of church officers and Sunday school teachers was called so that a study could be made of ways and means of more effectively working together. The Ladies' Aid meeting was announced for Monday night to be at the home of Miss Louise Patton. These and other activities indicate steady growth.

A member of the High Point Church continues to impress me with her remarkable service. We call her "Grandma" at the church, even though actually she is a great-grandmother. When you greet her, she holds tightly to your hand, and with honest humility says: "I can't see very well, and I can't hear a word the preacher says, but I know it's my place to be here at the church." Her hand trembles, but there is warmth and strength in her handclasp. Her weak eyes fill with tears, but it cleanses your faith to look into them. Her feet hesitate and falter, but they faithfully find their way to the House of the Lord on each Sabbath Day.

After lunch there was little time to talk with Mr. Earp, because other friends came to spend Sunday afternoon with him. He has tried to let it be known how very much he appreciates the cards, the letters, the gifts that have come from his friends. At Christmastime cards reached our home from every field where Dad has served as pastor and from many other parts of the Southern Convention. Letters of encouragement have come from Elon classmates, from minister associates, from friends—not only seasonal greetings but time-consuming letters, full of comfort and hope. Not only have letters been written to Dad, but also many people have written to Mother to whom the past nine months have also been very strenuous. Several churches have sent letters from the congregation. At Christmastime a delegation brought a gift of $56.00, raised by the Palm Street Sunday School at Greensboro, N. C., where Rev. J. Everett Neese is pastor. The Ladies' Aid of the High Point Church sent a present of pajamas from their Christmas party at Mrs. Olin Smith's house.

During the holidays as we read letters and cards together, I asked many questions concerning the identity of folks among whom we have lived during the past years. I marvelled at Dad's keen recollection of names, places and events. We skipped from the Valley of Virginia to Georgia and back to North Carolina. Always he was first to give the connecting link

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

ELON COLLEGE BELONGS TO US.

By SUPT. WM. T. SCOTT.

Recently I had occasion to go through the bound volumes of THE CHRISTIAN SUN from 1927 to date. In the course of that "chore" I was particularly interested in the issues beyond 1931 as they pertained to Elon College. I had brought to my mind most vividly the most serious condition of Elon College when Dr. L. E. Smith responded to the command of his college and the Southern Convention that he undertake the presidency of the college. We just about lost Elon following 1931! In the paths of the onslaught of a great depression Elon found herself pretty much like England immediately after the fall of France when Winston Churchill came upon the scene with his indomitable courage. A man of less courage than Dr. Smith to steer Elon's course when she faced a staggering debt, with little credit, with a reduced student body, could not have stood up under the pressures of the terrific job ahead.

A review of the record will show that immediate plans were set in motion for liquidating the debt, re-establishing credit, increasing the student body, strengthening and paying the faculty, increasing endowment, improving the physical properties, etc.

Elon today has a capacity student body of over 800, a faculty of over 40 well qualified men and women. With good management the budget of the college is balanced each year, despite limited income from endowment. Few colleges in America has as good a record in management and in maintenance of a first-class school upon such limited resources.

If we look at Elon today we see a much improved physical property, greatly increased endowment, and a college fully accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. I pay this unsolicited tribute to Leon Edgar Smith.

In lauding Dr. Smith's efforts, he would be the last to wish to have accorded him the honor for Elon's progress since 1931. He could never have done what has been done without the prayers and support of his associates in our churches. Neither can Elon maintain herself and take her place in this new day without the increased financial support of our constituency. The needs for Christian institutions of college level were never greater than today. Elon is our Southern Convention's contribution for the training of youth for Christian living and service through Christian vocations as well as through so-called "secular" vocations. The atmosphere in which our youth are trained will make the difference whether or not they will make their life Christian or secular. Elon is the one institution in which we can help determine the policies, curricula, and the type of teachers who are to counsel our youth. Elon belongs to us.

Let us arise to a new appreciation of Elon and to those who have guided her course thus far. Let us arise to the support of our college, that she may fulfill her destiny as our church institution. Elon has gone far since 1931. Let us help take her on to her rightful place of usefulness for the days ahead.

of a misplaced person by stating a maiden name, a street address or a date. Through the years he has trained himself to remember a name, a face, an address. The training has proved very effective.

Mr. Earp wishes so much that he could make his gratitude known. He feels sometimes that His near one year's illness has come to him that he may in some measure come to recognize and recount the great host of friends who seem to surround him on the many sides of life.

The pianist at High Point Christian Church said Sunday, "We hope that he can attend church in person on Easter Sunday."

MARGARET EARP FRIEND.

WELCOME, TWICE WELCOME.

Some years ago I read a book which contained the lectures which a distinguished Englishman gave at an American Seminary. At the close of his preface to the book he expressed his appreciation to the faculty and students of the seminary for their courtesies and kindness to him during his stay at the school. Then he added, "There is not a sheer human kindness in the world, and I believe ministers get more than their share of it." I want to say "Amen" to that statement.

Take for instance the closing days of my ministry at Newport News. As the old Negro said, slightly mixing his metaphors, they "Welcomed our departure" in a generous way. Mary received several gifts from individuals. The Cosmopols gave her a lovely silver bowl, and the members of the Primary Department of the Sunday school gave her a lovely cameo brooch. At the last Family Night Covered Dish Supper which we had, the Golden Rule Bible Class gave her a corsage of beautiful flowers with a background of dollar bills as the foliage. Pretty leaves, those one dollar bills! The class also gave her a Sterling silver spoon that matched her flat silver.

I received gifts, too. Troop 16, Girl Scouts, bless their hearts, gave me a sturdy hammer and a set of fine screw drivers—something which I needed for my hobby shop. The Cosmopolitan Club gave me a sturdy quarter-horsepower motor for my shop. And the church tendered us a reception on our last Friday night with them and presented us with a purse containing one hundred and fifty dollars in cash. The reception was a happy occasion with a large number present, including fellow-ministers who brought words of appreciation, and with refreshments served by lovely young women in their pretty party dresses. A reception line consisting of officials of the church and the pastor and his wife received the guests as they entered the social hall which was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Our hearts will be warmed up.

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

MISSION PERIOD BEGINS.

The Mission Period for the Convention begins March 1 and closes June 30. This period—March, April, May and June—if observed will result in raising our sights and we shall see our world through the eyes of our Lord, whose spirit is the inspiration of all missionary endeavor.

We gratefully acknowledge your generous support of the cause of missions during the past year, and we humbly ask for your continued support of the World Mission of Jesus Christ. This year is perhaps as critical as any in our world history. Moral foundations are being shaken and new gods of nationalism are threatening to engulf our world with materialism. Jesus Christ and His gospel of love, goodwill and brotherhood are the only hope. Foundations are perhaps this year being laid either for world brotherhood or world strife. Wherever our missionaries are at work at home and abroad they are powerful forces for the understanding and well being of all people. We believe you will do all you can to promote Christian missions during this Mission Period. Please call upon us if we can help.

Our Mission Board has adopted a courageous budget of $66,007 for 1950 for missions at home and abroad. Every penny of this budget is needed if we are to do anything like our share in the Christian missionary enterprise. This budget can be raised by the good people of our churches by the simple use of the Cent - A - Meal Plan.

We cannot, we must not fail the Richard Jacksons, Riggses and their comrades in China during these trying days. Africa, Japan and the Islands of the Seas need the good news of God in Christ. We have a foreign missionary parish of 30,000,000 people who are looking to us for the gospel. No other church will take this good news to them if we fail. Our entire Foreign Mission goal of $27,314 must be raised if we are to do our reasonable share.

Let us also look at our beloved homeland. Evil forces are strongly bidding for supremacy here also. If the world is to become Christian—it is essential that America become Christian! America will never be Christian until Virginia and North Carolina—the area of our Convention—become Christian! This necessity strikes near home. It calls for a deeper dedication of us all.

America is on the move. Approximately 50 per cent of the people of America have moved within the last ten years. Whole new communities have sprung up about us. These new communities right here at home need the message of Christ through our church. For example, here is one new community of 400 homes which is open for us to enter, organize, and help build a new church. A generous offer of spacious lots—valued at $6,000 have been offered us by a Christian layman. Shall we accept this opportunity and offer? You and your church hold the answer.

HERE IS HOW IT CAN BE DONE.

* * * *

It can be done by the CENT-A-MEAL PLAN. The Plan is simply this: Ask each family of your Church and Sunday School to take one of the CENT-A-MEAL stickers, put it upon a box or glass jar, placing it upon the dining table, and at each meal during March, April, May and June drop in at least a penny for the work of the Mission Board at home and abroad. Then on the first Sunday of each month let each family empty the CENT-A-MEAL container, put the monthly offering in an ordinary envelope. This is sent to The Mission Board, Elon College, N. C. Some churches have the presentation on Easter Sunday with the regular Easter offering for Missions.

Other examples—two other new communities are ready for us to enter. In one a lot has already been provided and in the other lots are available.

Likewise, there comes the call for assistance from already established churches which are not strong enough to maintain adequate pastoral leadership to meet their growing needs and opportunities. We need to answer the call from these churches and help them grow into strong and substantial churches.

For Home Missions our Mission Board needs the minimum of $31,693 to fulfill its responsibility on behalf of the churches of the Southern Convention for new churches, strengthening present churches, and promoting the cause of Christian Missions.

We lay before you the great concern which is on our hearts. "The field is the world"; "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature"; "Father, as thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them"; "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech . . . by us."

Wm. T. Scott,
Executive Secretary.

MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY AS A PREACHER.

Then when I became a sophomore in college I was elected president of the College Y.M.C.A. This position carried with it opportunities to address Y.M.C.A. groups on religious topics in other schools and in churches of the city where the college was located as well as speaking to various young people's groups in churches of neighboring towns. The conviction that I ought to enter the ministry grew upon me as I responded to these opportunities for bearing Christian witness. I felt I should give up my Y.M.C.A. position, so as not to have such unpleasant thoughts (as that I ought to prepare for the ministry) molest my peace of mind. I was willing and glad to bear my Christian witness if only in doing so I would not be troubled with "the hounding thought" that I ought to be a preacher.

I had tried to free my mind of that troubling thought by teaching school and coaching athletics for a couple of terms. But in that experience the opportunities for service which the Christian ministry offered kept pressing for consideration. I was invited to supply the pulpit of a flourishing new Congregational Church two stations out from Des Moines, Iowa, while the retired minister who had organized the church and directed its building campaign went to California for the winter months as was his custom. I accepted the invitation but with the distinct understanding that I was not a ministerial student and that I purposed to enter the legal profession. I insisted that my messages were only talks and not sermons (as was definitely the truth) and I asked the people to please not call me "the boy preacher" as some did. But little did I realize that every Sunday was bringing me closer to the place where I would have to surrender.

INSTITUTES TO BE HELD IN MARCH.

"What shall I do about my child's attitude toward attending Sunday school?" "How shall I go about teaching Christian education in my home?" And, "Where am I going to find time for it?" These are some of the perplexing questions mothers are asking these days.

Dr. Paul Reynolds, Secretary of Family Life and Young Adults, Division of Christian Education of the Congregational Christian Churches, Chicago, Illinois, is the expert who will assist the mothers in finding the answers to these and other family problems at the Institutes which are scheduled to be held in March to take the place of the District Rallies in Eastern Virginia, Valley of Virginia and North Carolina.

The Church and the home go hand in hand in training for Christian living but the home has priority—"train up a child in the way he should go"—cannot be delegated entirely to the Church; each parent has a responsibility to see that every child has a Christian home in which to be nurtured. We attend our garden clubs to learn to grow beautiful flowers around our homes. We are energetic members of the home demonstration clubs in attempting ways to beautify our homes.

These Institutes are planned primarily for the women of our conferences to get a better understanding in ways to develop beautiful lives for God's Kingdom. I hope the older women of our churches will encourage the younger women to attend. They are the homemakers of today, and they have the building of the churches of tomorrow. We cannot afford to miss this golden opportunity to receive help from one who is so well qualified to give us this assistance.

CAROLINA, BEREÄ, HOPEDALE HAVE JAPAN REVIEW.

On Friday night, February 10, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill reviewed the study book, Which Way Japan, for Carolina, Berea and Hopedale Churches. Following the study, a fine fellowship hour was enjoyed in the home of the minister and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Bland Leebrick, when coffee and doughnuts were served. Mrs. Harold Ingle, superintendent of the Burlington District, was also present.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER AT BETHLEHEM CHURCH.

The World Day of Prayer was observed Friday night, February 17, at 7:30 o'clock at the Bethlehem Christian Church with the Cypress Chapel, Liberty Spring and Bethlehem Christian Churches participating.

Dr. Jesse Dollar of the Liberty Spring Church was the principal speaker.

Mrs. T. H. Dilday, president of the Bethlehem Missionary Society, presided. A program had been arranged by the presidents of the churches' missionary societies.

MISSION SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel Christian Church met Sunday night, February 12, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Parker, with Mrs. J. W. Jones presiding.

Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Henry Rountree. Her subject was, "What to Labor For." She read a part of the 6th Chapter of St. John. Mrs. Grady Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Parker sang one verse of "Saviour Lead Me, Lest I Stray." Mrs. Rountree closed with prayer.

The society accepted the invitation to meet with the Woman's Missionary Society of Bethlehem Christian Church for the World Day of Prayer which was held February 24 at 7:30 at Bethlehem Church. The Society will entertain the Cypress Ruritan Club in June.

Mrs. G. C. Mann taught the Bible Study from the Book of St. John. Mrs. Frank Harrell and Mrs. Roy Brinkley gave the program with Mrs. Grady Brown reading the "House Wife's Version of the 23rd Psalm." Mrs. Paul Parker read "The Health Woman's Plea." Mrs. Henry Rountree read "Which." Mrs. Roy Brinkley read "Prayer Still a Mighty Redeeming Force." Mrs. J. P. Byrd read "Call for Pulpits on Fire."

The group sang the "Old Rugged Cross," and "Help Somebody Today." The group was dismissed with prayer by Miss Nettie Harrell. The society will meet with Mrs. G. C. Mann in March.

NEWS FROM THE VALLEY WOMEN.

The Woman's Board of the Valley Conference met on February 6, at 10:30, at Bethel Church. Miss Verdie Showalter, president, presented the opening thought, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help." Mrs. E. J. Rohart offered prayer.

The duties of the Departmental Superintendents were discussed and a complete mailing list worked out.

Plans were also made for the Family Life Institute on March 21, with Dr. Paul R. Reynolds as guest speaker.

The president gave an interesting talk on the Cleveland joint assembly with the E. and R. women.

There was good attendance and a fine spirit of cooperation and fellowship.

The ladies of the church served a hot lunch at the noon hour.

MRS. CARL WALLACE REVIEWS BOOK AT LIBERTY (VANCE).

On one of the foggiest nights that people could remember, about 125 women gathered at Liberty (Vance) for a book review on Saturday night, February 12. The book, Missions at the Grass Roots, was reviewed by Mrs. Carl Wallace, Superintendent of Spiritual Life in the North Carolina Conference, and wife of the minister of New Hope and Beulah Churches. The following churches were represented: Henderson, Fuller's Chapel, Mt. Auburn and the Methodist Church near Mt. Auburn, New Hope, Beulah and Liberty—all with good delegations!

After the book study, a fellowship hour was enjoyed in the annex. The beautiful Valentine decorations included candles softly burning on a beautifully arranged table and a heart-shaped centerpiece of red carnations. Coffee was poured by Mrs. H. F. Mitchell, president of the local society and Mrs. C. Fred Wright, wife of the minister. The worship service was led by Mr. Wright, and the speaker introduced by Pattie Lee Coghill. The meeting was arranged by Pattie Lee and Mrs. E. M. Carter, District Superintendent.

CONGRATULATIONS ON ELON NUMBER.

Congratulations to President Smith, the Editor and Managing Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and contributors to the special Elon College Number of THE SUN on February 16. This issue was mailed to more than 4,000 Congregational Christian pastors throughout the United States, in addition to the regular subscribers. The facts contained therein ought to give us of the Southern Convention a new sense of pride in possessing such an outstanding institution as Elon.

WELCOME, TWICE WELCOME.

on every remembrance of these, and the many other courtesies and gifts of the Newport News people during our life among them.

When we moved into Chuckatuck to begin our ministry to the Oakland and the Berea Christian Churches we found another warm welcome. Some of the good women of the church had had the bungalow in which we are to live until the church buys or builds a parsonage, freshly painted, thoroughly swept and garnished, and equipped with a large Frigidaire and an electric stove. Furthermore there were many good things to eat in the Frigidaire and on the shelves, while two members of the Oakland Church were waiting to help us place our furniture. And we were invited out for supper that evening, a very thoughtful and gracious act on the part of Mrs. Ray Knight.

Since we became settled in our new home, many people of the village have called to welcome us, and several of them have brought more good things to eat. But the end is not yet. On Friday night of this week (February) 24) members of the Oakland Church are giving a reception in our honor at the church, and on Sunday, March 12, the members of the Berea Church are giving a tea in our honor at the Planters Club House. Our hearts have been warmed by these many courtesies and acts of generosity, and we hereby express our sincere and hearty thanks to one and all for their goodness to us.

PROGRESS REGISTERED AT BAY VIEW, NORFOLK.

On Sunday, February 5, 1950, the minister and his wife observed the first anniversary of living and working with the people of the Bay View Church. It was a very busy Sabbath for the group who attended church on the first Sunday in the month.

First, we always observe Holy Communion on the first Sunday of the month; secondly, it was Elon College Day, and last but not least it was the first anniversary of the minister. Needless say, a meditation or sermon is always expected on Sunday morning whether you have several other programs outlined or not.

Looking back over the past year, our hearts were filled with regret, because we had not been able to accomplish the things we had planned. Yet, on the other hand we considered ourselves fortunate for the things we had done.

When the pastor and his wife arrived last February arrangements had been made for them to reside in an apartment across the street from the church on Bay View Boulevard. People who have lived in Norfolk for the past few years realize the exorbitant prices one has to pay for an apartment. The church was no exception. They were paying $60.00 for a small apartment the minister had. Some of the ministers from the Eastern Virginia Conference witnessed the conditions. Soon, and fortunately, however, the minister discovered a beautiful place for sale about four blocks from the church. Negotiations were made to purchase the house as a par-

HILDESHEIM WORK CAMP.

In a recent article on the Hildesheim Work Camp, I said that I would tell you about some interesting personalities who were members of the camp. Those who have heard me speak know that Hanns Koehler is a young person worth knowing.

During the war he was in the army and went through many European campaigns. Immediately after his release, he returned to Hamburg, his home city, with a vision of a project for helping young people. He wanted to do something for them which would take them out of the bombed city. After going through months of bombing raids and poor food and the lack of normal recreation, the youth of Hamburg needed a change.

Almost singlehandedly he set out to establish a tent city outside of Hamburg, for the purpose of partial rehabilitation of the city's youth. Not all could be reached, but much good could be done. He was successful in keeping the project going for almost a year. What specifically did he accomplish? Those who were able to come to the camp for a week or two now received better food than they had eaten for a long time. Play and recreation in the fresh air of the country and in a clean camp were a great relief. Tensions of the mind and body were now given a chance to ease through rest, recreation and good food. Hanns sought to teach democratic ideals in the routine of camp life. By doing so, Germany has profited.

You would like to know Hanns more intimately than I am able to bring him to you through this article. He is a friendly person with wit and humor. From what I have already said you can see that he is like a person of courage and vision. Germany needs more people like him.

When I left Germany, Hanns was doing social work in a prison in northern Germany. I am sure that whatever he does in life it will be done unselfishly and as an act of service.

A NOTICE TO ALL SOUTHERN CONVENTION P. F.'ERS.

This is, as it says, just a note—a note to tell you of how one group has raised a little money for a very important cause, namely, that of sending a representative from the Southern Convention to a work camp overseas this summer.

Off hand, this may not sound so awfully important, but do you know, it is one of the few things we can do to bring about better relations between the youth of our own country and our brothers and sisters overseas. Just think, some young person, maybe from your own church, is going to have the opportunity to go and work, play, sing and rub elbows with other youths from other parts of the world. You know what wonderful fellowship we have had among ourselves at conferences and camps. Well, won't it be grand to share that fellowship with others?

As you know, if you have been reading the accounts in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, half of the amount has already been raised to send someone. So now we need around $300.00 more, and we'd be all set.

This is one way that the Greensboro P. F. group raised a few dollars. We sponsored a Sunday evening service in our church in which we all took part. We had been thinking for quite some time about our building fund, but now we broadened our outlook and thought of building abroad, too. So our offering that night went in part to our own building fund and the other part to the overseas project. We want to build a new church, but we also want to help build a better world. We feel that we have helped a little and we're going to do more. I know you are, too. After all, this idea of world brotherhood is a great thing. Let's do something about it!

sonage for the church. It was then realized that if the money on hand was spent for a parsonage, the church would have to wait a long time to raise the amount of money it now has at its disposal for an Educational Building.

A good friend of the minister suggested that he buy the place as his personal home, thus relieving the other funds for building purposes. The friends loaned the full amount to purchase the house and on May 1 the minister moved in.

Prior to this it was discovered that the church was indebted to the City of Norfolk for a sum of $785.00 for a street sewage assessment. This bill came due on February 15, and the church was unable to make any headway to pay it off. This was a tremendous setback and an added discouragement to many of our people.

About the latter part of February, Dr. Stanley North of the Church Extension Division of the Home Mission Board in New York came down for a visit. We learned that the Mission Board did not have funds to help us at this time with any building program. However, it was suggested that we have Mr. Ira Black to pay us a visit and engage a Lay Visitation Program. It was in late spring before this could be worked out, and it was decided to wait until fall before we undertook such a project.

The spring and summer months were lean ones for the church, and we got behind in several bills. This added other disappointments and a feeling of discouragement. At the close of the summer more of our people returned to the church with a new enthusiasm for work. From the first Sunday in October our church began to expand. The Lay Visitation Program was put on with abundant success. We received seventeen new members on Sunday morning, October 9. We had already received eleven before this time on Palm Sunday. It was with much joy we welcomed the new members into our fellowship. The new members added new encouragement to many of the others, but the spirit of the workers who participated in the Lay Visitation Program gave a greater impetus to the work of the church.

The latter part of October, Lay Evangelism was instituted and adopted in our church on the year-round basis. We endeavor each month to contact new people and get them into church, whether it be our church, or

CHURCH ORGANIZATION AND LEADERSHIP.

LESSON XI—MARCH 12, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Do your best to present yourself to God, as one approved, a workman who has no need to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth.—II Timothy 2:15.

LESSON TEXT: Acts 6:1-16; 20:17-18, 28; I Corinthians 12:27-28.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 12:3-8.

A Dispute Among the Saints.

The Church is made up of folks who are human beings. Even the fact that they have been born again does not mean that they will not have differences and disagreements. It was so in the Early Church, is now, and evermore shall be, world without end. Amen. A student of the New Testament is impressed by the number and the variety of disputes among the saints. The difference between the church of that day and our day is not the fact that they did not have disputes and we do have them, but in the way they handled their differences and their disputes. The lesson for today gives a striking illustration of this truth.

The Problem.

There were both Jewish Christians and Greek Christians in the church at Jerusalem, that is those who were Jews by birth, but Greeks by culture. The Grecian Jews felt that the widows in their ranks were being discriminated against in the distribution of food and clothing. (It is significant the Early Church the Church looked after its own.) They presented their grievances to the Twelve, who called a church conference. It looked as if "the fur might fly." Some folks would have loved it—they revel in a church fuss, and rejoice in a division in the ranks of the church. But the Twelve were men of sound wisdom and fine spirit. They had a ready and a reasonable solution to the vexing problem and they solved it by applying principles that are valid even today.

The Solution.

The Twelve felt that the work that they were doing was of great important, too. But it was not a case of either or, but of both. The Twelve suggested that they continue to give themselves to the preaching of the word and to prayer and to pastoral service. They also suggested that the members of the meeting select a committee of seven men who would have the responsibility of administering charity in the church. These men were to be men of spotless reputation, spiritual quality and commonsense. The suggestion pleased the whole multitude—they saw the wisdom of the thing and they forthwith elected seven men as laymen for this important work of the church. By many people they have been called the first deacons in the church, but the account in Acts does not so designate them as deacons.

Ah, the loss in the modern church because the minister has to do so many things that the laymen could do, and do as well or better than the minister! How much better would be the preaching and the pastoral work in the average church if the pastor was freed from so much of the routine work of the church and had more time for study and prayer and meditation! And how much happier and how much more the laymen would be developed if they were given these other tasks to do! It were better to train ten men to work than to do the work of ten men.

The Dignity of Church Work.

"And when they had prayed, they laid their hands upon them." These laymen were to do routine work in the church, but the Twelve gave dignity and meaning to it. They laid their hands on the seven and prayed. Laymen need to understand that even the humblest task done for the church and in Christ's name has dignity and spirit meaning. Nothing is common or unclean if it is done for Christ and his church.

The Heart of a Pastor.

On his way back to Jerusalem Paul sent for the elders of the Church at Ephesus and had them come to Miletus the port, for a farewell conference. His words as recorded in Acts 20 might well serve as a guide for the work of the minister in the average parish. He reminds them of his manner of life, his integrity of character, his diligence in work, his purity of motive and his freedom from greed and covetousness. He reminds them in the second place of his preaching—he had not kept back from them anything that was profitable unto them, and he had not shunned to declare unto them the whole gospel of Christ. And finally he warns them against dangers from without the church and against division within the church. And then he commends them unto the grace of God in Christ, reminding them that the life that shares is the blessed life, even as Christ in a saying unrecorded in the gospels had said. Then with a word of prayer he was gone. Unquestioned integrity of character, fearless preaching proclaiming the truth in love, a care and concern for people, and diligence in appointed tasks are essentials for a successful ministry in Christ's name.

Organization According to The Need.

Jesus left no formal organization in a church and no pattern or plans for such an organization. He trusted to the guidance of the Holy Spirit and the common sense of man. Furthermore the New Testament indicates that church organization was a gradual development and differed in different churches and communities. It appears that organization in the church took place to meet certain specific needs. There is a place for organization in our modern churches—the average church could not function effectively without it. But it is possible for a church to be over-organized, to spend all its time and energy in making the machinery go, and then have little time to turn out a finished product of Christian character. As a church grows and as its activities expand it needs organization to meet the needs. When Christ fed the multitude he had the people to sit down in orderly, well-arranged groups, and he gave to the disciples who in turn gave to the people. He organized to meet the need.

The Body of Christ.

"Now ye are the body of Christ!" Do you get the full implication of that Mr. Member of the Church? Christ the Head of the Church, the Church the Body of Christ, and members of the Church members of the body of Christ, the only means that He has of making His thought and will and love and purpose known to the world. What a difference it would make not only in the way in which we live but the way in which we serve if we kept in mind the fact that as a member of the Church I am a part of the Body of Christ. And in that Body every member has some part, some contributions to make to the life and work of the Church.

MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY AS A PREACHER.

same church I was to be associated with the college athletic coach, who was an ex-Congregational preacher. He was to have complete charge of the services, and I was simply to lead the singing and enlist the cooperation of the young people in promoting the campaign.

Then just a few days before the services were to begin, the athletic coach became ill. I naturally assumed that the meeting would be cancelled. But a group of the men urged that I be their leader in the campaign and that they would do everything they could to assist me.

There were several conversions each night—sixty-three during the week, forty-seven of whom were men of the community. I was made very happy by the results of the meeting in what it was doing for others. But I was heavy hearted because of what the meetings were doing to me, for the conviction grew mightily upon me that I was not going to be able to get out of being a minister even though I was firmly set against it. On the next to the last night of the campaign there were more than a dozen prominent men and half as many prominent women of the community who made the Christian decision and commitment. After the service I went to the home of the Sunday school superintendent out in the country where I was being entertained. The family of a father and mother and three grown boys were elated because of the fact that certain people who would mean so much to their church had that night professed conversion and declared their desire to become members of their church. But I was more worried than ever. I excused myself after a half hour or so, and went to my room. I was terribly tired and sleepy, but I could not sleep. I rolled and tossed in soul distress for I was positive that I ought to say "yes" to God in the matter of "would I invest my life in His ministry." But I was too set against it to get my own consent of mind.

Several times I got out of bed and knelt by my bedside in prayer asking God to please lift the conviction from my heart and let me be free. I promised Him again and again that I would live just as good a life as a layman as I could as a minister, that I would be His partner as a layman, that I would be willing to be a lay worker and do anything as a layman that He would have me do—but to please make me free from the thought that I ought to be a preacher. But repeatedly I found it useless to go back to bed, for I could not sleep.

Then toward's three o'clock in the morning I arose, dressed and took a walk in the moonlight through the woods across the road. I was communing with God in prayer as I walked, trying to persuade Him that it was a mistake for Him to want me to be a minister. I numbered the reasons why it was a mistake. But I could not seem to get response. And then coming to a large white oak tree near the edge of the woods, I threw myself on the ground at the base of the tree and poured out my heart to God, telling Him my dreams of making wealth so as to help Him in building churches, and in taking the Gospel Message to lands across the sea. I told Him that I was sure that my witness for Him as a layman would do far more good than it would as a minister, adding the comment that people didn't pay much attention to what preachers said; and calling His attention to the fact that perhaps the result of the Week of Religious Emphasis we were then having was due in part to the fact that the people knew I was not a minister. I waited in vain for His response.

And then I told Him that if He would lift the burden of conviction from my heart as definite evidence that it was His will that I be a minister, that I was ready to accept the challenge. Like a flash the burden was lifted. I walked back to my room and slept the remaining hours of the night like a child. From that hour until the present hour my soul has been at peace with God—while all through the months that I tried to persuade myself and God that I should not be a minister, I had no peace of mind or soul. I would not go through that struggle again for all the money in the world. No one can know how miserable such a struggle is except one who has said "no" in response to God's call to him to be His ambassador. I have never for a single moment regretted having accepted God's call into the ministry. And if I had a dozen lives to live, I would be willing without hesitation to give them all to the Christian ministry.

As I have observed among ministerial friends in our country and in Scotland and England—and as ministerial friends of all denominations have opened their hearts to me—I am convinced that the great majority of men who are happy in the ministry are men who entered the ministry not because they personally wanted to, but because they felt deep in their hearts that God wanted them to.

A sense of responsibility to God is the secret of why by far the largest majority of men have entered the Christian ministry—they have felt called of God to preach; and the question of divine import, "How shall the people hear without a preacher," has helped to motivate their decision.

It would, indeed, be difficult to conceive of any man deciding to enter the ministry simply because he had a photographic mind and with ease could give verbatim what he wrote or what he read, or because he was gifted with ready speech, or because he liked to hear the sonorous tones of his own pleasing voice, or because he enjoyed speaking in public. Petty likes and personal gratification play no part whatsoever in the picture where God calls one into the Christian ministry.

Men accept God's call to the ministry because of convictions that stir their soul. That mysterious sense of duty before God is universally the deciding factor with men who answer with the prophet Isaiah, "Lord, here am I, send me."

I am old-fashioned enough to believe that God actually called Isaiah—that He actually spoke to him and to Moses, to Elijah, and to Samuel. He spoke and they heard! But I am new-fashioned enough to believe that God calls men into His ministry today in the very same way that He called Isaiah of old—and that God wants to speak to men and women and boys and girls today in the very same way that He spoke to Moses, to Elijah to Samuel and to all the Old Testament and New Testament characters who were on speaking terms with the Lord of Hosts—He speaks to us in this year of our Lord 1950 in exactly the same voice that He has always spoken to mankind—the voice of reason, the voice of truth, the voice of understanding, the voice of need, the voice of conscience, the voice of love. God speaks today as He always has spoken—in the still small voice, the silent whisper of the soul. But too many people are making so much noise in their selfish manipulations and clatter with the things of this world that it would be necessary for God to shout at them through a megaphone in order to make them hear. But God speaks—He calls—He summons His servants today as He did of old. Blessed are they who listen and hear and answer.

NOTE: Message given during the Christian Workers' Conference at Elon College, N. C., and submitted for publication at the request of the Editor.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Our eighteen high school boys and girls will be given tickets to the production of one of Mozart's operas in the college auditorium by a company of North Carolina talent. The Elon Singers and their director and accompanist are the generous donors of these tickets. Thanks to Mr. John Westmoreland and Mr. Fletcher Moore and their choir. This bit of news only serves to remind us that our boys and girls have many advantages here near Elon College. They hear an excellent choir sing every Sunday. They see and hear many outstanding leaders in Whitley Memorial Auditorium. They attend Sunday school and church in a college community. And besides this they live in the country and on a farm. I tell them it is like having "all this and heaven, too!"

What fun the little girls and boys had making or buying the daintiest and prettiest of all Valentines to give me! It sounds funny when you put it in print, but if you could have seen these little folks shyly, with such glowing faces, getting around to handing me a pretty Valentine, you would know why I think it was worth telling you about. Several days before the fourteenth this happy business went on. Of course I was not the only one who received Valentines, but I am the only one writing you this letter!

The Daily Times-News of Burlington gave one of our little fellows, Richard Bridges, a big picture and article showing him opening one of the many packages that came to our boys and girls for St. Valentine's Day. Many of these children received remembrances of cards or something, and they are so appreciative.

Our water system here at the orphanage uses a thousand-gallon compression tank which was placed many, many years ago in the basement of the old building. It has just about rusted through, so much so that it is showing wetness at one place. It is being replaced, and no doubt before you read this it will be completely cared for, but I want you to know it takes money to put in and hook up a new and bigger tank. And such is the story right along in many places. I remember how I used to read these same sort of things in the letters of Mr. Johnston—whose name, by the way, is beautiful and radiant here on this campus.

Thanks to everyone who helps us. Thank you, thank you, to every church and Sunday school showing up each month on our big chart. The number is growing. I wish every Sunday school or church or some class in the church would see that a gift, some large or small offering, is sent us each month. Let this be our happy privilege: To grow these boys and girls in loving favor with God and man. Thank you everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

PROGRESS AT BAY VIEW.

some other church of their choice. This Christian Service has meant more to us than any project we have undertaken.

Around conference time our Sunday school was averaging 98 on Sunday morning, and the morning worship service was better attended than ever before. The group went to work and gained $75.00 to take to the Christian Missionary Association meeting in December. The Bartholomew Bible Class, the Woman's Fellowship, the Young People's Association, the Sunday school, and the Church, Mrs. Dorothy Callandor and the minister took memberships. The Christian Missionary Association has been good to us; we had to work hard and do our bit in return.

The Christmas and New Year holidays took heavy toll on our Sunday school and church attendance. Beginning the second Sunday in January our Sunday school has averaged well over a hundred. On Sunday morning, February 5, the attendance reached the record and went far beyond with an attendance of one hundred and eighteen. Those of you who are well acquainted with our church building wonder where we put them. Frankly, we do, too. The attendance at the morning worship service has increased with each Sunday. Sunday morning, February 12, the sanctuary was filled to near capacity. Already we are losing people who would like to come to our church, but we haven't the room.

The Bartholomew Bible Class (Men's Bible Class) last Sunday morning began meeting in the living room in the home of the minister. This is inconvenient, but it is an encouragement for more men to come when they will not be so cramped. But we cannot alleviate crowded, congested conditions any further—we need space!

Well, what about that outstanding debt to the City of Norfolk, you ask? Since Christmas we have launched a program to pay that debt off in full by Easter Sunday, April 9. Already we have on hand over four hundred dollars to pay on this bill. Pledges to pay this debt have exceeded $650.00. Our bill stands now at $820.00 as there is a matter of 6 per cent interest a year. With our campaign we hope to clear all bills, and burn a small token of a note on Eastern Sunday morning; and immediately following launch out with full speed ahead into our building program. We hope to have enough pledges to exceed $900.00 by Ash Wednesday, and from where the writer stands, it will be met and maybe go beyond.

The past year has been spent in getting acquainted and discovering the lay of the land here at Bay View. New Homes are going up by the score, new people are moving in, and we are getting some of them. But we have reached capacity. Do you have any suggestion for us?

We have good people here at Bay View, hard working people who would give the shirts from their backs for their minister and his wife. We do not have any wealthy people in our church, but they give their time when they have run out of money. Let me describe our people to you.

Twice within the past year the members of the Bay View Church have "pounded" the minister and his wife. The first time was soon after they had moved into their home. They brought useful things to eat, and the evening was spent in fellowship and fun together. The second time was Monday evening, February 6, one year after the minister first arrived. Mr. Charlie Mountcastle had asked if he might speak with the minister on this evening concerning certain church matters. When the good brother came his wife, Margaret, and two daughters, Thelma and Debby, came with him. By the time they were seated doors began slamming to cars in the street, and the parson assumed his new neighbors were throwing a housewarming or some such party. But it wasn't the neighbor's doorbell that sounded off. When the writer went to the door his front lawn was filled with people from the church. Surprised? I'll say we were! We haven't fully recovered yet. Some of the guests had to go over to the church to secure chairs for them to sit on. Once they were in the house an attempt was made to count noses, but an accurate number of could not be agreed upon. However, it was safe to calculate that there were fifty here. They were in the living room, kitchen and dining room, and several young people resorted to the romantic station, the stairway. We did not have a definite set program, but we did, accomplished or attempted, whatever someone suggested (within reason). We sang, told stories, impromptu speeches and the minister even preached a sermon (a good occasion for one). Many suspicious paper sacks were placed in the middle of the floor, and the minister and Mrs. Griffin were invited to open them. With the assistance of Lynn Albert and Little Winkie Wiley we discovered many useful gifts in the nature of canned fruits, vegetables, sugar (twenty-seven pounds of it), two pounds of shortening and so many other things too numerous to remember. After all the wonderful gifts had been opened, it was necessary for the minister, who was too near tears of happiness by this time, to make a little talk of a serious nature.

Very briefly he spoke of the work done in the past year, and he outlined briefly the plans for the future regarding the Building Program. Last, but not least, he assured his lit-

In Memoriam

DIXON.

Mr. Harry J. Dixon, a loyal member of the Christian Temple, passed away in the Norfolk General Hospital on January 4, 1950, after only a few days of serious illness. Funeral services were conducted on January 6, 1950, by the writer and Dr. L. E. Smith, former pastor.

Mr. Dixon was always interested in his church and expressed that loyalty through both material and spiritual support of the church. He was a good and faithful husband and father. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minnie Eley Dixon, one son, James Dixon, and several grandchildren.

The members of the Christian Temple extend to the family of Mr. Dixon sincere sympathy and extend to them the assurance of our prayers.

W. MILLARD STEVENS.

LESTER.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Lester, widow of George Thomas Lester, died Saturday morning at the home of her son, Rev. F. C. Lester, 840 Sunset Avenue in Asheboro, N. C. Mrs. D. L. Wright, a daughter, shared an apartment with her mother at the Congregational Christian parsonage.

Mrs. Lester, who was ninety years old last October 30, was born in Rockingham County near Summerfield. She had lived in Asheboro for the last three years.

Survivors besides the son and daughter living in Asheboro include three daughters, Mrs. A. G. Wheeler and Mrs. T. F. Humphries of R. F. D., Reidsville, and Mrs. Egbert Truitt of Glen Raven; one son, T. E. Lester of Reidsville; twenty-two grandchildren; thirty-four great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

Funeral for Mrs. Lester was conducted on Sunday afternoon at Mt. Bethel Christian Church, near Summerfield, where she had been a member since childhood. Services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Fred Allred of Ramseur, assisted by Dr. John G. Truitt of Elon College and Rev. W. J. Andes of Winston-Salem. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Members of the Asheboro Congregational Church were requested not to send flowers, the flock he was all theirs for as long as they wanted him.

What has been written in the past few paragraphs might be an incentive to some of you good laymen to do something for your minister sometime. I might not know your minister, but whoever he is, I know it would gratefully be appreciated.

Well, there you have it, good readers of THE SUN. This article is much too long, and it should have been sent in more economy sizes. I want you to know we are very much at Bay View, and you shall hear from us again real soon. Won't you look for us?

JOHNSON L. GRIFFIN,

but instead to give the money for a memorial to be used for something which the church needs. Any Sun readers who would like to share in such a memorial for Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Lester may send their gifts to Mrs. J. M. Farlow, 417 Peachtree Street, Asheboro, N. C.

TAYLOR.

Mr. Robert N. Taylor, son of Napoleon B. and Martha Austin Taylor, was born on July 19, 1867, and passed away at his home near Semora, N. C., on October 6, 1949.

Mr. Taylor united with Lebanon Christian Church as a young man and remained a faithful member during his life. In his later years when declining health forbade active participation in church affairs, he still maintained a keen interest in his church.

Surviving him by his marriage to Miss Nannie McDowell is one daughter, Mrs. Alvin Scott, Lawrenceville, Va. In 1902 he married Miss Helen Scott. Besides her, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Thelma McSherry, Semora, N. C.; Mrs. M. E. Tulloh, Alton, Va.; and Mrs. Harold Winstead, Roxboro, N. C.; one son, Stickney Taylor, Semora, N. C., and one brother, W. S. Taylor, Semora, N. C.; twelve grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. M. W. Andes at Lebanon Christian Church, with burial in the church cemetery.

Unto God's gracious love and protection we commit the family.

HIATT.

Mrs. Edna Harris Hiatt a member of Berea Christian Church, passed away on January 18, 1950. She is survived by her husband, Mr. M. E. Hiatt and one daughter, Miss Anna Lou Hiatt, also two sisters and four brothers. Her funeral services were conducted at Berea Christian Church, Great Bridge, Va., on January 20, 1950, at 3:00 p. m. The services were conducted by the Rev. O. D. Poythress of the South Norfolk Christian Church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we try to emulate the high Christian standards and high ideals which were her daily living.

2. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for his comfort and care.

Mrs. W. S. SOREY.

LUKE.

On December 22, 1949, our Heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom called home Mrs. J. D. Luke who was a charter member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church. Her health had not permitted her to attend the meetings for a long time.

Be it resolved:

1. That we realize God doeth all things well and we bow in humble submission to His will.

2. That we rejoice in the triumph of her release from her sufferings to enter into a more abundant life.

3. That we extend our sympathy to her daughter and commend her to God for comfort.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

HOW FAR CAN HE GO?

By Charles A. Wells

It is often said that today's world lacks the leadership we have had in the past. That may be true, but of one thing we can be sure—we have a very different world. It is far more complex, populations have increased enormously, the intricacies of science have added to the unfathomable intricacies of man's character and human relations. The world has outgrown man's outreach—his controls. There is a growing feeling among historians that the leaders of the world do very little really to guide or change things. The task of leadership in any nation today has simply grown beyond human capacity, and when men unite for joint control, their conflicting natures and desires bring no remedy for the helplessness. It is here that divine presence has meaning. When the will of God—truth, justice, love—is the common denominator of men's thoughts and actions, a new unity enters; forces are set into play that can reach out and govern as human whim and wishes can never do. Must we stumble on towards a complete breakdown before we learn once more the support of the "Everlasting Arms"?

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1950

NUMBER 10

"One Great Hour--For the Needs of the World"

I was hungry and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me. . . . In as much as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. (Words of Jesus according to St. Matthew.)

Material and offering envelopes have been sent for the use of the churches and Sunday schools in the special gift for Relief and Reconstruction through our Congregational Christian Churches on Sunday, March 12, 1950. This is the only major appeal for this work of relief to suffering mankind to be made in the Southern Convention in 1950. The Mission Board urges most earnestly that you respond to this urgent call for funds for the work of our Lord.

If you have not heard the great radio programs which have been broadcast during the week, be sure to listen to the one which will be carried on all four major networks on Saturday night, March 11.

The chief reason the Protestant and Eastern Orthodox Churches are making this appeal for 1950 is the fact that relief, reconstruction and inter-church aid needs continue to exist; in some areas they are greatly increased. This is particularly true in regard to the vast refugee problem both in Europe and Asia. As Christians we just cannot turn our backs to such tragic needs of little children, old people, and mothers and fathers, who pathetically are trying in love, just as you and I would, to keep their families together, to clothe and feed them. We are materially blessed and have been spared these untold tragedies.

Let us all help in this "One Great Hour of Sharing" by making generous offerings on Sunday, March 12, for this great Christian program of sharing for the lonely, hungry and suffering peoples of Europe and Asia. The national goal of our Congregational Christian Churches for 1950 is $1,000,000.00, and it is hoped that "The One Great Hour of Sharing" will bring offerings totalling $500,000.00 on this goal. Our Southern Convention goal is $7,000.00. Help us reach this goal "In His name and for their sake."

If for any reason you are unable to make your offering on Sunday, your contribution should be sent direct to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, North Carolina, designated "For Relief and Reconstruction." Please give the name of your local church, that it also may receive proper credit.

WILLIAM T. SCOTT, Supt.,
The Southern Convention.

News Flashes

As a part of the Lenten observance at the Christian Temple, Norfolk, religious films are being shown Sunday evenings.

Pattie Lee Coghill was guest speaker at the annual birthday banquet of the Woman's Auxiliary at Newport News, February 15.

Rev. Ralph R. Shrader spoke on Friday evening of last week at First Church, Richmond, on the subject: "God and Man—Together."

Dr. Luther B. Grice, pastor of Holy Neck Church, Holland, Va., began a series of sermons on "The Beatitudes" Sunday, February 5, continuing through March 26.

First Church, Burlington, is showing a series of religious pictures for children each Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. The children of the community are invited to attend without admission charge.

Mrs. W. T. Scott entertained the Elon College Book Club last Thursday afternoon. Prof. E. P. Douglas, a member of the Elon faculty, spoke on "The Origin of North Carolina Literature."

Dr. H. S. Harcastle has been teaching during the past week in a Methodist Training School in Lynchburg, Va. He reports 132 enrolled in his class, including several from our Congregational Christian Church.

The Tryon Church has finished a new educational plant for their church. The whole community responded to the building program and Dr. Frank Murtfeldt, the pastor, reports a lively program as they move into the new building.

The Rev. Peter Young, formerly at the Norfolk Christian Temple, has accepted a call to the Leyden Congregational Church of Brookline, Mass. Mr. Young who is now residing in Mariemont, Ohio, will begin his work in Massachusetts on May 1.

"One great Hour of Sharing," the special campaign for funds for Relief and Reconstruction through the Congregational Christian and other denomination, will be observed Sunday, March 12. Be certain to listen to the radio program over the four major networks on Saturday night, March 11.

The Spiritual Life Clinic, a co-operative program of our Winchester Church is in full progress. Mrs. Mary Welch will be the speaker at our Winchester Church on Sunday, March 12. The Evangelistic Services at the Winchester Church will begin March 19.

Dr. W. P. Jackson, pastor emeritus of the Asheville Church, attended the meeting on evangelism at his church. He is chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means for Evangelism in his church. After several years of illness, it was good to see him out and going again.

The Elon Singers are away on their third consecutive northern tour this week. They left Elon on March 3 for an eleven-day tour. Musical programs have been given at Lynchburg, Luray, and Winchester in Virginia, Barrington and Providence, Rhode Island, Jersey City, New Jersey and Drexel, Pennsylvania.

The Loyal Fellowship Class of the Oakland Christian Church met Wednesday night of last week at the church with Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pruden, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Pruden and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Dailey as hosts. Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Harcastle were welcomed by the class with Mrs. A. B. Johnson acting as spokesman for the group.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of Congregational Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., will teach the Business Men's Class of Norfolk each Friday during the month of March, according to Charles B. Kello, president of the class. The class meets at the Ames and Brownley dining room each Friday at 1:00 p. m. The class is an interdenominational one drawing its membership from business men of the city.

TIMOTHY CHANG VISITS ALBEMARLE.

Timothy Chang was guest speaker for the morning and evening services in the Albemarle Church on Sunday, February 5. He spoke to capacity crowds at both services. For the morning service it was necessary to open the Sunday school rooms on each side of the main auditorium to seat the congregation.

In the morning the main emphasis was placed upon Christianity as the only hope of China and of the world. "China," he said, "has Confucianism, Mohammedanism, and other religions which teach high standards and ideals, but," he concluded, "only Christianity with its living Christ offers any lasting hope and peace." Most of the evening service was used to show and explain a set of color-slides made in China. A number of them showed Dick and Dorothy Jackson in their work, and the rest were of the Han Mei School and other related subjects.

The Albemarle Church observed Youth Week by placing the services of the church in the hands of the young people that week. The week was climaxed with the observance of College Day on Sunday when Timothy spoke of the importance of education for the well-rounded mind, and the pastor spoke briefly of the need for well-educated young people and the significant role Elon College plays in the life of our church.

The women of the church had charge of the evening service, which constituted their required public worship service for the year. Everyone enjoyed having Timothy in Albemarle very much. You who are yet contemplating having him in your church for a week end have much in store. Our vision was broadened by his visit with us.

FAMILY DAY AT HOLY NECK.

The 34th birthday anniversary of the Holy Neck Missionary Society was celebrated Sunday, January 15 and the day was observed as "Family Day" at Holy Neck Church. At the morning worship service, Dr. Luther B. Grice spoke on "The Fellowship of the Home."

Sunday evening at 6 o'clock members of the church gathered at the church hall for a pot luck supper, which consisted of ham, fried chicken, baked chicken, tenderloins, salads of all kinds, celery, several kinds of breads, deviled eggs, pickles of all kinds, cakes and coffee. The centerpiece for the buffet table was a three-tiered birthday cake with 34 candles.

After the supper Mrs. Allen Piland, president of the Missionary Aid Society, conducted a memorial service in memory of Mrs. B. D. Jones, a former president of the society, who passed away in February, 1949. Mrs. Jones was the speaker at the Family Night supper celebrated in January, 1949, which was the last meeting she attended with the church group.

Mrs. Piland welcomed the guests, among whom were Mrs. F. O. Forbes, a former president; Mrs. J. T. Jones, (Continued on page 7.)

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

FORMER HISTORIAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION PASSES.

Funeral services for Major Wilbur E. MacClenny, 74, one of the South's noted historians, who died Friday night in a local hospital, were held Sunday afternoon, March 5, at 3:00 at the Suffolk Christian Church.

The Rev. Duane Vore, pastor of the Christian Church, conducted the services. Burial followed in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Mr. MacClenny was for many years historian of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

Death came to Suffolk's well-known historian and churchman after a lengthy illness.

The Major was born in the Myrtle section of Nansemond County on April 27, 1875, the son of David and Ann Maria Holland MacClenny.

He attended the public and private schools of the day, and then entered Elon College, from which he was graduated with the Bachelor of Philosophy degree in 1897. He also studied at Washington and Lee University in Lexington and in 1912, at the age of 37, he was honored with the Master of Arts degree by Elon College.

Prior to this, he taught for two years in the public schools of Hobson and Cypress Chapel.

His teaching was interrupted by the war between the United States and Spain. He volunteered as a private in Company "G," 5th Virginia (Continued on page 14.)

THE LITERARY ROLE OF THE CHURCH

The inspiration of God's spirit—was it reserved for the biblical writers alone? Yes, in a unique sense. But there are many channels through which that spirit flows into contemporary lives.

One of the most potent channels for the inflowing of the divine spirit is that of books—religious books primarily, although the spirit has descended in large measure to many secular heroes of the pen. If reading is neglected, the main artery of the spirit is severed.

The church should be the willing and eager custodian of good books. If the church does not promote the reading of religious books, who will? Many of our people need an antidote to the secular propaganda of press, radio and "grapevine."

Never was there an age of greater wealth in religious books. God is endeavoring to speak to us all in many ways, especially through the devoted scholarship of religious authors. Neglect here closes the door in God's face.

How often Jesus visited his friends at eventide! He does that today as people read the Bible and books that exalt Christ. The Church can do no better than exalt and promote this very thing.

The Master spoke of the wise scribe who brought forth out of his treasure things old and new. Let this suggest to us the treasure of a library with books old and new.

Do our people buy, read, or have access to the wealth of religious books which should be an inseparable part of their spiritual birthright? The Church has a vital ministry to perform here. The Church cannot fulfil its literary role simply by providing Sunday school literature for children.

First Church, Newport News, dedicated a Church Library during February. The service was built around the theme: "Opening Life's Windows Through the Church Library." Harold Stalnaker, adult superintendent of the Sunday school, led the service of dedication. The library is housed in the new and adequate educational building of that church.

Other churches, to be sure, have church libraries, but some of them are inadequate. The modern church should have a library that is attractive, available, representative and up to date. This magnifies and multiplies the ministry of the church.

GREAT DAYS AHEAD!

March brings many opportunities to our people for missionary education and leadership training. Miss Frances Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Moulton will appear at our missionary education movement throughout the Convention. Dr. Ralph Shrader is making a limited number of appearances. He spoke Sunday at Morrisville. Dr. Paul Reynolds will play a prominent part in the Family Life Institute at Elon and at the Virginia Valley Conference. He will participate in the Young Adult Workshop at Winston-Salem, March 25-26.

Let us make the most of these opportunities. People of wide experience, specialized training and profound insight come to share their best with us. March should be a significant month on every church calendar. See that your church shares the benefits of these meetings.

THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ADVANCE IN MAINE

How ordinary laymen of churches "way down East" in Maine, reach "the good folks who are not in the church but ought to be" was told by Rev. Nathanael M. Guptill, minister of the Old North Church on Meeting House Hill (Congregational), South Portland, Maine, speaking in Cleveland, Ohio, at a luncheon of the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism of the Congregational Christian Churches of America. His subject was "Fishing for Men in Maine."

The fundamental principle of the successful plan described by Mr. Guptill is that of personal visitation in the homes not by pastors, but by laymen and lay women trained for the job. "God forbid that we should sell the Kingdom of God in the same way used to sell Fuller brushes or vacuum cleaners!" was the shocked comment by some when the plan was outlined. To this Mr. Guptill replied: "Jesus and the Disciples used this method long before Fuller brushes or vacuum cleaners were invented."

The idea so successfully applied in South Portland, said Mr. Guptill, was originated by a Methodist, Guy H. Black. Mr. Black figured that if "folks who ought to be in the church are outside the church the thing to do is to go to their homes and ask them to come into the church."

His plan was unique in that it did not leave this to what Mr. Guptill described as "the door to door peregrination of the patient pastor," but placed the job squarely on the shoulders of Christian laymen and lay women. "The method is not for lazy ministers or luke warm laymen," warned Mr. Guptill, "but if it is followed to the end the results are assured."

The Greater Portland Council of Churches tried this plan in the winter of 1946-47. First the ministers took some training and then made up lists of prospective new members. These included many who were regular attendants at services; some who should have taken a definite stand long ago; others who worked in church groups but were not members; parents of children and youth active in the church, and men who for years had held their religion in their wives' names.

Next came the enlistment of a team of 21 laymen who after five briefing periods went out, two by two, with fear and trembling to visit homes. When they returned after the first Sunday afternoon of visitation each one carried at least one card with the name of a brand new Christian. There was an early Christian atmosphere in the feelings of elation and relief that prevailed, said Mr. Guptill. After that the timid fishermen were asking for new names.

"When the final tabulations were in it was found there had been one decision for every two cards," said Mr. Guptill. "The three churches which cooperated most fully added to their membership 200, 120 and 100 new members respectively.

Part of the success of this plan, however, lies in the follow-up, Mr. Guptill pointed out. And so emerged the permanent organizations called "Fishermen's Clubs." To them falls responsibility not only of adding new members but of seeing that these new members are assimilated and welded permanently into the life of the church.

Members of the "Fishermen's Clubs" wear a small lapel insignia depicting a fish, the ancient symbol of the Christians from the time of the catacombs. Before one can wear this button, however, he or she must have brought one person to the decision for the Christian life. When he has won 10 he can wear a gold insignia.

"There you go," cried the ever present critic, "making the church into a Rotary Club." But the criticism fell flat on its face in the presence of the deep sincerity of the fisherman. For World War veterans laid aside their precious honorable discharge badges and Lions, Rotarians, Kiwanians, Masons and Odd Fellows removed their respective lapel buttons to give the Fishermen's symbol the place of honor.

"Its simplicity excites curious questioning," said Mr. Guptill, "which is all the good Fisherman needs to start a conversation about the church with somebody who perhaps has not thought of Christ for years. These conversations are not in the vocabulary of the preacher and quite probably do not include the prescribed theological interrogations but they often stir deep thoughts and open doors into souls."

As part of a successful follow-up plan, Mr. Guptill also told of a Yearly Harvest Cycle, a program for integrating church members and especially getting them into the habit of regular attendance upon Sunday morning worship. On this he declared, emphatically:

"By and large, considered as a group within the society of which they are a part, the folks who go to church have less crime, less divorce, less emotional instability, and more integrity, yes, more faith, hope and charity than any other group and it is neither irrational nor unchristian to state that attendance on worship is more important than adult education, social action or any other Christian activity. Without it the church cannot be the church!"

In addition to his duties as pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church in South Portland, Maine, which has increased in membership from under 200 to over 700 and built a $65,000 parish hall since Mr. Guptill came as pastor in 1943, this young minister has served as Chairman of the Maine State Parole Board and as Protestant Chaplain of the Maine State School for Boys.

Born the son of a Congregational minister who was for many years Superintendent of the Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society, Nathanael Guptill graduated from Colby College and Andover-Newton Theological Seminary.

The Editor met Mr. Guptill in Cleveland where each served on the Nominating Committee of the General Council.

The Church's Task in the Modern World

By REV. ZANDA P. JENKINS*

A message given before the February meeting of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association

The year 1950 marked the beginning of the last half of the 20th Century. The Century began with man "in the saddle." The world was in the midst of breath-taking discoveries, inventions and scientific investigations. Men watched the spectacle as children seeing their first circus. In the hustle and hurry of life the center of life shifted from the spiritual to the material; and truly man acquired the materials in sufficient quantity to make of this world an Eden. But, alas! In the midst of this material prosperity, the world has witnessed two of the most devastating and tragic wars of all time. The Church being caught in the maze of things is passing through the darkest and most complex period of its history. Therefore the task of the Church is of immense importance to ministers and Christian leaders. What is the task and purpose of the Church? What is its function in our modern world? For our discussion here today we shall content ourselves with the definition of the task and purpose of the Church in the words of Dr. A. W. Beaven: "The purpose and task of the Church is to secure within individuals and society an ever-increasing practice of the attitudes toward God and man that were revealed in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ." This statement of the task and purpose of the Church places the objective in the realm of Christlikeness of character produced rather than in theological beliefs held and ritualistic forms observed. We seek here a measurement which can be applied readily by the average person.

It is not here contended that this brief definition includes any outline of steps needed to gain the end or goal of which we speak. Neither is it held that it is adequate as a way of describing the interplay between the Divine and human, such as would be stressed in a theological definition. However, what is here contended is that, the Church must seek to produce the Christlike character, moving in a Christlike direction.

After all, no matter what a church does, if it can go on year after year and the people feel contented with unchristian-like attitudes and unbrotherly conduct, and if they do not feel an ever increasing hunger for those fruits of the Spirit which evidence Christlikeness of life, surely the main objective is not being attained.

And further, if this objective needs defense, let us turn back for a moment to the pages of the Scriptures and listen to the words from which we draw our original ideas. First, take the test proposed by Jesus himself—"By their fruits ye shall know them." Or take the position to be occupied by his followers, "Ye are the salt of the earth"; if salt cannot preserve other objects for which it was intended, then it cannot preserve itself. Read again the measurements he set forth by which Christians were to guide their actions; "Therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them; ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect." How else can these be interpreted than that Jesus expected

DOWN IN FLORIDIA.

The sunshine in St. Petersburg, Florida, has been wonderful since we arrived. Probably it was just as wonderful before. But from letters and newspaper reports it seems that the weather in Virginia has been cloudy, rainy and cold. That is to be expected there in February.

Three things have impressed me during our stay in this city of sunshine. People go to church; and if you wish to get a good seat, you have to go early—at least an hour before time for the service to begin. There are a lot of white-haired people here. One would guess they are old. If they are old they walk mighty fast and they put on a lot of the manners and appearance of much younger people. It really seems to me that about 99 per cent of the people have white hair—what there is of it. I do not mean gray—I mean white hair. I do not object to that—I like it. But I am just telling you about the people in St. Petersburg. I told my wife that I would be so glad to see a young looking person—that I thought if I should find such a person here I would want to embrace him. (Not talking about the opposite sex now.) Well, the old people are not only here—but many of them are returning to their romantic days again. I mean there are many signs in the parks and on the beaches that these white-haired folks are making love to each other. Why, I saw an elderly couple playing hands—or holding hands—I am not sure which is the proper title for that physical exercise. They seemed to be enjoying it. I threatened to try out my wife to see if I might hold her hand, in public. But she refused—here in St. Petersburg.

The third thing of interest is: people here eat. Nearly everywhere you go, somebody is looking either for a place to park a car or to eat. The streets are very wide, but there is not enough parking space for all the cars near the restaurants and churches. There isn't much one can do about it. That is about all most people are here for, and they ride around in circles, block after block, until someone moves out of a nice parking place. If you happen to be there, you get the place. If you are late, you drive around a few more blocks until someone else moves out. The home folks and tourists are a good-natured lot, and they enjoy being jostled about in such a manner. It is wonderful to be here. But it will be just as fine to return home to Virginia when the time is out and the money has been fully spent.

A few weeks like these days will bring renewed health and strength. The body is renewed, while one works and rests. The spirit is refreshed by quiet meditation and worship in the great churches. The closer one gets to nature, and to God, the more there is sense and meaning to life. In God's great world, flooded by glorious sunshine, spotted here and there by the fragrance and beauty of forests and flowers, peopled by those whose hearts worship and adore him, enriched by the fellowship of worthy sons of the Most High, there are so many sources of human happiness that one rejoices to see just a little part of its wonders planted here for man's joy and spiritual uplift.

HAPPY HOME.

It started even before the war, this desire of ours: to own a parsonage at Happy Home. Rev. W. J. Andes was then our pastor. He organized a Young Married People's Class (now Young Adults). That group elected a treasurer and before long announced that they had a building fund. Their only method of securing it had been by regular contributions.

Our church is very grateful for the amount of $1,500 which we received from the Holt Fund. This gift, and the Sunday School Class fund totaled $3,034.

With the war came a shortage of building material; and our efforts to build were halted, but not our hopes. We bought a lot near the church on which to build the parsonage.

When Rev. Thurman F. Bowers came to us as our pastor in March, 1947, we were again inspired to build. Sizeable contributions were made by individuals and various organizations of the church did their part. The Missionary Society, Pilgrim Fellowship and Sunday School. Miss Ruth Helen Gunn organized an Intermediate Class and while it was yet new, this class sponsored a project that netted over $1,000.

In August, 1949, an indebtedness of $3,450 was reported. We had hoped to clear this up before Conference met in November. The pastor and church secretary contacted every member of the church by letter. Each member was asked to make some contribution, be it large or small. October 16 was set as Loyalty Day. On that day the balance due was $400. This was cleared before Conference met.

The parsonage is of brick construction with six rooms completed (three rooms unfinished). It is equipped with heat, water, lights and Venetian blinds. There is an equipped bath also. The cost was approximately $10,000.

The building committee was composed of members of the Board of Trustees: Messrs. G. D. Ellington, John R. Carter, J. H. Cox, W. M. Sparks and Ambrose Evans, and the following ladies, Mrs. Arthur Powell, Misses Clarice Gunn and Louise Sparks.

We would not forget those friends who are not members of our church and who gave generously.

Soon we hope to have a special service dedicating our parsonage.

REIDSVILLE REPORTS PROGRESS.

Ten months ago the Rev. Tucker G. Humphries became the pastor of our Reidsville Church. So many good, new things are now going on in this active church and these things are reflecting in services of worship. For it is next to impossible to choose your seat at the 11 o'clock hour. All seats are always filled and often extra chairs have to be brought in. And while the evening hour is not quite so well attended, yet the church is always well filled.

Our new pastor believes that if the church is used only on Sunday it had better close its doors. We as a congregation agree with him. Since Mr. Humphries began his ministry here these are some of the many new and good things that have begun:

A Fireside Club has been organized. This is a group of young married couples, numbering 40 to 50, who meet once a month for supper, fellowship and service. One of the fine service jobs which this group sponsors is the "Ping Pong" hour.

About two months ago Mr. Humphries had paroled into his custody five 12-year-old boys who had found their way into the juvenile court. They have joined our Sunday school

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

DEAR FRIENDS OF ELON COLLEGE:

The fifty-ninth Commencement of Elon College will soon be here. Now's the time for you who are alumni and those of you who are interested, to start making your plans to be present. The graduating classes of 1900, 1910, 1920, 1925, 1930 and 1940 will hold reunions this Commencement. If you are members of one of these classes you are urged to make a special effort to be present.

There are many activities on our campus that I know you would be interested in, but space does not permit going into many of them. However, I'm sure you'll be interested to learn that so far this year there have been no complaints from the students about the dining. I understand from the students that the food has been very good. The honor system, voted last May by the students to go into effect at the beginning of the present school year, is working better than anyone expected. The students have been given responsibility and they have proved to everyone that they can know how to assume this responsibility.

Construction of the gymnasium has given our student body added pride in their school. It has done much to improve their morale and their appreciation for the college. They have played a big part in making this dream come true. Whenever a group has an investment in anything it keeps them a part of it forever. The same is true of you, the alumni and friends of Elon College. Anything that is done to improve Elon, by the same token improves you. Having once been a part of the institution it thereby becomes a part of you.

The members of the Elon College choir are now on their annual spring tour. They are giving seven concerts, appearing in Virginia and going as far north as Connecticut. They have a good program and this annual tour carries the name of Elon College to many places where it has not been known. These students give their spring vacation to make this trip and they deserve a great deal of credit for their devotion and loyalty to their Alma Mater.

Sincerely,

JIMMY DARDEN,

Alumni Secretary.

REIDSVILLE REPORTS.

and always attend church. They each have been assigned a big brother. They have joined our Boy Scout troop. They report to our pastor once a week. In order to keep them out of pool halls and off the street corners, and keep them in a wholesome atmosphere and give them Christian leadership, the Ping Pong Hour was born. On Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock boys and girls of our community gather at the church to play ping pong, checkers, monopoly, ring games and always finish with something in the way of a treat. Three couples of the Fireside Club supervise this play hour. The first night of the Ping Pong Hour, six were present, last week there were 33 boys and girls present. This week there will be more.

A new Boy Scout troop is the pride of the Baraca Class. This class sponsors the troop and furnishes its leadership. Here again there is enthusiasm and progress—from a beginning of six boys we now have 28 registered scouts. And four of these are going to the Scout Jamboree in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania.

By the time this is read in THE CHRISTIAN SUN our baby clinic will be operating. Dr. Robert Balsey, one of Reidsville's fine doctors, will serve as our doctor, and mothers of babies and small children are invited to use this service.

But there are still other things worthy of note. Miss Marian Foust came to us just nine months ago, as our minister of music. She has worked hard and long with her four choirs, including the senior, young people's, junior and children's choir. Her efforts have born fruit and Miss Foust has proven a definite asset to our church, not only as a minister of music but as a pastor's assistant in more ways than one.

But there is still another fine new thing worthy of note at the Reidsville Church: We have added four new Sunday school rooms for our ever-increasing Sunday school. These rooms were built at a cost of nearly $5,000 and they are beautiful and beautifully furnished. With their completion a new department has been added to our Sunday school.

Our church is growing, there is a new spirit of interest and enthusiasm and if some are inclined to be just a little doubtful try to get a seat at our morning hour of worship.

who served as secretary some years ago; Mrs. Ernest L. Rawles and Mrs. H. B. Everett, former members of the society; also Mr. Ernest L. Rawles and Mr. F. O. Forbes.

The speaker of the evening, Dr. N. G. Newman, was presented by Mrs. Piland. Dr. Newman chose as his topic, "Rambling Remarks," and directed his rambling back to 57 years ago when he became pastor of Holy Neck Church the first time, having served the church as pastor three different times. He emphasized the "first." For the benefit of the younger ones present he described the church building, the mode of travel, which of course was horse and cart or buggy, and stated his salary was $350 a year and sometimes it was in the next year when he got it. In his humorous way he related many things of interest about the church affairs saying, "A half-century ago a clean-shaven man was an exception." He mentioned the fathers of several of those present who wore foot-long, and better, beards. There were no women's organizations in that day and the men of the church regarded it their duty to support the church financially, therefore the women did not contribute. The leadership of the church was under the older people.

He told of weddings he had performed and as he stated, some were in the "upper strata" of society and some were not in the "upper strata." On one occasion after the ceremony of a couple in the "lower strata" he proceeded to give the bride and groom

THE JACKSON'S ARE TEACHING IN FOOCHOW.

February 16, 1950.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Before coming to China during an early conversation with a returned veteran missionary, I remember once being told: "A missionary must be able to do anything and everything. He will be forced to move from place to place and must learn to adjust himself to the new situation no matter how difficult it is. He must learn to take cheerfully the 'spoiling of his things' (Heb. 10:34)."

We are beginning to understand the wisdom of these words. We are now assigned to work in Union High School where I'm teaching, of all things, Industrial Arts and Physical Education. Dorothy is to be teaching English. I don't need to tell you how little I know about the two above subjects. I've been reading all the available books I can find. I am somewhat comforted by the fact that in an industrially backward China, my meagre knowledge of woodworking, metal working, masonry, machinery and electricity gained from a few courses in high school, from merit badges earned as a Boy Scout, and from some practical experience, is probably more than that of 98 per cent of the population. The chief advantage of working in a school is that we can use the Mandarin language. Church or other related work requires the acquisition of the Foochow dialect, which is as different from Mandarin as German is from English.

In addition to teaching, we are having an excellent opportunity to have a part in the religious activities of the school. During the past week, I attended a conference of students and teachers to plan a series of evangelistic services at each of the three churches in the neighborhood of the school. As we are now in the midst of the spring vacation, this seems to be an excellent time for such services. About 30 of the students and faculty are participating. It was decided to divide the work in the afternoon, some taking charge of a Bible School for the children, others doing calling and preaching in the homes. In the evening, evangelistic services will be

INTRODUCING MRS. MOULTON.

Recently you read the write-up about Rev. Joseph L. Moulton from Ahmednagar, India, and saw his picture. This week we are carrying Mrs. Moulton's picture and information about her. When you have read both of these I am sure that you will wish to have one of them speak in your church. Miss Coghill is very much interested in their coming to the Southern Convention because they are friends of long standing and she was in their home for about ten days in India. Write to her at Elon College to make arrangements for one or the other of them to speak in your church. It will be better to have group meetings for them in as many places as possible.

For the past five years Mrs. Moulton has headed up the first Cisl Fibre Industry in India, established by an American Board missionary in 1936 to help the poverty-stricken Indians of the area. This institute also trains Indians as teachers of sisal fibre work in Government Schools and as heads of similar branches elsewhere in the Bombay Presidency.

A Maine woman, a graduate of Bates College, Mrs. Moulton married Rev. Joseph L. Moulton in 1917 and a year later went with him to India for service under the American Board of Foreign Missions. Living much in rural areas, often accompanying her husband on his tours of the schools, churches and village work under his care, Mrs. Moulton has come to know first hand the problems of India's little people, especially the farmer.

Mrs. Moulton has gone through famine and flood conditions and realizes how close to the margin of starvation the average Indian lives. Her counsel, and that of her husband, is constantly sought by the Indians on varied problems and a spirit of mutual friendship and respect has developed.

Rural reconstruction is being given great emphasis by Congregational missionaries in India. Mrs. Moulton tells, for example, of new villages of Christians moved to healthy sites, with the Christian church at the center. These are laid out along simple but sanitary and attractive lines which can be copied by any Indian village. Thus their religion becomes a vital factor in everyday life.

Because she has made her home for so many years in rural India, Mrs. Moulton has a remarkably well-rounded knowledge of the village people, their customs, their problems and their achievements in building their own Christian churches.

MISSIONS SPEAKER AVAILABLE.

Rev. and Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton of Ahmednagar, India, will be in North Carolina and Virginia from March 17 to April 11. Both of them are unusually fine speakers. Would you like to have one of them in your church? If so, write to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, N. C., and request them for a special date, indicating the type of meeting to which you want them to speak. It is hoped that in several instances a group of churches may meet together to hear one or both of them in order to have as many people as possible hear them while they are here. This will be the Mission Emphasis Period in the Convention Year, so it will be an appropriate time for a missionary speaker. It would be fine if you would write and suggest a combination of churches for such a meeting while they are in this area.

The Moultons are already engaged for March 30 in Southern Pines and it would be easier with transportation if they could be in the Eastern North Carolina Conference just before or after that date.

Wit should be used as a shield for defense rather than as a sword to wound others.—Fuller.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

EXTRA! EXTRA!

To the Women of The Southern Convention—

Many of you already know that our Rallies are going to be different and extra special this year. Each Woman's Conference will have only one Rally—all the women of that Conference coming together for a Family Life Institute conducted by Dr. Paul Reynolds, our National Secretary of Young Adult and Family Life.

Now here are the dates and places for each Institute. I have already put a red circle on the calendar around my date. Won't you mark yours immediately?

March 21—Bethlehem Church—Valley of Virginia Women.

March 23—Oakland Church—Eastern Virginia Women.

March 28—Elon College—North Carolina Women.

All sessions will open at 10:30 a. m., and close at 3:30 p. m. Lunch will be served by the local women.

Watch THE SUN for other information concerning these meetings. There will be more news about them from Mrs. Garland Spratley, who is Family Life Chairman in the Woman's Convention, the Conference Presidents and State Family Life Chairmen. You will not want to miss the picture and article about our speaker, Dr. Reynolds.

I sincerely recommend these Institutes to you and feel that you will miss something very fine and valuable if you don't attend.

MRS. O. H. PARIS, Pres.,
Woman's Convention.

DR. PAUL R. REYNOLDS SPRING RALLY SPEAKER.

Dr. Paul Reynolds, whose picture appears above, will be speaker for our Spring Conferences, formerly spring rallies, but this year to be in the form of Family Life Institutes—one in each Conference. Dr. Reynolds will speak in Eastern Virginia March 21, in the Valley of Virginia March 23, and in North Carolina March 28th.

Dr. Reynolds is an extremely interesting man, and it is not surprising after learning of his background. He was born and educated in the Middle West. His ancestry is Scotch-Irish-

Dutch, with a Presbyterian mother and a Quaker father. Both parents did educational work in the home mission field.

Dr. Reynolds is a graduate of Chicago Theological Seminary. During the first World War he was in YMCA work and then in the chaplaincy. For two years he was secretary of the Congregational Education Society, assisting in organizing some of the first young people's conferences.

In 1921 he married Charlotte Belknap of Oak Park and Oberlin. They were married and commissioned as missionaries of Winnetka Community Church (Congregational), and went to North China for the American Board. They lived in Fenchow, where their work was mostly in the field of religious education, involving teaching and supervision of work over a large area in Shansi and Shensi provinces. Communism was making its first appeal to China then. During the years 1927-28, they were awarded mission fellowships and studied in Union Seminary and Columbia University, where the degree of M. A. was awarded. The D. D. degree was given by Chicago Seminary for overseas service. Back they went to China until 1935. Dr. Reynolds was Chairman of the North China Council Committee on Religious Education; representative of the North China Congregational Churches on the National Committee of Religious Education. He signed the original petition to the American government to relieve missionaries of military protection.

In 1936 while on furlough, studying at Berea, Ky., he was elected secretary of the Christian Education Division. He served as executive secretary of the National Pilgrim Fellowship. He is now secretary of Young Adult and Family Life Program for Congregational Christian Churches.

THE REYNOLDS FAMILY.

After reading about Dr. Reynolds' Family, and the fine children he and his wife have reared, it would seem that having such wonderful children would alone qualify him as an expert on Family life, not to count all his other qualities.

The Reynolds have four children, all born in China. Bob graduated at Carleton and Harvard Medical, was in the Army and is now resident doctor at Veterans' Hospital, Jefferson Barracks, Missouri. The second child Helen Belknap, ("Happy") died when just past her 6th birthday and lies buried in Yutaoho (the Valley of the Jade Road) below the blue Shansi hills. Her educational fund plus gifts from friends is now the "Happy" Memorial Fund with the American Board. The income each year goes to help boys and girls in school and hospital in Fenchow, children like the ones with whom she loved to play.

Paul Jr. is now teaching English at Doshisha University, Japan. He may enter the ministry.

Barbara is a freshman at Oberlin, interested in race relations, social work, and—people.

Charlotte thinks being a wife, mother and home maker is a major for any women. The doors of her heart and their home are open to any and all. For some years she was Minister of the Junior Church in Glen Ellyn, in which capacity she did a creative piece of work. Before Marriage she was head of Barbour House, New York City—on the staff of Brick Presbyterian Church, thus associated with Dr. William P. Merrill.

ATTENTION—VALLEY WOMEN!

The Virginia Valley Family Life Institutes will be held at the Bethlehem Church March 21, beginning at 10:30 A. M.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

"OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM."

Adventures With Children From the Fourth Year to the Fourth Grade.

By MRS. W. W. SLOAN,
Elon College, N. C.

"I have an idea." Fourth-grade Lynda was full of her big thought. She could not wait to share it with the rest of us. We had been learning a prayer song in which each stanza ended with: "Hear us, Heavenly Father." The old children, who could read, sang the words of the stanzas, then the ones not yet in school joined in the refrain. It sounded fine, added to the interest, and the children liked doing it. Then they had chosen a familiar song of worship:

*Praise Him! Praise Him!
All ye little children!
God is love; God is love.*

"Let the little ones sing, 'God is love,' and let us sing the rest." That was Lynda's suggestion.

"Oh! That's a grand idea! Let's try it." We did; and it was. Before the youngest group "of such" ones had finished singing the refrain for the fourth time, they had learned, thoroughly and joyfully, the most important message in our Bible.

While this was going on, two of the five-year-olds were showing an unpleasant frame of mind—one hitting the other twice. But her scowl changed into a smile when she saw the leader's solemn countenance. She threw her arms around her little friend and hugged her till the child had to cry, Stop!"

Love is of God . . . A friend loveth at all times . . . Be ye kind . . . forgiving each other, even as God in Christ forgave you.

SHARED HAPPINESS.

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Marcia, I wish you could see the darling little sun suit I found today for Joyce! Look here—I'll open the package enough to show you the color. Don't you think that shade of blue will be becoming?" The words floated back to me from the front seat of a bus one evening as I was riding home from work.

"Yes, Helen," came her companion's enthusiastic reply. "That color will be just right for Joyce's yellow curls. I suppose you bought a red one for your dark-haired Patricia."

"No," replied the first speaker, "Patricia doesn't need a new sun suit this summer."

"But you ought to take something home to your other daughter," persisted her friend. "I never buy anything for one of my children without balancing it with something for the other one—that's the only way I can keep peace in the family."

"I don't think Patricia will mind," the first mother answered lightly. "She knows we take good care of her, too."

"I don't see how you do it, Helen." This voice sounded troubled. "There'd be a storm at our house if I went home without gifts for both children."

A thoughtful look came over the face of the mother addressed as Helen. "I understand what you mean, Marcia," she began, "because treating both children alike was more or less the idea we had at first. When a second little daughter came to us, my husband and I were anxious to show the first one that we loved her just as much as ever. Every time gifts were brought to the baby, we gave Patricia presents."

"I believe Patricia was four years old and Joyce was about two," she continued, "when something happened to make me realize that we had been making a mistake. As you know, the girls are very different in appearance—one dark, like her daddy, and the other fair, like me. Joyce has always looked well in fluffy things, while Patricia looks best in simple, straight lines. One day, when I had made a little frilly bonnet for Joyce, Patricia demanded one just like it. The child already had a becoming little hat to wear; she had no need for a bonnet—besides, it would have been too babyish for her. I called her attention to the fact that she had a nice hat, but she proceeded to be very naughty, declaring that she must have a bonnet if Joyce had one. I remember that I took time that day to have a quiet little talk with Patricia. I explained to her that her daddy and I would always take good care of her and Joyce, but that her daddy's salary had to pay for our house and all of our food and clothes, and we could not always buy the same things for each of our little girls. I told her, also, that Joyce's bonnet looked nicer on a two-year-old girl than it would on a four-year-old one and that I wanted her to be happy for Joyce to have it.

"Since then we've tried to develop a sense of shared happiness in both girls. I think Joyce is truly glad that Patricia has an opportunity to go to camp this summer, and Patricia seemed just as happy as I was in helping to prepare a picnic lunch in our back yard for some of Joyce's little friends last week."

"You make it sound so easy, Helen," her companion sighed, "as if one could just wave a magic wand from then on her children would be unselfish."

"I didn't intend to imply that," the first mother added hastily as she gathered up her packages to leave the bus. "I know character development in a slow process, but I am convinced that it isn't necessary for a child to expect to receive a duplicate of everything that is given to his brothers and sisters."

FAMILY DAY AT HOLY NECK.

some private advice as to how they might improve their future life.

On one occasion he was called on to conduct the funeral of a person who had died some distance from this community. The funeral was to be at 4 o'clock at the Holy Neck Church and the burial was to follow in the church cemetery. There was a big snow on the ground but he managed to get his Model "T" Ford from Holland to the church by 3 o'clock. Sundown came and the funeral party had not arrived. A relayed message came that the hearse had broken down—a mechanic had been called and they would arrive soon. At 10 o'clock that night the burial service was held by the light of a lantern in Holy Neck cemetery.

Dr. Newman declared that during his third and last pastorate at Holy Neck the strongest influence in the church was the Woman's Missionary Society. He concluded his remarks by saying, "It is not where we are, but where we are going, that counts."

Incidents such as these are some of the experiences of a minister who has served the church for a half-century when he begins to let his mind ramble.

"Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was the closing hymn and the closing prayer was offered by Dr. Luther B. Grice, pastor of the church.

Youth at Work in the Church

CALLING ALL EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUNG PEOPLE!

The Pilgrim Fellowship Rally will be held at Holland Christian Church, Holland, Virginia, on Sunday afternoon, March 19. Mark this on your calendar and look for further notice of the program.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

ATTENTION—SOUTHERN CONVENTION YOUTH.

Flash! This is a special message of immediate importance directed to all the youth of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

There is an urgent need for $310 before March! As you already know, we have had very good responses from the young people in our churches. We now have $290; and we must have the remainder immediately because the young person who is to be sent to an overseas work camp must be chosen soon so that all of the necessary steps may be taken.

I feel sure that we can depend upon you to collect the rest of the money as soon as possible. I hope that you can all realize the necessity for immediate responses. Please do all that you can to raise the money and send it in to our treasurer. Only with the cooperation of each young person can we reach our goal. Let us not fail in our project, now that we have gone this far.

Let's get to work, and meet this emergency as all far-seeing young Christians do!

LOIS LONG, Chairman,
Social Action Committee.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR OVERSEAS WORKER.

A committee has been appointed for the purpose of selecting the young person to go to the International Work Camp this summer. Those on the committee are: Jack Byrd, president of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship; Lois Long, Social Action Chairman of the Southern Convention; Rev. W. J. Andes, Counsellor for the Youth Council; Pattie Lee Coghill, Field Worker; and C. Baxter Twiddy, president of the Southern Convention Youth Council. As soon as applications or letters have been received from those desiring to be considered, the committee will meet and discuss all persons. Actual voting is to be done by the presidents of the five conferences, an adult counsellor from each conference and the president of the Southern Convention Youth Council.

Listed below are the basic requirements for an Overseas Worker:

1. Ordinarily work campers are between 18 and 25, but 25 is not the fixed upper limit.
2. Usually an applicant must speak French or German.
3. Resourcefulness and willingness to accept responsibility.
4. Ability and desire to work.
5. Acceptance of speaking engagements after work camper returns.

Can you qualify under these requirements or do you know someone who might? If so, please write immediately to C. Baxter Twiddy, Box 572, Elon College, N. C. List all your reasons for desiring to go, any experiences which might benefit a work camper and any other items which the committee might take under consideration.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP HOLDS MEETING.

The Holy Neck Pilgrim Fellowship met on Wednesday night of last week at the church hall with Audrey Holland, Mary Virginia and Billy March serving as the host group. Billy Parker, the president, presided. The group voted to send a contribution to be used to help defray expenses of a delegate for the International Work Camp this coming summer.

The group will serve the Whaleyville Ruritan Club at its next meeting to be held March 6 in the Holy Neck Hall.

Members of the Young People's group of the Somerton Friends Meeting were welcomed as guests of the Holy Neck group. Betty Sue Gardner responded to the welcome. Margaret Harrell was in charge of the program for the evening. "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," was used as the opening hymn.

Scripture reading was given by Lois Crutchfield followed by a prayer by Dr. Luther B. Grice. The speaker of the evening, Rev. W. A. Grissom, pastor of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church was introduced by Margaret Harrell. Mr. Grissom used as his topic, "The Inward, the Outward and the Upward Look." Mr. Grissom stated, "Life's values become more important as we grow older, and we must learn to make the right choices in life. Faith is the fundamental thing in life. Choices must be made on faith."

Dr. Grice offered the closing prayer. Following the meeting a social hour was enjoyed with games and contests.

YOUTH WEEK AT BETHLEHEM CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Special services began Sunday, January 28.

The Junior Department of the Sunday school gave the opening worship program. Rev. R. E. Brittle, the pastor, spoke especially to youth at the 11:00 service using as his topic, "Remembering Early."

On Wednesday night, the young people of the church entertained the young people of Holland Baptist Church and Oakland Christian Church in the social hall. Tom Moore, president of the Y. P. M. S., welcomed our guests. The devotionals were conducted by Nancy Crutchlow. The movie, "Shy Guy," was shown, after which an hour of fun and fellowship was enjoyed.

Thursday night at 7:00 was a red letter day on our church calendar. We observed our family life night at this time. A chicken supper was served to 275 in our new social hall. The invocation was given by Mr. Brittle. Mrs. T. H. Dilday, who is president of the Women's Missionary Society, was toast mistress. The worship service was conducted by the Young People's Missionary Society under the direction of Mrs. Edward Johnson, Young People's leader. They used as their theme, "Making Good in the Family." Rev. R. E. Brittle then presented Rev. Duane Vore, the pastor of Suffolk Christian Church, who made the address of the evening. Mr. Vore used as the title of his address, "Talk Over Cares and Problems at Home." He urged families to stick together, working together, worshiping together and playing together, thereby making all problems easier.

On Sunday, February 5, the Young People's Missionary Society gave the opening worship service at the Sunday school hour. At the 11:00 service, Rev. R. E. Brittle gave a special emphasis to Elon College and its work, using as his topic, "Contributing Factors—Schools."

THE FAITH THAT SUSTAINED THE CHURCH.

LESSON XII—MARCH 19, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: For I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.—II Timothy 1:12.

LESSON: Acts 26:19-23; Romans 5:1-8; Hebrews 12:1-2.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Timothy 1:8-14.

Someone once wrote that the reason Christianity conquered the world into which it came was because the Christians "out-thought, out-lived, and out-died" the pagans of their day. Perhaps he should have added that they "out-belived" their contemporaries too. The Church was sustained by a simple but sturdy and satisfying faith. We have evidences of it in today's lesson.

A Testimony of Faith.

Here was a man on trial for his life. He had been given an opportunity to speak for himself. He was making his defence before none other than the king himself. What did he have to say for himself? What had been the secret of his victorious spirit? The answer is simple. First of all he had had an experience of the living Christ himself. Religion was not a matter of formal creeds or meaningless ceremonies. It was a matter of a personal experience of God in Christ. God was no mere creation of the mind of man to Paul, God was real, a living fact force in everyday life. Christ himself had touched Paul's life and had given him a sense of peace and power and joy beyond expression. Furthermore this had not been simply an isolated experience. He tells King Agrippa that he had "obtained help of God unto this day." Religion was a living force in his life. Christ was for Him a source of strength and courage and life. His faith was simple, God was, alive, God was available, God was adequate, God was able to supply all his needs according to the riches of glory in Jesus Christ. He does not say that he had had it easy, that God had given him special privileges, that he had been spared hard places or hard times. He does say that whatever had been the test or the trial, God in Christ had been equal to it. He knew whom he had believed and he felt sure, in fact the says he was persuaded, that God was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day. When a man is sure of God, when God is a living reality to him, a man has resources adequate for anything that life can do to him. His faith sustains him and makes him more than conqueror through Christ who loves him and gave himself for him.

In passing it should be noted that Paul gives a summary of his preaching. Repentance toward God and the bringing forth of works meet for repentance, and Christ giving himself on the Cross for our sins and rising again from the dead. Christ and Him crucified—that was the central theme of Paul's preaching.

Salvation by Faith.

This man Paul wrote a letter to the church in Rome. It is a profound letter and there are many things in it hard to understand, but it is not difficult to understand what he is writing in the section which is included in today's lesson. He has been showing in plain language and painting in lurid colors how man was lost in sin. He also showed how impossible it was for a man to save himself by good works. Then with one of his many "therefores" he says that a man is justified by faith, and through that faith he has peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. What man could not do, Christ did for him. God took the initiative—He commended His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. By His death on the cross men are reconciled to God, and by His spirit they are saved. Here again Paul states plainly that the new life is not always a bed of roses. He glories in his tribulations, for the love of God is shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Spirit which God gives through faith and obedience.

There is much teaching and preaching today which tends to give the impression that men are saved by their good works. Emphasis needs to be placed upon the fact that men are saved and can only be saved by faith. And faith is not so much believing something, as committing one's self in trust to somebody.

The Author and Finisher of our Faith.

In his letter to the Hebrews, the writer (some scholars think it was Paul, others that it was an unknown writer, it makes no difference who it was) likens the Christian life to a race. Here laid out before the athletes is the course marked out; here are the spectators in the stands; here are the athletes trained to the minute and stripped of all surplus weight. It is no sprint, it is a long hard race. They will need strength and inspiration for the gruelling experience. Let them look unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of their faith. The merit of this act is that He knows exactly what it is all about, and what it is involved in it. He had an even harder path than we to follow. But for the joy that was set before Him He endured the cross and despised the shame, and now God has honored Him. One must take the long look if he is to run the long race.

Christ is the Author and the Perfecter of our faith. It is He who quickens and awakens our faith and sustains us in the race of life. It is He alone who can perfect it and bring us to the end of the race. We are to look unto Him. We are to cast our burdens upon Him. Then we can with patience and hope run the race and come at last to victory.

These are not easy times for many people. Terrific forces beat upon life from without. Tremendous pressure is exerted by the world upon men and women. Unless there are resources within they cannot hope to cope with life. But men and women can be strengthened in the inner man if Christ dwells there in faith. Even as He sustained the members of the early church so can he sustain the members of the modern church.

"DOCTOR OF DIVINITY."

New York State moved recently to dissolve a "mail-order diploma mill" charged with having peddled thousands of higher degrees.

The most popular degree handed out by the institution for fees ranging from one to seventy-five dollars was Doctor of Divinity.

The enterprise, known as the Christian Tehological College, is now closed after lucrative years, and the "president," with his own four mail-order degrees, faces charges by the Attorney General.—The New York Times.

THE CHURCH'S TASK IN THE MODERN WORLD.

the results of following him would be recorded in life's attitudes increasingly similar to his own?

Turn to his interpreters. Listen to Paul: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace . . . kindness . . . goodness . . . meekness . . . self-control." Hear him as he discourses about the major Christian virtue — Christlike love. Without this, he says, many things are as "sounding brass or a clanging cymbal." Listen to him in his letter to the Colossians: "If ye then were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. Put also away all these, anger, wrath, malice, shameful speaking out of your mouth, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his doings, and have put on the new man, which is being renewed unto knowledge after the image of him that created him: where there cannot be Greek and Jew, circumcision or uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bondman or free-man, but Christ is all, and in all."

My contention here is that as church leaders we must lead our people into that ever-widening and increasing experience of the Christlikeness of character. I also contend that a Christian Church is a great Church in the things that really count, if it in truth, gains this objective. It is great whether it is in the catacombs or in a cathedral, in a shanty in the backwoods, or on the avenue of a great city; whether it has a handful of humble folk or hundreds of prominent people. On the contrary, no orthodoxy or progressiveness of thought, no learned sermons or beautiful music, no artistic architecture, nor impressive rituals can make a Christian Church great, if it does not lead men into the Christlikeness of life and character, in their relationship to men.

The following statement may seem paradoxical, yet it is true: "The goal of the Church is not easily attained." It would be much easier to measure our success by statistics, campaigns, budgets, finance, membership rolls, baptisms, cards signed or publicity gained; just as it is easier for the individual to measure his progress in the Christian life by forms, church attendance, giving or orthodoxy, rather than by Christlike attitudes in life itself. Though other tests are easier, none is so conclusive. The people outside of the church measure the quality of the Church by the attitudes of its members. The eyes of the world are on America for her professed zeal for democracy abroad, when it is not practiced in her own borders. There is no question that Christlikeness of life is the one measurement which the people of the world outside the Church accept as valid. All other tests they discount; this one they cannot. They may not like or adopt the attitudes called for by the Christian Spirit; they may resent them, and indeed often do, and may even crucify those who take these attitudes. But they cannot and do not deny the validity of the test.

The task of the Church today is to secure within individuals and society an ever-increasing practice of the attitudes toward God and man that were revealed in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. This goal, this task and purpose of the church, can only be achieved in the measure that it is exhibited by the ministers that lead the people. The prophets of old were aware of the influence that the priests exerted upon the people. Like priests, like people. As ministers, as priests of the Almighty, as leaders of the flock of God, are we leading men into the Christlikeness of life or are we being led into the worldliness of death and destruction?

THE JACKSONS ARE TEACHING IN FOOCHOW.

held, the last evening of which I will show slides on the "Life of Jesus." It is a real inspiration to see the interest and enthusiasm of the young people as they prepare to make their witness to the faith.

Next term I will also teach one course on "Visual Education in the Church" at the Foochow Union Theological Seminary. I look forward to the opportunity of getting acquainted with the future leaders of the Fukien churches.

We become alternately optimistic and pessimistic about the situation in which we find ourselves. The radio news from the U. S. and the local newspapers indicate a worsening of Sino-American relation. Russia looms larger and larger on the horizon. Most of the enthusiasm for Russia, it seems to us, is on the part of the government officials. The ordinary citizens take a very skeptical wait-and-see attitude. Our work continues without interference except that we cannot travel freely. We live on the outskirts of Foochow and can only travel to the city on Tuesday, Sunday and Thursday afternoons.

Foochow, as you have read from the papers, will be one of the take-off points for the invasion of Formosa. We are hourly conscious of that fact. The great influx of troops has caused the price of rice to triple in terms of U. S. currency within a month. Many fear famine in April or May. On the outskirts of the city we are much safer from bombing raids. The city is virtually cut off as no ships can get in and there are no airplanes. Several Americans have been trying to leave for several months, but there is no safe way to get out.

Letters continue to come from you and we hope you will continue to write. They mean more than ever to us now. We receive no foreign newspapers or magazines.

Thus we live from day to day carrying on our work as though we would be here forever, yet never sure whether the next day will bring word ordering all Americans out. "If we can just hold on long enough," someone said the other day, "the tide will turn and new opportunities and openings are sure to come." We have faith that this, too, will pass and that He who has sustained us thus far will be faithful to the end.

Letters from Shaowu indicate that the school, the hospital and the churches are carrying on. Word has come also that our house was looted of our remaining things and then taken over by the government for its use.

We shall be remembering you in the Southern Convention, especially at Eastertime as you make your contributions to the missionary cause. We hope that you will continue to hold up our hands by your prayers and by your generous support.

Lewis, now almost two years old, seems to have inherited all of his mother's good qualities and his father's faults. He, Dorothy and I send you all our best wishes for a joyous and meaningful Easter season.

Cordially,

THE JACKSONS.

As long as there remain clamant human needs unsatisfied it must be desirable for the world to increase both its productive resources and its actual production; and the failure to make full use of the productive resources at our command must be due to folly or mismanagement, and must be remediable if man will but apply enough intelligence to find the remedy. Not to believe this is sheer despair of human reasonableness and commonsense, and involves the conviction that in very truth mankind is mad.—G. D. H. Cole.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Your kindness is great for these dear little children. Your 1950 contributions up to last week had amounted to $4,646.10. A total of sixty-six Sunday schools or churches of the nearly two hundred in the Convention have made their marks on the big chart. In the accompanying report thirteen Sunday schools have helped us climb above the $5,000.00. And what's more these Sunday schools are none the poorer. The big chart is showing more and more of our Sunday schools and churches on it. That is as it should be. This is your work, and an expression of your gratitude to God that you are the privileged giver instead of your child, having to be the receiver. A dime, or quarter, or even a dollar out of your pocket once a month for these children put into a once-a-month offering with others in your Sunday school will make it possible for us to take some of the pathetic cases now pending. I appreciate the goodwill and the generous gifts of everyone. We are very anxious to do a good work for every little life here, and you are helping—helping greatly. For the seventy-six boys and girls here I humbly thank you.

How much does it cost to replace a rusted 1,500 gallon water tank? I do not know but I am soon to learn because the tank that supplies the water to the main building, the Baby Home, the dairy and barns will be replaced Monday. We shall have been without water for nearly a day, and we shall have the bill to pay. It seems like there is something to replace or repair all the time.

I had a letter yesterday pleading for two little ones to be received here. I had another this morning asking that we take six more—they are two to ten years of age. That is what we are here for, and we shall do our best. We cannot take them all now. There are many other applications awaiting help. Let's go ahead and do a really fine job here for everyone we possibly can.

Do you know the Rev. Henry E. Robinson? He is the new minister at our Burlington Church. Shortly after he came to Burlington he visited us and offered to bring his own complete movie outfit and show our children pictures every week. He was here Tuesday night and made his first showing. The children were perfect! How they liked the two pictures! And they fell in love with Mr. Robinson. He is coming again Saturday night. And he has a way with boys and girls. They like him greatly, and he likes them.

One of the joyous privileges I have is that of meeting our excellent board members in annual session. They met here this week, checked on the past, approved the work, and made plans and suggestions for the good of your orphanage. They are aware of the fact that we are your servants and I know these fine Christian men and women desire to render the best possible account of their stewardship. It means something to have a board that is capable, experienced, and understanding of the task assigned them. We are preparing a folder which will give the facts so you yourself can tell your neighbor what is going on here at the orphanage. We know from our contact with the Duke Endowment Fund that it compares excellently with all the other orphanages aided by that fund.

Representative women from the Elon College community have gone on an inspection tour of the Johnston Hall and are planning to help with making it more liveable for the boys and girls housed in it. We are most grateful. John Westmoreland called me and provided tickets for all students including our eighth grade and up—18 of them and their matrons to an opera to be given in the college auditorium. He sent a leaflet explaining the story and just what one should know to appreciate it. To put it mildly our students were thrilled with it. This was a most generous thing to do.

I preached the four Sunday mornings during February in the college chapel. How it inspired me to see such a large section filled with boys and girls from the orphanage, along with staff members. They conduct themselves in such a manner as to bring joy to us all. They sing and read the responsive readings, and have their offerings and drop them in the offering plate. They are on the road all you church people would like to see them walk. I pray God may make them boys and girls quite worthy of your gifts and your prayers. In their names and for their sakes I thank you.

GREEN.

Rev. Edward F. Green, D. D., retired minister and educator, died February 26 at his home in Southern Pines. Born in York, England, January 22, 1861, he came to this country as a young man. He graduated at the University of Worcester, Mass., and took theological training at Auburn Seminary in New York State.

He served for many years as principal of the County Life School at Star, North Carolina. This school, supported by the Congregational Board of Home Missions, provided a high grade of education and religious training to many rural young people before public schools were adequate in this section. Prior to his services at Star, he served churches in Washington and Oregon. Following retirement, he moved to Southern Pines. Then for a number of years he conducted services in a prison camp. He read regularly "Advance" and "The Sun." His membership was in the Church of Wide Fellowship.

R. L. HOUSE.

ROANE.

We, the members of the Missionary Society of the Rosemont Congregational Christian Church, submit the following resolutions of respect for Mrs. Sallye Morrison Roane, who died Tuesday, January 17, 1950.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. We have lost a loyal and faithful member in the death of one of our oldest members.

2. We wish to express our appreciation for her strong Christian character, her consecration to God and her church, and her devotion to her family and friends.

3. We extend our deepest sympathy to those loved ones in our mutual loss.

staff of the National Commander of the Spanish War Veterans.

For twelve years he was secretary-treasurer of the Nathaniel Bacon Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution.

A member of the Christian Church since 1888, he served it as a Sunday school teacher, as a deacon since 1915, as a trustee of the Suffolk Christian Church, and as historian of the entire Christian Church in Virginia and the South.

As a business man he was associated with the Lee Brothers and Company, Norfolk, in 1899, but in 1902 returned to Suffolk to be associated with the insurance firm of Harper and West.

He was connected with the Farmers Bank of Nansemond County, Suffolk, and with the American Bank and Trust Company, also of Suffolk.

He organized the Farmers Bank of Sunbury, N. C., and was its cashier during a number of years. He was also cashier of the Bank of Zuni, Zuni, Va.

He was for a time secretary of the Suffolk Mutual Building and Loan Company.

He was associated with West and Withers for 23 years.

He was secretary of the Virginia Historical Society, and an associate member of the American Historical Society.

As an author he had a wide experience. During the Spanish-American War he sent dispatches to the Suffolk Herald. He later wrote the Life of the Rev. James O'Kelly and the Early Christian Church in the South.

He wrote the history of the Jones-Lee families of Nansemond County, Suffolk and Nansemond County's part in World War I, which was published by the Virginia War Historical Commission.

He wrote The History of the Peanut, and a series history of Gates County, N. C.

These are but a few of the things he has written. He had for many years been in demand for special articles for newspapers and other periodicals of the state and nation.

Because of his seemingly inexhaustible knowledge of family history, he had long since been included in Who Is Who In Genealogy.

He married the former Miss Martha Irene Brothers, daughter of William R. and Martha Sarah Brothers on November 15, 1905.

In 1939 he was commissioned a major on the staff of General Julian Howell, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans of America, who has since died.

Surviving are in addition to his wife: three brothers, E. D. MacClenny of Marion, S. C., Sidney L. MacClenny of Nansemond County and J. D. MacClenny of Suffolk; three nieces, Mrs. Golden Blackburn of Marion, S. C., Miss Anne MacClenny of Hollins College and Miss Virginia MacClenny of Suffolk.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

Congregational Christian Churches. Literature will be on display and for sale.

We are urging that every member of the Conference make plans to attend this meeting.

Mrs. Joseph Moulton of India will also be there to bring a message from the women in India.

Lunch will be served at the church.

Devotionals will be in charge of Mrs. E. J. Rohart and Mrs. Moulton.

WINCHESTERS ACTIVITIES.

There are two women's groups in the Winchester Church—the Ladies' Aid and the Woman's Missionary Society, with different officers, meeting nights, etc.

The Ladies' Aid is sponsoring a unique project. The women paid for material for 29 pairs of pillow cases with embroidery designs. These are being done in preparation for a Christmas Shop in the fall. Different kinds are scalloped, crocheted, hem-stitched, Italian cutwork, straight edges and others. The next thing planned is aprons, doll wardrobes, handkerchiefs, rugs and any kind of handwork. The group meets and works occasionally on an afternoon when everyone can come and light refreshments are served. By working this way the ladies prepare for a money-making project which will take a great deal of time and also have fine fellowship together.

The Missionary Society sponsored a "Family Night" pot luck supper for February 17, when the families came to the social hall to eat supper together. Each person was asked to bring his oldest baby picture. They were numbered and one of the games was to "Guess Who." The entertainment for the social hour to follow the supper was furnished by families who presented special numbers as families. Quite a bit of interest was shown in this.

Another unusual and outstanding thing these women are doing is to unite as a group in a Fellowship of Prayer. The church revival will begin on March 19. The hour set for prayer is 8:00 a. m. each Saturday morning. The theme of the prayer is "Lord, send a revival to our church and let it begin in me." The effect of the prayer chain has already been felt. The Winchester women would like to have readers of THE SUN join them and pray for a revival in their own churches, even if a date has not been set.

A Layman's Evaluation of the Church's Program

[Excerpts from an address by WALTER W. MULLER, Chairman of the Lay Section of the International Council of Religious Education, and insurance agency owner of Peoria, Illinois, delivered to the Pastors' Section of the I.C.R.E. at Columbus, Ohio, Tuesday, Feb. 14.]

The weakness of the church and its members has no doubt allowed the nations to go into conflict. Only a strong ecumenical church, which will be made up of true believers and true followers of Christ, with strong Christian laymen permeating leadership of the nations, will we be able to cope with future problems and avert disaster for this generation and civilization.

The future of the success of the church program lays in the awakening and activity of an inspired laity. The ministry of the church might be likened to the officers of an army. The lay people are the task force . . . who ever saw a battle won by the officers? Too long the church has been battling with only the clergy on the battle front. It never means too much to have the ministerial association against gambling; the public simply says that's expected. But when a group of lay business men, such as the Community Relations Committee of the Peoria Council of Churches, has the backbone to oppose gambling and back it up, we get somewhere. We need the spiritual backing through the teaching and preaching of our ministers. We need the business man's organizational and promotional ability to achieve the results.

Surely the ministry of the church should be teaching its laity the power of prayer—every minister should have a strong men's program made up of men who are promoting Christ and Christian teaching—not just a men's club. There is a great new movement among laymen and a great desire for interdenominational fellowship and program. Somehow you ministers should get more laymen actively giving time to the church.

Until Christianity, as a spiritual force becomes the basis of everyday experience in the business and political life, we will not have peace, nationally or internationally.

Churches, through their denominational leaders and the ministry, should teach men to pray and they should set up interdenominational prayer retreats.

Most men in the business world often feel alone as if they have to stand alone in their everyday life pursuits if they are to carry out their Christianity in their everyday life. This feeling of aloneness has almost entirely left me since I have been active in our Peoria Council of Churches, because I soon met and was working with business men, and men from all walks of life. Wherever I go—in the club, or a conference or convention—I meet men of Christian faith. I am strengthened and I hope I help strengthen them.

Just as the baby is born without race prejudice, so he is born without religious prejudice. Therefore, the church today should be teaching cooperation, unity and ecumenicity.

One of the greatest opportunities open to our denominations is through our Christian colleges and the denominational foundations at State Universities. May the day soon come when the foundations will be interdenominational. If the church falls down on its support of its colleges, it will be a hard blow. The denominations have long been active in their education of women through their various mission programs but they must now organize men and teach them not only missions but the application of Christian principles in everyday contacts in all walks of life.

NUMBER 11

LET'S SUPPORT MISSIONS NOW

AN APPEAL FROM THE CONVENTION PRESIDENT

We are all proud of our Southern Convention. We prize every church, pastor, member, and worker in the Convention. We are proud of our weekly paper, The Christian Sun, and of each of our boards and institutions. We like to think of our kinship in the cause of Christ, and to know that we are all on the team. We are members one of another, from the least child in our smallest Sunday School to the pastors and leading lay people in our largest churches. We are one. Our aim is one. In the ultimate our task is one. The Convention workers with headquarters at Elon are very necessary, and just as anxious as they can be to see success and progress everywhere throughout our Convention. Let us not blindly shut our eyes and boost, but rather let us open our minds and hearts and lift. Whether it be for the college or the board that cares for aged ministers; whether it be the Convention force of workers from the Convention Office with their avenues of service to every church, or some committee in a local parish, we are all fellow-workers and helpers. We are all proud to have it that way, and we all wish to do our best. Our Christ demands our best of each of us.

This appeal is made to every one of us to come on now and let's do an extra fine job for our missions during March, April, May and June. We have tremendous need for faithful support of the mission work of the Convention both at home and away. Let the church rise up and be generous, cooperative and determined as a great team to make good in every quarter with our prayers, our interest and concentration, and gifts for missions. We are obligated as a people for new churches at home, and we are obligated as a Convention for work in foreign lands. Let the process of education in pulpit, in classroom, in organizational meetings be set in full force for our Mission Period, in order that every church and member of the team may be proud of the goal we reach, and humbly grateful that God has given us a part in the great mission of His Church.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

News Flashes

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention is meeting today at Elon College. Many matters of importance will be discussed.

Rev. H. E. Robinson addressed the March meeting of the Burlington Ministerial Association on the subject, "Church Life in New England."

The Portlock (Norfolk) World Day of Prayer service was held at the Rosemont Church. The service was led by Mrs. Herbert G. Council, Jr.

Rev. Norman Weed of Long Island spoke on a recent Sunday morning at our Holland Church. Mr. Weed is a graduate of Union Seminary, New York.

RICHMOND (VA.) CHURCH.

As soon as the pastor, Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, learned that Dr. Ralph Shrader, Project Secretary for the American Board, was to be driving South the first week in March, he requested the women of the church to plan for a pre-Easter Fellowship Dinner in the Parish Hall and arranged with Dr. Shrader to be guest speaker for the occasion. An enthusiastic and appreciative group gathered to enjoy together the splendid meal and to hear Dr. Shrader's address on the timely topic, "God and Man—Together." Fortunate indeed are the churches of our denomination who are privileged to have Dr. Shrader address them out of his years of rich experience in China.

Last Sunday morning, Miss Frances Thompson, who has served our mission work in Japan, addressed the joint assembly of the Sunday school. Missions and evangelism are receiving the major emphasis of both the church and the Sunday school during the pre-Easter season.

The city-wide Preaching Mission held by the Richmond Churches, February 12 to 19 in the Mosque, registered "a new high" in interest and attendance.

A NEW CHURCH IN THE DEEP SOUTH—A DREAM REALIZED.

More than forty years ago Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Allen moved from Alabama to Linville, Louisiana, and have dreamed of a Christian Church all these years. They were members of old McGuire's Chapel, Alabama Christian Conference.

Last July the Rev. Guy H. Veazey, Burlington, N. C., spent his vacation there and began the erection of a new Congregational Christian Church building. The work has made slow progress because of lack of funds, but faith and patience have been at work all the time, and through the efforts of a faithful few the building was opened for the first service on February 26. However, the building is not yet complete but can be used. The congregation was large and the interest manifested was good. The Rev. A. O. Wright, pastor of the Pleasant Hill Congregational Christian Church of West Monroe, Louisiana, is the pastor and is greatly encouraged with the prospects of a live church in the near future.

The organization has not yet been formed, but regular services will continue each second and fourth Sunday evenings.

This little band needs your prayers and would not refuse financial aid. If any friend wishes to make a contribution mail same to Mrs. E. H. Green, Marion, La.

YOUNG LADIES OF CYPRESS CHAPEL MEET.

The Young Ladies' Class of Cypress Chapel Christian Church met Tuesday night (Feb. 21) at the home of Mrs. Roy Brinkley with the president, Mrs. N. W. Beale, presiding.

The meeting began with singing a hymn. The class will entertain the Cypress Ruritan Club in March. The program committee for March will be Mrs. Roy Brinkley and Mrs. Frank Harrell. Mrs. Bobbie Holloman and Miss Ella Sue Griffin presented a program using the 23rd Psalm for the devotionals.

Mrs. Paul Parker read a selection, "Please, Daddy, Let's Go to Sunday School." Mrs. Henry Brothers read "Conscience - Future Judgment." A duet composed of Mrs. Grady Brown and Mrs. N. W. Beale sang several songs. In a Bible contest, Mrs. Grady Brown won the prize. The class will meet with Mrs. Holloman in March. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Those present were Mrs. Willie Knight, Mrs. Henry Brothers, Mrs. Edward Baines, Mrs. N. W. Beale, Mrs. Earl Bunch, Mrs. Grady Brown, Misses Susie and Ella Mae Griffin, also Mrs. Frank Harrell, Mrs. Ben Case, Mrs. Bernard Winslow, Mrs. Paul Parker and Mrs. Roy Brinkley.

"THE TITAN—STORY OF MICHEL-ANGELO."

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

In this unusual production Robert J. Flaherty, "the father of documentary presentation" as an art, brings to the American audience one of the most fascinating films one will see in a lifetime of movie-going. This study was made in Italy some years ago by Curt Oertel, a Swiss film producer.

Here we have the biography of one of the greatest creative artists of all time—and it is presented without the help of human actors, standard settings or any of the other factors usually associated with producing motion pictures. Michelangelo lives chiefly through camera studies of his works, arranged chronologically and complemented by photographs of the Italian scene, portraits of contemporary personages and drawings depicting events of the period.

The narration by Frederick March, in itself an excellent review of the social, religious and political life of Italy in the 16th century, has definite literary quality. The film majors on the artist's achievements and his relations with the great of his day, the princess of the House of Medici and the Popes of the Roman Church.

The dramatic employment of the camera is probably the outstanding achievement of this film. It acts like the human eye—surveying, appraising, getting the best of each piece of statuary—and, with the help of light and shadow, seems to create movement in inanimate objects. As for Michelangelo's paintings, we feel overwhelmed by the frescoes of the Sistine Chapel, from the Creation to the Flood, on to the Last Judgment.

PREACHERS NEED LAYMEN.

An insurance man from Peoria, Illinois, told clerical leaders of the churches attending the 28th annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, February 12-18, Columbus, Ohio, that they were not awakening their laymen sufficiently.

Said Walter W. Muller, chairman of the Council's Lay Section: "Too long the church has been battling with only the clergy on the battlefield. It never means too much to have the ministerial association against gambling; the public simply says that's expected. But when a group of lay business men, such as the Community Relations Committee of the Peoria

Let's Quit Guessing

A three-point program for the enlargement and reorganization of Congregational rural evangelism and an urgent plea for a clergy "equipped with hearts as well as minds" to serve in rural communities, was made by Rev. James M. McLain, minister of the Plymouth Congregational Church of Fargo, North Dakota, speaking before the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism of the Congregational Christian Churches of America in Cleveland, Ohio.

Rural churches, which Mr. McLain described as "small Christian outposts" are often "without pastors, with inadequate physical plants; with an appalling dearth of equipment and often a startling insufficiency of funds. Yet they supply the denomination with ministers and lay leaders out of all proportion to their membership."

Telling of how his mind rebelled at a remark made by a distinguished Congregational educator who said, "The Congregational Church is no longer a rural church," Mr. McLain could find at present no logical refutation for this penetrating statement. He then went on to challenge the denominational leaders on the whole problem of rural church planning.

"Rural people of this area, educationally and culturally, may well be divided into two groups—that diminishing sector of little education with the memories of another homeland and culture still fresh within their hearts, and that ever growing and significant group of high school and college graduates who dominate rural thinking and progress. By the very nature of our church, we have little appeal for the first group. But from the second class, we should gain a large and influential following. And why don't we?" demanded Mr. McLain.

Mr. McLain then quoted from a distinguished educator who maintained that too many ministers, "like all professional people, still look upon the farmer as the rube of yesteryear, to be endured with tolerance and often patronized. Instead, we have in them a very thoughtful and advanced group of people—as much so as you will find in the average city church."

To gain the loyalty and adherence of this group, the church must offer a program in its own field that will be as stimulating and challenging as those offered by the Grange, Farm Bureau or Homemakers—each in its field.

"As the rural church now stands it is a genuine sacrifice in economic returns, in living quarters, in prestige and in that elusive term 'privileges to one's family' for a minister to take a rural parish," said Mr. McLain. "In many instances—in most, I hope—rural churches are served by men who are devoted to their work and who would rather minister to the rural people than any choice city parish; who find in its warmth, its close human fellowships, its problems and rich abundance of living, adequate compensation for the sacrifices which they must make."

Nevertheless, Mr. McLain did not spare his fellow clergy many of whom secretly are marking time in a rural church until they can get into a city pulpit feeling that their city brothers are scornful of their inability to distinguish themselves if they remain in rural parishes. "I feel that this very restlessness in the ministry is a situation we ourselves have created by not readily recognizing what is distinguished and what is important."

Mr. McLain spoke of yoked churches where small churches are tied up with a larger church in a neighboring community and where the minister must sacrifice one church or the other because of lack of time and energy. The fact that this has to be done, he pointed out, rests back on the insufficient number of ministers who are willing to assume rural pastorates.

A policy of the Roman Catholic Church, from which Mr. McLain came, is that a priest can adequately serve approximately 70 families, but for anything beyond that number he needs an assistant. This is a policy which Mr. McLain feels is sound for

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

SUFFOLK HAS THE ANSWER

An anonymous minister writes in the current issue of "Advance": "My car is a 1940 model Plymouth which has traveled nearly 81,000 miles and outside of a vacation trip or two, most of this has been added up in the service of this church. It has been driven in all kinds of weather and has hauled delegates to many conventions and conferences as well as many young people to summer camps. Now it is ten years old and should be retired to green pastures. Yes, I need a new car, but how am I going to get it? My salary is too low to make the payments even if I could trade in my old car. I am stuck with an expensive vehicle and no way out except perhaps hearing from an unknown rich uncle. I need a car as much as many, and more than some. What would you do? This is a serious matter."

Suffolk has the answer. A communication from the pastor states: "It is not often that a preacher is at a loss for words, but it happened to Duane Vore. A committee (Mrs. W. W. Godwin, Mrs. G. B. Dixon, Mr. E. H. Rawls and Mr. J. D. MacClenny) representing members of the Suffolk Christian Church called on him last Wednesday afternoon and presented a 1950 Plymouth sedan. It came as a complete surprise and something of a shock. The Vore family deeply appreciate the thoughtfulness of the people of the church in the presentation of this gift. Words cannot carry the full weight of thanks but perhaps in the future ways may be found of expressing their keen sense of gratitude.

On reading the announcements of a number of pastors receiving cars during recent months, one minister remarked to the editor that it might be stated that he had not received a new car! Yes, there are many faithful pastors who have not, who have never received a new car as a gift. There are many in the same predicament as the man who wrote in "Advance." The answer lies with the congregation. The entire membership is far more able to buy a car than a poor minister. Congratulations to Pastor Vore and members of the Suffolk Church. Who will follow their good example?

The gift of a car is a grand gesture on the part of a church as well as a grand and unforgettable experience on the part of a pastor. It provides one with the physical and emotional bases for a great pastoral ministry. The gradual spreading of the average membership in the gravitation to suburbs and the multiplicity of pastoral duties makes a car a necessity for the successful pastor. Churches which desire efficient service should free their pastor from every possible handicap.

THE PLIGHT OF WOMEN

Through the centuries women have had to fight not only the common enemies of mankind, but also they have had to contend with the customs and forces that enslaved them. The struggle has been long and arduous and the end is not yet.

Here is the report of a conference on college women and church work which was held recently at Keuka College, New York. It was attended by delegates from 28 northeastern colleges and by church vocational workers. Conference recommendations asked for the removal of barriers that now bar women for church tasks "on the grounds of tradition or ostensibly theological dogma." Mildred McAfee Horton called on women to participate "in every aspect of church life to which they are fitted by temperance and training."

Edith Wolfe, pastor of the Congregational Church of East Canaan, Connecticut, deplored the restrictions some denominations place on the work of women in the church. She confessed she was weary of the talk of "special contributions women can make to the church." She went on to add: "There is no such thing as the 'special contribution' of women. There is only the particular contribution of particular women to the church. Each must individually decide what her own contribution will be."

To be sure, it is rather futile to urge college women to enter vocations from which they are barred either legally or by custom. But strange as it may seem, there are doors that are closed to college women.

The open door to the ordination of women is a touch subject in a number of denominations. Some do not permit it at all. Others, that have nothing in their rules of government to prevent it, may find ways to circumvent it. Custom, the unwritten code, may be unyielding.

College women are making valuable contributions in many vocations. We ordinarily think of women as being more religious than men, and yet the pinnacle of religious vocation has been and is, with few exceptions, denied women. Is it possible that the Church which has urged people to use their talents has been guilty of stifling or thwarting them?

Visitation Evangelism

By REV. EDWARD J. VORBA, Pastor

First Congregational Church, Bradford, Vermont

Forty Protestant denominations are in the midst of a great cooperative program called "The United Evangelistic Advance." Like many another minister I took the announcement of this effort last year as but one more scheme to bother with. Especially did one phase called "visitation evangelism" fail to capture my imagination.

Today, only a few months later, I feel entirely different. The great revival of our Christianity so needed now can happen if our churches will only enter into the spirit of this Protestant advance and cooperate with enthusiasm. The average church can do so, I am persuaded, with real success through the method of visitation evangelism.

It is an old way although we have discovered it anew only in recent years. Jesus himself sent out his disciples two by two to spread the Good News. They went where the people were in their homes, at their work, where they played—and presented the Good News informally and personally and naturally.

Such is the method that can be used today. Through the evenings the people of our churches may go out calling in the homes of their fellows telling of Christ and His Church. It is very like the Every Member Canvass, only this time a friendly visit with the confrontation of Christ to people. Too often we have called only for money or for food.

This program will work in any and every church if we will but try it. It is, of course, best to have all the churches in a certain area working out the entire program together. Outside ministers may be brought in. Such a cooperative effort is usually real news to a community.

Visitation evangelism works in the unchurched area where pastoral leadership has been spasmodic or inadequate. Last fall I worked with a little rural church up in northern Vermont. It has had but partial pastoral service for years. In one week the membership of seventeen persons was increased by forty persons making decisions for Christ.

It works in an already church area. I have been with my present church a year and a half. It is my first pastorate. Fifty-five new members have been added in that time to a resident membership of only 139. This is a strategic church, more so than its size would indicate. It is the center of a fifty-mile area in the Upper Connecticut River Valley. It is not a mushrooming community nor one with a rapidly changing population. In one week's time the method of visitation evangelism increased that already larger membership by 50 per cent. The end is not yet in sight, for another 50 per cent may join, and the method is being made a regular activity in our church life.

A radical change has come in my own thinking since I have participated in this way of evangelism. Before I had thought that if a minister did his work well, the people would respond. Members would come automatically.

My experience in visitation evangelism has shown me that not all the truth lies in such an assumption. It is an inadequate feeling which a minister may have and one which may be behind much of the alarming rises and falls of churches with the popularity of ministers. I see now that in visitation evangelism may be found the real area for the lay person and that he or she can do a better job here than the minister. Indeed, it frees the minister from "selling the church" for his real work of preaching, teaching and calling with a purpose.

Time and time again the man or woman in the pew has brought in decisions for Christ that the minister simply could not obtain. Why? Here was no professional person calling upon the people. He or she was not being paid for the calling. Here was a person giving time and energy freely and willingly with no axe to grind. Many have been asked to join the church by the ministers but not by a lay person. That is why they feel they have never received an invitation.

How humbling it is for a pastor to hear a caller report that some people said they had planned to say "no" if a minister called, but they said "yes" to the lay person. That actually happens! How healthy that is for the church—that its people are not depending upon the popularity of a minister for their allegiance to the church.

Not only is home visitation done during the week, but as part of the total program factories and community groups are visited and addressed.

The impact thus is thorough, and the church goes outside its own four walls.

For a long time we have been looking for a way to do in our time what the old fashioned revival meeting did in its day. I believe we have discovered it in the method of visitation evangelism.

Not only this, but it is a way which leads us to the fundamental responsibility and privilege of the Christian layman or laywoman in our churches. Here is where he or she can do a real piece of work. Without exception I have seen men and women enthused about this witnessing. It has revolutionized them, and they have changed lives. How many times even some of the most active workers in our churches have exclaimed after such a program that they felt for the first time they were really doing something for their church.

Yes, I believe that E. Stanley Jones is right in saying that today the case for Christianity will not be won by the clever lawyer with his eloquence pleading from the pulpit. The case for Christianity will be won by the witness.

Too long has evangelism been something we have misunderstood and shied away from. Too long have lay people had nothing to do except work on bazaars and bake cakes for church suppers. Now in the method of visitation evangelism we may return to the enthusiasm of the Early Church and to the true position and task of the laity. If we take advantage of this method, perhaps some day the church suppers will be for fellowship and not for money to keep the church going. Then our lay people will feel that the church is worthwhile and that they have a real part in bringing the Kingdom of our God.

THE FOUR R's.

Our Christian World Mission expresses its concern for the recovery of education as an agency of the spiritual life by placing in its budget a substantial sum which is to be allocated to our church-related colleges.

Our denominational leaders, by word and deed, are recognizing the religious potential that lies within the thousands of young people who are seeking higher education.

In the faith of our fathers we Congregational Christians are moving to restore the "R" of religion to the alphabet of education.—Howard Stone Anderson.

ABOUT FLORIDIA.

The weather changes about as often here as it does in Virginia. One would expect that, however, in February and March. But, so far, after it turns cold overnight, one may expect bright sunshine and balmy weather the following day. The variety of weather can furnish a topic of conversation, when nothing else seems to be on one's mind.

Just now we are thinking about the variety of tourists here. Previously, we commented upon the fact that apparently most of them are facing the sunset of life. But that does not seem to be any reason for gloom. The men walk briskly, and the women keep step with them. A few men and women use a cane when walking—but the way they handle the canes one would think they were being "sporty" rather than depending upon them for support. The women paint their cheeks and touch up their lips with that youthful substance which makes them appear young. They seem to ignore the calendar and the record of their first birthday. Why not? Much in life depends upon the attitude one takes about any given situation. The effect of age is often measured, whether softened or magnified, by which way one looks. People who look to the future, and expect a future, do not have so many worries about age. It is all a mistake for Christians to take the position that life all ends in the cemetery. It almost ends for many people before they arrive at that stopping place. A few weeks' stay in Florida will take the sting out of mounting birthdays, for those dear people who bemoan gray hairs and added years. Don't pity yourself by wishing you could always be young. Take life as it comes, and thank God for every day and every year. If you cannot do that at home, come to St. Petersburg, sit on the green benches and watch the happy old people go by.

We have attended four churches here. Each differed from the other. The pastors were different. The sermons indicated variety. All churches seemed too small for the congregations, for over 2,000 people went early to get a seat. The music is very fine. Large choirs rendered some difficult anthems. Soloists were above the average. But the thing that impressed us was the main emphasis seemed to be upon the sermon. Preaching is the central, dynamic feature of the worship services we have attended here. A pulpit in the center—rather than on the side—seems to be in favor in these churches. There are exceptions, of course, but it is evident that good sermons can still be preached regardless of the position of the pulpit or the altar. There are different types of people, and each can be satisfied by looking around. One need not be narrow or dogmatic about the type or the position of church furnishings. Take the kind that best serves your purpose and give the other minister, and congregations the privilege you exercise for yourself.

Virginia can learn something from Florida about going to church. North Carolina may need some of the same kind of leadership. Most ministers who are called to a church, in these days are worthy of the undivided support of the churches—and that includes attending worship services. As goes the worship service, so goes the church ultimately; and the sooner churches realize this, and bestir themselves to regular church attendance, the earlier will come the great advance movement in the modern church. Great buildings, educated ministers and much wealth cannot induce success without the united support of the laymen.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE COUNTY SEAT PASTOR.

[Abstract of address by Rev. Edward H. Jones, pastor of Bethel (Ohio) Methodist Church, delivered to the Pastors' Section of the International Council of Religious Education at Columbus, Ohio, on February 14.]

To the average American the county seat is the most important governmental unit with which he will ever have close contact, and yet it is so close to our everyday life that we fail to see its importance.

I believe that there are certain characteristics which are common to the county seat town, and its size does not alter these characteristics—it only aggravates them.

One characteristic is that every county seat town displays marked contrasts. It invariably has a line of class distinction as real as though it were marked with signs. On this side of the "line" the respectable people live—on that side the other people live. This "line" exists only in the minds of the people of both sides, but there it does its damage. Unless your denomination, because of the size of the town, supports a church on both sides of the "line" the county seat pastor must meet the challenge of ministering to both sides of the "line" equally well.

The typical county seat church a few members of outstanding wealth, many on a modest plane and several who are actually poor. In each case the economic condition of the parishoner poses a challenge to the pastor.

The county seat usually furnishes the nearest hospital for the surrounding countryside. This poses a challenge to the pastor to study the field of hospital visitation and to be more than just the pastor to his own people when they chance to go to the hospital. Many lonely persons are to be found in our county seat hospitals, who are literally starving for a visit from a Christian minister.

Many young couples come in from the surrounding country to secure marriage licenses, then seek out the nearest pastor of their faith or denomination. The county seat pastor will do well to gain a reputation of marriages that last rather than "quickies" that often fail.

While the church and politics should rightfully be kept separate the county seat pastor has a responsibility to the entire county to see that the elected officials perform their duties. While he maintains a friendly relationship with the judges, county commissioners, sheriff and other elected officials he should at all times let them know that his church will not hesitate to criticize them openly and publicly if after private consultation they fail to perform their sworn duties. A knowledge that a pastor understands their problems yet expects the best from them will cause them to think twice before they neglect their duties.

The average county seat pastor is underpaid. While he holds a position of esteem and honor within the community equal to that of the judge, lawyer, doctor, or superintendent of education, his salary is often a fraction of that received by those persons. It takes a great man of God not to feel an inferiority complex and neglect his duty under such circumstances.

In view of these and other facts I would like to see further study of the problems of the county seat pastor."

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

MISS ANNA IRENE HELFENSTEIN.

News reached the college on the morning of February 2 of the death of Miss Anna Irene Helfenstein.

Miss Helfenstein was the daughter of the late D. M. Helfenstein who was an influential minister in our church, and was the sister of Dr. R. C. Helfenstein of our First Church in Richmond, Virginia. Dr. Helfenstein has been a very active and influential minister in our church for years.

Miss Helfenstein was a member of Elon College's faculty during my student days, 1906-1908. She was head of the Department of Speech and gave instruction in this field. She returned to Elon College as Dean of Women and instructor in Latin and Greek and served the college from 1923-25. She was a very brilliant woman and well prepared for her work. While at Elon College she rendered most acceptable services in the different fields for which she was employed.

In 1942 I had a letter from Miss Helfenstein inquiring about the condition of the college. The correspondence at that time resulted in the establishment of the David M. Helfenstein Ministerial Loan Fund. She wanted to establish this fund as a memorial to her father and for the assistance of young men preparing for the ministry. She planned to build this fund up to a minimum of $1,000.00. At her death five $100 bonds (U. S. Saving Bonds) had been forwarded to the college. As yet, no provision has been discovered for additions to the $500 fund. The college is most grateful for this benevolent desire and for this contribution. Her father, Dr. Helfenstein, in all probability would appreciate greatly the thought of his daughter in perpetuating his memory and in encouraging young men in the ministry. The ministry was dear to his heart.

At the request of Miss Helfenstein this benevolent act of hers was not announced during her life time. The establishment of this fund will be reported to the Board of Trustees at its annual meeting in May.

SPRING QUARTER BEGINS.

The Spring Quarter at Elon College is beginning today, Monday, March 13. The student enrollment for the fall and winter quarters totaled 807. There will be between 35 and 40 new students to register for the Spring Quarter which will run our total for the year beyond 840. The total enrollment for last year was 865. This is a very encouraging report and Elon College is proud to be able to make this announcement to all who are interested. We had prepared ourselves for a reduction in enrollment this year of at least 10 per cent. It is gratifying to find this was a miscalculation. While we are delighted that our enrollment at Elon College is holding up so well, we are still anxious to have the young people of our own church enroll in our own college. By enrolling at Elon College they will not miss anything in an educational program but they will gain tremendously in contacts with the young people of our church. If the young people of your congregation are not planning to enter Elon College, will you please speak to them and tell them of the advantages to be had at their own church college? We are sparing neither time nor money to make the college and its curriculum of studies what they should be for the best advantages of our students.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Contributions from the College Period — January and February — continue to come in slowly. We have a few churches in the Convention who pay their entire apportionment early in the year. This is desirable for the church itself. By paying the college apportionments early, the church gets that part of the year's program completed and the second benefit is that it helps the college greatly. Operating expenses in institutions of higher learning have increased so greatly in recent years that it is indeed difficult to find sufficient funds with which to meet current bills. If our Sunday schools and churches could realize the real situation at their college, they would, I am sure, put forth special efforts to see that their apportionments are paid on time and in advance if possible. The college is greatly encouraged by the sympathetic cooperation of such a large number of our churches in the Convention. We are now in the last month of the first quarter of the year.

Our contributions on apportionments from the churches total less than $2,000.00. By the end of March, the total should be $3,750.00. Will your church help to bring the total up to what it should be?

CHURCHES DEDICATE SERVICES TO HARTFORD SEMINARY FOUNDATION.

In a convincing display of interdenominational unity, 65 churches in Southern New England, representing the Baptist, Congregational, Lutheran, Methodist, and Presbyterian denominations, on February 19 dedicated their morning services to the work and needs of the Hartford Seminary Foundation. This graduate "university of religion" located in the Connecticut capital has from its founding in 1834 furnished to all Protestant denominations men and women prepared for leadership in the three main fields of church work. The theme of most of the sermons given on Hartford Seminary Foundation Day was "Strong Leadership — Strong Church."

Six members of the Foundation's board of trustees and thirteen members of the faculty spoke in Connecticut churches. In other instances, ministers in their own pulpits spoke to the day's subject.

The Hartford Seminary Foundation is interdenominational in its trustees (4 denominations), faculty (12), and student body (48), and receives the support of no single denomination. Hartford Seminary Foundation Day was to direct the Foundation's needs and extent of service to lay members. The Foundation is currently raising $1,100,000 as a means of maintaining its service unimpaired. Most of the Reenforcement Fund is designated for balancing the annual budget and adjusting faculty salaries.

Culture is the passion for sweetness and light, and what is more, the passion for making them prevail.

At Home and Abroad

CHINESE STUDENT CONFRONTS AMERICA.

"The thing we have in common is that we are Christians," is the simple way in which Miss Janet Chen of China, newly arrived student Schauffler College, Cleveland, Ohio, summed up her joys and sorrows as she struggles with a strange language among still stranger customs and a bewildering tangle of American gadgets.

Miss Chen has given a vivid picture of what it is like for a guest from abroad to try to cope with rapidly speaking Americans, drop the right size of strange looking money, called nickles and dimes, into phone boxes; face an irate car conductor when you have dropped 25c instead of 13c into the money box, and try to reach hooks, lights and shelves built to the measurements of the more Amazonian American lass.

The things that get the foreign student down very quickly, Miss Chen reminds us, could often be avoided by a little thoughtfulness. Primarily there is always the problem of understanding the American version of the English language. Then there is the difficulty of adjusting to American food and also that of understanding geographical directions.

"I found difficulty in learning ways of using electric machines such as stoves, dish washers, washing machines and hair driers. Some of these things I do not yet know the names of," says Miss Chen who has been only six months in the U. S. A. "It is a bit difficult, too," she admitted, "to really understand the nature of Americans. They are very individualistic and independent."

No one knows better than the average American city dweller that our system of push, pull and shove when traveling on street cars, subways and elevated trains is one that rests on the foundation of "every man for himself." To a bewildered and apprehensive newcomer from the typically courteous Orient this must be a horrifying experience at times.

On her way to the U. S. A., Miss Chen began making friends. Her cabin mates were an American and a Canadian. They cared for her when she was sick, cheered her up with music and stories and have continued to remember her at Schauffler through correspondence. "I am sure our friendship in Christ will last as long as I live," said Miss Chen fervently.

When her boat docked at Houston, Texas, she was met by representatives of the American Board of Foreign Missions, the Congregational Christian service arm, and by three Schauffler College girls. Arriving in Cleveland two Chinese-speaking Americans greeted her at the railroad terminal.

Miss Chen has been in America only six months. She has been receiving cards and gifts from Christian American friends whom she has never even met and some have sent greetings to her family overseas. This friendliness reminds her of Jesus' words: "For I was hungry and you gave Me meat, thirsty and you gave Me drink, a stranger and you took Me in."

BRUNNER DEFENDS CHRISTIAN DEMOCRACY.

Challenged by a militant Brahman lawyer who asserted that India can accept the Christ of the Bible but not the Christianity of the West, Prof. Emil Brunner replied that Christianity must not be blamed "for the sins I commit which are contrary to Christ's teaching."

Lecturing in Madura, India, during his tour of the Far East, the Swiss theologian had said that "Christianity proclaims all people as the common children of a Christlike God. From this equality preached by Christ has grown democracy."

"India is launching splendidly in a democratic government. But can India continue as a true democracy without the foundation of Christian faith which the West has found essential?" asked Prof. Brunner. "I hope India will become a Christian nation and preserve its democracy."

"We want Christ, the Christ who preached the non-violence, the Christ who observed no caste, the Christ who went about doing good," replied the Brahman lawyer from the audience. "Our great Tamil poet Appar taught somewhat the same in the Madura Temple."

"I have read the Bible," said the lawyer, as reported in The Guardian, Indian Christian weekly. I love my Christ as a great Avathar of God. India accepts Him, but not the Christianity you preach. You have said some good things. Come back again after you have found more of what India has to offer. . . ."

Continuing the interchange, another listener demanded: "Did not poison gas, atom bombing, most of the horrors of war come from the Christian West?"

"Yes," replied Prof. Brunner. "But democracy is inherent in the Christian faith while these sins you have mentioned are contrary to Christ. We Westerners are a bad lot. But the badness is not inherent in our religion, Christian democracy."

STUDY CENTERS TO PLAN GERMAN MISSION POLICY.

The German Evangelical Missionary Council will open a series of study centers to develop a completely new policy for German and world missions. The action was taken after the Council heard a declaration on the position of German missions in Africa on racial segregation.

The study centers, to be located in Barmen, Berlin, Hermannsburg, Neuenhettelsau and Tunbingen, will work in close cooperation with universities and church colleges.

Meeting in Bethel recently, the delegates from all the German missionary organizations also moved to create an emergency fund to aid the groups in Berlin, which are completely dependent on East German marks. War damage compensation was arranged between the societies in Berlin and those in the Western Zone.

DANISH MISSIONARIES EVACUATE MANCHURIA.

Believing that there is no possibility of continuing Christian work in Manchuria, the last ten of the fifteen Danish missionaries there are now on their way home with exit permits finally issued by the Communist authorities.

One of the group, manager of a large orphanage, may continue his work behind the Manchurian iron curtain. Another, Miss Ellen Nielsen, a Chinese citizen who has worked in a little country town, plans to remain in China.

There is one indubitable manifestation of the Divinity, and that is the laws of right which are made known to the world through revelation.

FAMILY LIFE INSTITUTE.

Last week while listening to a devotional program from a local radio station, I heard a prominent Catholic Priest say this: "The greatest need in our country today is stronger family ties and more family living. The American home has lost something vital . . . it has lost the family touch." This was a truth well spoken and it set me to thinking. Thinking of what could and what should be done about this breakdown in family living. . . . A problem that is today facing all Christians—Catholic, Protestant and Jewish. We are all asking for a true diagnosis and a prescription which will help rebuild our homes and re-knit our family ties. Our nation has been a strong nation because our forefathers built a strong foundation through homes. Great and good men have been our leaders as a result of good homes; but when so much of the home foundation has been shaken we cannot expect it to be rebuilt by statesmen and government. But rather by each member of a home having a check-up and seeing if he is sound in his living and thinking.

The home has always been the greatest institution and next to it stands the Church. Therefore, our churches are realizing more and more the need of better homes, happier homes, homes where God is revered, because these homes are spiritual resources to the church and builders of a new world.

The Intercouncil Committee on Christian Family Life, representing the Federal Council of Churches, the International Council of Religious Education and the United Council of Church Women, has announced the theme: "Home Builders are World Builders," for national Family Week—May 1-8. Now is the time for our District Superintendents and local presidents to begin making plans for its observance. And to help you make your plans and program I know of no better way than for you to take advantage of the Family Institutes being made possible this spring in each Conference of the Southern Convention. Our leaders in the Family Life Department of the Convention are bringing to us an authority in this field of work. You have already read of his work and seen his picture and been informed of the day's activities. Now it is my opportunity to tell you of a part that you can play in making these days successful. Only two words are needful: be there.

As chairman of the Family Life Department of Eastern Virginia, I would like to urge the members of our various societies to be at Oakland Christian Church, March 23 at 10:30 a. m. It will be a great day for all of us. Mothers of young children need not stay away because of their children. The host church is providing a nursery for their care. We are especially interested in having our young mothers present because their work in family development is just beginning and so often they stand in need of guidance. Parents of teenagers, I'm sure, will not want to miss an opportunity such as this.

Dr. Reynolds will have for sale books and pamphlets and the availability of these may provide the solution to some problem you have in your family. There will be a great deal of inspiration and help awaiting you on March 23, but you have to come to receive it.

I hope that each Society has already prepared a Family Life Poster. If you haven't yet begun, there is still time. Each president is asked to see that her Society has a Poster in the display room on that day. Let's get busy and have a Poster from each Society in Eastern Virginia.

One other request: Let's see if the Family Altar is really outmoded. Take a count in each Society and be able to report how many of your members have a family altar.

Remember—Family Institute Day.

Place—Oakland Christian Church.

Date—March 23, 1950.

Time—10:30 a. m.

Let's all be there.

MRS. LELYA P. NEESE.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Elon College, N. C.

DEAR WOMEN OF OUR CONFERENCE:

I wish to report to you that it has been a pleasure to work with the committee which has planned our Spring

Rally, because a new emphasis on Family Life is being made. The program is well planned and anticipates a gathering of two hundred of the most interested church women of our Conference. The basic subject will be presented in such a manner as to inspire and enlighten each of us, and to challenge us to a greater program in our local church.

Luncheon will be served in the College Dining Hall—price, $1.00. Sessions will be held in the main auditorium. Be sure to work for a large delegation from your church.

Hope to see you March 28 at 10:30.

Sincerely,

MRS. JOHN G. TRUITT,
*Chairman of Family Life,
North Carolina Conference.*

SOME REPORTS FROM THE WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

PORTSMOUTH.

A fine observance of the World Day of Prayer is reported by the Portsmouth women, Mrs. Shafer being president of the Congregational Christian women there.

Four services were held at Trinity Episcopal Church—10:00, 2:00, 4:00 and 8:00. The 4:00 service was for teenagers and conducted by them. The 8:00 service was by business women and for all who could not attend during the day. There were 400 at the 10:00 service alone.

At noon, an amplified two-minute prayer was rendered from the chancel of Trinity Episcopal Church by Bishop William A. Brown. Silence reigned and bowed heads were predominant.

The Bishop asked for a better world for today's children, Divine guidance for all in authority, end of all war and surer faith in God. His prayer was preceded only by the ringing of church bells at the customary time and the shrill Naval Shipyard whistle, signifying the noon hour, according to the Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch.

The newspaper also states that traffic lights in the downtown section were turned off 0 seconds before noon, and policemen manned the various intersections. Some of the motorists and bus passengers, who were unaware of the noonday plans were curious, but before the sudden surprise could wear off the prayer began.

A few motorists were caught as they were pulling out from parking places, but they switched off their motors and maintained complete silence until the amen sounded.

FRANKLIN OBSERVES NATIONAL YOUTH WEEK.

Significant activities of the Young People marked the observance of National Youth Week, January 29-February 5, in the Franklin Congregational Christian Church.

On Sunday, January 28, the pastor, Rev. W. A. Grissom, held a special service for the young people at the 11:00 o'clock worship hour, carrying out the theme, "God Designs." He used the suggested topic, "Clay in the Hands of God."

As another event of Youth Week, on the evening of January 29, a Junior Young People's Society was organized, ages 9-12 inclusive. This is a wide-awake group and holds great promise.

On Wednesday evening, February 1, the pastor and his wife gave the Senior Young People's group a candy-making party in their home. The frolic consisted of games and stunts, record-playing, candy-making and corn-popping. It was an evening of fun for the 26 young people present.

The newly-organized Junior group had a party on Friday evening in the church basement. This, too, was plenty of fun.

On Sunday, February 5, the church observed College Day. Dr. D. J. Bowden, Dean of Elon College, was guest speaker at the morning service, and gave a most challenging message.

The Youth Week observance was climaxed by a special service of worship given in the church by the young people on Sunday evening, February 5. Fifteen members had parts on the program. The topic, "We Would Be Building," was most effectively presented. This consisted of a radio skit, a solo, appropriate Scripture readings, and three talks, given by members of the group. The program ended with a most impressive candle-lighting dedication service, in which each of the young people dedicated himself anew to the task of building according to God's designs and purposes. As the church remained in total darkness except for the light of a master candle which burned on the altar, each lighted his individual candle and stood in formation out from the central light. In the stillness and beauty of this impressive setting, came the voices of the church choir from an adjoining room as they sang the appropriate anthem, "Send Out Thy Light." This service will long be remembered by the people of the Franklin Church.

A LAYMAN'S MESSAGE TO YOUTH.

By J. C. PENNY,

The Great Christian Merchant.

If I could get a message over to the youth of this country, it would be that success in life does not depend on genius. Any young man of ordinary intelligence, who is morally sound, above-board in his dealings and not afraid of work, should succeed in spite of obstacles and handicaps, if he plays the game fairly and squarely and keeps everlastingly at it. The possibilities before one are measured by the determination which is within one.

For many years I selected personally our store managers. After I had satisfied myself about a prospect's character and qualifications, I inquired about his home life. Was it happy and harmonious? Did his wife have his interests at heart? Would she stand at his side and help him to attain his ambitions? If I did not believe that his wife measured up, I did not employ the man. If I found that his wife was a true helpmate, I felt that he would succeed, other things being equal, for a good woman's power to encourage is well-nigh unlimited.

In 1910, the mother of my two oldest sons died after a brief illness. The shock was so sudden and severe that it nearly overwhelmed me. Although I never drank liquor even moderately, I had an intense desire to drink. This was the most critical time of my life, but the memory of my father's faith buoyed me up. This experience altered my viewpoint about things that matter and those which are non-essential.

But after that experience my interest was no longer one of dollars and cents. I realized that money—necessary as it is—should be a means to a worthy aim and not the end in itself. Up to this time I had been in poor health but along with my change of thought—the result of a spiritual awakening—I began to develop a stronger body.

WILHELMINA ACCLAIMS YOUTH MESSAGE.

The message of the World Council's Youth Department "contains a working program for youth all over the world, wherever they may work—a message in which the sense of belonging together is strengthened and mutual ties are tightened," said H. R. H. Princess Wilhelmina of the Netherlands.

Addressing the Ecumenical Youth Council of The Netherlands early this month, Princess Wilhelmina asserted that the Youth Department's message to youth delegates at the East Asian Christian Conference in Bangkok, Thailand, "has without doubt made a deep impression in wide circles all over the world, by its sense of realism, its practical Christianity and its vision of the opportunities of this moment in history."

Quoting from the message itself, "To carry the Gospel of Jesus Christ into the market-places, homes, fields and factories, into every part of human life," the Princess asks, "could it be said more clearly to permeate the whole of life with the spirit of Christ, which makes all relations Biblically sound?"

CYPRESS CHAPEL YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Young People of Cypress Chapel Christian Church presented a program Sunday night (Feb. 19) at the church in keeping with Youth Week. Jack Byrd presided and Philip Moran and Catherine Brinkley led the devotionals.

Rev. Earl Farrell was the speaker of the evening. His subject was "God Designs and Youth Builds." The benediction was given by Jack Byrd.

PROGRAM OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION FORECAST.

Plans for increasing cooperation among the Protestant denominations of the nation in the moral and religious training of children and youth were announced recently by Dr. Roy G. Ross, general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education. His report to the Council's annual business session held in Columbus outlined the Council's program for extending religious teaching through homes, Sunday schools, vacation and week-day church school classes, and evangelistic missions.

New Youth Crusade.

Dr. Ross presented a movement to bring about united action among the young people of the various denominations, to be known as the "Mid-Century Call to Youth."

The goal would be the enrolling of a million youth to back cooperative religious teaching and action on local, national and world levels. Such a crusade, Dr. Ross declared, "has the greatest potential for effective youth action of any program of this century."

50 Missions in 1950.

At the same time the International Council and the Federal Council of Churches will continue their National Christian Teaching Missions, which were held in 25 cities throughout the country last year.

Under this plan specialists go into a community to work with local church leaders in mapping ways of reaching unchurched families in the area.

As a result of canvasses made in the 25 cities, Dr. Ross revealed, 186,749 persons not related to any church were visited. Some 50 missions are scheduled for 1950.

Junior Camps Popular.

In the field of religious education of children, Dr. Ross emphasized "the growing interest of our church educational agencies in boys' and girls' camps. More than 60 per cent of America's camping is under church sponsorship."

Following up its conference of church camp leaders in 1949, the Council has set a series of training centers for junior-age camp personnel for 1950.

50th Anniversary Observance.

As another use of summertime for religious instruction, Dr. Ross urged vacation Bible classes.

He announced a nation-wide observance of the 50th anniversary of the vacation church school movement to be held in 1951.

Launched in 1901 as an effort to keep underprivileged city children off the streets, vacation Bible schools now enroll annually 5,000,000 boys and girls from all racial and economic groups.

Parent Education Conference.

To assist parents in the religious training of their children, the Council is calling a conference of 140 national leaders next July, Dr. Ross stated.

He reported further that the Council's department of adult work and family education is extending its service to prisons. First to experiment with a "Learning for Life" program are men in San Quentin (Calif.) Prison, where more than 700 certificates already have been issued for courses completed.

Week-day Classes Continue.

Record enrollment in week-day church school classes is reported by many American communities, Dr. Ross said. Ninety per cent of the nation's week-day programs of religious instruction have been able to continue their activity in keeping with the Supreme Court's ruling on the Campaign case.

Modern Techniques Used.

Dr. Ross indicated that the Council's efforts to promote such modern teaching techniques as radio, films and drama will make Bible lessons more attractive and meaningful to the nation's Sunday school pupils.

A workshop for church leaders interested in drama will be held at Green Lake, Wis., August 7-18. The Council also sponsors conferences in which denominational workers plan production of audio-visual materials.

Sunday School Teachers Study.

Council statistics show that 55,704 Sunday school workers were enrolled in 707 interdenominational leadership schools held between September 1, 1948 and August 31, 1949. Of these, Dr. Ross revealed, 35,478 received credit.

Further statistics show that 80 denominations with church membership of 33,000,000 use the Council's uniform and graded lesson outlines.

More Laymen Active.

In noting the increased participation of laymen in the work of the Council, Dr. Ross called attention to a new by-law which provides for a minimum lay representation of 25 per cent on the organization's governing body. Laymen contribute a significant percentage of the Council's budget.

Service Overseas.

The Council's influence is extending outside this continent, according to the general secretary's report. News has been received that week-day church schools have been set up in Turkey and Hungary on the basis of advice from the Council's department of week-day religious education.

Printed materials to help church school teachers in India and Germany were sent abroad by the Council during the last year.

Uniform lesson outlines, prepared by committees of the Council, are now being used on every continent, adapted to various national, racial and cultural needs.

A project launched last year by the International Council and the World Council of Christian Education has resulted in the sending of $20,000 worth of Bible teaching pictures to churches around the world.

World Convention in Toronto.

These two agencies also are co-operating in a World Convention on Christian Education, to be held in Toronto, Canada, August 10-16, 1950.

In preparation Canada is compiling a "welcome book" of loose-leaf pages containing the signatures of Sunday school teachers and officers throughout the provinces. Contributions that accompany the signatures will enable delegates from financially distressed countries to attend the convention.

Cites Spiritual Need.

In concluding his report, Dr. Ross said: "As we look ahead, we see challenging opportunities and great responsibilities—responsibility borne out of the ever-urgent need for spiritual growth among all men everywhere if the kingdom of God is to become a reality; responsibility for developing a program which will keep pace with needs and with the ever-expanding vision of our constituent agencies."

THE CHURCH IN ROME.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 26, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: I am not ashamed of the gospel; it is the power of God for salvation to every one who has faith, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.—Romans 1:16.

LESSON: Romans 1:1, 7-12; Acts 28:14b-15, 30-31.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 2:2-4.

Rome.

Proud mistress of the world was Rome. She ruled with an iron hand. She had magnificent buildings, material wealth, military might, and political supremacy. But she did not have any spiritual vitality at the heart of things. Her religion had not kept pace with her outward progress. "Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates and men decay."

Unashamed of the Gospel.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel," wrote Paul. Some folks might have been ashamed of it. It was a small sect, with only a few scattered adherents in that great city, it had no wealth or social prestige or military might or political organization or outstanding leadership there. Furthermore its central Figure was a humble Carpenter who had allowed himself to be crucified. He emphasized the virtue of humility and kindness and compassion. Paul himself was presumably of small stature and of not too attractive appearance. And here he was daring to take the gospel to Rome—of all places proud, powerful Rome. Rome was a synonym for power.

But Paul was not ashamed of the gospel of Christ. He was not ashamed of Christ, not ashamed to take Him anywhere. He never had to make any apology for Christ. Put Him among the world's greatest philosophers or thinkers or characters and He stood above them head and shoulders. And Paul was not ashamed of the gospel either. For it was power, too. Paul knew that there were several kinds of power, the power of money, political power, military power, etc. But the gospel was power, too—the power of God unto salvation. More than anything else Rome and Romans needed the power of the gospel. All too many of us are ashamed of the gospel. We almost apologize for the fact that we are Christians and members of the Church. Shame on us for being ashamed.

*A Servant? A Bond Servant,
But of All Men Free.*

"Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ." That is what he called himself, a servant and a bond-servant at that. He wanted to bring his whole life—he even includes every thought—into obedience to Jesus Christ. He wanted to be Christ's slave. But by a strange paradox in bondage to Christ he found freedom and liberty. The service of Christ was the highest form of freedom. And still is.

And an Apostle.

"Called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God." He was conscious that he had been sent from God or by God as a preacher of the good news. And for Paul the gospel was "good news." God had made himself known in Jesus Christ. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. Christ died for our sins and thus offers salvation from sin.

Called to be Saints.

"Unto all that are in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints." That is the New Testament name for believers, for ordinary members of the church. Upon being asked by his Sunday school teacher what a saint was, a boy who had seen a stained glass window that portrayed a saint replied, "A saint is somebody who lets the light shine through." Not a bad definition. We are called to be saints, holy ones. Let us walk worthy of our high calling.

A Church With a Good Reputation.

"I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all—that sounds like a Southerner talking, you all—that your faith is proclaimed throughout the world." Far and wide had the reputation of that church gone. It was known as a church that had faith, living faith, transforming faith. What kind of reputation does your church have? There are many churches which have the reputation of being generous churches, friendly churches, evangelistic churches, missionary churches. Alas, there are other churches that have the reputation of being cantankerous, quarrelsome, narrow, unfriendly churches. What kind of reputation does your church have? Are you the kind of member who would help to give your church a good reputation?

Unknown Friends.

Paul had never been to Rome, he had never seen the people to whom he was waiting, he did not even know them or their names. But they were his friends in Christ. And he thanked God for them and prayed regularly in their behalf. In Christ we are bound together with golden chains of Christian friendship.

Mutual Help and Strength.

"To the end that ye may be established, that is, that I with you may be comforted (the word means strengthened) in you, each of us by the other's faith, both yours and mine." This gifted, spiritual giant had something to give to these "run of mine" Christians. But he readily acknowledged that they had something to give to him. Even as fire kindles upon faith. The individual Christian, no matter how talented, needs to fellowship with other Christians.

Answered Prayer.

"In my prayers making request if by any means now at length I may be prospered by the will of God to come unto you" (Rom. 1:10). "And so we came to Rome" (Acts 28:14b). He prayed that he might come to Rome, and to Rome he came. God answered his prayer. But not in the way he had expected or prayed. He came to Rome, yes, but he came as a prisoner. It is a parable of how often we get an answer to our prayer, but in ways different from what we expected.

Curtain!

The curtain falls at the end of Acts with Paul a prisoner living in his own hired house, receiving all who came to him, preaching the Kingdom of God, and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness. Anything else that we know about this dynamic apostle is tradition. But the theme as the curtain falls is the same as the theme when the curtain opens—Jesus Christ and the Kingdom of God.

Acts Twenty-Nine.

The Acts of the Apostles in the New Testament has twenty-eight chapters in it. But the many more chapters have been added to this thrilling story by the heroic deeds of thousands of modern apostles. It is given to every one of us to help to write glorious chapters in that unfinished book.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

Shoppers who were emerging from stores and banks paused on the steps or in the entranceways. Other pedestrians stopped in their tracks. Construction work came to a standstill and office workers paused for the two minutes.

School officials cooperated with the observance by postponing lunch hour fifteen minutes, enabling police who ordinarily are stationed at school corners at 12:00 noon to man the various intersections.

Those in eating places paused for the two minutes, and the courts recessed.

GREENSBORO.

The Greensboro Council of Church Women, representing 50 individual churches, observed the World Day of Prayer on February 24 with a deeply impressive service at Greensboro's First Presbyterian Church.

For two hours 700 of Greensboro's church women joined with millions around the world in sincere and solemn petitions to God for spiritual power and strength to match mankind's advance and achievement in science and materialism. Women representing several races and practically all creeds participated in a dignified service built around the theme: "Faith for Our Time."

Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of Sociology at Duke University, gave the inspirational message. Dr. Hart, a member of the Friends Church and a widely known preacher, lecturer and author, emphasized that Christians could, by surrender, have divine inspiration and power in their lives. In a demonstration given at the close of his address, he urged his audience to "let go, let God" and to relax in silent prayer in the presence of God.

* * *

The Winston-Salem Council of Church Women felt that this year's World Day of Prayer service was the best one of its kind.

About 300 women, ministers, and others attended at the First Christian Church, 11:00-12:00 a. m. About fifteen different denominations were represented. The printed program was used, with both Negro and white women taking part. The offering was about three times as much as the previous year.

Other services were held in various parts of the city at night for those who could not attend during the day.

A CALL.

A call to give our utmost for the highest by attending and participating in the Family Life Institute in our Conference. Our families need a vital Christian faith, spiritual ideals, family worship and provision for family play. We need to strengthen the ties of family life within our churches. Will you answer the call?

The following is the program for the Family Life Institute in the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference to be held at Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Va., Thursday, March 23, 1950:

WOMAN'S BOARD MEETS.

The Executive Board of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention met in semi-annual session at the Vance Hotel, in Henderson, N. C., on Tuesday, March 14, at 10:15 a. m. Many important matters were discussed at that time. Miss Bettie McGuffie, National Associate Secretary of Woman's Work, was present.

BURLINGTON DISTRICT OFFICERS MEET.

On Sunday afternoon, February 5, Mrs. Harold Ingle, Superintendent of the Burlington District, invited the president and one other representative from each of the sixteen societies in the district to meet at the Burlington Church for a business meeting and social hour.

There were 23 presidents and representatives present, along with Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

After a very inspiring devotional, a few moments were spent in getting acquainted, after which each president gave a brief report of the work of her society. Some criticism was made on the Achievement Goals listed for the societies and suggestions were made for changes.

Mrs. John G. Truitt announced that our Spring Rally this year would be in the form of a Family Life Institute and would be held on Tuesday, March 28, at Elon College Community Church. She also urged that each president begin now making plans for the School of Missions at Elon College on June 13-14-15. Important announcements and helpful suggestions were made by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Robinson (new pastor and wife at the Burlington Church) came in for the social hour.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Ingle, assisted by Mr. John Graves and other members of the Burlington Church.

RUTH MAHAN.

UNDERScore THESE DATES.

March 21—Bethlehem Church—Valley of Virginia Women.

March 23—Oakland Church—Eastern Virginia Women.

March 28—Elon College—North Carolina Women.

These are the Family Life Institutes, with Dr. Paul Reynolds as guest speaker. The hours are 10:30 to 3:30. The local society will serve lunch.

June 13-14-15—School of Missions at Elon College, Mrs. John G. Truitt, chairman.

"How did you keep from crying?" was asked a little girl who had fallen down and hurt her knee. "Oh," she answered, "I just said to myself, 'Stop that,' and made myself mind me." The greatest of all lessons to "make myself mind me."

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Please visit us. Hear Jesus saying: "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me." Yes, these little strangers. How shy and timid when they come here, in need of food, in need of clothing, in need of milk to drink, sick and been given sorrow by the turn of the wheel of fate. "And ye came unto me." "Then shall the righteous answer him saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

This morning a dear friend of these little ones called over the telephone to talk about her plans to help us here. She had visited us, saw the children, saw what we are doing, and saw the need. She told me to tell the people throughout the Convention to visit the orphanage. She was anxious that we all do something in order that we might repair the place and open its doors to more needy children. This morning another lady called me over long-distance telephone to beg me to take her six fatherless little children. She gave the name of a Christian Church pastor who will sign their affidavits. The mother has only been through the fifth grade in school, poor and without resource or recourse. They are strangers, but they are on my heart.

While talking with two superintendents of large Baptist and Methodist orphanages this week I asked them how much did they in their experience consider it took to clothe one of their children for a year. They answered that they allowed $100.00 for those less than twelve and $150.00 for those over twelve. Considering those figures I think we do exceedingly well. I am studying every child and the clothing thereof to see how we compare with that figure. At that figure it would take $8,850.00 to purchase clothes for the boys and girls here.

How satisfied these little people seem! How anxious most of them are to make us all proud of them! From the record we can safely say the nearly 600 boys and girls who have gone out from here have become real assets rather than debits in the communities to which they have gone.

Thanks to every church and Sunday school for monthly offerings, all of which are being properly accredited on your conference apportionments. Thanks for all gifts of clothing or other commodities whether sent directly to the children or the orphanage. And thanks to all for your interest and prayers.

OUR FATHER.

It was a new, and must have been, a very startling command when Jesus in teaching His disciples to pray said, "When ye pray, say our Father." Something novel, unique indeed, in the thought of Israel was that idea, "Our Father." New to the world in fact. New to most of the world yet. A very small percentage of the world's population can or will pray saying "Our Father."

The pagan religions of the world do not have as god or gods those whom, in their worship, they think of or pray to as "Father." Most of the gods that people bow down to are anything else than a father, cruel, cunning, stealthy, threatening, far-off, unapproachable. Jesus' conception of God is wholly different. For Him, God is Father, kind, compassionate, forgiving, tender, inviting, loving. Not only so, but He is "our Father," yours and mine; Father of the widow and the fatherless, the strong and the weak, the saved and the sinning, the Christian and the pagan, our Father. The implication is dynamic and tremendous.

Something happens in a person's life, something in the world's life, when one can truly say and pray, "Our Father." When General Booth went into the dens and dives of sin, shame and squalor of London, and made that sin his sin, that shame his shame, though in himself he was guiltless, and there with those erring and fallen ones prayed, "Our Father," something began to happen in London and in the world. When David Livingstone went into Africa, the "open sore" of the world, making the disease and death of that continent his disease and death, and began there to pray, "Our Father," something began to happen in Africa and in the world. "Thy kingdom come." Yea, verily, God's kingdom does begin to come into this world when one who has attained identifies himself with one who has not attained and begins to pray "Our Father." When the strong identify themselves, in heart, in sympathy, in love, with the weak, and say "Our Father," the virtue goes out from the strong, and the weak are lifted and made whole.

When Christians everywhere realize that the paganism and idolatry of the world is their paganism and idolatry and can say when they pray, "Our Father," the kingdom of heaven will be very near indeed to the kingdoms of this earth.

PREACHERS NEED LAYMEN.

Council of Churches, has the backbone to oppose gambling and back it up, we get somewhere. We need the spirit backing through the teaching and preaching of our ministers. We need the business man's organizational and promotional ability to achieve the results."

In Memoriam

HATCH.

Whereas the God of love and wisdom has seen fit to call from his earthly labors to his heavenly reward one of our faithful and beloved members, Deacon Henry E. Hatch and in his going we keenly sense our loss, but not without hope knowing our loss is God's gain in glory; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That we, the Board of Deacons of the First Congregational Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., humbly bow in a true spirit of resignation "not our will but Thine be done."

2. That our church has lost a devout member, our city a loyal upright citizen always supporting the best for our community, and his family has lost a loving thoughtful husband and father and we herein extend to them our deepest sympathy.

3. That we honor his precious memory and consecrated life by carrying on the work so dear to him until that day when we shall know even as we are known.

BARNETTE.

William Lacy Barnette was born in Alamance County, N. C., January 15, 1866, died at his home, Route 1, Mebane, N. C., March 9, 1950, having spent his entire life in the same county. He professed faith in Christ in early manhood and united with the Presbyterian Church. After moving into Long's Chapel community, he transferred his membership here where he remained faithful and loyal to the end. When his church doors were opened for service he was present, or had a reason for not being present. He never "made excuse."

Mr. Barnette married Miss Rosana McCauley in 1892, who preceded him in death about ten years ago. To this union were born two sons, Roy W. and W. Edgar who are still living on the home farm where they have been for a number of years.

Funeral services were held from Long's Chapel Congregational Christian Church on March 11, with his pastor in charge, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. E. N. Clark. Burial was in adjacent cemetery by the side of his wife. He is survived by two sons, a great number of nieces and nephews, and his friends are numbered by his acquaintance.

"Surely there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel."

GUY H. VEAZEY.

LET'S QUIT GUESSING.

with a church of 300 or 400 members no minister can add to his already sufficient burdens the care of an equal number of souls scattered at a number of widely divergent points.

"It would indeed take a human dynamo to do such a task well, and I haven't met many who generate that much energy. I am one who looks upon the duties of the minister as something more than the conducting of services of worship and the administration of the many functions and organizations of the church. The pastor is primarily a shepherd of the souls of his flock, and he must never labor under the illusion that as such he can be supplanted by an efficient machine."

Mr. McLain laid on the line a three-point program to meet the problem of rural Congregationalism as follows:

1. The enlargement and reorganization of the larger parish plan. "I do not refer to the larger parish as we so often have it now, with a city church as the hub, and several rural churches as the spokes of the wheel. Rather, there ought to be a reorganization of the rural parishes on a statewide, and often on a national, basis; for it may be necessary to cut wide swathes across state boundaries (and I might venture to say denominational lines) for best efficiency and results. Several rural churches should be grouped strategically, according to their geographic location and the size of their congregations.

Not only should they share a minister by a plan adopted by an inter-church council, but much of their equipment can be commonly owned. Wherever possible a Religious Education administrator should be provided. Wherever it is impossible to secure a minister, a parish should never be left even temporarily leaderless. A Religious Education graduate might serve very capably in his stead. This plan would no doubt call for the training of local lay leaders, not to take the place of a regular minister, or supplant him, but to assist him in many ways.

2. "The training of the minister himself should consist of working into seminary curriculums more specialized courses for the larger parish minister. Training the student for life-long calling in that field should be a major point of emphasis. It should recognize the need for a high degree of specialization in the sciences or rural sociology, economics and psychology. It requires a different type of administrative knowledge and a wider application of the art of recreation. For here we have the unique opportunity for the church to serve as the center and core of community life in a way in which it can never serve in the city. If the minister has adequate preparation in these spheres of knowledge, in addition to the usual seminary training, we can truly stop guessing about what to do with our rural churches, for he will do his own church planning thoroughly and well."

3. The minister must never forget that the primary function of the church is one of evangelism. "While action along the lines of cooperatives, legislation and the general betterment of rural life are significant and important, the minister and the church must be ever aware that they are only a secondary function of the church and must remain so. Evangelism is our very reason for existence, our driving and impelling motive.

"What the rural church wants and calls for with an urgent voice of need are pastors who are just that—men who are equipped with hearts as well as minds, men who are interested in them as individuals with inner problems and fundamental longings of the soul. What we need for a re-vitalized rural church is not a social philosophy but a more aggressive, virile evangelism, presented in a more definitely and positively outlined program. Every effort should be expended to provide a place of worship which will elevate and inspire the soul, and to open eyes to horizons beyond limited confines and to enrich lives with a love of God and an understanding of their fellowmen."

WE CAN LEARN FROM THE COMMUNISTS.

American Christians need the enthusiasm of the communists, declared Dr. Jesse H. Ziegler, professor of psychology and mental hygiene, Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, at the 28th annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, February 12-18, Columbus, Ohio.

"Slowly we are being maneuvered toward a holy war to protect Christianity (and free enterprise) against materialistic atheism," said Dr. Ziegler. "There is no prophetic lead being given by Christian education forces as to how communism can be stopped without war. The biographies of Lenin and Stalin demonstrate that the movement which is genuinely competing with Christianity today became a dynamic movement because to its leaders communism was important enough to sacrifice everything for. If and when Christian educators believe that their goals are more important than anything else in the world, then we will begin to see these goals met in increasing numbers of people."

Trouble and perplexity drive us to prayer; and prayer driveth away trouble and perplexity.—Melancthon.

Statement and Recommendation
OF
Conference of Religious Leaders of America CONCERNING THE Hydrogen and Atomic Bomb Policy

One thought is paramount in the minds of men everywhere: What does the hydrogen bomb portend for the destiny of mankind?

We, in this annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, have a sense of quickened conscience and of gratitude that the President of the Council appealed to men and women of all religious faiths in America to join in a conference where the resources of God through prayer, faith and thought can be brought to bear upon the problem of finding the right answers to the question: What ought America's policy to be with respect to atomic and hydrogen bombs?

In this year of Our Lord 1950, the Christian Churches cannot accept in silence the prospect of mass slaughter. The Christian Churches cannot be callous to the claims of the Gospel Message they preach—a message of compassion and the oneness of humanity under God. Above all, Christians must not stand before the world paralyzed in an hour of crisis, submissive to the seeming probability of widespread or even universal annihilation.

Secular wisdom or preoccupation with political method are not enough to give us the answers we desperately need. Let the church speak that men may regain confidence and renew hope and find a way to life rather than continue to stumble on the way to death. Men of religious faith must assemble and seek wisdom from Almighty God.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

That this Council send immediately a communication to other national interdenominational agencies with which this Council is to unite in November, 1950, forming the new National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., proposing, that together we take steps whereby Protestants, Catholics and Jews can unitedly bring the religious mind and faith of America to bear upon the formulation of policy with regard to the hydrogen bomb, an issue of life and death for the nation, for civilization, and for all mankind.

Pastor Concludes Greensboro Ministry

REV. J. L. NEESE

Rev. J. L. Neese, pastor of Palm Street Congregational Christian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina, will preach his farewell message Sunday morning, March 26, at 11:00 a. m. A musical program will be given at the 7:30 service.

The members of the church and friends regret very much that Mr. Neese's health has failed and caused him to offer his resignation. We feel that we have lost a good minister and pastor.

Mr. Neese started his ministry at Palm Street Church, preaching his first sermon on November 19, 1928. He served this church six years, going from here to First Christian Church, Reidsville, North Carolina, then to Second Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, Apple's Chapel and Bethlehem Christian Churches near Elon College, North Carolina. He was in evangelistic work for one year.

Mr. Neese returned to Palm Street Church a little over two years ago, and fifty members have been added to the church roll. There has been an increase in the various activities.

Upon the advice of his physician, he and Mrs. Neese plan to leave March 27 for Bradenton, Florida.

MRS. LENA HALL, Secretary.

News Flashes

Dr. Paul Reynolds will hold a Family Life Institute at our Burlington Church Monday evening, March 27.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of First Church, Burlington, are planning a visit to the synagogue in Greensboro in the immediate future.

Dr. Elbert Conover, Church building adviser, visited Southern Pines Wednesday to confer with the building committee and trustees. Mr. Phil Weaver is chairman of the building committee.

Dr. L. E. Smith will preach Sunday evening, March 26, at 7:30 o'clock, at the Christian Temple in Norfolk. Dr. Smith returns to his former pulpit in observance of the twenty-sixth anniversary of the Temple.

Since retiring from the active ministry, Rev. J. Frank Morgan has been living at 135 East Berkley Avenue, Norfolk 6, Va. Doubtless Mr. and Mrs. Morgan would be glad to hear from their many friends throughout the Convention.

The Executive Committee of the Western North Carolina Conference Youth Fellowship had a meeting in Liberty, N. C., on Sunday afternoon, February 19, 1950. The committee made plans for the next rally which will be held at Hank's Chapel, near Pittsboro, N. C., April 30. Be sure to look for the program in THE SUN at a later date.

The Deering Summer School for Ministers will be held from July 5 to August 2. Dr. Truman Douglass will serve as dean, and faculty members are James F. Muilenburg, Nels F. S. Ferre, Everett C. Parker, Harry T. Stocks, Ervine Inglis, Robert Putsch, Philip M. Widenhouse and Fred Hoskins.

Our church at Richmond (Va.) had the rare good fortune Sunday, March 12, to have Miss E. Frances Thompson of the American Board address a joint session of the Sunday School Departments. Miss Thompson's story has an unusually thrilling account of her missionary effort and accomplishment among the Filipino young people in connection with her work at Silliman University.

A Missionary Institute is scheduled at the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines. Dr. Ralph Shrader will preach Sunday morning. Junichi Nakamura, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Moulton on Thursday and Friday evenings of the following week. The church reports an offering of $51.60 for the One Great Hour of Sharing.

SPOON'S CHAPEL (W. N. C.) DEDICATES OIL PAINTING.

Spoon's Chapel Christian Church was the recipient of a very lovely oil painting on March 5, 1950. In a special service at the Church, Miss Sara

DR. L. E. SMITH.

Foster, student at Elon College and granddaughter of Mrs. C. T. Stout of near Spoon's Chapel, presented the church with a beautiful reproduction of Warner Sallman's Head of Christ. The pastor, Rev. Clyde L. Fields, received the painting on behalf of the church.

Miss Foster attended Spoon's Chapel as a child and had longed to do something to show the church her appreciation. After her family moved to Greensboro and after high school graduation, Sara entered Elon as a Religious Education Major. It was here while taking some art courses that Sara found the way to show her love for her childhood church. Her gift of love, a copy of The Head of Christ, required hours of loving labor as she fashioned the lovely painting from the oils and paints. The church will be eternally grateful for the gift.

EVANGELISTIC RALLIES IN THE WESTERN CONFERENCE.

In cooperation with the United Evangelistic Advance, the Committee on Evangelism of the W. N. C. together with the Ministerial Association, arranged and conducted Conference-wide Evangelistic Rallies from March 6-8, 1950.

The conference was divided into three areas with Mr. Ralph Riddle of Pittsboro as chairman of Area No. 1, Mrs. I. L. McDowell of Asheboro as chairwoman of Area No. 2, and with Mr. J. C. Phillips of Seagrove and Mr. Roy Harper of Albemarle as chairman and vice-chairman, respectively, of area No. 3. Rev. Clyde L. Fields served as general chairman.

The Rally in Area No. 1 met at the Pleasant Ridge Church with eight churches and 67 delegates represented. Six churches failed to be represented.

The Rally in Area No. 2 met at the Sophia Church with six churches and 27 delegates represented. Only one church failed to be represented.

The Rally in Area No. 3 met at the Seagrove Church with six churches and 63 delegates represented. Ten churches failed to be represented.

At all three Rallies, Rev. Fields discussed Mass Evangelism; Rev. Weldon Madren discussed Visitation Evangelism and showed a film strip in connection with his discussion; Rev. Walter Hall preached an inspirational sermon on Evangelism, and Mr. Walter Lanier furnished his projector and demonstrated Evangelism in Action with some very good 45-minute films: "The Salt of the Earth," "Ambassador for Christ," and "Like a Mighty Army." Each service closed with a dedication service to the cause of Evangelism.

CENTENNIAL MISSIONARY DIES.

The American Board has just received by cable news of the sudden death in Istanbul, Turkey, of Rev. James Kerr Lyman, veteran Congregational Christian missionary in the Near East.

Mr. Lyman has served in Turkey for 29 years from 1913 to the present with the exception of a period of five years during the war when he was detained in the U. S. A.

During his years of service, Mr. Lyman witnessed the Armenian deportation in 1915; was in Turkey when the Nationalists began operations in 1920; passed through the Siege of Marash and during all these periods

6. Lay Delegates from the church, nominated for the local church and elected by the constituent conferences as follows: "Churches within the Convention are requested to nominate lay delegates to the Convention. These delegates shall be elected by the conferences. Each church is entitled to one delegate. Churches which have more than two hundred members are entitled to one additional delegate for each additional two hundred members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no church shall have more than four delegates. Members of the Convention shall serve for the biennium for which they are elected, or until their successors are elected."

It is earnestly hoped that all members and delegates to the Convention will make their plans to attend this important session which will be the 39th regular session of the Convention. It would be a great help to Dr. Hardcastle, pastor of the entertaining church, if those desiring overnight accommodations would notify him as early as possible.

FUNDS NEEDED TO BEAUTIFY JAMES O'KELLY CEMETERY.

The sum of approximately $500.00 is needed immediately to repair the rock wall and beautify the O'Kelly cemetery. Send your contributions to Mr. S. H. Basnight, Chapel Hill, N. C.

A deed has been obtained for the plot of land in Chatam County on which is located the grave of James O'Kelly, founder of the Christian Church. The Executive Board of the Convention by vote established the "O'Kelly Memorial Foundation" for the purpose of preserving and caring for the O'Kelly cemetery. Cemetery trustees were elected as follows: Dr. C. E. Newman, secretary, for a term of three years; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, three years; Miss Margaret Hall and S. H. Basnight, two year each; Miss Lillie D. Fowler and Kenneth Register, one year each.

We believe that individuals and churches within the Convention will respond to this urgent appeal for necessary funds that we may preserve the memory of James O'Kelly.

RITES HELD FOR BENJ. FOWLER.

Funeral services for Benjamin F. Fowler, who died Sunday, March 12, at his home near Holland, were held on Wednesday following.

The Rev. D. N. Vore, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, and Dr. Luther B. Grice, pastor of the Holy Neck Christian Church, were the officiating ministers.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

PULPIT OVERTURES

They tell us that the difference between good and mediocre singing is the presence or absence of overtones. That subtle, elusive element is the determining factor in good tone, vocal or instrumental.

The same thing seems to be true of preaching. We preachers strive to exhaust a subject. We try to develop all the implications and make all conceivable applications. We leave nothing to the imagination. Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp speaks of a minister having "a firm grip on the obvious."

Good preaching does not undertake to say everything on a subject. It primes the mental and emotional pump. Like a choice picture it stimulates the imagination and sends it forth on many delightful journeys. Its very suggestiveness creates unmistakable overtones.

Is that not true of the Bible? One reads the Bible, not to get factual data or the last word on a subject, but to catch its eternal, haunting overtures. If we read hurriedly or carelessly and miss the overtones, we fail to get the full benefit of the Scriptures.

A CONSTRUCTIVE MINISTRY

The writer remembers the session of Conference when Rev. M. T. Sorrell presented Rev. J. L. Neese for membership. During those intervening years Mr. Neese has exercised a constructive ministry wherever he has served. His ministry has been characterized by a warm evangelistic emphasis, devotional messages, and loyalty to the institutions of the denomination. He has been active in conference and convention activities. An enlarging program has been initiated wherever he has served. We are grateful for his faithful ministry. The prayers and good wishes of many friends follow Mr. and Mrs. Neese as they go to Florida. Having given a son to the ministry, the Neese family will not be without its witness in the Convention.

Junior Editorial:

POCKETS

That little fellow certainly had his pockets filled with all kinds of things: strings, nails, peanuts, chewing gum, and a few dozen additional items. He was prepared for any emergency.

Three cheers for the fellow who invented pockets! How could we get along without them?

What do you put into your pockets? Some people put tobacco in their pockets, and their clothes always smell of tobacco. There are many other things with no objectionable odor.

One young chap carries keys—to the post office box, to his trunk, to his den. A scout carries a cord with which he may make a tourniquet to save a limb or a life. Another carries pencils to write, make records and notations. Here is a young chap who carries coins—money which he has earned and saved; money for emergencies; a contribution for every cause.

A minister has his "church pocket," into which go all donations for religious and benevolent causes. It is reported that a selfish or a stingy husband avoided giving money to his wife with the excuse: "I haven't a cent in the world." You see, he had named a particular pocket "the world."

One man carries his tithe in one pocket. No needy cause is presented to him in vain. Another carries a cross in his pocket. That sanctifies every coin, every purchase. He prefers the cross to the rabbit's foot!

What goes into your pocket is a revelation of character. Pockets may be redemptive. Are yours?

THE PREDICAMENT OF WEEK-DAY RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

"The Protestant predicament in the current struggle over the place of religion in education" was expressed as a "major concern" of the Committee on Week-day Religious Education in its report to the Commission on Educational Program of the International Council of Religious Education.

"On the one hand, we stand ready and eager to support the principle of public education as we have in the past," the committee declared. "On the other hand, we are greatly disturbed over certain trends in public education which seem to be moving away from a theistic concept of religion and in the direction of humanism, if not secularism."

Other concerns were listed:

1. The apathy of Protestants and their leaders toward the need for Christian education today.

The committee seeks recognition for Christian education as more than "a mere appendage to the work of the local church."

2. The "antagonistic attitude" of certain public school leaders toward released-time religious classes.

Although this attitude is not reflected in the average American school teacher and officer, "we feel that this attitude is grossly unfair and that in the long run it will militate against the best interests of the public school system itself," the committee said.

3. "The drift toward a complete monopoly of the child's time by the public or state-controlled school system."

"A number of specific proposals have already been made by leaders in the public school system looking toward the extension of the school day, the school week, and the school year," the report indicated.

4. The lack of publicity channels "for interpreting the values and the need for week-day religious education."

The Stewardship of the Gospel

By DR. DAVID McKEITH, JR.,

Executive Vice-President of the American Board.

"This is one of the greatest hours the world has ever known. Now is the time of supreme opportunity for the Christian Church! Our civilization is being tested and the future decided. To be sure, as we view the world tonight, it appears to be chaos, but in this world of chaos, there is already leaven at work—that leaven is the Gospel of Jesus Christ. That leaven has changed the hearts and lives of a few at least of the millions of people who dwell on this earth today.

"As Christians we are stewards of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, stewards of this leaven of life.

"Every true Christian is a steward of this Gospel—this Gospel which is a leaven unto life—warm, compassionate, loving, growing—this Gospel which is also power—changing the life of an individual suddenly—changing the life of society dramatically.

"As stewards of the Gospel, then, we recognize that there is the quiet, yea exceedingly effective, work of the Kingdom which is being done day by day in our churches, schools, hospitals, rural Christian centers in lands around the world.

"A strong parish ministry is vital to a strong Christian Church. Other Christian activities may appear more dramatic, but they are not more essential.

"On the foreign field likewise the village church, the Christian school, the health center and the hospital with Christian doctors and nurses are most important. These are the centers where the leaven of the Christian life is at work, usually quietly, but always effectively.

"But there also come times when, with a great upsurge of power, the Gospel is presented and the work of the evangelization of the world goes forward at a greatly accelerated rate. We are in such a time."

Dr. McKeith then spoke of the opportunity that faced Christians at the end of the First World War and of how youth plunged into a jazz age and lost its bearings while elders went into an economic boom with Utopia around the corner before the bubble broke. Spiritually, too, we went to extremes running from the fever and fervor of the emotional religion to the devastation of our basic spiritual life by cold, so-called intelligent humanism.

"Wherein lay our difficulty? We were almost completely selfish—interested in our own souls, if interested in souls at all; interested in personal freedom, in our own security, our own welfare and in the freedom, security and welfare of our own little group. We forgot that 'He that saveth his life shall lose it.' Are we to walk this same way again?"

A Paradox.

"And now again to our generation has come the opportunity to save the world; to bring the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the people of all nations. . . . Are you aware that there are more open doors for Christianity today—more real opportunities for the spread of the Christian Gospel than ever before in the history of the world; and at the same time there are more powerful aversaries with which Christianity must contend than have been faced since the first few centuries of the Christian era? There are great areas of spiritual vacuum in the world at the present moment and into these areas of spiritual vacuum many conflicting forces are rushing. Here is the Christian opportunity and the note of urgency cannot be overstressed.

DR. McKEITH.

"Various contending groups are pouring their ideas into the open minds of millions. All our economic recovery program, all our military might cannot compete with ideas. Only nobler, more acceptable ideas—the ideals of Jesus Christ—can compete in this new struggle. We must make this fact plain to our Christian people. This is urgent!

"What was lacking in the 1920's when a similar opportunity was before us? Christians lacked personal commitment to the Gospel of Jesus Christ as the power of salvation. Then, too, as now, we thought the world could be saved by other means. Some put their trust in education, some in science, others in economic prosperity and others in international political organizations; and some trusted in ecclesiastical schemes and programs.

"What is necessary that we may meet this opportunity, that we may bring the Gospel both as leaven and as great power to bear upon the problems and needs of the world?"

Dr. McKeith then stated that a person's talents and treasures belong to God: we are but stewards. How we use these talents is up to us. To youth he gave the challenge of the need for healing, teaching and friendship across the seas presenting the call from China, Japan, The Philippines, India, the Isles of the Pacific and the Near East and Africa.

Convinced But Not Converted.

"The difficulty with our modern religious approach is that we also are likely to be convinced but not converted. What is conversion? It is to be regretted that unfortunate incidents have been linked with conversion. Unsound emotional ecstasy, unwholesome public performances, as well as personal fears and inhibitions, have turned men away from even the thought of conversion, until today the word is seldom used; in fact, it is shunned. Conversion is 'the change from an unorganized life to an organized life around a central unifying spiritual ideal.' For Christians that central unifying spiritual ideal is Jesus Christ.

Works Both Ways.

"We recognize the truth of the oft-quoted statement: 'Christianity begins with you or it doesn't begin,' but the corollary is equally true, 'If it ends with you, it ends.' If we are stewards of the Gospel of Jesus Christ we are the ones who must do something about it. There is placed upon us the necessity of giving to the world this Gospel. This is no simple task, but fortunately there have been those in the Christian Way who have gone before us preparing the ground.

"For some of you life has already been set in its pattern and to the best of your ability you are using your time and your talents in what you be-

STATEMENT BY CHAIRMAN OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

At a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the General Council on March 1, 1950, the enclosed report of the lawyer's committee was adopted on recommendation of the Procedures Committee, and appeal was voted from the decision of the court in the Cadman case. A copy of the court's judgment is also enclosed.

A prepared statement was read by the chairman of the board of deacons of the Cadman Church, who is a member of the General Council Executive Committee. Questions as to alternatives to further legal action were raised. It was pointed out that although the position taken by the General Council, that no act of the General Council can control any church in any manner, was sustained by the court, the final order exceeds this position.

1. To reduce further litigation.

It is believed that an appeal will clarify the decision of the court concerning which various interpretation have already developed. These would in all probability lead to further court action in many parts of the land.

2. To continue to express the purpose of the General Council represented in the 1,000-15 vote approving the Basis of Union at Oberlin and the sober vote of Cleveland declaring, 757-172, that "we . . . are ready to inform the Evangelical and Reformed Church that we are ready to unite. . . ."

3. To find grounds for a restored fellowship.

Deeply desirous of full brotherhood with all of the churches of the fellowship and ready to adapt itself to minority opinion in every reasonable way, the General Council cannot act freely to this end under the menace of an injunction.

4. To give issues as important as those represented in this case the consideration and interpretation of a higher court.

Determination of this case will have effect on all Protestant movements for unity. As the decree now stands, it appears to contradict the will to unity which is inherent in the life of the Christian Church. The committee feels that it cannot in good conscience keep from the courts of review the question as to the extent to which a secular court may interpose its jurisdiction in such ecclesiastical matters.

5. To free the General Council to deal with its own constitutional development.

As the decree now stands, the Council "has no power or authority to unite itself with any other body or organization whatsoever and cannot by its own action vest itself with such power or authority."

6. To clarify the relations of the missionary societies which are by charter independent, and to determine their freedom to enter into joint programs with other denominations.

The present judgment substitutes its own interpretation for the purposes expressed in the basic documents of the boards.

The Executive Committee voted: "It is the purpose of this committee to seek a fund to finance the appeal . . . outside the regular funds of the General Council." Dr. Ronald Bridges was elected the representative of the committee to form a separate group to secure this fund.

PHILIP GORDON SCOTT,
Chairman of Exec. Com.

The text of the vote referred to in the first paragraph of the statement above is as follows:

VOTED that an appeal be taken by the Defendant to the Appellate Division of the Second Department of the Supreme Court of New York from the judgment entered by the Supreme Court in the action entitled "Cadman Memorial Congregational Society of Brooklyn, etc., against Helen Kenyon as Moderator of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, etc.," and that such appeal be taken on all grounds that counsel for the Defendant may deem advisable, and that Loren N. Wood, Esq., as counsel for the Defendant and such other counsel as he may associate with himself in such appeal pursuant to prior vote passed at this meeting be and hereby are authorized to take any and all such action on behalf of the Defendant as may be desirable or proper to prosecute the appeal to a successful conclusion.

REPORT OF LAWYERS COMMITTEE OF THE OPINION AND JUDGMENT IN THE CASE OF CADMAN CHURCH VS. THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

The Committee of Lawyers appointed to make a recommendation with reference to appealing the case of Cadman Memorial Church against the General Council, has reached the following conclusions with respect to the Judgment:

1. The import of the decision goes far beyond the particular plan contained in the Basis of Union and its interpretations and prohibits a Union even free from the objections raised as to this particular Basis of Union. The General Council is prohibited from amending its Constitution to authorize it to enter into this Basis of Union or any other even though such amendment may be accomplished through the method provided in the Constitution of the General Council. It is enjoined for all time from uniting itself on any basis whatsoever with the E & R Church or General Synod "or any other body thereof or with any body or organization whatsoever."

2. The polity of the Congregational Christian Churches is defined and frozen for all time by a judgment of a secular court.

3. The Missionary, Sunday School, Church Building, Ministerial Relief, Pension and Publishing Boards and Societies, although they were not made parties defendant nor represented by counsel, have been ordered for all time to hold their funds in trust "for the benefit, work, interest and activities of the Congregational Christian Churches and for the purposes of carrying out or aiding the Christian way of life through the basic principles, usages and polity of the Congregational Christian Churches and may not be alienated or diverted from these purposes." This is in direct conflict with the nature of the work that has been done and is being done by both the American Board and the Board of Home Missions and by most of the other Boards, and restricts the powers granted in most of their charters.

4. The effect of this decision is to hold that even though there were a future union with another denomination, if one church dissented, the administration of the funds would continue with that one dissenting church, provided that church, according to the view of the Judge sitting in the Civil Court, was the one church that continued to represent the Christian way of life "through the basic principles, usages and polity of the Congregation Christian Churches."

5. By implication, all other denominations of a polity similar to ours are frozen in their present status if so much as one church dissents from a plan of uniting with any other denomination, the penalty being the loss of the control of the denominational temporalities and Missionary funds to the dissenting church.

6. In our opinion this is the first time in the history of the United

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

STILL SEARCHING.

When a college begins to expand its responsibilities expand accordingly. Every expansion whether it be material or physical requires money. It has been said "that Elon College is the best college and operated the most efficiently of any college in the country without money." This is not entirely true. Of course, the college could not operate without money but it is operated efficiently and on an economic basis. All money contributed to Elon College since 1931, other than conference apportionments, has been applied either to debts, improvements or endowments. Not one dollar given outright to Elon College has been applied or required for current operations. The church, alumni and friends of Elon College within the Southern Convention have been considerate and generous to the college. More money is required with the growth of the college. It seemed essential that the circle of friends of the college be widened.

During the last days of February and the first of March, I took a trip South. On the way, I stopped by to see Mr. and Mrs. Horace Phillips at Hardeville, South Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are from Suffolk, Virginia. Mrs. Phillips is the daughter of the late Mr. Will Jones who during his life time was president of the Farmers Bank of Nansemond.

I continued on to Florida. At West Palm Beach, I saw the Brown family who used to live at Elon College and with whom I roomed and boarded for three years while a student at Elon College. I also saw Mr. Walter Wilkins and family of Norfolk, Virginia, who are good friends of the college. Lake Worth lies between West Palm Beach and Palm Beach. I crossed the lake and had a nice visit with Mr. Will May who was living at the Breakers Hotel. Mr. May is an alumnus of the college and a very warm friend.

I also had the privilege of visiting and stopping for two days at the Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel which is on the shore of picturesque Lake Worth. The Biltmore is the largest resort hotel in Florida. It has 537 rooms filled to capacity. This hotel was purchased February 1949 by the four famous Taylor Brothers, formerly of Sea Level, N. C. They immediately had the hotel renovated and redecorated. This is a beautiful hotel adapted for tourists and guests who desire the best in accommodations while on vacation. The hotel is in excellent taste with not only beautiful but gorgeous surroundings. Every convenience and accommodation that could be desired are available. I found that I knew the Taylor Brothers. I knew them while I was pastor of the Christian Temple in Norfolk, Va. They are Daniel E., William R., Leslie M., and Alfred P. William R. (Bill) married Miss Geraldine Belsham who at the time of their marriage was my secretary at the Christian Temple and a member of the church. Bill was then a very likeable and most capable youngster. At that time, the Taylor Brothers were engaged in the wholesale salt, sugar and fruit business. During these years they have displayed unusual ability and exercised the best of judgment in business opportunities and undertakings. They have acquired large holdings in different sections of the country and are engaged in various kinds of business. They are quiet, unassuming, efficient, trustworthy and business-like in all dealings. It was a privilege to renew acquaintances and observe something of their character and achievements. They expressed an interest in Elon College and gave helpful assistance.

Should the readers of this article find themselves in Florida, it would be worth their while to visit Palm Beach and stop at the Biltmore Hotel.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Elon College lives and serves today as a monument to the heroic faith and sacrificial efforts of our forefathers. Scarcely, if ever, in history did a group of Christian people so few in number and so lacking in wealth undertake such a great program in the interest of Christian education. We, the members of the Congregational Christian Church in the South, are the beneficiaries of the unusual legacy bequeathed to us by generous hands and great souls. The college that they founded, that we have in our hands today, is facing obligations and responsibilities that are great and if they are not met and assumed courageously, the legacy of the past may be lost to the Christian education program of the future. The churches in the Southern Convention do have other opportunities and responsibilities—opportunities and responsibilities that cannot be ignored and shirked, but not one is of equal importance to the intelligent ongoing of the church as is their institution of training and higher learning. We face these historical facts and stern realities but have a tendency to pass them by and attempt to do nothing really worthwhile. We put the emphasis on other institutions and interests of the church all of which are manifestly dependent upon the leadership that comes from our college. We contribute to our college. Of course, we do. The college could not give this assistance without these contributions, but from some source and in some way the financial support of Elon College must be increased. The constituency of our church needs to keep this fact before their minds and on their hearts constantly and continuously.

V. F. W. ANTI-COMMUNIST FILM AWARD.

An official "Award of Merit" has been announced by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, for the film production, "Guilty of Treason," the story of the "trial behind the trial" of Cardinal Mindzenty. The award reads:

"In commendation of 'Guilty of Treason,' whose poignant portrayal of the trial of Cardinal Mindzenty, testifies to the high price which free peoples of the world must be prepared to pay to uphold the rights they cherish and emphasizes the supreme value of those fundamental principles of life, liberty and pursuit of happiness which the men of America's armed forces fought to preserve, rights of human freedom which the New World Order of Communism cannot understand but which are the unalienable birth-right of the American people."

The Veterans of Foreign Wars made the award jointly to Eagle Lion Films and Jack Wrather and Robert Golden, the producers of the pictures.

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

ATTENTION SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Four mission programs for Sunday schools to use during our special Mission Period—March, April, May and June.

* * * *

GENERAL THEME: "Our World for Christ."

THEME HYMN: "This Is My Father's World."

LEADER: The spirit of Christ knows no geographical boundaries, may we of the Sunday schools share the responsibility in the cultivation of the spirit of Christ in every area of human life.

These four months, March, April, May and June, are designated as our special Mission Period. May each of us cultivate the spirit of Christ, beginning within our own lives and reaching out into our homes, communities and all parts of the earth.

WORSHIP SERVICE: Use a globe (a lighted one would be effective), and place in front of it an open Bible with a lighted candle beside it.

(Printed here is the first of the four programs which have been prepared for this period, by the end of March your Sunday School will be sent copies of the four programs, which are being prepared by Mrs. John G. Truitt and Mrs. O. H. Paris, members of the promotion committee of the Mission Board.)

THEME: "Our World Needs Christian Builders."

PRELUDE: The pianist may play a familiar hymn, such as "In Christ There Is No East or West," "The Church's One Foundation," or "We Would Be Building."

CALL TO WORSHIP: God loved this world. Christ lived and died for it. We have received it as a trust.

INVOCATION: Our Father, in the quiet of this hour, we give Thee thanks for all that Thou hast given us. For homes blessed by love, for faith renewed each day, and for Thy spirit ever near, we are truly grateful. Teach us to love Thy truth, to think Thy thoughts, and to walk in Thy way. Thus may we be Christian Builders, helping Thy kingdom to come on earth. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

HYMN: (Sing the hymn which you used as the prelude.)

SCRIPTURE: Psalm 117.

TALK: "Christian Builders"—

Among Tommy's toys he found a little saving-bank in the form of a globe. He liked it very much, and it came to be his favorite toy. He insisted on taking it to his little bed with him. His mother fearing lest he might turn on it in his sleep and be uncomfortable or awaken, went over and slipped it from his hands, whereupon Tommy awakened with a start, exclaiming, "Oh! Mommy, what are you doing with my world?"

God has made our world. How pretty and rich a storehouse of his blessings it is! It is filled with far more treasures than the little boy's bank with its fertile lands, its immense forests, its great reservoirs of water, and its untold wealth within. God has made it good, blessed it as ours. Not only has God in loving kindness created it but He has so loved the families of people who live on it, as to send Jesus to die for it. Jesus lived amongst the people, healed their sicknesses and forgave their sins, and gave them new life and new love for doing good to others. He taught them the ways of righteousness. But even so, unbelievers crucified Him. God gave power and newness of life to all who believed in Him, and down across the years many have walked in His way of love and friendship and goodness.

The world is now entrusted to us who live on it. What will we do with it. Tommy's question: "What are you doing to my world?" is very appropriate for us. God would have us make it more and more like heaven on earth. Jesus taught us to pray . . . "Thy Kingdom come . . ." In loving gratitude to Him for His salvation we should all be builders of a world with a better understanding among neighbors right at home, and a better understanding amongst the nations of the earth. We build bridges and highways in material things. Let us build them in intellectual and spiritual things, crossing all boundaries with understanding and friendship. Thus we would be making Tommy's world a much safer and better place in which to live.

AN INVESTMENT TOWARD A CHRISTIAN AMERICA

Your gift to Home Missions is Your Investment toward a Christian America.

Your Mission Board through its income for Home Missions helps to bear the Christian witness, beginning right here in North Carolina and Virginia. Through these gifts 29 churches with 3,519 members, in communities of more than 200,000 people, are your ambassadors for Christ. Without your gift these churches could not have full-time pastors. Your gift helps make possible the growth of these 29 churches to full-time, self-supporting churches.

Your gift to Home Missions helps make possible the erection of new and adequate church buildings, greatly needed.

Your gift to Home Missions helps make possible new churches where our witness is needed.

Your gift to Home Missions helps your Mission Board take a share in the support of Home Missions outside the Convention, where our denomination helps maintain work in every state of this nation.

Support the work of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, and invest for a Christian America.

Your Mission Board must raise the sum of $31,693.00 this year if it fulfills its commitments as your Church's agency.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

DON'T FORGET.

Family Life Institutes:

March 21—Bethlehem Church—Valley of Virginia Women.

March 23—Oakland Church—Eastern Virginia Women.

March 28—Elon College—North Carolina Women.

Dr. Paul Reynolds will be guest speaker. The hours are 10:30 to 3:30. The local society will serve lunch.

Everyone who can should attend one of these institutes. It is most important to us all to know about family life.

In each Conference, the meeting is being planned by the Family Life Chairman. These Family Life Chairmen are:

Valley of Virginia—Mrs. E. J. Rohart.

Eastern Virginia—Mrs. Lelya P. Neese.

North Carolina—Mrs. John G. Truitt.

DISTRICT LEADERS' MEETINGS HELD IN EASTERN VIRGINIA.

Excellent meetings were held in Waverly, Norfolk and Suffolk Districts, February 14, 16 and 17. Burton's Grove entertained in the Waverly District with Mrs. J. F. Brown as superintendent. In the Norfolk District, the South Norfolk Church served as host, with Mrs. L. W. Vaughan as superintendent. In the Suffolk District, the Suffolk Church entertained, with Mrs. A. C. Moore as superintendent. The theme of the meetings was "Sharing Together in the Spirit of Christ." All three meetings began at 10:30 and ended at 3:30.

The morning worship service was conducted in Waverly District by Mrs. Roy C. Helfenstein, in Norfolk District by Mrs. Herbert Council and in Suffolk District by Mrs. Russell Bradford. Mrs. Duane Vore led the closing Meditation in Suffolk District.

Echoes of the Cleveland Assembly were presented in an excellent manner by Mrs. W. T. Harrell, Eastern Virginia president, and Mrs. W. B. Williams.

A splendid panel on Interdenominational Cooperation was led by Mrs. Garland Spratley.

Program planning on the local level was led by Pattie Lee Coghill.

Friendly Service projects were discussed by Mrs. W. B. Williams, and Spiritual Life suggestions were made by Mrs. J. H. Duling. Explanation of the local treasurer's report blank was made by Mrs. W. B. Williams, followed by general suggestions by the District Superintendent.

The film, "And Now I See," was shown, followed by the closing meditation.

Very fine meetings were held in each District. In the Norfolk District there is no church without a woman's organization and in the Suffolk District ditto. In the Waverly District only two have no woman's organization.

STALEY SOCIETY STAGES JAPANESE PLAY.

Mrs. E. H. Stephenson directed the Japanese play, "Beauty from Ashes," at the March meeting of W. W. Staley Missionary Society, held in the Junior Philathea classroom of the Suffolk Christian Church.

The room was decorated as if it were a Japanese garden with screens, cherry blossoms and lighted Japanese lanterns. Those taking part in the play were Ann Wilkins, Shirley Richardson, Elizabeth Rountree and Ada Brinkley, all in Japanese costume.

Mrs. J. S. Rollings, Sr., presided and conducted the devotionals. The group sang the hymn, "In Christ There Is No East or West." Miss Anne Bradshaw accompanied the group at the piano.

SUFFOLK SOCIETY REPORT.

Members of the Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church heard Miss Audrey Newman present a program on "What It Means to Be a Church Woman" at their monthly meeting with Mrs. M. F. Hall presiding.

In her remarks Miss Newman brought out the fact that a Christian's duty begins at home, then to church and community. She said being a good church member was not enough. One must show fellowship and service to those less fortunate, she concluded.

Mrs. Hall led a meditation on "Thoughts for Lent" and Mrs. J. W. Dailey in giving the devotional service read from the book The Newness of Life.

It was decided that the organization would donate $10 to the Youth Council of the Southern Convention for the Overseas Worker Project.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. C. Ramsey, Jr., gifts for the migrants of the United States were presented. Miss Virginia Rebeck dedicated the gifts in an impressive ceremony.

Reports were heard from the chairmen of the 10 circles. There were about 60 attending.

NEWS FROM WOMEN'S GROUPS.

Ingram (Va.) reports a fine year, meeting in homes each month. A large box of gifts has been made ready to send to Miss Angie Crew in Japan. They are planning an Easter pageant on Friday before Easter.

Union (Va.) had year books prepared for the first time this year by Mrs. Wm. M. Tuck and Mrs. Mark W. Andes. The World Community Day program was held at a regular meeting and the bundles were packed for displaced persons in Europe. The Japan book review was held jointly with Hebron. In December the group sent baskets filled with Christmas cheer to contributing members who were not able to attend meetings.

During February and March, Mrs. C. E. Newman is teaching The Gospel and Letters of John by Purdy. The World Day of Prayer was held in Virgilina with community churches participating. In addition to the printed service, the film strip, "Thy Kingdom Come," was shown. Rev. Mark W. Andes was the speaker of the evening.

In Burlington Miss Mildred Kichline, Bible teacher in the public schools, presented an inspiring message, using the regular suggested program in the packet, "We Explore the Word of God." Her message was reported excellent and very well received.

U. S. CHURCH WOMEN PLAN WORLD STUDIES.

Three leading U. S. church women have joined with women from eight other countries in the first meeting of the World Council's Commission on the Life and Work of Women in the Church, held at the Ecumenical Institute. (Continued on page 13.)

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. House, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Honors go to the girls this month as they celebrate two birthdays—Campfire Girls and Girl Scouts. Both of these groups are very worthy and have done much to help girls as well as others.

Julliette Low, the founder of the Girl Scouts, was honored some time ago with a commemorative stamp bearing her picture. From Brownies on there are things to be done and learned. For many girls it is their only contact with others in such chores as cooking, nursing and citizenship.

The Brownies (who correspond to Cubs in the Boy Scouts) are a particularly active group. Brownies learn many useful things and look happy and gay while learning and doing.

Girls have so many wonderful opportunities. Today they can look forward to a career as well as a home. This wasn't true some time back. Girls can go more places and do more things—perhaps an organization like Scouts or Campfire Girls helped make it possible.

There are many fascinating stories about girls, their families and friends in the Bible. What of the little captive maid who helped save her captain master's life? Or the young girl who became Ruth or Mary? You can find their stories and read them.

Happy work and happy leisure to Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls!

SECURITY.

(FOR AMERICANS.)

By FLORENCE JANE OVENS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Billions of dollars are being spent on efforts to ensure the security of our people—to safeguard American ideals, life and property. To make every dollar accomplish its purpose it will be necessary that all of our people appreciate the security this money aims to provide. In other words, we need security within security. A citizenry practicing unswerving loyalty to the principles underlying the American way of life and giving wholehearted allegiance to the Stars and Stripes—which symbolizes a conscientious effort to demonstrate these principles—is security of the highest order.

The achievement of this inner security is brought about by the right kind of education, and the right kind means, in all cases, the best possible for the mental age and capability level of the student. Education at its best does not follow along the lines of mass production; it is definite—personal. It begins in the home with the mother and father as teachers; and while this home guidance must soon be supplemented, it should be always available—suitably adjusted to the child's development.

When a little one is three or four years old it is beneficial to send him to a nursery school; when he is five he ought to go to kindergarten. Remember we are speaking of security. If a child lives where there are no schools, this does not change the fact that he ought to go school. So, if he lives where there is no kindergarten, it still is true that he ought to go to kindergarten.

The kindergarten year is a preparation for all the years that follow—even those of adult life. It is a positive step in providing security for the individual and through him, for his country. The explanation? Kindergarten procedure gives the child experience in living happily with other boys and girls. Class consciousness has seldom at that age been developed, and differences arouse no disdain but rather interest which often culminates in appreciation. Under a well-trained kindergarten teacher true worth is early recognized by her pupils—especially ability and good sportsmanship. It is quite trying to a couple of boys who want to use the big building-blocks together to find that these are all out and then to have to content themselves with two boxes of plasticine—but usually there is no outcry, for who wants to be a “poor sport”? Also, these boys are learning one of the most valuable lessons in economics—to adjust readily to circumstances over which one has no control. How many of our unemployed would find work to do if they could accept the changes that available positions would require of them. Then those un-American ideas—which enemies of democracy are always sending out to unsettled men during a period of so-called enforced idleness—never could find lodgment.

In the kindergarten the true American way of life is really lived. Boys and girls are encouraged to think—to listen to both sides of a discussion, weigh evidence, and, for their own guidance, to judge according to certain fixed standards. This mental process usually develops into a lifelong habit and becomes for them, and for the rest of us, a safeguard.

Another way in which the kindergarten contributes to security is by making the child ready for the work of the grades. This is the outcome of the regular kindergarten routine. During the daily activities the children's movements are purposeful, and every project broadens their outlook and adds worthwhile experiences. No normal lessons are given, but the facts absorbed by contact and the ability of the pupils to express themselves are constantly increasing each child's preparedness for later school work.

Despite the absence of reading lessons in the kindergarten, the children quickly learn to know and to appreciate the printed page, and the boys and girls are constantly meeting up with objects and conditions about which their first-grade readers will, next year, have much to say. They learn to differentiate between the beautiful bird book, the one about flowers, and the one that talks to them of everyday things in the home and generalities of the out-of-doors. “Books tell you what you want to know,” the kindergarten boy will inform you.

Ease in reading is fundamental to the success of the child's school career. Where kindergarten advantages are unattainable, lack of readiness for the primer and first reader becomes a handicap that hinders a large percentage of the class throughout their scholastic education. History, geography, lessons in language, and problems in arithmetic are only partly understood because of poor reading proficiency. Instead of growing in confidence as they advance, most of these students become apprehensive and repeatedly suffer a sense of frustration. Is it any wonder that many come to dislike school, and, as soon as the law will allow them to do so, they leave and go to work? But, alas, their misfortune follows them. A curtailed education means limited opportunity in the business world, little confidence in one's ability to succeed, and consequently, for themselves and their country, little security.

VISSER 'T HOOFT COMMENTS ON VATICAN DECREE.

The recent Vatican decree on Roman Catholic participation in reunion discussion "is a clear indication that the ecumenical movement has begun to make its influence felt" among Catholics, according to Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft, general secretary of the World Council.

The decree issued from Rome on February 28 stated that Bishops could authorize qualified priests and laymen to join with Protestant and Orthodox believers in local theological discussions, as well as in conferences on social questions. Entitled "Instructions to the Episcopate on the Ecumenical Movement," it was sent by the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office to Roman Catholic Bishops throughout the world.

The decree stipulated, however, that such Roman Catholic representatives should be specially trained for doctrinal discussions, and could only participate when the talks were likely to "yield good results." The decree made it apparent that "good results" would mean the return of "dissidents" to Roman Catholic authority.

The text of Dr. Visser 't Hooft's comments, which he issued from Geneva on March 2 in a "personal and unofficial capacity," follow:

"I have been asked to comment on Instructions concerning doctrinal conversations between Catholics and Protestants which have been issued by the Congregation of the Holy Office of the Vatican. My comments can only be of a personal and unofficial character since the Central or Executive Committees of the World Council have not yet considered this document.

"I can summarize my remarks in the following points:

"1. The very fact that such a document is issued at all is a clear indication that the ecumenical movement has begun to make its influence felt among the clergy and laity of the Roman Catholic Church. We can only rejoice that such is the case.

"2. As the document itself points out, meetings between Roman Catholics and representatives of other confessions are regularly held in many places. These meetings are generally of an informal character and are intended to lead to better mutual understanding and to frank discussion of points of friction.

"3. According to the new instructions, all such meetings will henceforth have to be directed and supervised by the hierarchy. Thus they will lose that informal and spontaneous character on which much of their value depended. There will be less room for the pioneers.

"4. Moreover, these ecumenical contacts will be supervised from the viewpoint expressed in the document, namely that the only purpose of ecumenical contacts can be the return of all Christians to the Church of Rome. At this point the document remains below the level reached by certain members of the Roman Catholic hierarchy who have declared that union cannot take place in the form of a victory of one body over another as happens in the secular realm. The churches in the World Council have a different conception of true unity, namely that (in the words of the Amsterdam Assembly) they are to be bound closer to one another.

"5. Unless I am mistaken, this document is the first in which the Holy See permits explicitly, though with certain restrictions, that Roman Catholics and Christians of other confessions pray together. This is a step forward.

"6. It is also important that inter-confessional meetings on social questions are allowed. This should facilitate effective common action wherever Roman Catholics and Christians of other confessions are ready to make a common stand for social justice.

"7. Christians outside the Roman Communion should continue to pray that the Roman Catholic Church may be led to a wider and deeper conception of Christian unity."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE CHURCH SUFFERING AND TRIUMPHANT.

LESSON I—APRIL 2, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: If we endure, we shall also reign with him.—II Timothy 2:12.

LESSON: I Peter 4:12-13; Revelation 7:9-17.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 8:16-18.

The Man That Was, and the Man That Was to Be.

The letter from which a part of today's lesson is taken begins as follows: "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ . . ." Can this be that fellow Simon Peter, the "Big Fisherman" as Dr. Lloyd Douglas calls him? Is it possible that this supposedly unlearned and unlettered fisherman wrote one of the finest books in the New Testament? Scholars are pretty well agreed that it is one and the same man. How can such a thing be? It is simply one of thousands of cases in which Jesus Christ has transformed a life which has been given in obedience to Him. When He first saw Peter He said, "Thou art Simon, thou shalt be called Peter." Christ evidently saw unsuspected possibilities in that fisherman which others, and even Peter himself did not see. Christ saw not only the man that was, but the man that was to be. That is the way He sees you and me. If we follow Him He will help us to become what we ought to be, and what in our best moments we want to be.

A Letter of Encouragement.

Have you ever been discouraged and "feeling blue" and then received a letter from a friend, a friendly letter, a letter that breathed confidence and hope and courage? What a lift it gave you! You thanked God and took new courage. Well, what we call First Peter in the New Testament was just such a letter. Here were people, Christian people, trying to live good and godly lives, and trying to do good to all men, being hunted and hounded and harassed, being persecuted and even done to death. And their friend and fellow Christian heard about it. He forthwith sat down and wrote them a letter, a letter of confidence and cheer and courage. He told them that they must not think it "strange concerning the fiery trial among you, which cometh upon you to prove you, as though a strange thing happened to you." They were to expect that Christ himself had bluntly said so. This suffering was not a punishment for wrongdoing, however and nothing to be ashamed of. As a matter of fact they were partakers of Christ's sufferings, and they were to rejoice that they had been accounted worthy to suffer for His Name. Let them be faithful for at the revelation of His glory they would rejoice with exceeding great joy. Reproach for the name of Christ was a beatitude. Did not Jesus say, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad." Let no man suffer as a murderer or thief or malefactor or meddler. But punishment for refusing to disown Christ was not a thing for which to blush, but a badge of honor and a way of glorifying God. It was not "eye-wash" either. This man Peter was writing out of a deep personal experience. He had suffered imprisonment and beating for the name and for the sake of his Lord. What new courage and confidence it must have given these Christians when they read this letter from this veteran of the Cross who like Paul bore in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Church Triumphant.

Today's lesson contains part of another letter that was written to Christians who were suffering persecution and martyrdom. It is a strange bit of literature, being filled with fanciful and even fantastic symbols and visions. It is mysterious and mystifying and purposely so. For John who wrote it had to conceal his message from the authorities who were persecuting the Christians lest worse things should happen to them. But the language which was "Greek" to the pagan powers, was understandable to his friends, especially through those who were the leaders.

In today's lesson John paints with inspired brush and writes with inspired pen. He pictures a great multitude, of all kinds of people, speaking all kinds of languages, standing before the throne of God on which there was seated the Living Lord, the Lamb, which had been slain by the powers of evil while in the flesh on earth. There was a great symphony of voices, a celestial choir, singing praises to God and Christ, and offering them adoration and worship. The visitor was impressed by the whiteness of the robes of those who stood before the throne and who bowed before those on the throne. "Who are these that are arrayed in the white robes, and from whence came they?" he asks. "Who are they? These are they who have come out of great tribulation, and they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." They had come "out of great tribulation," tribulation like unto that which the readers of the letter were facing. But they had become conquerors, and more than conquerors. Therefore, they were before the throne, they served God day and night, they dwelt under the shadow of His wings, they would hunger and thirst and suffer no more, for the Lamb was their Shepherd, and He would guide them unto fountains of waters of life. And there would be no more sorrow or suffering for God would wipe away every tear from their eyes." Weeping might endure for a night, but joy would come with the morning. Those who were suffering must look not simply at the things that were seen, but at the things that were not seen. Behind the shadow stood God keeping watch above His own.

Again what comfort and courage and confidence these tried and troubled and tempted Christians must have found in reading this message of the Church Triumphant! And all the more so, because the man who wrote it, like Peter, wrote out of the abundance of a similar experience through which he himself was passing. For he was an exile, doomed to die a martyr for his faith in Christ and for his unswerving loyalty to Christ and his unwillingness to deny his Christ. This letter brought comfort, too, to thousands of Christians in many lands during the war who were persecuted for their faith. This book came alive to thousands of men and women who remained loyal to Christ and His Church in the face of opposition and persecution.

At Ease in Zion.

One suspects that there are all too many of us who are taking our religion too easily or too lightly. There are evils that need to be denounced and wrongs that need to be righted. And if we did our duty we would have to pay the price of loyalty to Christ.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

tute, Celigny, Switzerland (near Geneva), March 6-10.

American participants included Mrs. Frank G. Brooks of Mt. Vernon, Iowa, president of the Women's Division of Christian Service, Methodist Church; Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel of Washington, D. C., wife of Canon Wedel of Washington National Cathedral and a member of the national executive board of the Women's Auxiliary, Protestant Episcopal Church; and Dr. Gloria Wysner of New York City, a secretary of the International Missionary Council.

Appoint by the Council's Central Committee in July, 1949, the Commission has undertaken responsibility for publishing a volume on differing customs regarding women, nation by nation, church by church. This study, to be written by Mrs. Kathleen Bliss of England for publication in 1951, was started prior to the Amsterdam Assembly in 1948 with surveys of women's life in the church contributed by interdenominational committees in 60 countries.

The Commission will also take charge of a study of "man-woman" relationships, referring not only to existing custom but to Biblical teaching on the issue as presented by theologians of various nationalities and communions. Results of this survey will be reported to the Second World Assembly in 1953.

Miss Sarah Chakko, president of Isabella Thoburn College, Lucknow, India, who had been appointed secretary of the Commission, took up her post at the March meeting, stating that she would be on leave of absence from the Indian women's college until June of 1951. Miss Chakko plans a trip to Germany in April to visit women's groups there, and hopes to be able to visit other countries where women have hitherto been cut off from the world or where church women's work is still in early stages of development.

WOMEN IN INDIA.

"Today is a time of great opportunity for India's women and girls. As never before they are pushing forward into new lines of activity," says Miss Katie Wilcox of Chester, Conn., Congregational Christian educator in Mathurai, South India, on the eve of sailing back to her post as Bursar of Lady Doak College after furlough in the U. S. A.

During her more than 30 years of Christian educational work in India, where she serves under the American Board, Miss Wilcox has seen a spectacular growth in education for women and girls. "There is a steadily growing demand for the type of teachers that our Christian institutions produce," she states.

Connecticut born and bred, Miss Wilcox was educated at Wesleyan University and Mount Holyoke (Class of 1911). She first went to India in 1915 and taught in Capron Hall

Training School for Girls, an American Board institution founded over 115 years ago with six pupils and now divided into two schools with over 2,000 girls enrolled. In 1947 Miss Wilcox received the Kaiser-I-Hind Medal for distinguished service to the people of India from the Indian Government.

For years Miss Wilcox, and the former Helen Gaylord, dreamed of establishing a Christian college like Lady Doak which was opened in 1948. Because of the generous aid of Miss Gaylord, now Lady James Doak, and Sir James, the school was named Lady Doak College.

GOSPEL STEWARDSHIP.

lieve to be the wisest way. Then what of your treasure? As a steward of the Gospel how will you use your money? This is the acid test. Will you give one-tenth or more of your income to the propagation of the Gospel? If you have one dollar, it is not too hard to give ten cents to God. If you have ten dollars, you could give one of them.

"To give ten dollars out of one hundred brings some doubts; you could be induced to give five. Out of a thousand dollars, you say, really one hundred is quite a sum, wouldn't twenty five be enough. And if you have ten thousand dollars a year, now to give away one thousand with all the expenses which press in upon us, that is quite a lot; three hundred dollars to the church would be a generous gift. A steward of the Gospel of Jesus Christ will not raise such barriers to his full service.

"In our more conservative religious groups this practice is gladly, in fact enthusiastically, followed. If we are committed to the task of saving the world, the members of our Congregational Christian Churches must be equally good stewards of their treasure; must sense the urgency of the need and give generously.

"You can almost tell a person who tithes. There is about him a calmness, a spiritual depth, a serenity of spirit; and from his life you take, somehow all unconsciously, the leaven of the Gospel. He knows that, to the zest of his ability in this time of urgency, he is carrying his part of the cost of giving to the people of other lands more than economic recovery, more than military might. These are furnished, through his taxes, by the government. He is bringing the Gospel of Jesus Christ which alone can meet the challenge of this new day."

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Easter dresses, yes, but how about spring suits for growing teenage boys. There is a real problem. With ten teenagers, one of them six feet tall, there is a possible outlay of a sizeable sum. These boys like to go to Sunday school and church, especially if they are not "looked at" in a way that makes them feel wrongly attired. Teenage covers a lot of its inside thinking with laughter and chatter, but "the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts." Tomorrow has quite a stake in the 76 boys and girls being trained and cared for here.

One church in Virginia says: "If he needs any clothes or shoes or anything, let us know; we will furnish it." One kindly woman writes: "Most of us women like the little girls, their pretty dresses and the bows and ribbons—so I am writing to ask you to fit a pair of Sunday shoes on one of your biggest boys and have the store charge same to me." One friend sent $25.00 to one of our oldest girls for Easter clothes. She took her matron and went to one of the very best local stores and got a lovely light blue suit, and accessories, and had a dollar or two left. The store knew the matron and the girl and gave her quite a discount.

We have a good report for you this week. There are some large contributions. We greatly appreciate them. There are others not so large, but they are just as sincerely appreciated. There were good clothes, too, and other articles. These are needed and appreciated. There is indicated in the report $333.00 for the sale of some of our surplus oats. Oats, wheat and corn are ground into feed for cows, hogs and chickens. Wheat is ground for flour, and also exchanged for bread. Corn is ground for bread, too. By the way, we purchased 400 baby chicks this week.

Sixteen boys and girls are preparing a program for presentation to churches or Sunday schools this spring. Mrs. Truitt is helping with this play, and the boys and girls are very cooperative in taking parts in it. You can count on these fine children. One of the most interesting things about this work is to see some child who has had so little and who is so backward join this group and grow into a very charming boy or girl. They catch the spirit and the spirit catches them. Any child who is unfortunate enough to need such a home as this is fortunate to be accepted here. A lot of love and concern and anxiety go into the development of these children. Arranging for medical and dental care for these children, watching over them when they are sick, and answering their unending questions—"May I do this?" "May I have that?" "May I go there?" So often so many of those questions come right up to me.

All of which is to say: Please help us do a big job well. Do not wait for somebody else to give the help you would get a joy out of giving. God will bless him who blesses "the least of these, my brethren." God will give you the heart of a child, and the joy of really unselfish service. You cheer us in so many ways and we thank you for all your kindness.

CADMAN CHURCH vs. GENERAL COUNCIL.

States that a civil court has, by injunction at the instance of a small minority, attempted to enjoin permanently, steps to unite two Protestant denominations.

7. It likewise is the first time that an attempt has been made to impose upon present and future property held by independent boards, not parties before the court, a trust for a purpose laid down by the Court in disregard of the long established provisions of the State Charters of the Boards.

8. It is also the first time that a court has laid down the penalty, that if a denomination attempts such a union involving departures significant only to a small minority, the denomination and its associated Boards and Societies would surrender the benefit of the property which has been received by them for the purposes set forth in their charters.

9. The import of the decision is that the Congregational Christian denomination and any other denomination similarly organized, is to have as many different masters as there are local churches. The denominational officers, members and its associated boards must work under the hazard of fine and jail sentences if they use funds for purposes which do not accord with the court's interpretation of "the basic principles, usages and polity" of their denomination.

10. It is clear that the shadow of civil restraint, has, by this decision been cast over the whole movement for unity among Protestant denominations.

11. It is equally clear that the power of a denominational fellowship to adapt itself to changing conditions and to effect the growth essential to the Christian religion will be seriously and gravely restricted if this decision stands.

12. This decision is that of a lower court. The issues in this case are so important that they require a review and consideration by a higher court.

In Memoriam

STEWART.

We, the members of Mt. Bethel Church, wish to pay our loving tribute to Dr. J. T. Stewart who died January 23, 1950. He was a faithful member as long as his health permitted.

1. That while we miss him in the fellowship of our Sunday school and church, we will always cherish the memory of his faithful service.

2. That we extend our love and sympathy to his family and pray God's blessings upon them.

MILDRED HAYNES,
Secretary.

COUNCILL.

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Harrell Councill, 71, of Holland, mother of Redwood Council of Suffolk and Holland were held Monday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock at the Baker Funeral Home with Dr. William B. O'Neill officiating.

She was the daughter of the late Joseph Henry and Mattie William Harrell of Isle of Wight County.

Besides her husband, B. W. Councill, of Holland, and her son, she is survived by a brother, Yyman C. Harrell of Emporia; several nieces and nephews.

She was a member of the Holland Christian Church where she was active in the church work and the choir.

LESTER.

On February 11, 1950, our Heavenly Father called from our midst our co-laborer in Christ, Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Lester. We, the members of Mt. Bethel Church, offer the following resolutions of respect to her memory:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful member.

2. That we bow in humble submission to God our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well, and give thanks for the worthy Christian life that has been taken from us. We extend our sympathy to the members of her family.

MILDRED HAYNES,
Secretary.

CABINESS.

Whereas, on the 28th day of December, 1949, Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church was saddened by the loss of a friend and brother member, Henry Walter Cabiness; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That we recommend his example of faith and love for Christ's kingdom to all.

2. That we cherish the memory of his unselfish, patient, cheerful service to his love ones.

3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and love in their loss. May the Father comfort them.

Mrs. J. E. HARRIS,
Mrs. ANNIE R. SMITH,
Mrs. T. A. POOLE,
Committee.

SAUNDERS.

Funeral services for Mrs. Alice Chapman Saunders, 70, who died Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock at the Medical College Hospital, Richmond, Va., were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Oakland Christian Church.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle conducted the services and interment followed in the Wesley Chapel Methodist Church Cemetery.

She was the daughter of the late George D. and Winifred Edwards Chapman of Isle of Wight County and the widow of William G. Saunders, Sr., of Chuckatuck.

She is survived by a son, William G. Saunders, Jr., of Chuckatuck; a daughter, Mrs. Frank W. Sheffield, Jr., of Richmond; seven grandchildren; a brother, Richard B. Chapman of Smithfield; two sisters, Mrs. F. W. Randolph of Richmond and Mrs. R. D. Linthicum of Louisville, Ky.

WHITEHEAD.

WHEREAS God in His infinite love and wisdom, took from Bethlehem Christian Church one of our loyal and beloved members, Mr. L. E. Whitehead; and,

WHEREAS he loved his church, was a charter member of the Taylor Progressive Bible Class and an honorary member of the Woman's Missionary Society; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That the Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond County, of which he was a member, has lost a faithful and devout member.

2. That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and pray God's richest blessing upon them in their sorrow.

Mrs. J. E. HARRIS,
Mrs. ANNIE R. SMITH,
Mrs. T. A. POOLE,
Committee.

BRAY.

It is with deep sorrow that we, the members of Liberty Congregational Christian Church, record the passing of our loved charter member, Mr. Charlie L. Bray.

He died at his home on December 17, 1949, at the age of 76, after declining health and a few days of serious illness. Funeral services were conducted at the Liberty Congregational Church on Monday at 2:30 p. m. with burial in the Pleasant Ridge Cemetery near Ramseur. Services were conducted by Rev. M. A. Pollard and Rev. Lacy Presnell.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Earl R. Stout of Liberty; a brother, J. E. Bray of Burlington; a sister, Mrs. J. C. Aldridge of Asheboro; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mr. Bray was always interested in his church and expressed that interest through both material and spiritual support of the church. He served as superintendent, Sunday school teacher and president of the Adult Class for a number of years.

We, the members, extend our deepest sympathy to the family and commend them to God for his comfort and care.

Mrs. WINIFRED BUTLER.

STOUT, SR.

On December 21, 1949, the members of Liberty Christian Church were saddened by the loss of their friend and brother, Earl R. Stout, Sr.

His sudden death was attributed to a heart attack.

The funeral service was conducted Friday, December 23, at 2:30 p. m. at the Liberty Christian Church. Services were conducted by Rev. M. A. Pollard, Rev. Lacy Presnell and Rev. Harold Loman. Burial was in the Fairview Cemetery at Liberty.

Mr. Stout had been associated with the A. & E. C. Railroad at New Bern for the past eight years. He was also a member of Lodge No. 741, Railroad Trainmen.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Omata Bray; one son, Earl, Jr., of Chicago; one daughter, Mrs. Ed Smith, Jr., of Liberty; two brothers, Arnie Stout of Greensboro and Wade Stout of Asheboro; one sister, Mrs. Claude E. Cox of Asheboro; and two grandchildren.

We extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and love in their loss and commend them to our Heavenly Father for comfort and peace.

Mrs. WINIFRED BUTLER.

TO OWN IS TO OWE

By WALTER H. JUDD, M. D.

Americans are sons of Pilgrims who crossed oceans and settled a new continent in order that they might freely worship God.

Because they believed every person to be a son of God, and therefore a part of God, they sought first the dignity and freedom of individual man as a spiritual being. Because they put that first, not second, the society which they built was one characterized by political liberty and economic opportunity. In such a society the creative capacities that are in ordinary men everywhere were released as had never been done before.

As a result Americans today own more homes, more automobiles, more refrigerators—more of everything than any other people on earth.

It is not because we are smarter or have greater natural resources or are ourselves more deserving, that we have all these gifts of government, goods and gospel. It is primarily because our forefathers believed in and acted according to the Christian faith.

The only sensible attitude for us to take toward what we own as the inheritors of this great spiritual tradition and its bountiful material results, is the Christian attitude—the Apostle Paul's answer—"I am debtor." To own is to owe.

We own so much of the world, we have great obligations to the world. Let me suggest three such obligations.

First—We owe to all the same opportunity we ourselves have received. We need to include all people in the circle of those whom we treat as brothers. Think of the contributions men like Einstein, George Washington Carver and Thomas Mann have made to our nation. Refugees, sons of slaves, exiles, free thinkers, and even revolutionaries Removal from our immigration and naturalization laws of all discriminations based on race is long over-due.

We own a great deal because we have received so much from every land; as a minimum, we owe to the peoples of every land a respect based on the Christian recognition of the equality of all men.

A second area of obligation is in the field of medical care.—Taking basic discoveries most of which were made by Europeans, Americans during this century have far surpassed most other lands in the prevention and cure of disease. Tremendous resources of scientific knowledge are now available to relieve the suffering of mankind.

What is our Christian obligation as Americans who have this vast store of medical knowledge because of receiving so much from others and then going beyond them? Clearly, to own is to owe. We today, like the Good Samaritan, are under an inner, Christian obligation to share our wine, our oil, our beast of burden, our money, and most of all, our compassion with a humanity bleeding and dying on the roadside.

A third area of obligation is the Christian Gospel itself.—It would be presumptuous to speak of "owning" the Gospel. Yet there is a sense in which that is true. Jesus spoke of the Gospel as the Pearl of Great Price for which a man would sell all. The Gospel of Christ is now in our hands. We can try to keep it for ourselves to enjoy briefly while it shrivels in the blight of self-concern; or we can share it with others while it flowers and blooms in the very process of being given away.

The greatest need of men today is to know and love the God of love who gave Himself in Jesus Christ. God's love in the hearts of men is the solvent of the problems which beset our world. All else will fail without it.

Freely we have received from others—our people — our knowledge — our gospel.

Let us now, therefore, thankfully, give.

Our Great Hope in China--New Workers

By RICHARD L. JACKSON

The one real hope in the situation is the number of young men who have felt the call to serve the cause of Christ and who are now in training or beginning work.

I have great hopes that within five years these young men will all be at work in North Fukien. They will bring with them new ideas and new ways of doing things which is our greatest need.

DOROTHY POTTER JACKSON

MR. CHANG WAN WEI—is a man of about 40 years of age who has worked with me as a teacher secretary during the past two years. He has now gone to a mountain community (Ershihtu) where he is opening new religious work. Mr. Chang does not have a seminary education although he took a correspondence course from Nanking Seminary, but is an earnest and enthusiastic Christian. He has a passion for helping others to know the good news of the gospel. He is loved by children and has the knack of leading them whether in song, story telling or in literacy work.

CH'U SHAN PAO—is a son of the oldest local preacher now at work in North Fukien. He is an FCU graduate in agriculture and has a very capable and consecrated wife. He went to Nanking Seminary in 1948 but left when the Communist troops arrived. He is now serving the Yangkou church where he is reported to be doing excellent work. Mr. Ch'iu is being supported by Hank's Chapel.

LIAO TAO CHUNG—is in his second year of a five-year course at Union Seminary, Foochow. Dean Paton says that he is an outstanding student and consecrated Christian.

CHANG HSIEN KUANG (Timothy Chang)—is a second-year student at Duke Seminary. He is being aided by the Southern Convention to prepare for work in North Fukien. I have a great many hopes pinned on this young man.

LIN CHANG LIANG—graduated last year from Union Seminary, Foochow. He is an untiring energetic worker. During the past year he has not worked for the Synod but has been on a year's leave of absence. It is our hope he will return to church work next year.

YUANG HENG—is now a student in a Teacher's College in Washington State. Mr. Yuan attended the Western Seminary, Pittsburg, for two years. Originally he planned to return to China this fall, but the recent political situation has complicated his return. He will probably do educational work.

CHANG HSIEN TA (Silas Chang)—another thoroughly capable and thoroughly Christian young man is now in Michigan State University studying agriculture. He will fit well into a teaching or agricultural post in North Fukien when he returns, probably in 1951. He served one year as principal of Han Mei School.

EASTERN VIRGINIA LAYMEN'S RALLY.

The Laymen's Fellowship of Eastern Virginia will hold a Rally at the Suffolk Christian Church on Saturday, April 15. The meeting is scheduled to open with registrations beginning at 2:00 o'clock. Mr. Walter Graham of Pembroke, Kentucky, will be the principal speaker.

The ladies of the Suffolk Church will serve a banquet for the group at 6:00 o'clock.

All laymen of Eastern Virginia are urged to mark this date, April 15, on their calendar and make plans now to attend this meeting.

MISSIONS ARE PEOPLE.

By MRS. O. H. PARIS, President,
Woman's Convention.

In our women's groups we like to think of Missions, not as Home and Foreign, but just Missions. In fact, we like to think of missions as people, for wherever God's people live and move and have their being, they need that strength and inspiration and spirit that embodies the missionary interprise.

As an organization of church women our purpose is to "cultivate the spirit of Christ in every area of human life, beginning within our own lives and reaching out into home and community and the uttermost parts of the earth."

We believe it is "Missions at the grass roots" when world problems begin to be solved in the home and community; that we are working toward world peace when we cultivate good relations with our neighbors and live at peace with our townfolk of every race and creed; that the world church can become a force for righteousness only as we serve loyally and wisely in our local churches.

The spirit of Christ knows no geographical boundaries. The church woman who really wants to promote Missions works within her church, her state and with other Christians across the nation and around the world to build the Christian world community.

The business of interesting men in missions is only secondarily a matter of methods; it is primarily a matter of a conviction as to the imperative-ness of the building of the kingdom of Christ on earth.—R. W. Cushman.

EVANGELISM IN JAPAN.

From Kyoto, William McKnight tells the story of a young Japanese and his baptism last Christmas Day—

On Christmas day Jiro Takahara was baptized at the Light of the World Church in South Kyoto. He was a quiet high school boy with eyes that twinkled, sometimes glistened when emotions were high. His clothing was well worn, but clean. An outsider would say, "Just another nice young fellow joining the church."

Those of us who knew Jiro were aware of a greater victory and therefore a greater joy at Christmastime than indicated by such a casual observation. For in Jiro's decision a threefold triumph for the Christ Child and a great spiritual struggle working in the heart of this quiet young man came to its climax.

Jiro lived in the humble home of a caretaker at the great Nogi shrine on Momoyama. He was the only son of a widow whose services had been retained at the shrine after the death of the father. Those familiar with Japanese history will remember that General Nogi was the hero of the victory of Port Arthur at the end of 1904 in the Russo-Japanese War. General Nogi served the Emperor Meiji faithfully in life and in death followed his ruler by the traditional suicide. The Japanese people gave him the honor of burial at the foot of the mausoleum of Emperor Meiji on Momoyama. Jiro was aware of the traditions of national Shinto. Had he chose to follow the occupation of his father and mother he might have had the honor of becoming the custodian of this memorable shrine. But something in Christianity attracted him, and he resolved to find out more about it.

One thing worried Jiro. After becoming a Christian enquirer he found it difficult to follow his mother in the daily Shinto worship at the shrine. Jiro's mother noticed her son's indifference toward the enshrined spirit of General Nogi and rebuked him for it. Indeed, she requested that he stop going to church. Thus the religious struggle in Jiro's soul began.

To break with the Shinto religion is not unusual these days. School children are no longer led to the shrines on festive days. After the Emperor himself renounced the traditional deity the younger generations have begun to speak freely of him and one might even hear a primary school boy speaking to his companion say, "The Emperor is not ac-

THE GREAT COMMISSION AND YOUR GIFT.

Jesus Christ commissioned his disciples to go into all the world and preach the Gospel. Most of us will be limited in our opportunity to go physically. Yet we can go! We can go through the personality of another whom we can send with our gifts. Your Cent-A-Meal offering and your Easter offering for Missions may well be your chance to fulfill your part in Christ's commission to you to go. Do not neglect this opportunity. Make your offerings generous that you and your Mission Board may go into all the world with the message of our Lord.

One of the last letters from the Jacksons had this to say, which ought to challenge us: "We shall be remembering you in the Southern Convention, especially at Eastertime, as you make your offerings to the Missionary Cause. We hope that you will continue to hold up our hands by your prayers and by your generous support."

We can go through the Jacksons and their more than 400 missionary colleagues who in His name proclaim Salvation to a troubled world. Christ is the answer. Take Him to the ends of the world by your consecrated gifts in His name.

WHAT ABOUT SHAOWU?

At the Mid-Winter Meeting in Cleveland in February, I had the privilege of meeting with the Subcommittee on China of the American Board. I have the following communication from Rev. Robert Chandler of the American Board:

"I do not know just what besides needs to be told you for the keeping things clear with the Southern Convention. We certainly want to let them know the full situation fairly and the prospects, whether good or bad. I think, as I said, that Dick Jackson and Ed Riggs both did splendidly in the careful reports which they sent us. And they will surely continue to write about the whole situation. We hope the letters come through promptly.

"It became perfectly clear to all of us that the withdrawal from Shaowu last October was decidedly, and at the end unexpectedly, under compulsion. They could do no other at that point even had they desired. And the reports that have come since of very disorderly conditions, both in Shaowu City and the whole region, have certainly justified the move that was made.

"Please emphasize that we in the American Board cannot think of this thing as a permanent withdrawal. It is temporary only. The missionaries are and will be in constant con-tion with some Shaowu Christian leaders. The chance for missionaries to go back, either for brief trips or for longer residence, may come at any time."

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE EASTER OFFERING

The oft-repeated charge against Christianity is that it has become costless, Christless and Crossless. Our Easter offering for missions, a generous and sacrificial one, should help refute this charge.

We thank God for creature comforts which are ours to enjoy, but we would not be a slave to them. It is our faith that the strong should bear the burdens of the weak. We rejoice that we are able to exercise the grace of giving, that our gifts are carried so swiftly and efficiently to those whom we would serve. We are free moral agents, capable of loving, caring, sacrificing and redeeming.

Missionaries have acquired new skills and multiplied their services. We who work through The American Board are ably represented on the mission field. Through our giving we are able to touch life at many points and render services which few, if any of us, could render individually.

Why missions? Prof. Frank Lombard says: "Christianity is a religion of fellowship; and, to remain Christian, must be a missionary religion, not in the spirit of condescension but of patience, of understanding, and of cooperation with all who seek to know the truth and practice goodness." He concludes: "The day of American Missions has not ended. Rather, it has only just begun—in that a practicing fellowship of love is needed today and tomorrow, in the Orient and no less in the West."

THE CHRISTIAN LEAVEN

Phyllis Bottome writes in her "Search for a Soul": "My reason for writing these memoirs only up to the age of eighteen is that after adolescence we enter a new region of living where we cease to be an object with whom life is still a play, and become subjects playing upon life."

However interesting and profitable the study of life "up to the age of eighteen" may be, let us now go beyond and study that engrossing span when we "become subjects playing upon life." That is our mature privilege.

Said Christ, "Ye are the salt of the earth . . . the light of the world"—active agents!

Every individual has an influence to exert, a testimony to bear, a mission to perform. The Christian cannot be neutral. All of us help form public opinion. All of us influence other people and help formulate their decisions. This process could be intensified and multiplied. Prayer, forethought, a sense of responsibility—these give us the incentive for purposeful living.

The Church accomplishes its purpose only as its influence is felt. Today there are counter influences, but Christianity touches life at many points. Even Communism cannot escape the example and influence of the Christian Church. Through many voices and languages, through the spoken and written word, through multiple services and sacrifices the Christian Gospel is making its impact throughout the world. The leavening influence of the gospel is continuous and unceasing.

The Christian is a subject of Christ, playing upon life. Never before were there so many instruments and such a vast audience upon which to play. Life's superstitions, immaturities, prejudices, injustices will ultimately yield to the transforming and redeeming influence of Christianity. Our prayers, our gifts and our every influence should speed the day. The moral power of the early church was irresistible. We must claim the power of God and use it for His glory. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father in heaven."

ATTITUDE TOWARD THE DEAD

Grief and death go hand in hand in any state. But somehow in New Orleans it's different. New Orleanians grieve for their dead as much as do people anywhere, but when the first shock of loss is past, they don't feel that their dead are gone from them. They have merely moved to their second homes and are to be visited as often and loved as much as they were in life. There is no reason for crying. Those who loved the dead can go on bringing their gifts and their attention and their love.

"Cheerful Cemeteries," by Robert Tallant in the March issue of Liberty Magazine tells of the cemeteries of New Orleans, and the strange gaiety that lingers there among the dead.

The people who visit New Orleans cemeteries give them the same attention they do their homes, states Liberty. "They bring a bucket, a mop and broom, old rags and soap, whitewash and paint. They bring their lunch and the kids. Their spirits are as high as if they were on a picnic, and while mama and grandma scrub and paint, the kids play cops and robbers around the tombs.

All Saints' Day is the most special of all cemetery days in New Orleans. There is a definite stigma attached to anyone who fails to have his family tomb decorated that day. After midnight there is a constant stream of people and flowers. Vendors line the curbs selling hot dogs and popcorn and toys for children, including toy skeletons. Cemetery tombstones are freshly painted and weeds have been removed. Every tomb seems to be overflowing with flowers; and the deeper one goes into the cemetery, the thicker becomes the crowd and the louder the gossiping. After lunch come the priest and his altar boys, and towards dusk the people reluctantly begin to leave.

"They go home happy," says Mr. Tallant. "They've enjoyed their day, for they have been very close to their dead."

Why the Christian Church Must be a Missionary Church

By REV. JOHN A. MACKAY, D. D.*
Princeton Theological Seminary

The Christian Church, to be truly the Church, must be a missionary as well as a worshipping Church.—When does the Church worship? The Church worships when, by an inner compulsion born of the Holy Spirit, it moves upwards towards God in joyous adoration and self-dedication to Him. When is the Church missionary? The Church is missionary when, under the compulsion of the same Holy Spirit, it moves onwards with God to places and spheres where Jesus Christ was not known before, there to proclaim the Gospel and establish His sway. In the expressive language of Isaiah, when the Church worships it strengthens the stakes, when it becomes missionary it lengthens the cords, of the tabernacle of God which God has designed to become the House of Prayer for all nations.

It is unhappily true, however, that in the life of the Christian Church the devout worship of God has not always been accompanied by the missionary service of God. The worshipping community has often been a localized, self-centered and static community. No cloud by day, no pillar of fire by night, has summoned it from its accustomed sanctuaries to erect new sanctuaries in the regions beyond. This inertia has been due at times to a lack of vision and of zeal on the part of the Church itself, and at times to restrictions imposed by governments. There are powers, both secular and religious, in the world of today which confine the Christian Church, or certain branches of the Church, to the exercise of strictly localized worship. By doing so they raise afresh the crucial issue of the meaning and right of religious freedom. The International Missionary Council has maintained, and I trust that the World Council of Churches will also maintain, that missionary activity is both a native right of all Christians and a permanent obligation of the whole Christian Church.

There are two basic reasons why the Christian Church should be a missionary Church. First, the Church's health requires that the Church be missionary. Secondly, the lordship of Jesus Christ demands that the Church be missionary.

The Churches health requires that the Church be missionary.—The Christian Church was designed by God to be a pilgrim Church. It is truest to its nature when it is a fellowship of Christians who live upon the Road, who move ever onward towards new frontiers, who seek a City beyond the horizons of present achievement. God did not intend His Church to lose its mobility and quench its missionary concern by an over-emphasis upon institutional life. Even Christian unity dare not be made an end in itself, for the harmonious functioning of the Body of Christ is for strenuous activity on behalf of Christ. Action is the very essence of the Church's life as combustion is the essence of flame. A great part of that action must consist in holy obedience to the will of Christ, moving outward and onward along the highways of the world to bring all peoples and every phase of their life and relations under the benign and sovereign sway of Jesus Christ.

Any failure on the Church's part to engage in missionary activity through an absorption in its own interests, through fear for its own safety, through a low hankering after ease and prestige and power, betrays Jesus Christ and leads inexorably to the disease and decrepitude of His Body. When the Christian community fails to be supremely a comradeship upon the missionary road, seeking to bring the world and all that it contains to the feet of Jesus Christ, it loses a sense of values and of common purpose. Dissension and party strife become rampant. The Divine Community succumbs to the allurements and temptations of the secular environment. Presently its spiritual life becomes sterile because its missionary ardour has become extinct.

The lordship of Jesus Christ demands that the Church be missionary.—Jesus Christ, the world's Saviour, summons His whole Church to missionary action. He bids His Church to go in the spirit of His love to all men everywhere for their physical succor. He commands His Church to bring all men everywhere to His living self for their spiritual redemption.

The chief need of mankind, whether in the hidden recesses of individual souls or over the whole range of human relationships, is redemptive love. That is the love which in the New Testament is called agape and which is marked by a passionate and tender concern for the needs, physical as well as spiritual, of other people. This love, which is the gift of Jesus Christ and the manifestation of His Spirit, invades human selfishness with a power that wins self-centered men and women, as persons and in groups, to find a new centre for their lives in the love and life of God. No other religion, save the Christian religion, has either magnified or practiced this love, and the Christian Church has practiced it all too little.

We cannot remind ourselves too often in an hour like this that the Head of the Church is the living Lord Jesus Christ. The Lord whom we adore, and who made us one in Himself, is Lord also of the cosmos and the sovereign ruler of history. The calm, joyous awareness that Jesus Christ is Lord should dominate and control our entire outlook as we face the human situation today.

Secular as well as religious writers begin to see in the lordship of Jesus Christ the one hope for mankind. One who has studied the history of civilization more exhaustively and with deeper insight than any other in our time, thus acclaims the only Figure known to the past who has redemptive relevancy for the present:

And now as we stand and gaze, with eyes fixed upon the further shore, a single figure rises from the flood and straightway fills the whole horizon. That is the Saviour, and "He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied."

A present-day poet puts these words into the mouth of the shepherds of Bethlehem, when they find the child in the manger, "Oh here and now our endless journey starts."

My brethren in Christ, this is He to whom we have all come; this is He also from whom we must all go forth. Jesus Christ the world Redeemer summons us, the representatives of His Church, to commit ourselves in holy unity to His missionary service. Our living Lord rises afresh out of the past before the eyes of our generation. From behind us and above us and beyond us He calls upon His Church, penitent for its failures and eager for fresh unity, to prove to all people that

How the Mission Board Helps the Churches Do Their Job

I. AT PLEASANT RIDGE, SPOON'S CHAPEL AND UNION GROVE IN THE WESTERN N. C. CONFERENCE.

By REV. CLYDE L. FIELDS,
Ramseur, N. C.

The Mission Board makes it possible for me to serve as pastor of Pleasant Ridge, Spoon's Chapel and Union Grove Congregational Christian Churches of the Western North Carolina Conference.

The folks of the Pleasant Ridge Church cherished a dream for a number of years. They wanted to build a parsonage in which a minister might live and serve the community. This dream began to be realized in the early part of 1949. As the building of the parsonage progressed we began to ask if it would be possible for the church to offer full-time work, or would there be some other churches near enough to form a group pastorate.

In the meanwhile a Church Grouping Committee of the Western Conference had been at work trying to group churches around some other parsonages being built at the same time. In the summer of 1949, Mr. George T. Gunter, the president of the Western Conference, was appointed by the Mission Board to do a few weeks of concentrated work on the problem of church grouping. He was highly successful. Through his efforts in this direction, and through the graciously extended calls of the Union Grove and Spoon's Chapel to me to become their pastor for this year, a pastorate was arranged between these three churches with the parsonage at Pleasant Ridge to be used by the pastor of the three churches.

The three churches felt that they would be unable to offer a minister enough salary to make it possible for him to serve them. An appeal was made to the Mission Board for help. The Board answered our call and voted to supplement the salary paid by the churches to the point where the minister would be able to serve. We feel that in time our group will be able to be self-supporting and will not require Mission Board aid. However, we are eternally grateful for the confidence placed in our group by the Mission Board. We intend to be worthy of that trust.

In November of 1949 the parsonage was completed and the Fields family—Bertie, Clyde, Jr., and me—moved into the new home. We are enjoying our work with the Pleasant Ridge, Spoon's Chapel and Union Grove Churches. All the people have been generous and gracious to us. We want to merit the fine trust and co-operation we have received from all the people we try to serve.

Thank you, Mission Board, for your confidence and trust in our group. We shall be true to your aspirations for us.

II. AT SEAGROVE, SHADY GROVE AND ETHER IN THE WESTERN N. C. CONFERENCE.

By REV. THOMAS D. SUTTON.

Ether, Shady Grove and Seagrove Churches, and the pastor are greatly indebted to the Mission Board. These churches are receiving $48.00 a month from the Mission Board. They are using this money to supplement their pastor's salary.

For the last four or five years the Seagrove Church had been planning to build a parsonage. With only about $270.00 in the treasury last April, 1949, the church voted to go ahead with their plans for building the parsonage. By December 18, 1949, the parsonage was built and paid for. We dedicated it on January 8, 1950.

Seagrove Church grouped with Ether and Shady Grove Churches, and with the assistance of the Mission Board they secured Thomas D. Sutton as their pastor, with the understanding that they allow their pastor the time to finish his college work. The pastor moved into the new parsonage October 25, 1949; and he began his work in his new field November 1.

Seagrove is having four worship services a month, while Ether and Shady Grove are having only two each month. Each of these churches has organized a young people's group; and they are meeting twice a month.

We have received three members into the Ether Church and ten members into the Seagrove Church. Seagrove has already paid a little over half of its Conference Apportionments for 1950.

Ether, Shady Grove and Seagrove, and the pastor wish to express their appreciation and thanks to the Mission Board; also a word of thanks to

III. AT ANTIOCH, BEULAH, LINVILLE AND NEW HOPE OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

By REV. EMERSON J. ROHART, Linville, Virginia.

After having been pastor for nine years of a Congregational Christian Church in Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania, in a section of the city that was much over-churched, there being eight churches on the street where our church and parsonage were located, we felt there was not much opportunity for growth. We therefore had a desire to locate in a rural community where there was not that overlap. We took the matter to the Lord in prayer and believe it was His leading that we are now located in our present field.

We believe that thriving churches can still be erected and maintained in the country and that such fields offer a tremendous challenge. There is an opportunity in the country to make the social life of the young people church-centered and a means of winning them for Christ. Also there are other opportunities to serve the Lord in the rural community that are not to be found in the city.

America is faced with a tragic record of empty country churches—churches that have had to close their doors because they were unable to support full-time pastors. It is in such churches that home mission support is needed and as these churches thrive and make progress they will become self-supporting and because of help given to them in the past they will have a desire to help other home mission projects and establish new churches.

We are grateful for the help rendered by the Mission Board of the Southern Convention in our particular field of service. With this help we are able to render a more efficient service and it is our sincere prayer that as we minister here we might bring the light and life of the gospel into the churches that we serve so that they in turn can help others.

the churches and to individuals who have given to the Mission Board, knowing full well that the Mission Board can serve only as the churches support it.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

NEWS FROM WOMEN'S GROUPS.

The Missionary Society of Liberty Church meets each Thursday evening after the first Sunday in each month.

We have been studying our material on Japan. At our last meeting we reviewed the book, Which Way Japan? In January, we joined with Pleasant Hill Church and Smithwood Church in a review of the booklet, Today in Japan, given by the pastor of Pleasant Hill, Rev. M. A. Pollard. Each member of our society feels that we have acquired many new and interesting facts about Japan. At our last meeting each women brought a gift for a box which we packed to be sent to Miss Angie Crew in Japan.

On February 24 at 7:30 we observed World Day of Prayer with the other five denominations in our town. Three ladies from our society had a part on the program.

We voted to send $5.00 to the Youth Council of the Southern Convention for P.O.W. (Project Overseas Worker). We are so glad that we can help the youth in this small way.

We are also looking forward to packing a box of Easter gifts for the children at the Elon Orphanage at our next meeting.

We hope a good number of the ladies in our group will make a special effort to attend the Spring Conference at Elon.

MRS. WINIFRED BUTLER,
President.

The J. O. Atkinson Circle of the Woman's Missionary Society of Liberty (Vance) Church met Tuesday night, March 7, with Mrs. Roy Weldon at her home.

The president, Mrs. Henry Mitchell, presided. The program on literacy, "Teaching the Billions to Read," was presented.

A general discussion of ways and means by which the older men and women of the church can best help and encourage the younger members was held.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. T. Fred Wright, Mrs. Florence E. Underhill gave a review of two chapters from our Bible Study Book, The Gospel and Letters of John.

We are asking all in the church to follow last year's plan of contributing one cent per meal for three months to share with those less fortunate than ourselves. Those who joined in last year felt greatly blessed by this small sacrifice.

Plans were made for serving the Farmer's Supper on March 20 in the school gymnasium. It was also suggested that if our women wish to make some money the Holland's magazine had made us a good offer.

Delicious refreshments of cherry ice cream, salted peanuts and home-baked chocolate cake were served.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel met recently with Mrs. G. C. Mann at her home with the president, Mrs. J. W. Jones, presiding. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Earl Farrell. Mrs. Jones read a letter from our missionary, Miss Angie Crew, in Japan.

Mrs. Farrell gave an interesting report on the Leadership Institute at Suffolk on February 17.

Delegates to the Spring Missionary Rally at Oakland Christian Church on March 23, were appointed as follows: Mrs. Earl Farrell, Mrs. F. E. Harrell, Mrs. Paul Parker, Mrs. I. P. Byrd.

Dues were collected amounting to $10.50.

The Bible Lesson was taught by Mrs. G. C. Mann from the Book of John.

A very interesting program was given by Mrs. F. C. Harrell, with Mrs. Grady Brown, Mrs. Paul Parker, Mrs. J. E. King and Mrs. J. P. Byrd taking part.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. G. C. Mann, assisted by Miss Margaret Mann.

CHURCH WOMEN SIGN FOR UNITY.

The United Council of Church Women has launched a campaign for an "Ecumenical Register of Church Women"—a nationwide program to put one million American Protestant women on record for Christian unity. The project, also called the "First Million," is planned as a demonstration of women's interest in the ecumenical church.

Mrs. Harper Sibley, president of the Council, explained that the project grew out of the conviction expressed by representatives of state and local councils at the national board meeting in Los Angeles last October that a national demonstration of the power and dedication of church women is greatly needed. Each woman who signs the register will contribute $1.00 as a "token of thanksgiving for our Christian unity."

THIS WEEK—DR. PAUL REYNOLDS.

Dr. Paul Reynolds has given of his gracious and inspiring personality last week and this week in Women's Conferences. So far, only one report has come and that is from the valley. He was very enthusiastically received and inspired those present.

It was felt that if Paul Reynolds could visit in every home in our nation, we would have no more troubles, no war, and Christ would reign supreme.

PASSPORT TO FREEDOM—OUR RESPONSIBILITY.

Recently, a little booklet entitled Passport to Freedom was mailed out to key leaders in the Convention, along with a letter from our Woman's Committee on Displaced Persons and an application blank to be used in applying for resettlement of displaced persons.

Also in this envelope was the following telegram from some of our church leaders:

"To all Congregational Christians:

Our churches must provide minimum of 500 sponsors for displaced persons within next 60 to 90 days. Failing this will have to secure help of other Protestant denominations to resettle those covered by Congregational Christian blanket assurance. Records indicate relatively small number of our churches participating program. Our last chance to keep faith with Protestant DP's. Out of total of 126,000 displaced persons brought to United States as of January 1, only 8,000 were Protestants. Despite grave obstacles and slowness in getting started displaced persons are now being moved. Churches receiving them report genuine satisfaction on whole. Service Committee has excellent case histories and photographs of DP farmers, mechanics, professionals available within next six to eight weeks. MODERN MISSIONS.

By DR. L. E. SMITH.

The gospel is good news, good news to sinful man and the lost world. The Christian gospel is for the whole of life and all men who dwell on the face of the earth. The sin of the church is that we have presumed to break up the gospel and limit its powers so far as our missionary efforts are concerned. We have attempted to say what is missions and what is not. We have even attempted to localize missions—what we do for man in India or any other foreign country is missions but when we do the same thing for people in America at our own doors we contend that it is not missions. The whole program of the church is missionary whether at home or abroad. The world is still the "field." Any point of need that is of vital interest to the church is equally binding on those who feel its responsibility and direct its program. I question the rightness of the use of the terms "Home Missions" and "Foreign Missions," "Home Boards and Foreign Boards." These divisions have been made by man. They are not divine. With God there is no home or foreign mission. There is simply one field, one world, one Christ, one gospel, and one way. He sent His son into the world to save the world. Christ founded a church to facilitate and continue His efforts to save the world. It is our responsibility to continue these efforts—to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth that all may hear and have the opportunity of accepting Christ that they may live abundantly and eternally.

The program of the Christian gospel must be missionary and all inclusive. It seeks to find the lost and to save the lost. This is its primary function but included in this program is the complete ministry to man in his needs, his education, his training, his inspiration and his direction. It also provides that there shall be food for the hungry, clothing for the naked, shelter for the homeless, and protection for the weak. The gospel would administer to all of man's needs. These needs are universal. To meet them in the name of Christ is a missionary service wherever rendered.

The question that confronts the church in these tragic and uncertain days is the meeting of these needs and how. The church does recognize its responsibilities as it faces adverse world situations but it cannot assume these responsibilities and meet them without our help, without the help of all who constitute the church. Fortunately, for us money is required. A great deal of money is required if the church is to fulfill its mission, enter into its opportunities and meet its obligations. I say fortunately for us. It is exceedingly dangerous for a Christian man or woman, or family, to be prospered financially beyond its grace and willingness to contribute as an expression of gratitude and faith for the coming of the Kingdom of God in the world. It is still hard for a wealthy man to live an exemplary life. Wealth affords him so many opportunities and presents him with so many temptations. Ease has proven to be the pitfall to thousands of would be good good men. What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? By dividing our living in terms of the gospel we are enlarged mentally and spiritually and are not impoverished financially. It is still true that if we give in the true spirit, however generous, it shall be given back to us good measure, pressed down, heaping up, and running over.

Today, as members of the church and followers of Christ we should count our blessings, face our responsibilities and give out of what we have that the Kingdom of God may come and the needs of the world supplied.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

We are in the midst of the Missionary Period. We should lift up our eyes and look on the fields for they are white unto the harvest. Our contributions are needed that the Kingdom may come in its fulness. The world receives the gospel only through Christ who came to save us. He placed the gospel in the hearts of His apostles, taught them, prepared them, and sent them forth. It is the business of the church today to propagate the gospel. How can we do it save through men and women? How can men and women carry the gospel unless they are prepared? How can they be prepared unless they are taught, schooled for their tasks? The church has opened the doors of Elon College, dedicated to the task of training young men and women for life and for the propagation of the gospel. It is our responsibility to support Elon College adequately that it may continue to prepare young men and women for the church of which we are a part and the coming of the Kingdom for which we pray daily.

The Convention Committee, Mrs. Alma B. Smith, Mrs. Garland Spratley, Mrs. W. W. Sellers, state:

"The Congregational Christian Churches have accepted as their quota 1,200 assurances. That agreement cannot be kept unless local organizations help in finding available opportunities for placement.

"Is there not a place in your community for at least one family, or even one single person? An individual, church, civic organization, or business must assume the following obligations:

"1. To furnish employment without displacing another person (sufficient to make a living).

"2. To find a suitable place for the DP to live.

"3. To pay transportation from port of entry to place where he will be employed. This cost of transportation may be taken from his wages at a later time."

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS & GIRLS:

Next Sunday will be Palm Sunday. Do you recall the pictures showing Jesus as he rode into the city on the fat, contented-looking donkey? All the artists have shown the donkey as being very sleek and Jesus always is pictured as being calm and kind with a half smile on his face for his friends, especially the little ones, who went before him.

It is hard for us to remember, I think, that no one ever painted a portrait of Jesus or took his picture. We send off a quarter and a couple of box tops and soon the mail man brings a tiny camera and we go click, click at our friends and have their pictures. But it is good to look at the different scenes and portraits of Jesus and see which one or ones we like the best.

Great favorites with boys and girls that I have known are the Margaret Tarrant and Elsie Anna Wood paintings. They make Jesus look human and so friendly. The people around him look happy, too. Prints or copies of these paintings can be bought for a small amount of money and may be used in your home or classroom. Our Sunday school in Richmond has a good collection all being the same size. Mr. James A. Rawls who is clever at making things, made frames for them and they are used without glass and changed from time to time. You may be able to find a friend or father in your group to do the same for you.

The first Palm Sunday was a time of rejoicing and they carried the palm branches in their hands. Many churches only use green on that Sunday and have no flowers. Somehow I have always felt that if they had lovely greens, they had lovely flowers, too.

GIVE AND TAKE.

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Madden, busy housewife and mother, sank gratefully into an easy chair for what Grandma Jones used to call "a nickel's worth of sit-down." Taking care of a large house and four active children didn't leave much time for rest.

Then she heard Stephanie's voice from the next room. "That's mine! Don't touch it!"

"Can't I just hold the baby doll a minute, Stephanie?" came the pleading voice of little Karen. "I'll be very careful."

"No, you can't! It's mine!"

Mrs. Madden was troubled. What was she going to do about Stephanie? Where had the child learned that unlovely phrase, "That's mine"? Anyway, she had adopted it, and she was growing more possessive and selfish every day. There must be some way to check it. Suddenly another saying of Grandma Jones' came to her mind—"A taste of her own medicine." This gave her an idea; she would give Stephanie "a taste of her own medicine." She rose feeling rested—believing her new idea would work effectively. She would have to take the other children into her confidence to a certain extent, she reasoned.

She watched her chance to get the three alone and then told them they were going to play a game with Stephanie, only they were not to tell her about it. "Each time Stephanie starts to take anything of yours, say 'That's mine! Don't touch it!'" As soon as the game is over I will tell you, and then none of us will say it any more."

They thought that would be great fun, and Mrs. Madden felt fairly sure Stephanie would see the point. That evening Stephanie picked up a rubber ball with which to play with their cocker spaniel. But at that instant little Billy cried, "That's mine! Don't touch it!" Stephanie looked bewildered; he had never minded before.

That was only the beginning. Mrs. Madden was almost tempted to call the treatment off when she saw how really hurt Stephanie was, but she thought of Grandma Jones and held firm. The last straw for Stephanie was when the little girl came into the bedroom, at the time her mother was combing her hair, and she took up the mirror to look at the back of her own curly head. "That's mine! Don't touch it!" her mother said, and she caught the mirror before it fell from the child's hand.

"Oh, Mother, don't say that!" Stephanie wailed. "Please!"

Mrs. Madden drew her daughter close. "You don't like to hear those words, do you?" she asked, then continued as Stephanie shook her head vehemently, "You see, dear, we become tired of hearing you say them, too."

When Stephanie, of her own accord, placed her favorite baby doll in Karen's arms that evening, saying only, "Be careful," Mrs. Madden felt her stratagem had worked, and she told the other children the game was over—they were not to say those words any more. "And, of course, you must never take things that belong to someone else without asking permission," she added. "The owner alone can give permission, but I don't want any of you to be selfish and unwilling to share your things. If we ask favors we, in turn, must grant favors."

Mrs. Madden knew quite well that saying this just once wouldn't be enough; every mother knows that. Little children cannot be expected always to remember from one telling. But Mrs. Madden also knew that love and patience and persistence will accomplish much; and her eldest child, Stephanie, had definitely seen the light.

AUSTRALIAN COUNCIL URGES MISSIONS AT HOME.

Scoring both capitalism and communism for their belief in the self-sufficiency of man, the Australian Council for the World Council of Churches has urged that the mission work of the Church "keep pace with population and housing developments lest areas of paganism be multiplied in our midst."

Speaking to the Australian churches and people from its annual meeting in New South Wales during February, the Council declared that "both these systems are built on the belief that power through property is the basis of national life and that man is self-sufficient in his handling of it. The supreme fact is not property but man who is a child of God."

"We urge all Christians to press onward with greater urgency in the task of taking the Christian gospel to all people. Mission work is now as necessary in our own town and street as in lands overseas," concluded the Council's message.

If there is righteousness in the heart there will be beauty in the character. If there is beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the home. If there is harmony in the home, there will be order in the nation. When there is order in the nation, there will be peace in the world.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

THE IDEAL WORK CAMPER.

[A condensed statement by Patricia Dunham of the American Friends Service Committee.]

Happy person: What is a happy person? He is someone who is at peace with himself and knows that others are apt to like him. He is sure of himself in a quiet, unbragging sort of way. Yet he is not afraid to admit his mistakes. Confident of his own place in the sun, he can take a back seat, but when necessary he can take the lead as well.

This happy person, in good emotional health, is also in good physical health.

Flexible person: If a person is really happy, then he can also be flexible. By "flexible," I mean he has the ability to grow; to grow away from his previous way of doing things.

He gets a kick out of change, too, not just for the excitement but also for his own development. He admits it's tough getting up at 5:30, but he does it. Straw ticks are often uncomfortable. So what? And the food isn't like what mother used to make, but he is adaptable. He enjoys making new friends. New languages intrigue him. Disorganization doesn't throw him into a dither. In a storm he is calm as the great north woods.

Sensitive person: Right along with flexibility goes sensitivity. If you have sensitivity, you have one of the top-notch ingredients of a good work camper. It's a special kind of eye, maybe, or a special kind of feeling.

The sensitive person has his eyes open. He's aware of what is going on. He can add up the situation and then do something about it. He talks to the lonely fellow in the corner; he never complains about the food or compares it with mother's; he takes the smallest piece of cake; to camp he brings a few old clothes.

Sociable person: If our camper is a happy person, it is natural for him to like people. Feeling at home with them, he likes having people around. He is interested in his fellow man. For him, the brotherhood of man is a living experience. He accepts a person as he is. He respects his human dignity.

This camper of ours knows how to get along with people, for he has a tight handclasp, a ready smile, a pleasing way with him.

Linguistic person: Our ideal work camper must like people enough so that he wants very much to communicate with them. Before he comes to camp, he is willing to work hard on language. But he has courage, too, once he arrives, so he will try talking even though he gets laughed at.

Spiritually motivated person: What runs through all these other characteristics is the person's religious footing. If he had all these other attributes, almost in order to have these other attributes, he will also have a religious core, a belief in something greater than himself. First, he has faith in himself; that's why he tually famous." Of course the older generation from force of habit or from lack of other object of worship sometimes visit the shrines at the time of festivals and make the customary hand clap and bow before the shrine.

EVANGELISM IN JAPAN.

However, the break with mother was more difficult for Jiro. The ethics of Confucius had been taught him by his parents. Loyalty to parents was a rule that bound Jiro by more than religious sentiment. Should not any child honor and love and respect his mother? Did not respect imply obedience? Yet, the spirit of Christ worked in the heart of Jiro. Quietly but firmly he pleaded with his mother. His Christian experience was too new for arguments. He could only gently beg his mother to permit him to go to church. She yielded.

Another danger confronted the Takahara family. If the over-keeper of the shrine should learn of the religious habits of Jiro what might happen? Would he demand the resignation of Jiro's mother as caretaker? Or might he even discharge her upon the rumor that her son was seeking the Christian way?

Jiro met this danger with the same quiet determination. His plan of action was faithfulness in his duties, one of which was lighting the fire for bath at the home of the keeper of the shrine. Each evening the bath fire was lighted at the regular hour. Jiro took care that the water was just the correct temperature when his master entered it. This pleased the master and he praised Jiro for this faithful work. But the religious crisis had to come. Jiro had resolved to request baptism on Christmas Day. This could not be kept a secret. He must face the keeper of the shrine. As his decision to be baptized was told to the old man, Jiro watched the face of his master intently. Solemn at first, when the firm decision was comprehended, a smile slowly came over the face of the official Shintoist. "Jiro, you're a good boy," he said quietly, then after a pause, "and you do know how to fire the bath."

Jiro's eyes glistened as I congratulated him after the baptismal service. Our hands grasped firmly. Then I felt that firm grip again on my hand as if the young man was recognizing a fellowship too deep for words. With joyful hearts we received the communion together, the doxology was sung, I pronounced the benediction. Jiro, the heir of the Shinto household had come to the manger of Bethlehem.

THE POWER OF THE RESURRECTION.

(EASTER LESSON.)

MEMORY SELECTION: Thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—I Corinthians 15:57.

LESSON TEXT: I Corinthians 15:1-8, 20-21, 57-58.

DEVOTIONAL READING: John 20:19-23.

Extra!!! First Edition!!!

Paul's words to the Corinthians as recorded in I Corinthians, Chapter 15, are generally admitted by scholars to be the oldest account of the appearances of our Risen Lord. It was written before any of the Gospels, and a comparatively short time after the events had taken place, and while some of the hundreds of witnesses were still living. It is therefore a very valuable statement or piece of evidence concerning this vitally important event.

And it should be added that the Resurrection of Jesus Christ is a vitally important event. It is the cornerstone of Christian faith. If evidence could be produced that Jesus Christ did not come alive from the Tomb the whole Christian structure would come tumbling to the ground. To be sure there would still be the record of His life, the story of His great works, and the inspiration of His great words, but there would never have been any vital Christianity, and what is more there would never have been any Christian Church. We are considering today the most important event in the history of religion, and the foundation stone of Christianity.

If Christ Be Not Risen!!!

Granting that the story of the Birth of Christ and the record of His earthly ministry were true up to Easter, what would be the result if He had not risen from the dead? Suppose Easter were not true after all! Suppose Christ did not rise again from the dead! Would that make any difference? It would make all the difference in the world. Paul puts it in dramatic fashion. "If Christ be not risen. . . ." There is a catch in his breath as he asks the question. And in a few sentences he pictures the devastation and the desolation which would strike the Christian faith. All his preaching would have been in vain, for the central theme of Paul's preaching (and of all vital preaching for that matter) was that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, that He was buried, and that He arose again the third day, according to the Scriptures. Point No. 1—Christian preaching would be in vain. Point No. 2—Christian faith would also be in vain; the whole structure of Christian faith would tumble into ruins. Point No. 3—Paul and all other preachers would have been lying, they were false witnesses, because they testified again and again that Christ had risen from the dead. Point No. 4—We are still in our sins. Point No. 5—Those who have fallen asleep in the faith that through Christ they would live again, had perished and had been mocked in a ghastly way. Point No. 6—If Christ did not rise we can be sure that nobody else is going to rise from the dead. If the grave could hold the sinless Son of God it will hold us. If Christ be not risen from the dead, the Bible is ont to be trusted; our highest instinct is not to be trusted; Jesus Christ himself is not to be trusted. Get this straight, the story of Easter is an important, a critically important, story on which everything that is most precious in Christian faith and hope depends.

But Now Is Christ Risen from The Dead!!!

But Easter is true. Christ did rise again from the dead. Christ came alive again from the Tomb. That is one of the indisputable, indestructible facts of history. It is as well authenticated as any event in history. Let the cynic and the skeptic minimize the testimony borne by His disciples and His most intimate friends. How will he account for the confusion of the enemies of Jesus? How will he account for the history of the Christian Church itself? Be sure of this: if the friends of Jesus had stolen the body or hidden it, they would never have gone out to preach what they did, and certainly they would not have suffered and died as they did for this cornerstone of faith. And if the enemies of Jesus could have produced the body of Jesus they would have knocked Christianity into a cocked hat and killed it once and for all. It is strange to what lengths some folks will go to explain away a thing which is a stubborn, solid fact. To be sure there are some difficulties involved in the story of the Resurrection. And of course there is a great deal of mystery. But to accept the Resurrection of Jesus as a fact explains far more than to deny it. It would have been a mystery indeed if the grave could have held the Sinless Son of God.

Therefore . . .

Paul always ends on a practical note. He insists that doctrine should find expression in deed. He says that if folks believe something they ought to live in a certain way and do something about the matter. Thus it is that as he comes to the conclusion of this thrilling chapter (I Cor. 15) he inserts one of his "therefores"—"Therefore my beloved brethern, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." The universe does conserve values, not only personal values, but investments in good and great causes. The fact that a man goes on living strengthens and sustains him, and gives him an incentive to be strong and to be faithful and to be fruitful. The real world is the unseen world. The earthly house of this tabernacle may dissolve, but man has a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. The life that is, gives meaning and dignity to the life that now is. God has put eternity into our hearts. Through Christ who is the Resurrection and the Life, even though a man were dead yet shall he live again, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Christ shall never die.

Easter a Historic Fact, Or Easter A Present Experience?

Is Easter for you simply a historic fact, or is it a present experience? Is it simply something that you read about, or is it something that you experience? Do you know that Jesus Christ arose from the dead and is alive because He lives in you? Does He quicken faith and hope and love in your heart? Does He give you the victory here and now? Is he a power in your life here and now?

A Closing Word.

We use words a bit loosely at times. For instance you often hear that they buried this person or that person. But is that true? Can you really bury a man, that is, the real man? As you stood beside the open grave of a loved

HOW THE MISSION BOARD HELPS OUR CHURCHES DO THEIR JOB.

IV. AT TIMBER RIDGE IN THE VIRGINIA VALLEY.

By REV. ROY D. COULTER.

It is through the Mission Board of the Southern Convention that a full-time pastor is kept on the job at Timber Ridge. Before this, this old church—over a hundred years old—was having preaching once and twice per month. No pastor lived closer than eighteen miles from the field.

Since the Mission Board offered their help here, the church people have built a modern brick parsonage, valued at $13,000, and a full-time pastor lives on the field.

As a result of this, attendance has increased at all services, church membership has increased, a young people's society has been organized with 30 members, plans are under way for an activities building, and the whole church has taken on new life. Conference apportionments have been increased and always met in full. A sound movie projector was purchased by the young people, and a worthwhile picture is shown once a month.

V. AT BELEW CREEK AND SALEM CHAPEL IN THE N. C. & VA. CONFERENCE.

By REV. ALLEN L. HURDLE.

Salem Chapel and Belew Creek Churches are located sixteen miles from Winston-Salem. Like many of our rural churches, both of these have felt a heavy drain upon their future strength through the migration of young men and women to the surrounding towns. During the long history of the two churches only two or three pastors have lived on the field and those for just brief periods. This has been the case because neither church could support a full-time pastor. Since the majority of the pastors only came on the week-ends, the pastoral work was neglected. In the process of transition the new families moving into the communities were not assimilated into the church membership. As a result both churches suffered greatly.

Last spring the leaders of these churches realized the need of securing a pastor to live on the field. This was necessary if the churches were to make any notable progress. Therefore plans were made for the two churches to unite in building a parsonage. The actual construction began in June of 1949 and the pastor and his family were able to move into it in August. The parsonage has all the modern conveniences and is presently valued at $10,000. Then five representatives from each church were elected to form a pastoral council to coordinate the work of the field.

After completing the building program, the churches faced the problem of paying a full-time salary to its pastor. It was the general feeling that the churches could not increase the pastor's salary much above the approximately $1,000 paid by both churches in the past. Thus an appeal was presented to the Mission Board for financial aid to make possible a full-time ministry in the area. The Board met in September 1949 and granted us $66.66 per month supplement beginning with that month. Each of our churches raised its portion to $60.50 per month, giving the pastor a yearly income of $2,250.

Through the financial support from the Mission Board it is now possible for each church to have four services a month and a union service on fifth Sundays. The pastor is enabled to carry on a constructive pastoral program of visitation, hospital calling, shut-ins and calling on new families moving into the communities. In addition the young people's work, the church schools, and the Missionary Societies have been strengthened. We feel that this aid has definitely been of great benefit to our churches already and will contribute to their future progress.

VI. IN AND NEAR WINSTON- SALEM.

By REV. WM. J. ANDES.

Our Pfafftown and Winston-Salem Churches are serving the needs of our present age to the best of their ability. This ability is strengthened by our Mission Board of the Southern Convention.

Pfafftown, located about 10 miles west of Winston-Salem, is preparing for the future development of the city in that direction. New Sunday school building is in the program and a well-developed leadership is at work.

Winston-Salem Church receives members of our Congregational Christian faith from various states—Illinois, Washington, New York, etc. Families from our churches in the Southern Convention are moving here and are finding this church for their church home. The church here endeavors to serve those of our fellowship who come to the Baptist Hospital as patients and friends.

Both churches have recently been renovated; youth groups meet, young adults are at work; choirs are trained; children find new religious knowledge; adults find friendship and growth in their faith. We in the Congregational Christian Churches have a great principle of religious freedom to share with our fellowmen. We have a place in the religious life of our world.

VII. AT LYNCHBURG VIRGINIA.

By REV. JAMES B. ALLAN.

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention is an organization whose responsibility embraces a wide area of Christian concern. From the rural church, with its problem of serving an extended parish, to the formation of new churches in areas where communities have grown up overnight, the Mission Board faces its task. Between these two extremes there are churches receiving financial assistance from the Board whose work is dependent upon such help as is given. The First Congregational Christian Church of Lynchburg is such a church.

The Lynchburg Church is not a young church in terms of years as it celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday on January 4 of this year. But in terms of extended service the Lynchburg Church has just begun to live! During the past six years the area in which the church is located has seen a rapid development of building and the establishing of new homes. There are approximately 1,500 new homes within a mile of the church constituting a community of some 3,000 people. Such an influx of population into a community constitutes a need for extended service.

In the two and a half year period which has just passed the assistance of the Mission Board has made possible added resources within the church. Without the assistance of the Mission Board the salary of the minister would be insufficient to meet the cost of living in a period of inflation. Further, if such aid were not given to the Lynchburg Church part of the program of the church would be curtailed. Indirectly the installation of a new organ in the church, the purchase of equipment for the kitchen, the many additions to the total program of the church can be attributed to Mission Board assistance. Plans for installation of a chancel in the sanctuary and a new church plant are being made through the assistance of the Mission Board.

Finally, but not least in importance, has been the inspiration and

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

This week I wish to feature a letter I have just received from one of our oldest and most faithful ministers, the Rev. G. D. Hunt of Roanoke, Alabama. He writes that he has been preaching in the Christian Church for sixty-four years and that during that time has kept himself "thoroughly identified with every enterprise of the Christian Church." He writes on to say "especially the Christian Orphanage, and am watching every effort being put forth to add to its prosperity." He enclosed $5.00 from his tithe fund to help support the orphanage work. He writes that he is eighty years old, and that he is still busy preaching and working for the church. It was a joy to read his letter, to have his best wishes and prayers for the orphanage. Brother Hunt helps to keep alive the interest which Alabama and Georgia have in our work here. We thank him and pray God's continued blessings upon him.

This week thirteen churches sent us $233.40. Last Sunday we had visitors, a goodly number of them, as we do every Sunday. One very thoughtful lady handed me a check for $50.00 to buy boys' shoes. Several churches and Sunday schools are sending to the children whom they sponsor Easter dresses and some Easter suits for boys. Little girls certainly wear their Easter dresses prettily, but boys are just as proud and are as handsome as they can be in nice, new Easter suits. A number of people are sending money designated for the boy or girl whom they are sponsoring because they know we can fit them better, and perhaps get a better discount.

The noise of hammer, saw and trowel is being heard here on our campus as the new milk building takes shape. The old one had to be rebuilt. Next there must follow a new grain house, as the old one has just about fallen down. All this takes money. An institution which is run on the "hand-to-mouth" method with which we are forced to use here finds the getting in of these absolutely essential repairs difficult. We have to go ahead and trust a kind Providence and a generous people to come to our rescue. A report received this week from one of the orphanages of this states shows total expense per child for child care, repairs to buildings and administration $877.48. How about that? Of course we had to do it last year on $529.00 per child. They had endowment and assistance from the State, besides a generosity equal to or above ours to help them. Their children are no more needy than ours, and no more precious. We keep pressing forward to the day when our farm will give us much more help. To the size of our constituency I think we do nobly, very nobly indeed, and I am proud of what we have done and are doing.

We need a growing number of generous minded men and women blessed with this world's goods who will set aside real donations as a backlog for the carrying on of this institution. God had provided us, through just such generous friends, and the faithful work of the late Charles D. Johnston, with a goodly heritage in these beautiful rolling hills. God is calling us to a great work for these little boys and girls. They have someone to work for them, love them, pray for them, and occasionally to stay awake at night for them. You are doing a great share in blessing them and everything you do will be blessed of Him who watches over the needy. You, God bless you, shall have your reward.

WHY THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH A MISSIONARY CHURCH.

"the Father has sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world." Jesus Christ calls us to move forward together on a world front, to fulfil that missionary task which He died to make possible and lives to make actual. He calls us today, whatever our name or sign, to tighten the belt of truth about our loins and in holy comradeship to set our feet upon the road to the City of God. Let us pursue the journey together until at length we meet the Victor coming towards us from the other side, and the word is heard above the noise of battle: "The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ."

one or a friend or somebody that you knew and you saw the casket lowered into the grave, did you think for one minute that they were burying that person? Well, I have stood by the open grave of members of my family circle, but I knew they were not putting the spirit of my loved ones in that grave. They were simply putting away the body or the house in which the spirit of my loved one had dwelt during the years of his or her earthly life. And I did not think of them as dead, but as more alive than ever, and alive forevermore. As Dwight L. Moody once said, "If you hear that Dwight L. Moody is dead, don't you believe a word of it. I will be more alive than ever." That is the heart of the Easter message and the sure ground of the Christian hope.

guidance which the church has received. The Mission Board, through its financial assistance, has given the church new hope for the future. We know we are not alone in the service we are trying to render to the community; we can feel that we are part of a wider fellowship which embraces the total Christian community.

VIII. AT ELKTON OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CONFERENCE.

By REV. S. E. MADREN.

The churches—Mt. Olivet (G), Mt. Olivet (R) and Bethel—which compose the Elkton group in the Valley Conference have been greatly helped through the missionary enterprise of the Convention. Salaries received from these churches have not been sufficient to support a full-time pastor. It has been possible through the supplement of mission money to obtain services of a resident minister.

A minister going into a community for once-a-month services is too far removed from his people to be an effective pastor. Since they have formed a group, and the Mission Board is investing money to help the group carry on; a resident pastor can be in the home of any family in the community on a few minutes' notice.

Again it can be clearly stated that the aid of missions has given the group a better ministry, a more effective ministry. The minister, being near, has an opportunity to render a more worthwhile or more needy service. Emergencies sometimes arise. People need the minister. They learn to rely upon the minister for guidance and leadership—not just on a given Sunday—but during the week-night activities of young people and other groups in the church. More of my time is spent in activities for the church through the week than for the regular church services. The group has a preacher, minister, counselor, pastor and friend. This would not be possible through a non-resident minister.

Twenty years ago one of the churches was struggling under a debt. It was the result of a building program. The mission money in the amount of $100 was received from the Conference Fund to pay on the debt. Today that church pays half that amount into the Conference Fund annually aside from its support of missions through all the other regular channels of the Conference. The church is stronger today because it received aid yesterday.

Missions is a means of helping the weaker churches become stronger that they may in turn help others grow stronger. Many churches have been fortified through the aid of missions. Therefore let me offer this bit of advice: Do not lose faith in the work that your gifts to missions may accomplish. Support the work of Christ through your giving.

WHAT ABOUT SHAOWU.

The Sub-Committee on China took the following action on February 14, 1950:

1. The American Board, in the opinion of this committee, is by no means withdrawing from Shaowu, or North Fukien. We admire the persistent courage with which missionaries have labored there for three years, and sympathize with them in their enforced leaving. We consider that this withdrawal was temporary only. We urge that the missionaries should stand by, while serving in the Foochow area, and keep in close touch, if possible, with the Shaowu situation.

2. The Committee approves in general of the administration, as outlined by the Shaowu Mission, Displaced, of those funds of the North Fukien Synod which came through the American Board.

3. The Committee strongly desires the return to the Shaowu area of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and Dr. and Mrs. Riggs, when the time shall be favorable. And for further reinforcement, this Committee will work for the securing of an agriculturalist-educator family, and a woman religious and social worker.

FROM CANNIBAL TO SCHOLAR.

Forty years ago Bishop William Taylor, turned loose on the continent of Africa, found one day in the dark interior an abandoned baby girl, child of cannibal parents. He picked her up from the tall grass, carried her to his tent to the mission station, where he provided for her care and education. A few years later, returning to the United States to attend the general conference of his church, he stood before that vast assemblage, held this little black girl on the palm of his great hand and said, "Brethren, the continent of Africa greets you." Years pass. Another general conference is in assembly. The evening for the consideration of Africa arrives. A little black woman stands on the platform to plead for her continent. Who is she? Graduate of college, having taken highest honors in her class in university, she is the baby girl, child of generations of cannibals, picked from the tall grass by Bishop Taylor.—Bruce S. Wright.

The Mission Board Serves Our Churches

Since its organization in 1907 the Mission Board of the Southern Convention has aided nearly 100 of our churches of the Convention with financial assistance for pastors' salary and for church building. Christian Temple, South Norfolk, Newport News, Richmond, Reidsville, Henderson, Bay View, Rosemont, Greensboro, and more than a score of splendid rural churches bear tribute to the sacrificial assistance given by the Mission Board. Without the presence of these splendid churches we should be poor indeed.

The Mission Board could never have done its work if it had not been for the large number of city and rural churches which developed without missionary aid and have given of their means generously. Likewise, the Mission Board helped to develop our women's work, without which the Board could never have done the magnificent job which it has done.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CII

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 6, 1950

NUMBER 14

"He Is Risen"

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Easter is the greatest day in the calendar of every church, because it marks the climax of the glorious drama of the Christian faith—the Resurrection and its promise of eternal life with God to all who believe and love and serve the Christ of Easter.

DR. HELFENSTEIN

The Christ of Easter is the Divine Changer of life, of people and of things. He has changed the lives of countless millions down through the centuries by his divine companionship and love. He has changed homes, communities, and would change the world if but given opportunity.

The Cross did not defile the Christ for a single moment, but the Christ glorified the Cross for time and for all eternity.

His enemies did their worst to him—they cruelly nailed him to a cross—and between two thieves—thus seeking to add insult to injury. They derided him with their slurring remarks. They placed a mocking crown of thorns upon his head. And, though that crown of thorns was pressed upon his brow in cruel and subtle derision; because of his greatness and goodness, that crown of thorns was transformed into The Symbol of his Coronation as The Kingly Savior of Mankind—and the symbol of the coronation of all who pledge life-long allegiance to him and to the Church which bears his name.

Easter declares to the world that, as Jesus arose from the grave and liveth evermore—that those who accept his Lordship in life shall also rise with all the redeemed of earth in the final resurrection of which our Lord's Resurrection was the glorious prototype.

Though the fact of immortality cannot be proved by scientific evidence or by rules of logic—just as the validity of love and faith and hope cannot be proved by scientific evidence or rules of logic, nevertheless faith convinces the believer in God that, as Christ arose from the grave and liveth evermore, that we, too, shall live eternally with him. Faith in the love and power of God and belief in Christ's Resurrection assures the believer that the grave is not the end, but the point of departure between the concluding temporalities of earth and the beginning of life that is endless.

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. Bernard V. Munger of Chapel Hill, on the birth of a son, Robert James Munger, on March 19.

Dr. John R. Scotford, editor of Advantage and author of Church Beautiful, will visit a number of churches in the Southern Convention next week.

Dr. Kenneth Claypool, Congregational minister of Walla, Walla, Washington, spent a week recently as guest of the Elon Community Church.

Has your church nominated its delegate to the Southern Convention? The names of delegates should be sent to your conference president at once.

Supt. W. T. Scott met with the Official Board, the Executive, Finance and Planning Committees of Rosemont Church, Norfolk, on Monday evening.

"The Seven Last Words," a sacred cantata by Isabelle Ritter, was presented Sunday evening by the choir of Cypress Chapel Church, under the direction of Mrs. William Bunch.

Rev. Duane Vore announces that Miss Doris Brinkley, a student of the Julliard School of Music in New York, has been engaged as soloist in the Suffolk Christian Church.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was a recent speaker at the Pfafftown Church. She conducted the morning church service and reviewed the mission study book, Which Way, Japan?

Max Vestal, ministerial student at Elon College, is supplying the Ashboro Church during the absence of the pastor, Dr. F. C. Lester, who is in Florida recuperating from a recent illness.

Rev. Melvin Dollar, Langdale, Ala., graduate of Elon College and former pastor in North Carolina, has accepted a call to Union (Southampton) and expects to begin his work there in May.

The Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines enjoyed a presentation of "Cross and Crown," an Easter Cantata by E. L. Ashford, Sunday afternoon. Mrs. L. D. McDonald directed the chorus of 26 voices.

Mr. Robert C. Poyner, Sr., Chairman of the pulpit committee at Berea, Norfolk, announces that their new pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, occupied the pulpit for the first time Sunday. He succeeds Rev. Ellis Clark, who was called recently to Windsor.

The choirs of the Suffolk Christian Church, under the direction of David Brown Harrell, presented their annual Palm Sunday Cantata, "The Easter Triumph," last Sunday evening. Approximately 70 voices were heard in the presentation.

Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., has planned for Holy Week services at Rosemont Church. Guest preachers for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings are Revs. W. Millard Stevens, O. D. Poythrees and Charles C. Thomas.

Approximately sixty young adults attended the first Young Adult and Family Life Conference held in Winston-Salem, March 25 and 26. Half of these young adults came from our churches outside of Forsyth County. Leaders were Dr. Paul Reynolds and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

If you have nominations for any office of the Southern Convention, send them along to W. J. Andes, 637 South Sunset Drive., Winston-Salem, N. C. He is chairman of the Committee on Nominations. Other members are: R. E. Newton, A. H. McIver, Clyde Fields, H. S. Hardcastle.

Mr. Walter Graham, Executive Director of the Laymen's Fellowship, was the leader during Religious Emphasis Week at Piedmont College, Demorest, Georgia, last week. Mr. Graham comments on his experience: "They almost worked this poor layman to death! I was impressed by the friendliness and possibilities of the students and the fine job President James Walter is doing."

Dr. Paul Hermann Voss, a former minister of our United Church in Raleigh, spoke March 28 in Winston-Salem to a large audience of Jewish men and women. The Hadassah Women of the local Jewish Temple sponsored his coming. Dr. Voss is a writer of note, a lecturer and a world traveler. He had just returned from Europe and Israel. In Israel, he served as a consultant to the Summer Workshop of the School of Education of New York University.

In a recent meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference Ministerial Association, much discussion centered on the "travel expense" of ministers, particularly rural ministers. Most business enterprises pay travel expenses of their men, but the church often overlooks this. One rural minister reported he averaged 2,000 miles a month with not a single cent paid him for travel expenses! All of the travel expenses must come from a small salary. His car must run whether he has clothes and food enough!

Forsyth County young people of our churches met in the Winston-Salem Church, March 26, for an evening of fellowship and inspiration. The twenty-five young people heard Dr. Paul Reynolds as he spoke on "What China Taught Me." Delicious supper was served by two young couples of the Winston-Salem Church: Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Peebles and Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Highsmith. The next meeting of this Forsyth Group will be the last Sunday in June at Miller Park in Winston-Salem. Bobby Jean Kimball of Winston-Salem is the president.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION. MEETING.

The North Carolina and Virginia Ministerial Association will meet at Elon College on April 11 at 10:00 o'clock.

Dr. W. E. Wisseman will give a study for his sermons for September, October and part of November. Dr. Francis Anscombe, retired professor of Salem College, will speak on "Christianity and the H-Bomb."

All ministers are urged to attend this meeting.

REV. W. M. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

CONVENTION MISSION PROGRAM, A CHANNEL OF SERVICE.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, *President,
The Southern Convention.*

It is a joy to help a neighbor. It is a pleasure to do kindly things for him when he is not in need, but it is a real joy to come to his assistance when he needs it. Everyone of us has felt at sometime or another that joy. Just today a friendly neighbor was talking about the joy she got out of helping a family almost next door. She was finer, more unselfish, and a stronger character for the good she had done and was doing. So delighted was she that the recounting of it lighted up her face.

Just so, let us enlarge that circle of help until it takes on the beautiful name of Missions. It is the same spirit of being a neighbor and friend right at our door. We can cultivate the enlarging of our vision until we give a portion to God to be used in helping some home mission work right close by, and at the same time we can get that still broader vision and lay gifts in God's hand to bless the mission work unto "the uttermost part of the earth." Almost anyone can give, yea, will give, friendly little services to a next-door neighbor. There is a charm and thrill about it which should be increased the world over, but to be a follower of Christ, whose mission covers the wide world, and to give largely to an ever-increasing circle is to be an intelligent and far-seeing person.

Our Mission Board is a channel through which we, in our Southern Convention family, can send our goodly gifts to the needy places at home and to the far frontiers where our Jacksons, Riggsses, and many others are working for us and for our Christ. Let us make it a joy to give liberally as God has blessed us—and as we wish him to continue to bless us—to Missions. Let us take it upon ourselves individually to share really, and let us take a pride in seeing how much our local church and our Conference and Convention can do for Missions this year. Through Missions we have the channel through which we can be good neighbors to many people in many parts of the world. God will, for Christ's sake, watch over our gifts and our giving.

MID-YEAR SESSION OF THE VALLEY CONFERENCE.

The 20th Mid-Year Session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference met at Bethlehem Church on Thursday, March 30. Nineteen of the 20 churches were represented by delegates. Unity and enthusiasm are always manifested in the Valley Conference sessions, and the earnestness with which pastors and people support their conference work might well be the guide for all our conferences.

The sessions were presided over by President R. A. Whitten, and the day was filled with plans for strengthening the work of the churches. The theme for the day was "The Power of God" and the reports of the churches, organizations, and pastors revealed a new earnestness to make the Church a working organization through the power which comes from above.

"The Church at Work" was shown by the reports of the churches, followed by an address of Superintendent Scott showing how the local churches work outside their immediate areas through the Convention, the Mission Board, Elon College, the Orphanage, Board of Superannuation, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Women, the Youth, the Laymen and other agencies. Dr. William Moseley Brown, Executive Secretary of the Elon College Foundation, brought a strong message on Christian Education through our College as a manifestation of the power of God, as did Mr.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Again and Finally!

THAT EASTER OFFERING

Decisions may be frightful things. The Christian is one who strives zealously to make decisions that are wise, unselfish and magnanimous. The hope of the world lies with those who increase their percentage of Truly Christian decisions. Many of our decisions, let us remember, may be tempered and tainted by ignorance, prejudice, or selfishness. How often have we decided to "let well enough alone," when we should have decided on some difficult but heroic measure!

Many of our decisions have to do with money. How much should be spent for food, clothes, pleasure? How much should be spent for an "Easter outfit"? How much can one afford? What does one mean by "afford"? Is one justified in spending lavishly for food and clothes when suffering is rampant in the world?

Now we must decide how much or how little to give to the Easter offering for missions. We must decide how much belongs to Caesar and how much belongs to God. We must decide whether to go "all out" for worldly things or for the Kingdom of God.

The Good Samaritan, we are reminded, not only bound up the victim's wounds and placed him on a beast and took him to the inn, but with tender solicitude he projected his care of the poor man into the days ahead by making a financial arrangement.

Our Easter offering can liberate spiritual forces and guarantee blessings for days to come. The multiplication of magnanimous decisions this Easter will bring new life and hope in many parts of the world.

Our nation has been consistently blessed and has escaped the ravages of modern warfare. We can be generous, if we make the Christian decision. Ours, therefore, should be an unprecedented offering for the Christian World Mission.

The writer of that remarkable letter to the Hebrews includes this poignant exhortation: "Wherefore, lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees" (Heb. 12:12). Obviously the Hebrews were discouraged to almost the extent of despair because they did not see how the gospel could offer them anything like compensation for the things they had suffered. The Christian Church has persisted through the centuries, evidence of the fact that faith has overcome despair, strength has overcome weakness.

Do you ever stop to think how the missionaries feel? Do they ever feel they are forgotten, forsaken, fighting a losing battle against communism? Do they, perchance, need to be strengthened by our letters, our prayers and our gifts? Our very Easter offering for missions may help reenact New Testament Christianity. "Wherefore, lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees."

A PLACE TO STAND

One of the keynote addresses at the Midwinter Meetings in Cleveland was given by Dr. Fred Hoskins of Oak Park, Illinois. His message has special relevance for United Evangelistic Advance and for our Christian World Mission. Dr. Hoskins was given a Citation by the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism for "distinguished service as preacher, pastor, teacher, administrator and exemplar of the Christian faith."

Dr. Hoskins, in an introductory statement, sketched an amazing parallel between the situation faced by the Apostles in the First Century and that which faces the churches today in the middle of the Twentieth Century. Those early Christians had their scriptures, their doctrines, their sacraments. There was even then a church with a program. But the Docetists were making inroads and lessening the enthusiasm of the Christian community. The Gnostics were termites in the foundation of the church.

The first Christians believed in the gospel and were prepared to observe the sacraments; honor the traditions and revere the church. "They wanted to turn the world upside down. But they understood a necessity which their predecessors and contemporaries had not so keenly felt: the necessity of showing that behind all this—church, doctrine, programs, sacraments — was a reality.

"So the Evangelists wrote that men might know for sure and have confidence and security. The Evangelists took their stand on the fact of Jesus, on the life of Jesus, on the cosmic truth of Jesus, on the divine orientation of Jesus, on the reality of God's entrance into the affairs of men. With this gospel they confronted the world."

"Not less than Matthew, Mark, Luke or John, do we wish to turn the world upside down, and it needs to be shifted about. To be sure there are folk who have a vested interest in keeping it as it is. There are others who, as much as we, want it to be changed, but who, for a variety of reasons, consider any vital change with such dim prospect that they do not even articulate their hopes.

"We are, I think, completely honest and sincere in our profession of interest in providing justice for the oppressed. We want education for those who walk in the darkness of ignorance. We want brotherhood for all peoples. We are eager to provide health to the sick, poise for the anxious and peace for a war-shriven world. We have felt the push of the Holy Spirit. We have seen the nod of God and we are out to turn the world upside down. We have the will. We have the challenge.

"More yet, we have the resources. We have the tools.

We have our churches. As buildings and as organizations, they are magnificent. We have our Christian institution, schools, hospitals, farms, institutions, in most every country of the world. We have our doctrines, in our estimation the best doctrines in all history. We have our traditions, or do our traditions have us? Some of us have traditions of following tradition and others of us are equally fond of the tradition of not observing traditions. But have them we do and of them we are proud, possibly to the measure of sin.

"We have our Bible and insist it is the ultimate authority in faith and morals. We have our sacraments. We have our messages, manifestoes and resolutions. We will resolve on anything under the sun at the drop of a hat.

The Slowdown

"We want to turn the world upside down. We have the instrument for doing it, but like the Evangelists of a score of centuries ago we find ourselves running into a 'slow down' or 'sit down' strike. This is not a three-day-a-week affair. It is not so formalized, but we find ourselves under the necessity of appealing for some second-mile Christianity. The sad fact is that we are not turning the world upside down. There is little evidence that we have even shaken it loose. The people including us—ministers and officers—simply are holding back, playing it safely. They like it in theory. It is a great ideal, but the practice of it is something else. The real practice of it puts too much of us and of ours in jeopardy. We vote for the ideal 'viva voce,' but not with both hands."

Dr. Hoskins then went on to outline the plans, programs and goals of the Congregational Christian World Mission which he describes as "tools that are right and powerful." Next he outlined the various excellent plans, techniques, training institutes and missionary clinics that have been used in the last 20 years by Congregationalists, and interdenominationally. Yet, in the matter of stewardship the response has dropped steadily until recently. Now there is a gain but "we have gone only the first mile. There is a holding back. We are not yet able to go the second mile with the very best plans."

Next he tackles the field of evangelism saying, "Here and there is a church which is really evangelistic in the best sense, but that church is not characteristic of our fellowship as a whole." Plans, both impressive and challenging are available but "people simply are not risking much of their time or energy or money or reputation on this matter of evangelism, which they say, as an ideal, is excellent. We are holding our own: we have gone the first mile, but who will go the second?"

Church Unity

"Here is an ideal around which all people are united. It is an ideal for which everyone prays. We all say, 'Let us get the churches together. Brother, we then can do something. It is tremendous to contemplate.' It is thrilling to contemplate until you come upon an opportunity in terms of a specific situation—then, well—"That costs too much. There is too much sacrifice required. Too much we prize is put in jeopardy.' Then emerge terrible words like 'ambitious'—'dictator'—'sell-out'—'traitor,' words which ought not even to be known in the fellowship of the Christian Church.

"It is a 'sit down' strike. It is a thrilling instrument we have in our Christian religion. It is big enough; it is strong enough to turn the world upside down, but we aren't fooling anybody. We are not turning the world upside down.

Our Problem—A Place to Stand

"We have the task. We have the tools. We know how to proceed. We are not getting the job done. What is the trouble? Why cannot we go the second mile? I never was able to read Berdyaev with much understanding. I did hear him speak to a little group in Paris one day in words that even I could understand, and cannot forget. 'After many years of contemplation,' he said, 'it is my considered judgment that most of the ills and the difficulties in the world come about because men having adopted excellent means to achieve admirable goals, lose perspective and interchange the means with the goals and soon make the means their chief ends of life and give their primary loyalty to the means rather than to the goals.' I suggest that our problem may be right here.

"We have the challenge. The world is crying for security. It is yearning for light. It is dying for the want of right. Men want to be saved. They want peace. They want life now and hereafter. Men want the church, at least they are willing to try it. They flock into any church which will unbend and say, 'Listen, we have something important for you. You are important to us. You are important to the world. You are important to God. Come and join us.'"

After commending the personnel of the boards and the churches as well as the devoted laymen and the lay women in the churches Dr. Hoskins declared: "We have the tools. It is a mighty lever sufficient to move the world. The trouble is, we are standing on it. You cannot lift with a lever on which you are standing. Our problem was put in classic form by Archimedes, 'Give me where I may stand and I will move the world.' Our problem is to find a place to stand.

A Place to Stand—Jesus Christ

"We have only one place to stand and it is not on the lever by which we work. It is on the fact, on the reality of Jesus. When we take our stand on the Lordship of Jesus, rather than upon some tool we have fashioned, then shall we work with power, then will begin the second-mile kind of religion.

"Every denomination acknowledges it is not the only home of true Christians. Every denomination prays for unity and most every denomination has a standing committee charged with the responsibility of working out practical means for forwarding the unity of Christ's church upon the earth. The difficulty lies in the fact that the denominations take their stand for church unity upon some favorite doctrine or tradition of polity, or upon a method for observing a sacrament. Only when we take our stand on the sole lordship of Jesus Christ will we move with effect for the unity of the church.

"The place for us to stand is on the lordship of Jesus Christ, on the commission that we go into all the world, and to all the world of race relations and their consequent problems, wherever they are found and wherever they are difficult; into all the world of sick people; into all the world of industrial con- (Continued on page 11)

A RECEPTION FOR THE HARDCASTLES.

The members of the Oakland and Berea Christian Churches do nice things and they do them in a nice way. Both churches gave a reception to Mrs. Hardecastle and me, and both occasions were such that our hearts will be warmed upon every remembrance of them.

The reception at Oakland was held in the Sunday School Assembly Room which is also used as a Social Hall. At one end of the room stood a large table in all the glory of lovely flowers, shining silver and sparkling glassware. At the other end of the room stood the receiving line composed of officials of the church, who with us, greeted those who attended the reception. Throughout the evening there was almost a constant line of people coming through the receiving line, not only members of the Oakland and Berea Churches, but the people of the community, and ministers and members of other churches near and far. And all the while there were groups of friendly people here and there, enjoying fellowship, and also enjoying the delicious refreshments which were being served by our lovely women in their pretty party dresses. It was a very gracious act on the part of the church and we thank God for this token of appreciation and friendship.

The Berea folks also gave us a reception, which was held at the spacious and well-appointed Planters Club House on the Nansemond River, on Sunday afternoon. Here again against a background of lovely flowers and a table that was exquisite with its floral centerpiece and its appointments of snow-white cloth, and shining silver sets, members of the official family of the church and Mrs. Hardecastle and I received the steady procession of people who came to extend us a cordial welcome. As was the case at Oakland, in addition to the members of both churches, many people of the community as well as ministers and members of churches outside the community, were among those who came. And as the guests stood around in informal, friendly groups, they were served according to their preference, coffee or Russian Tea, poured by two members of the Berea Church, and delicious refreshments served by young women in their "Sunday best" frocks. It was a colorful, animated scene, characterized by the hum of conversation and the laughter of happy people. It was a social gathering, but like the Oakland reception, it had a religious and a spiritual value. We are deeply grateful for this expression of good will and good wishes.

"The lines are fallen to us in pleasant places" as the Psalmist wrote. For over fifty years at Oakland, and for over forty years at Berea, Dr. I. W. Johnson, ably assisted by his good wife, Mrs. Johnson, has served as pastor, leader, friend and guide. He has laid a good foundation and he has built wisely and well. He and "Miss Bertie" have a firm and deep place in the affections of the people of the communities. They have given Mary and me a goodly heritage. They have labored and we have entered into the fruitage of their labors. We humbly pray that we may be good stewards of this heritage. The people are friendly, loyal, and have a mind to work. There are many open doors of service before us. We are very happy in this new work. We are looking forward to our joint ministry here with high hopes and keen delight.

LIBERTY SPRING BIBLE CLASS MEETS.

The Friendship Bible Class of Liberty Spring Christian Church met Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Harrell. Mrs. Howard Rhodes led the devotionals using as her theme, "In the Strength of His Purpose." Prayer was offered by Charlie Nickols. Solo, "There's a Green Hill Far Away," by Dr. Jesse H. Dollar. Reading, "Risen Indeed," by Mrs. William Harrell. Solo, "He Lives on High," by William T. Harrell.

Mrs. Joseph Savage presided over the business meeting. The treasurer gave his annual report of $106.00 balance in the bank.

The class voted to change their regular monthly meeting from Tuesday night after the third Sunday to Tuesday night after the fourth Sunday in each month.

The class elected the following slate of officers: Mrs. William T. Harrell, teacher; Mrs. Parke C. Brinkley, assistant teacher; Mrs. Howard Rhodes, president; Mrs. William R. Lowe, first vice-president; Mrs. E. F. O'Berry, Jr., second vice-president; Mrs. Moral Bryum, secretary; J. Samuel Turner, assistant secretary; Luther W. Wilkins, treasurer; Mrs. R. Wesley Harrell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Luther W. Wilkins, flower fund treasurer; Mrs. Willie L. Turner, reporter.

The April committees named were: Program—Mrs. Edward O'Berry and James C. Lynch; Flowers—Mrs. Wesley Harrell.

The class accepted an invitation to meet in April with Mr. and Mrs. William R. Lowe at 209 McArthur Drive, Suffolk, Virginia.

Games and contests were played and prizes awarded to Dr. I. W. Johnson, Presley Duke, Mrs. William Harrell, Mrs. Charlie Nickols, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. Luther Wilkins, Mrs. James Lynch, Mrs. W. L. Turner and Eugene Byrum.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to seventeen members and six visitors.

MRS. L. W. WILKINS,

WAVERLY DISTRICT FAMILY INSTITUTE MEETING.

Our Richmond Church was represented at the Family Life Institute was held at Oakland Christian Church of which Dr. H. S. Hardecastle is pastor. The meeting was an outstanding success. The attendance was between three and four hundred alert, forward-looking women representing our churches—together with nearly a score of us pastors. The theme for both morning and afternoon sessions was "Our Family Worship Together." The guest leaders and speakers for the occasion were Mrs. Florence H. Moulton, Congregational Christian Church Missionary from India; Dr. Paul Reynolds, a former missionary of our denomination in China, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. It was really a great occasion.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

HOLLAND CHURCH CALLS MINISTER.

Rev. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., of Providence, R. I., has accepted a call to our church and will begin his work with us on June 1. It will be remembered by many of us that James, Jr., was born here in 1921 while his father—Dr. Lightbourne—was serving the church. Mr. Lightbourne will graduate at Hartford Seminary in May.

Dr. I. W. Johnson, one of our former pastors, is preaching for us during April and May on the following dates: April 2—Communion; April 9—Easter; May 7; May 14—Mother's Day.

Mr. Lightbourne will succeed Dr. Will B. O'Neill who has accepted a call to Sanford, N. C.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

THE CHRISTIAN TEMPLE AND MILLARD STEVENS.

By the invitation of the church and Mr. Stevens I returned to Norfolk and to the Christian Temple for the anniversary service of the opening of the new church. Twenty-six years ago we were putting the finishing touches on the new building, landscaping the grounds, testing out the chimes, tuning the organ, and getting everything in readiness for the first service on Sunday morning. The day was beautiful, and the weather was pleasant—a typical spring day in Eastern Virginia. The people came. They came in great numbers. The church was filled to overflowing. There were more than 1,000 present for Sunday school. Dr. J. O. Atkinson preached the opening sermon. The choir gave a beautiful program of music. At the morning service 86 new members were received into the church making more than 1,000 members received since January 17, 1919. The date of this service was March 19, 1924. The church has enjoyed successes and suffered reverses since that date.

Last fall with the resignation of Rev. Peter Young the Temple found itself without a pastor. There were many applicants and many interviews. For one reason or another no applicant was accepted until Rev. Millard Stevens, formally pastor of the First Christian Church in Burlington, North Carolina, went to the Temple by invitation and conducted a morning worship service. Following that service the church began negotiating with Mr. Stevens. Finally, an invitation was extended and Mr. Stevens accepted. Beginning his pastorate in late fall Mr. Stevens has served until the present time. The consensus of opinion on the part of the church and congregation is that the new pastor is rendering an excellent service acceptable to all. In fact, I have found more accord, more optimism, and greater enthusiasm on the part of the church than I have been able to discover in years. The pastor is happy. The church is happy and the blessings of God are upon them. By cooperation and consecrated determination the church will go forward as never before.

The Christian Temple is located in the heart of a great city. Its field is wide and its possibilities are unlimited. The membership of the church is faithful, generous, and hopeful. They need our prayers, the prayers of the whole church. This is one of our denomination's strategic points. The pastor and church need the encouragement, the prayers, and cooperation of the entire denomination, particularly, in the Southern Convention.

It was a pleasure to be back with the church and friends on this anniversary occasion. Mrs. Smith and I enjoyed the day greatly.

THE GRANDSTAND BURNS.

Sometime in the late '30's the old grandstand that had been standing in the ball park for years burned. The Alumni Association under the direction and enthusiastic leadership of W. Cliff Elder of Burlington, N. C., began rebuilding. The playing field was leveled, lights were installed, grandstand rebuilt, and fences were repaired at a cost of approximately $12,000. The alumni of the college took the responsibility and paid the bills. Later the Burlington Bees, a professional baseball club, was organized in Burlington. Mr. Elder and others again spent considerable money in building bleachers, repairing the playing field, and making other improvements. In consideration of the money that these different clubs had spent the college gave permission for the Burlington Bees to use the park in cooperation with the college for a period of five years without rental. The Baseball Club was to keep the playing field in good condition and the stands in good repair. Everything was moving smoothly.

The college had its opening game with Wake Forest College Monday afternoon of this week. During the game a fire was started in the grandstand from a lighted cigarette. With a bucket of water they thought the fire was out. At the close of the game everyone had gone except the caretaker. The fire which was thought to have been put out burst into flames and under high winds soon leveled the grandstand and one section of the bleachers—a very disastrous fire. The damages were estimated to be not less than $25,000. The stands had been sufficiently covered by insurance but because of depreciation the amount of the insurance by agreement lessened annually—about $12,500 was in force.

In addition to the loss of the grandstand and bleachers, all of the baseball equipment of the Burlington Bees which had been moved to the dressing rooms was also destroyed, and all of the equipment of the Wake Forest team was destroyed. These facts are most regrettable. Plans for the future have not yet been determined.

This is a serious loss to the college. A year ago, the Atkinson House burned. We had plenty of water then and fire companies were able to extinguish the flames before the building was destroyed. As it happened when the ball park burned, the town tank was entirely empty and before anyone could think to turn the college tank into the city lines the fire was out of control completely. Since that date the town has started its new well to pumping and indications are that we will have water to cope with like situations should they occur.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

We are approaching the date for the holding of the biennial session of the Southern Convention. Notice has been given that the college will be expected to make a report to the Convention. This report will deal with the present state of the college and will call attention to its program—immediate and future needs. Naturally, it will deal with finances. We are anxious to make as good a report as possible. This report will be made to the church and will reflect what the church has done for the college. Many of our churches and Sunday schools are doing fairly well in payments on apportionments. Others are not doing so well. I trust that every church will do its share in making it possible for the college to make an excellent report to the Convention. Payments now will lessen the churches' obligations in the remaining months of the conference year. Whenever a contribution is made the college is definitely assisted.

DR. DOUGLASS TO BE CONVENTION SPEAKER.

Dr. Truman B. Douglass of New York City, Executive Vice-President of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches, will speak twice at the approaching sessions of the Southern Convention at Oakland Church. His subjects will be: "Signs of Rebirth in Protestantism" and "Christian Education as Evangelism."

In this important national denominational post, Dr. Douglass is responsible for leadership in the total sphere of activities under The Board of Home Missions in the continental United States, Puerto Rico, Alaska and Hawaii as carried on through the American Missionary Association, the Church Extension Division, the Division of Christian Education, the Ministerial Relief Division, the Pilgrim Press, the Radio Committee, the Commission on Evangelism and the Laymen's Fellowship.

One of the younger church statesmen with a pioneering vision, Dr. Douglass is prominent in national, denominational and interdenominational circles and is active in all efforts to make the church a leader in the solution of social, economic and racial problems. He is a contributor to various religious periodicals and a frequent radio speaker.

In its "modern pioneering" program, The Board of Home Missions under Dr. Douglass' leadership has done remarkable work in the field of race relations; in radio; in aid to State Conferences in organizing new churches in residential communities that have grown up in recent years; in strengthening existing churches in

DR. SANDERSON TO SPEAK AT SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Churches are not only born, but they also die. The mortality rate is something that church statisticians rarely shout about from the house-tops. On the other hand, churches also have a strange habit of proving their autopsies premature and their death records false, says Dr. Ross W. Sanderson of New York City, Director of Field Research for the Congregational Christian Board of Home Missions who will speak at the Southern Convention session at Oakland Church, May 2-4. Dr. Sanderson is giving considerable time this year to studying the churches of the Convention in cooperation with special Survey Committees from each of the five Conferences of the Convention.

Dr. Sanderson was recently appointed Executive Secretary of a new agency called the Joint Commission on the Urban Church which is a "master-plan" designed to eliminate cut-throat competition among city churches and to carry their work into every phase of city life.

This plan to revitalize Protestant city life by establishing a permanent national agency to deal with Protestant city church planning came into being in January 1950 at the National Convocation on the City Church held in Columbus, Ohio. The new body will be sponsored jointly by The Home Missions Council of North America; The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; and the International Council of Religious Education.

Through his writing and his interdenominational studies and surveys in various states, Dr. Sanderson has acquired a position of leadership in the ecumenical movement in America.

Dr. Sanderson's work as Project Director of the Institute of Social and Religious Research from 1929-32 resulted in a volume called "Strategy of City Church Planning."

During the last war Mr. Sanderson was National Church Relations representative of the American Red Cross, did various editorial tasks in connection with the work of the Intercouncil Field Department of the national interdenominational bodies.

Born in Kalamazoo, Michigan, Mr. Sanderson was educated in Michigan schools and at Oberlin College and Seminary. After a dozen years in the pastorate in Ohio and Kansas he became the first Executive of the Wichita Council of Churches and later served in that capacity in Baltimore, Maryland, and in Buffalo, New York.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

When Easter morning comes and we go to church, one of the first things we see and smell are the fragrant Easter lilies. They are so white, so fair and they nod their heads in gentle ways as the breezes or passers-by stir them.

Flowers have often been chosen as symbols for religious persons and the Easter lily is the symbol of Mary, the mother of Jesus. It stands for purity and beauty.

The French people used the lily, too, as a symbol and they came to draw it as a three-petal flower and it was called the fleur-de-lis. The French flag of long ago carried the fleur-de-lis on it and it was under that flag that the young and heroic Joan of Arc fought for her country.

Some times the Easter lily, or Madonna lily as it may be called, is used as a main symbol in a stained glass window. Then again, it is used as a border or as a lesser figure.

Lilies are very symbolic for Easter because of their life cycle. In the winter the life of the lily is contained in the brown, dead-looking bulb. This is true whether it lies on a shelf, is in a pot at the florist's greenhouse or in the yard of your garden. The lily is sleeping and resting through the long winter days. Then suddenly, it feels the warmth and softness in the air and begins to sprout and grow. It pushes green shoots through the earth and reaches skyward. And slowly it grows and develops into the beautiful Easter lily that adorns our churches. So it is with many bulbs and seeds. All winter—rest; then spring—and growth.

It teaches us that God has a pattern of growth for all His universe and the seasons do not fail to come or the flowers to bloom. It is written in the Bible that we should "Consider the lilies of the field" and we do at this glad Eastertime!

GETTING EVEN.

By MARY STARCK KERR.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"I'll get even with him," said Tommy Carroll, showing his mother his arithmetic book from which the protecting cover had been half torn off.

"Who did it?" questioned his mother. "Bill Mack again?"

"Yes," said Tommy. "Bill Mack—the big bully! But I'll get even with him."

"How will you get even with him, Tommy?" asked Mrs. Carroll, so seriously that Tommy looked at her almost startled.

"By doing something to him—hiding his lunch, maybe, or grabbing his homework away from him and tearing it up—anything I get a chance to do to him that will make him sorry."

"But, Tommy, haven't you been answering Bill's tricks that way ever since school began, and does he behave as if he were sorry? It seems to me all that happens he becomes angry and starts something that he thinks is getting even with you."

Tommy was thoughtful. "I believe he does get mad and then plans to do something back to me." Tommy paused. "Mother, how can we ever stop it?"

"Don't you remember anything from Sunday school lessons that might help?" asked Mrs. Carroll.

"Do you mean where it says to do good to those who hate you?" answered Tommy.

"Yes, and there is another lesson telling you that if your enemy is hungry you should feed him and if he is thirsty you should give him drink."

Tommy thought for a moment. "But Bill Mack isn't hungry or thirsty. What could I do for him?"

"I don't know, Tommy, but I know one thing you should not do. Just don't try to get even with him this time. I will mend the book cover and we will say nothing about it."

A few days later Tommy came running in from school, saying, "Mother, may I have a few cookies? Dick Brown and Bill Mack are outside, and we're hungry."

Mrs. Carroll hesitated. Then she went to the phone, and after two brief calls to ascertain that the boys' mothers had no objection to the proposed unplanned lunch, she gave Tommy a paper plate of cookies to take out with him.

At the dinner table that evening, she asked Tommy what had happened to change Bill Mack's attitude.

"Oh, I noticed he was watching out for me. I suppose he was expecting me to do something to get even because he tore the book cover, but I just went around with Dick Brown and didn't pay any attention to him, until I heard him tell one of the other boys his young brother, Henry, was sick. Dick and I decided to save some of our fruit from lunch and take it to little Henry on our way home from school. We did that, and I think it made Bill feel better toward all of us. Anyway, he isn't bothering us any more."

strategic areas; and in work on college campuses.

Dr. Douglass is a member of the Committee of the Department of Research and Education and the Commission on Planning and Adjustment of Local Inter-Church Relations of the Federal Council; Vice-President of the Protestant Radio Commission; Director of the Protestant Film Commission; member of the Executive Committee and West Indies Committee of the Home Missions Council of North America. He is also a member of the Board of Trustees of the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, LeMoyné College, Tillotson College, Marietta College and Drury College.

In the fall of 1945, Dr. Douglass was one of a deputation of seven American Congregationalists who made a trip to Great Britain at the invitation of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. In the winter of 1946 he visited the Congregational institutions and projects on the island of Puerto Rico. Since his election to the Executive Vice-Presidency of The Board of Home Missions he has visited Congregational churches, schools and community centers in over one hundred and seventy-five different localities in forty states.

A son of Iowa, Dr. Douglass is an alumnus of Pomona College, Columbia University, and Union Theological Seminary. He came to his present post from the pastorate of Pilgrim Congregational Church in St. Louis, Missouri. Other pastorates included Upper Montclair, New Jersey, and Pomona, California.

Dr. Douglass was elected President of the Home Missions Council of North America at its Annual Meeting in January, 1949.

He is a leader in the movement for Protestant Church Union and his article in the Woman's Home Companion for December 1949 entitled "Let's Unite Our Churches—Now" created widespread discussion.

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP RALLY.

The Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship held its Spring Rally, Sunday, April 19, at 2:30 p. m., at the Holland Christian Church, using the theme: "Co-Workers and Builders in Christ."

The meeting was called to order by the President, Jack Byrd. Song service was led by Dr. Jesse H. Dollar followed by the invocation.

The Holland young people gave the welcome, while the response was made by the Damascus young people.

Worship service was conducted by the Holy Neck young people.

Roll was called of the churches with 275 young people present.

Following the business session an address was given by Baxter Twiddy, Elon College, North Carolina, about his experience in an Overseas Work Camp.

Miss Martha Brittle sang a solo: "Others."

An offering led by Rev. Duane Vore was taken amounting to $93.87 which will go for the Overseas Work Camp.

Miss Patty Lee Coghill gave a talk about the young people's summer camps and introduced the ministers present.

Mrs. Duane Vore led in a very effective dedication service for the donations from the young people's organization to go to the Work Camp.

The meeting adjourned to have its Summer Rally in July at the Suffolk Christian Church.

Lois Crutchfield, Earle Green, Thurman Wilkins, Dean Carter, Billy Parker, Mrs. Ann P. Umphlett, Mrs. June O. Davidson, Sr., Dr. and Mrs. Luther B. Grice, Marriott Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. George Davis.

SENIOR PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP AT ELON.

Since the first of June, when the Parish House was completed, the Elon College Young People have had a definite place to meet and much interest has been created. The Senior Pilgrim Fellowship meets at the Parish House on Sunday night at seven o'clock with an average attendance of forty.

The officers—Lois Scott, president; Carol Loman, vice-president; Margaret Ann Boland, secretary; Annie Ridge, treasurer—and the chairmen of the four committees of Pilgrim Fellowship met and planned a program booklet of the year's work and a social for each month. The booklet has been one of the keynotes of success to our Pilgrim Fellowship and we recommend this to other young people's groups.

During Religious Education Week, the parents gave a banquet for the group and Rev. Tucker G. Humphries from Reidsville was the guest speaker. Everyone left with a renewed spirit of fellowship and a desire to go forward in the work of the church.

The Young People planned and gave the Christmas program and contributed the offering to the American Missions to Lepers.

On New Year's Eve a Watchnight Party and Worship Service was held at the Parish House and we saw the old year out and the new year dawn its beginning.

We observed Youth Week with a Folk Game Party and two Sunday night programs. During this week a project was undertaken to raise money for recreational equipment, and $33.00 was raised. Two ping-pong table tops have been ordered and Dr. Jesse Dollar, our former pastor, and several men of the church built the stands.

The Young People have been given the responsibility, with the assistance of a committee from the church and the Director of Religious Education, to plan the Easter Sunrise Service. If the weather is favorable the service will be on the orphanage campus.

Our Director of Religious Education, Miss Dorothy Foltz, has been a great inspiration in guiding our activities and projects and to her we are grateful.

flict . . . into all the world of ignorance and into all the world of the nations."

Dr. Hoskins stated it as his conviction that "when we invite people to stand with Christ . . . there will be such an urgent desire to treat Him as Lord that gifts will be poured out in abundance. . . ."

In discussing the subject of evangelism Dr. Hoskins pointedly commented on certain Congregationalists who felt that evangelism was not what they stood for; that instead they had the "intellectual approach," saying, "really in my community there is not any field for evangelism. There are no prospects." To this Dr. Hoskins said:

"This in the middle of the Twentieth Century! A blood-stained, a war-warped, a slave-populated, a class-conscious, a color-segregated, an unbrotherly century. It was for this kind of a world—this kind of a century—that God acted and acts. . . . There is a field for evangelism in your parish until finally it has become the kingdom of God . . . until every soul in it acknowledges His sovereignty; until literally you have gone into all the world, there teaching men how to observe the things which Christ commanded. There is a field until you have gone into all the world of the ill-housed, the ill-fed of your community; into all the world of industry, farming and storekeeping . . . into all the world of education and into all the world of government."

Then Dr. Hoskins underlined the fact that "standing with Christ" requires humility and that only on ones knees does one get the right perspective, toward Christ, toward our fellow men, and toward the work we should be doing in the world.

Often our work seems insignificant and unimportant when we compare ourselves with the immensity of time and the universe, but God gave us our moment on earth to be used in the best possible way.

PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP MEETS AT HOLY NECK.

The Holy Neck Pilgrim Fellowship met last Thursday night with Mary Davis. Billy Parker, the president, presided.

Billy March presented the program on the topic, "Why Was Jesus Crucified?" Those taking part on the program were Lois Crutchfield, Mary Davis, Billy Parker, Nellie Davis, Willis Eley and Billy March. Others took part in the discussion which followed the program. The closing prayer was offered by Dr. Luther B. Grice.

Those present were Mary Ellen Copeland, Harry Lee Weaver, Florine Gomer, Mildred Ann Carter, Mary Davis, Delman Felton, Nellie Davis, AMOS, THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGRAM.

LESSON III—APRIL 16, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Seek the Lord, and ye shall live.—Amos 5:6.

LESSON: 7:7-15; 8:1-3.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 42:1-8.

The Times.

"The times were out of joint," to quote Shakespeare. Not on the surface, to be sure. In fact if you had talked with the religious leaders of Amos' day they would have told you that things were all right, that the nation was prosperous and at peace, that religion was flourishing, and the future looked rosy. If you did not believe it, they would suggest that you drop in at Bethel on some feast day and see the great crowd of worshippers who came to the sanctuary to offer their sacrifices and to worship Jehovah. Take a look at the books of the "treasurer" of the nation and see what a big balance there was in the bank. Take a look at business and see what a boom there was. Look around at the fine homes and the palaces of the ruling classes and see them in their splendor and glory. "We are sitting pretty" they would say.

But that was a surface view of things. Things are not always what they seem or as they seem. There was prosperity and plenty. There was pomp and pageantry in the religious life. There were large crowds at the sanctuary and abundant sacrifices at the feasts. But religion had become formal and futile. Injustice prevailed everywhere. Intemperance and immorality were rampant. Wealth was concentrated in the hands of a few. Self-confidence and pride were lulling the people into a false sense of security. Furthermore the religion of Israel had been corrupted by the inclusion of rites and ceremonies that were crude and even immoral. The nation was riding for a fall. But the leaders, assuming that because Israel was Jehovah's people she would be immune from any evil both from without and within, did not see the handwriting on the wall. And the people did not know it either.

The Man.

"The times were out of joint." But God had a man "to set them right" as Shakespeare also said. The man's name was Amos. He was a real man. He was a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore trees. He lived an out-door life. He was rugged, shrewd, vigorous, vital. He was courageous, not only in a physical sense but in a moral and spiritual sense. He was a keen observer of men and events. His work, out-of-doors and apart from men gave him time to think and to meditate. He had eyes and he used them. He saw beneath the surface of things. His keen eye pierced the thin veneer of religion in his day, and he saw the thinness and the superficiality of it all. When he went to the cities or the larger trade centers to sell his wares he observed closely and when he went back to the solitude of the desert he thought deeply. And when he heard the call of Jehovah he responded readily.

His entrance upon the stage of public life was startling and dramatic. The people were having a big feast at Bethel, the sanctuary of the king himself. Great crowds were there, sacrifices were being offered in abundance, music and singing filled the air. Suddenly a man in a simple garb began to speak. There was something in the man's appearance and in his voice that commanded attention and got a hearing. Soon the whole crowd was listening to him.

The Message.

Amos was clever, very clever. He did not make a frontal attack on Israel. Instead he began to talk about the nations around Israel, began to arraign them for their sins, began to pronounce judgment upon them, one after another. The crowd loved it, and gave hearty assent to what this strange and strong man was saying. This guy really could preach, he had something on the ball, he was giving those folks just what they deserved. Suddenly he turned to Israel. And in words that still crackle and sting after all the centuries he condemned Israel for her sins and pronounced judgment and doom upon her. He revealed the dry rot at the heart of the nation, the dead formality that lay at the heart of religion, the rank injustice characterizing the attitude of the rich and the powerful toward the common people, the certainty of divine judgment for the sins of the nation. It was like a slap in the face, like a stroke of a whip on the bare body. Indeed it was too much.

One of the priests, Amaziah by name, was stung into action. In the spirit of a small boy who says, "I'm going to tell my mamma on you" he sent word to the king about this interloper, this rude, crude fellow who was talking out of turn. He also tried to bluff and bully Amos. He suggested that it might be better, and safer, if he would go back to Judah and peddle his pens. Country yokel that he was, he had no right at Bethel—it was the king's house and the king's sanctuary. "Get out, get going," he said.

But Amos had not been born in the woods to be scared by booby owls. Furthermore he was not taking orders from any subordinate authority. He bluntly told this blustering priest that he was indeed no prophet or even the son of a prophet. He was, as could be readily seen a plain, blunt man, a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore trees. But God had spoken to him and given him his orders. He let it be known that he would obey God and not men, even if it was the priest of the king himself. "Put that in your pipe and smoke it," he said in so many words. "As long as I am acting under orders, I will say what Jehovah commands me to say." "What are you going to do about that?"

The Manner.

The method which Amos used was very interesting and suggestive. He uses what we would call today "visual education." He pictures Jehovah as holding a plumb line in the midst of Israel, thus symbolizing the divine judgment upon Israel. He pictures Israel as a basket of summer fruit, good to look on, but readily subject to spoilation and decay. "The eyes have it." "One picture is worth a thousand words," say the Chinese with characteristic and sound insight. Jesus used this method. He spoke to the people in parables, that is in a sense in pictures or picture stories. Ministers and teachers do well when they use illustrations and word pictures in speaking and teaching. Churches and Sunday schools do well when they use visual education in its many forms in teaching Christian truths.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

THE FAMILY LIFE INSTITUTES. VALLEY OF VIRGINIA.

The first of a series of Family Life Institutes sponsored by the Woman's Board of the Southern Convention was held in the Virginia Valley Conference, March 21, at the Bethlehem Church. Only eleven churches were represented because of bad weather and much sickness in this area. The attendance was not quite as large as anticipated.

Miss Verdie Showalter, President, was presiding. Mrs. E. J. Rohart, Superintendent of Family Life in the Valley Conference, conducted the morning worship, using Deuteronomy 6:4-9 as a base for her wonderful and challenging message. She stated that parents should always keep the teachings of God as the first and most important of all things in the training of our children.

Our own beloved Secretary, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, was with us and introduced the guest speakers of the day, the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Moulton, missionaries to India, and Dr. Paul Reynolds, Secretary of Family Life and Young Adult Work of the Division of Christian Education in Chicago.

Dr. Reynolds' morning message, "Christian Family Life Today," was delivered to an appreciative audience. He also presented the Family Life Exhibit.

The afternoon worship was conducted by the Moultons. Mr. Moulton sang some songs in the Indian language. Mrs. Moulton told of the homes and Christian family life in India.

Miss Virginia Mason of Winchester sang a solo, "The Man of Galilee," which was enjoyed by all present.

Dr. Reynolds' afternoon message, "Home and Church Together," was a challenging message to all and everyone present declared it a great day in our Conference.

VERDIE SHOWALTER,
President.

EASTERN VIRGINIA.

The Family Life Institute in Eastern Virginia was held at Oakland Church on March 23, with 370 people in attendance. This was a high record of attendance, with thirty-eight churches being represented. Only three churches were not represented.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. William T. Harrell, President. The opening meditation, "Christian Family Life in India," was given by Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton, followed by a solo by Mrs. L. W. Vaughan. Dr. Paul Reynolds talked on "Christian Family Life Today" and presented the Family Life Exhibit. Dr. Reynolds and Mrs. Moulton "hit an all-time high with the people" to quote the president of the Conference. The day was considered most worthwhile and well planned.

The afternoon sessions was presided over by Mrs. Garland Spratley, Family Life Superintendent for the Convention. Dr. Reynolds presented "Home and Church Together." The closing meditation and consecration was given by Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, Superintendent of Spiritual Life for the Convention.

The Oakland women did an excellent job of feeding the 370 people, and the day was closed on time and in high spirits. All were enthusiastic about this first departure from the usual Spring Rally Meetings and our emphasis on Family Life, with home and church working together.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The North Carolina women held their Family Life Conference at Elon College on March 28, with about 300 people attending. In the absence of the President, Mrs. F. C. Lester, the Vice-President, Mrs. W. J. Andes, presided.

Opening worship was presented by Miss Frances Thompson, faculty member of the College of Theology, Silliman University, Dumaguete, Philippine Islands. She gave a very revealing picture of "Christian Family Life in the Philippines." Miss Virginia Groomes of Elon College faculty sang "Christ Went Up Into the Hills."

Dr. Paul Reynolds presented in his usual interesting and thought-provoking manner, "Christian Family Life Today," and described the Family Life Exhibit.

After the Districts had met in their separate sessions, reports were heard on attendance and election of officers.

New District Superintendents elected at this meeting were: Mrs. C. A. Balentine for the Raleigh District, and Mrs. R. L. House for the Sanford District. Mrs. O. H. Paris presented plans for the School of Missions to be held June 13-15 at Elon College and urged all to attend.

Dr. Reynolds spoke on "Home and Church Together" and gave some new ways in which home and church can work together. Questions and discussion followed both of Dr. Reynolds' messages. All thought these messages very worthwhile and helpful and the day was considered a very well spent one.

The closing meditation and consecration was given by Mrs. H. E. Robinson, wife of the new minister at Burlington Church. The meeting closed earlier than scheduled, but the women were very glad to have an early start toward home.

Our special thanks and appreciation go to Mrs. Garland Spratley as Family Life Superintendent for the Convention, for her great amount of time and work spent on these Conferences, as well as to the Conference Superintendents of Family Life.

Mrs. William T. Harrell reviewed the home missions study book, Missions at the Grass Roots, on Tuesday, April 4 at 2:30 p. m. at the Holy Neck Christian Church. She also reviewed this book at a luncheon meeting of the Women's Council of the Christian Temple, March 7.

The women of our Winston-Salem Church have recently renovated the pastor's study. Led by Mrs. C. J. Nelson, chairman of the committee, new curtains and shades were bought, new bookshelves built, new rug placed on the floor, new fluorescent light placed on the ceiling, the roll-top taken from the desk and a new paint job for the entire room. The lovely new easy chair will make for many pleasant hours in this delightful room.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Our boys and girls are being made very happy with new clothes and new shoes wherever needed for Easter. Thanks to many kind people who have generously thought of these children who can be made so happy on so little. Did I say "so little," well anyhow you try to buy a suit that will stand being dry cleaned for a boy six feet tall, or shoes for him. Big boys and nearly grown girls can look mighty bad and feel much worse if they have to go with unfitting clothes, or worn out shoes. These boys and girls are a part of our church. They represent our lovely name, Congregational Christian Church, and their training is a responsibility of our church. What we do let us do just as economically as we possibly can, but let us do it well "in His name." Thank you, thank you, for your co-operation and help.

This past week, Mrs. Truitt and I visited the Junior Order Orphanage at Lexington, the Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville, and attended a conference of the superintendents and staff members of the orphanages of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, which was held with the Thornwell Presbyterian Orphanage at Clinton, South Carolina. We came home proud of our own orphanage although our campus was not nearly as well kept, but our children looked just as well to us, and we found that we were well below the average per child cost. One superintendent remarked to me, "Well, you must realize that you may not be helping the children as much as you should if you go too far below the average cost." Here we consider the child first, last and always. He or she is our concern. However, we do not think it economy to let our buildings and equipment go beyond repair.

We trust God to help us know how to do the best possible for these boys and girls. We believe in His gracious guidance. We do not think we have to fight our battles alone. We ask Him daily to guide and keep each child and worker here in His way, and in the spirit of happy, joyous trust we go forth to do the best we can. I thought maybe Mrs. Truitt would not have to work so hard when she came here, but she is right in there doing everything she can for the girls and boys and envisioning buildings in better repair, and the lawn in better shape. If somebody wants to encourage her they may help with funds for travelling our dirt drives, and seed for sowing our campus. I find myself on the job without any reference to hours, as are all other members of our staff. Children are a full-time job for everybody. But they have a way of making everybody happy, especially when we observe the work they themselves do so well. I feel like saying God bless them everyone, and He will.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

LIVING PORTRAITS OF JESUS.

The romance and victory of the missionary enterprise is the story of living portraits of Jesus Christ. Mrs. Judson's lovely portrait of her Master broke down every barrier and enabled her to receive undreamed-of concessions from the Burma king which furthered the missionary cause. Recall Livingstone in Africa—what a portrait of Jesus! Stanley, the explorer, confessed that he was an atheist until he met Livingstone. What made Stanley a believer? The portrait of Jesus he saw in the life of David Livingstone. Just now the loveliest portrait of Jesus in India is mirrored in the life of E. Stanley Jones. But time would fail me if I spoke of John Wesley, who awakened a sleeping nation and a cold and indifferent church; of St. Francis of Assisi, so gentle of heart he called every living thing his brother; of John Bunyan, who went to jail for Jesus' sake; of John Knox, who said, "Give me Scotland or I die"; of General William Booth, who went out into the east (Continued on page 15.)

MID-YEAR SESSION OF THE VALLEY CONFERENCE.

Roy A. Larrick, former Conference President, on "The Laymen at Work."

Miss Coghill and Rev. S. E. Madren announced plans for the youth work this summer in their conference, and the women projected their plans for their annual conference in July. Emphasis was placed upon the sharing of the Church's work through the payment of all apportionments.

It was an inspiration to hear the delegates report briefly on their respective churches: Antioch, "Contacts made with absentee members; Fellowship Supper held (first one) which resulted in a new unity of the Church"; Bethel, "Good attendance at church and Sunday school, missions organized on age levels, plans for building improvement to provide better facilities"; Bethlehem, "Many young people and young married couples give promise of growing church, building committee planning for additional facilities, alternating leadership in Sunday school and training in worship and public prayer"; Beulah, "Church painted and increased attendance"; Concord, "Special attention being given to invalid and elderly people through visitation"; Dry Run, "Community population being reduced because of removals from rural to urban areas, but new people are coming into Sunday school, plans being made to improve building facilities"; Joppa, "Group small here but new interest resulting from improvement of church facilities"; Leaksville, "Three young people at Elon College from the church, new interest in our college, good Sunday school, increased spiritual and evangelistic interest, laymen conducting church services in absence of pastor"; Linville, "Bible story hour for children resulting in better church attendance of children and parents"; Mayland, "Sunday school attendance doubled during the past year, raised $1,300 to complete payment of share on parsonage owned jointly by churches of the parish, plans for new Sunday school rooms"; Mt. Lebanon, "Building plans, emphasis upon evangelism and increased membership"; Mt. Olivet (R), "Thriving community, special Mother's Day program being planned by Missionary Society, building improvement"; New Hope, "Increased Sunday school enrollment and attendance, nearly all members of Sunday school remain for church worship"; Newport, "Best Sunday school in years, giving more generously than in years"; Timber Ridge, "Church making real progress as result of full-time service of resident pastor, building renovation because of damage done by storm, plans for 'activities' building"; Winchester, "New emphasis upon evangelism has brought success and new interest as well as attendance"; Wissler's Chapel, "Work of Sunday school has resulted in renewal of many inactive members, and an increased interest of young people."

We regretted the absence of two faithful pastors: Revs. Clyde O. Koon and R. E. Newton, kept away because of illness.

DUKE ENDOWMENT ALLOTS
MONEY TO NORTH CAROLINA INSTITUTIONS.

Almost $825,000 has been allotted from the Duke Endowment for hospitals and orphanages in the Carolinas, according to an announcement by the trustees.

Trustees of the endowment funds were apportioned for 116 hospitals and orphanages. The money is allocated on the basis of work done in 1949—$1 being allotted for each day of free care.

Eighty-two hospitals in North Carolina received $402,328. Twenty-seven orphan homes were allotted $104,118.

In South Carolina 34 hospitals received $276,561, while $39,847 went to 13 orphanages.

He Cannot Keep One Without the Other

By Charles A. Wells

As we reflect on the enormous potential in atomic power, the gap between our material development and our spiritual progress is revealed in abrupt terms. Man has harnessed the physical forces that rule the universe but he has not found power to rule himself. We have become like a blind man attempting to drive a powerful car. We have great strength at our disposal but lack that slight but incalculable mystery of sight. We have emphasized electronics and neglected ethics. In our frantic effort to keep ahead of the Russians we have fallen behind the ancients who in holy scripture gave us many sublime portrayals of the supremacy of moral and spiritual law. The whole world is waiting for a miracle to come to the hearts of men—a spiritual miracle to match the physical miracle of the atom. It has been the Cross—the teachings, the doctrines it symbolizes—that has brought man his greatest spiritual experience. The problem of atomic control will only be solved by the spiritual miracle and mastery of the Cross.

The Easter Faith

By BISHOP JOHN S. STAMM

President, Federal Council of Churches

Easter is the greatest day of the Christian year, testifying to our faith in the Resurrection of Christ. It is the time when we bear witness to a Divine Power that is sovereign in the universe and triumphant over all the forces of evil and darkness. Easter is an affirmation that the Christ whom we revere is not a dead body turned to dust but a Risen Lord and a Living Presence in our world today.

The Easter faith in God and in the triumph of His holy and loving purpose is the one thing that gives ultimate meaning to human life. If there be no God—no spiritual purpose at the heart of the universe—then our existence is nothing but a meaningless accident and all our moral struggle comes to naught. To lose faith in God is to lose the conviction that our lives have any significance or that, in the end, it makes any difference what we do.

No great civilization of mankind has ever yet been built on an atheistic basis. There is no reason to believe that a materialistic philosophy can provide an enduring foundation for society today. Certainly our American faith in democracy has had its historic roots in faith in God. It was because our forefathers believed in God that they also believed that men are "endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights." Our struggle for human freedom has also been inseparable from our religious heritage. It is because man is a child of God that he has a freedom which no earthly power may rightly take away.

There is a word in the 97th Psalm that summarizes the relevance of our Easter faith: "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice." If God reigns then evil is domed. If God reigns, we can trust in the final victory of good. It is the fact of God's reign over all the affairs of men that gives us ground for rejoicing in spite of all the chaos of our time.

News Flashes

Our Richmond Church reports six members joining on Easter Sunday.

Rev. Fred Allred has accepted a call to serve Hank's Chapel. He succeeds Rev. Max Welch.

The Christian Temple, Norfolk, has a new parsonage for the Rev. and Mrs. W. Millard Stevens.

The parsonage at Franklinton is being renovated. Rev. Carl Wallace expects to move in during June.

The Editor is attending the annual meeting of the Associated Church Press being held this week in Syracuse, New York.

The Rev. Roy D. Coulter reports seven members received and $83.00 raised for missions at Timber Ridge Church on Easter Sunday.

The Christian Orphanage has prepared a spring program. Churches desiring this program should communicate with Supt. Truitt.

Rev. H. G. Councilll spoke on "John the Beloved Disciple" during the Good Friday service at Epworth Methodist Church in Norfolk.

The Spring Rally of the North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship meets at First Church, Burlington, Sunday, April 16, at 2:30.

Rev. Duane Vore preached Sunday morning at an Easter Sunrise Service held in the Suffolk Christian Church, then at the regular morning and evening services.

Six members were received, four babies christened, a new brass cross, candlesticks and collection plates were dedicated at the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines on Easter Sunday.

Funeral services were conducted for Mr. W. A. Spivey at First Church, Portsmouth, on Thursday of last week by the Revs. Stanley Carne and Herbert Councilll. Mr. Spivey was for many years a deacon in the Portsmouth Church.

Rev. Joseph Moulton, an active missionary and enthusiastic Rotarian in India, supplemented his numerous engagements in our churches by addresses in Rotary Clubs in Burlington and Southern Pines.

Rosemont Church, Norfolk, had varied services on Easter Sunday. The Junior Choir participated in the sunrise service. Rev. H. G. Councilll gave the morning sermon and the Senior Choir presented a cantata, "The Cross Triumphant," by Wilson at the evening service.

Our South Norfolk Church, of which Rev. O. D. Poythress is the minister, was the scene of multiple services Sunday. The young people of the churches of South Norfolk held their Easter Sunrise Service at the church. Mr. Poythress sang "The Holy City." Sunday School and the morning church service were followed by a sacred cantata at 5:00 p. m. The Junior Choir appeared in new robes during the morning service.

THE HARDCASTLES GET A NEW CAR, TOO.

If these folks in the Oakland and Berea pastorate keep on, I will have to get a dictionary with some words for, or new ways of saying, "thank you." They have already done so many nice things for us since we came on the field that we have already exhausted the usual forms of thanking them. Recent issues of THE SUN have mentioned these things.

But their last act was the most generous and gracious of all. Acting "under orders" I reported to the office of Mr. Herman Jones of the Tyree-Jones Motor Company in Portsmouth, Virginia, on Thursday afternoon, and there in the presence of two members of the Berea Church, acting for a small group in both churches, I received from Mr. Jones the keys to a new 1950 DeLuxe Ford. The car was equipped with heater, radio and fine seat covers. The car is powered by a V-8 motor and is finished in black, thus making it a combination of power and beauty. It constitutes a lovely gift of long-lasting qualities.

Perhaps it should be said that there was no general solicitation of funds for the purchase price of the car. In view of the fact that the churches are about to purchase a parsonage, it was felt by the little group which sponsored the project, that it might militate against the latter project if a general solicitation was made for the car. Accordingly, only a comparatively few people in each church, and a few friends outside the church were approached. But the response was so hearty and generous that the Committee readily raised the necessary amount to buy the car.

Needless to say, Mary and I are delighted with the new car. After riding in our Ford for over thirteen years, we are in a position to enjoy the comforts and the conveniences and the performance of this new car. It would have been a gracious and generous act if the car had been given to us after we had been on the field for several years. It is all the more gracious and generous that the folks have given it to us at the beginning of our ministry here.

I was a very happy man as I drove home in that new car on Thursday evening. I was also a very humble man. And even as my heart was filled with gratitude, my eyes were filled with tears, as I thought of the goodness and the generosity of these good people who had given the car to us, and of the fine spirit in which it was given.

I accept that car as a sacred trust. I have covenanted to use it for more effective and fruitful service in the Master's name in my churches, and for the Kingdom of God.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

INVALID'S BIRTHDAY COINCIDES WITH EASTER WEEK.

Easter season bespoke special significance this year! During the week preceding Easter Sunday, Holy Week services were conducted each evening at the Congregational Christian Church in High Point, climaxed by a city-wide union service on Good Friday, at a nearby church. Rev. Mr. Weldon Madren secured a film of our mission work, plus several outstanding speakers for the various services.

Wednesday, April 5, marked the sixty-second birthday of Rev. B. J. Earp, the church's pastor emeritus. It seemed rather fitting that the day came during the latter part of the Lenten Season. On Wednesday a deluge of birthday greetings poured in. Probably the message that pierced closest to the invalid's tired heart was a telegram which came from a lovely little girl down in Winterpark, Florida, where her dad is undergoing a rest treatment. A few years ago this young lady, Miss Elizabeth Lester, and Mr. Earp learned, to one another's delight, that they both had the same birthday.

Then, too, on Wednesday, the Sunday school class of Miss Louise Patton came in bringing with them a white

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

BIRTHDAY COINCIDES WITH EASTER WEEK.

birthday cake which Mr. Earp declared tasted mighty fine.

The Ladies Missionary Society sent Mr. Earp a regal Easter lily. There were personal gifts, too, and visitors and telephone calls. One surprise package contained $20.00. Someone overheard the minister say that many folks become so busy that they didn't even stop to celebrate their own birthdays. There was a twinkle in his eye, as if he had in mind that he himself had had to undergo a year's lingering illness in order to learn the meaning in the modern refrain: "Enjoy yourself; it's later than you think."

One of the recently delightful visits to our home was that of Mrs. Bessie Hyatt and her mother who live in Newport News, Virginia. They were on their way to Southern Pines where they will visit her daughter, June Joy House.

Easter Sunday morning dawned an ideal day. Mr. Earp was confronted in the early part of the morning by his grandson, who said, "You see, Grandpa, if you'd get out of that bed, Peter Cottontail would bring you an Easter basket." Clutched tightly in the little fist was the handle of a basket, filled with purple grass, on which lay an egg—smashed and broken—but as the upturned face made the assertion to the white-haired man, suddenly we all knew that Easter is indeed a glad day of faith, hope, and resurrection.

STRUCTURAL GREATNESS

Every age has its architectural blunders and triumphs. Fortunately, modern advances in construction and the spread of architectural knowledge is gradually minimizing the blunders in the construction of churches.

The dedication of the $4,000,000 religious center of the Boston University Charles River campus is a current example of architectural triumph. The report of a message by President Daniel L. Marsh carried this fine statement: "Moral progress is impossible apart from the habitual vision of greatness." More specifically he added: "Believing that it is a very large part of a university's business to hold before its students the vision of greatness until that vision becomes habitual, we have tried to make the physical development of our new campus contribute to a vision of greatness."

Churches might take a leaf from the notebook of President Marsh. Religion, we are told, is caught as well as taught. The churches must embrace and utilize all the skills of religious education, all the known factors which promote greatness. Architecture is a major factor in this factor. The church which builds well holds before its people, both young and old, the habitual vision of greatness.

Across America there is a resurgence of interest in church architecture. This spells hope for those interested in worship and Christian education. The church and the university should work together in lifting the standards of architecture.

A GREAT LIFE

Congratulations! You were born at the right time. New figures from the U. S. Public Health Service reveal that new drugs, new techniques of surgery and recent scientific discoveries add greatly to your chance of living to middle age and beyond.

A baby born 50 years ago, for example, could expect to live—on an average—only until he was 48 years old. The child born in 1948, however, could look forward to living 66 years, and the span is up still more since then. Diseases of infancy and childhood have been controlled so well by new drugs, sanitation, etc., that life expectancy of children has been lengthened by a third.

How wonderful! Your chances of living for half a century are getting better all the time. Most childhood diseases are through, as dreaded killers. Infectious diseases that were killing people at the rate of more than half a million a year in 1900 have been brought largely under control. Death rate from all infectious diseases together has been reduced by 87 per cent. It has been cut nearly in half since 1940 alone. Now, a wider use of new "wonder" drugs is reducing it still further.

Childhood infectious diseases have been reduced from a death rate of 95 per cent in 50 years—diphtheria, scarlet fever, whooping cough, for example, have become rare as causes of death. Diphtheria would be killing 60,000 a year if the 1900 rate prevailed today. Scarlet fever once caused 14,500 deaths a year. Instead, it killed 20 in 1948. New and more powerful drugs are bringing further decline in death rates from infectious diseases; some of which will in time be wiped out.

Yes, this is a grand time to be alive. Yours should be a full, rich and useful life. Barring accidents, you have many years in which to enjoy life. The knowledge you acquire now will help you through many years. Home, school, church and business offer you many chances for great and useful living. Thrilling adventures, honorable vocations, and worthy causes await you.

And yet, the test of life is not the number of years you live, but the kind of life you live day by day. Jesus lived for 33 eventful years. Methusaleh lived nearly a thousand. In the words of another: "May you live all your life!"

TO THE EDITOR

I just want to send you a word of thank you for The Christian Sun, and especially for your lucky Number 13 of March 30. Let me say also that Dick Jackson is exactly right. The hope of the future for Shaowu is the young or younger Chinese workers who are coming along. I know everyone of these men, although I had no extensive acquaintance with the last two. I am glad that Dick put Chang Wan-wei at the head of the list. Not so young now; and not highly educated—but he has a humble and earnest spirit. I was impressed with his quiet helpfulness on every side when I was in Shaowu. He had no grudge or jealousies. He was working earnestly already in his own church as a layman. He reached out eagerly for new opportunities in the same lines when the Jacksons came. As Dick says, "He has a passion for helping others to know the good news of the gospel."

I might remark on some of the other men. Ch'iu Shan-pao is certainly one of the ablest of them. He has a lovely wife whom he helped to support as she took her college course in Fukien Christian University. Mrs. Chandler and I were very pleased to have the people in Hank's Chapel take up our suggestion eagerly last May, to give support to this couple in solid church work. The Yangkao church, where they now are, should be energetic and should be supporting their own minister and sending out others! Perhaps the Ch'ius will go on to some other important center before long.

There will be more reports to come to you from your Shaowu workers. I am glad to say that Dr. Harold Matthews is now in this country. I am sure that he will have a lot of interesting things to tell us about Foochow and the whole situation in South China.

The New Day in Missions

Department of International Justice and Good Will of The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America

Spiritual Isolationism.

Christians of the West are guilty of the vice of ecclesiastical isolationism. We spent hundreds of millions of dollars for our own ecclesiastical comforts and self-interest while to the unnumbered hosts of God's children in China, India, Africa and Southeast Asia we toss a few coins, much as the rich man at his banquet table tossed a few crumbs to the beggar at his feet.

The impact of history in the making should tend to develop among Christians of the West a far greater devotion to the world mission of the Church. The persecution of Protestant pastors in Bulgaria, the imprisonment of a Lutheran Bishop in Hungary, the denial of full religious liberty in many of the Communist dominated countries and in Spain, Italy and Latin America, and the widespread threat of a pagan and vulgar secularism should bring home to Christians of the West a better understanding of their duties and responsibilities respecting the Christian enterprise throughout the earth.

Penny Pinching.

Should this happen the penny pinching conception of the propagation of the gospel in lands other than their own would be repudiated. The "Missionary barrel" into which Christians, in times past, dropped an occasional copper for the purpose of exalting the name of Christ, would vanish from the mantelpiece.

In 1948 the foreign boards and missionary societies of the larger and more influential denominations in the United States spent, for the evangelization of India, Pakistan and Ceylon some $6,000,000; for China, Manchuria and Formosa $8,000,000; for Korea $500,000; for Japan, including Okinawa, $1,000,000; for Southeast Asia, including Burma and Ceylon, $2,000,000, or a total of some 17 or 18 million dollars. According to the report of the United Stewardship Council, as of December 1, 1949, 47 denominations in the United States spent $756,000,000 for congregational expenses. Seventeen million dollars to evangelize the East where lives half the population of the world, while for ourselves we spent 756 million dollars.

This is a scandalous situation. This is spiritual isolationism of the rank-est sort. Many people of our churches believe that Communism, as a God-denying philosophy, is the most serious threat to Christianity in two thousand years. They appeal to the government to do something to stop the onrush of Communism. It must be said that the record of the government in this respect is better than the record of the churches. For the European Recovery Program the government has been spending some four billion dollars a year to create in Western Europe conditions conducive to the spread of democracy. This represents, in round figures, about one-tenth of the federal budget.

Again, referring to the statistical table of the United Stewardship Council, each member of the Congregational Christian Churches contributed last year for all purposes, approximately 28 dollars. Of this amount 77 cents was earmarked for the world mission of the church. That is to say, Congregational Christians spent 35 times more on their own spiritual enrichment than they spend to exalt the name of Christ throughout the world.

In 1949 Congregational Christians spent $27,000,000 for the maintenance of their churches in the United States. The year before, in 1948, Congregational Christian Churches spent for the world mission of the Church, $284,000 in India, Pakistan and Ceylon; China, Manchuria and Formosa, $307,000; Japan and Okinawa, $91,000; Southeast Asia $93,000. For themselves, $27,000,000, and by contrast, $775,000 for others.

Christians declare that in the gospel of their Risen Lord there can be found the spiritual dynamics capable of establishing peace and goodwill throughout the world. And yet to carry this Gospel to the millions of Africa, the Middle and Far East, Christians contribute of their earthly substance the equivalent of the price of a bottle of hair tonic. How can the world be won for Christ on this basis?

The answer is simple. It can't. It is not argued that you can measure the thrust of Christianity in terms of dollars and cents. Nor can allegiance to Christianity be bought with silver and gold. But if the measure of our giving to the world mission of the church is a reliable index of our commitment to the global implications of our faith, then it must be said that Christians of the West do not practice what they preach.

From the standpoint of personnel there has been since 1913 a steady decline in missionary personnel. There are, of course, compensating factors that must be kept in mind. During this period there have been two world wars. Also, places once occupied by missionaries have been taken over by the leaders of the younger churches. Notwithstanding these facts, personnel for the world mission of the church has been and is declining.

These statistics do not spell the language of Christian reformation on a global scale. Accordingly, during the next 50 years one of two things will happen. Either the churches of the West will appropriate a larger proportion of their total giving to the world mission of the Church and at the same time will make more effective their enlistment efforts for missionary personnel or the world mission of the Church will suffer irreparable damage.

The whole of Asia is in ferment. So, too, is the Middle East. So, too, is Africa. The millions in these areas are in revolt. They want food. They want raiment. They want shelter. They want security. But more than all else they desire for themselves a sense of dignity, and a recognition of their work as members of the human family. It is precisely at this point where Christianity will be crucially challenged during the next half century. This challenge cannot be met by penny pinching, nor by outmoded missionary parcels nor by duplex envelopes in one side of which, for ourselves, we put our silvers and our gold, while in the other side, for others, we put our copper coins.

The Next Fifty Years.

During the next fifty years the word "foreign" will, in all probability, drop out of the vocabulary of the Church. Boards of Foreign Missions may well disappear. This will be in line with the rediscovery of the one world as preached by Christ and proclaimed by the Apostle Paul.

There are not two worlds, one pagan and the other Christian. There are not two worlds, one East and the other West. There is only one world. What happens in Korea, the Balkans, Indonesia, Indo China, Africa and India is of vital concern to the peace and prosperity of the United States. The economic health of Europe and the under-developed areas has a direct bearing upon the economic well-

THE YOUTH CRUSADE OF 1949.

By REV. PETER J. JANSEN.*

Under the Student Work Camp program 97 students from America engaged in creative, hard physical work, and helped enrich the spirit of brotherhood, both in themselves and in students, and others they grew to know during the summer of 1949. It was a fascinating experience for me as an American pastor, given three months' leave of absence by my church, not only to see but also to share. It has its hours of thrill, delight, and consciousness of achievement, as well as hours of tired exhaustion, aching muscles, frustration, and many hours of humbling to the Spirit. Imagine, if you will, students coming from Switzerland, Holland, France, England, Madagascar, Italy, Greece, Denmark, East Germany, the French, British and American zones of Germany, the Philippine Islands, Canada, and United States—North, South, East, West and Middle West. They wished to do something concrete about a faith which they had been taught that they might share it with others because it was worthy enough in their eyes, and because it would break, as no other way known to man, some of the walls of misunderstanding that continue to drive men to distrust, to hate and to war. Such a pilgrimage has never before caught the imagination of young people as has this idea of a Student Work Camp in war-destroyed lands. By giving, rather than by taking away, through sweat, blood and hunger, these modern Christians were sharing and spreading the 20th Century Gospel of Jesus Christ, and they did it magnificently.

It is not easy to go to a land where the language is strange, the food completely different and served at different hours of the day, sanitary conditions primitive to the point of revolting, transportation facilities extremely crowded, clothing styles and living patterns of individuals and families startling, to say nothing of going into a Germany which so recently was a bitter enemy. A land where soldier and civilian alike were regimented and encased in one thought pattern; where the psychology of defeat prevailed, and blame was directed first to the "stupid" failure of their leaders in losing the war, and second, to their conquerors: where lived a people unhappy to be divided into three zones ruled over by four victors, where a currency reform has added the final blow to an economy where in one lifetime people have twice lost everything and begun again at the bottom. Add the fact of a shattered Germany, for the destruction by bombing wrought by Hitler's Luftwaffe was amateurish compared to obliteration bombing (see Nuremberg, Heilburn or Stuttgart) of thousands of planes which completely dissolved into rubble block after block, mile after mile, of factory, of shop, of residence. As a result broken homes, loved ones killed, migrations out and in to Germany, as well as within, fear of being a battleground for the next war if it comes, food, clothing, shortage and lack of essentials such as coal, children not in school at all for three years now, and attending a couple of hours a day. This is the Germany seen by young Americans who still are baffled and dazed by the aftermath of years of war preparation and of war itself.

They came—filled with injections against disease and injury, laden with a framepack filled with work clothes, leather gloves, sleeping bag, Bible, notebook and camera, some having deposited years of savings in New York to cover costs of boat and train ticket, food at the work camps ($1.00 a day and food sent from France to German camps in tins and cartons) and $30.00 in their money belt for sightseeing and emergencies. They landed in England and France, bewildered by language, and by ancient (worn and chipped) relics of past generations, yet eager to take hold of the tools and set things right. Here was a G. I. who vowed four years before that if he lived through the terrors of infantry service on that fateful march across Germany he would one day come back and help rebuild what he himself had helped destroy. (It took two full years of careful saving to garner the $700.00 needed.) Here a girl, secretary and leader for years in Church and Scout work, letting flow a spirit and a way of life that inspired all. Here a young missionary English teacher in South Europe, an American girl, giving her only vacation to serve a war-devastated land.

In the Camps there emerged ways of effective service because individuals had friendly spirits, growing friendlier, sensitive and true concern for people as people, growing more sensitive. Here were Bible study groups trying to catch the teachings of Jesus and the message of God as it came once to seekers in Biblical times, and after periods of manual labor, and when aching muscle and panting breasts shoveling against the rubble of war's destruction, mixing mortar and carrying rocks to build again the dwellings of men had drawn persons together. Hand holding hand around a table with black bread and beans and dried fruit to give common thanks to God for life and health. All these were but signs of some new program God is awakening in human hearts because of this great concern that His children live in peace together. As man creates the potential for destruction perhaps God's spirit can also be awakened in enough human lives to fully satisfy man's ever-present and haunting desire to live fully and abundantly.

The modern student Christians of 1949, in Europe's Work Camps have pointed a way to Peace and Good Will, to the Kingdom of God operating in this life!

W. N. C. YOUTH FELLOWSHIP SPRING RALLY.

On April 30 the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship will hold its annual Spring Rally at Hank's Chapel Christian Church.

For a good number of years the young people have been holding rallies each fifth Sunday. The rallies in the past have been held in the afternoons and evenings, but this Spring Rally will be different. The young people have dreamed for a long time of having an all-day rally, and this year their dreams are coming true. The Rally will begin at 10:30 a. m. and last until around 5:30 p. m. Start planning now for this event because this should be the best Rally ever held in our Conference.

The program has been well planned by the officers, and they feel sure that you will enjoy it very much.

Dr. Truitt, the superintendent of Elon Orphanage, will speak to the young people at the morning service. Everyone is looking forward to hear-

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY OF THE BURLINGTON CHURCH VISITS ELON COLLEGE.

Sometime ago Mrs. H. C. Pollard, Sr., was scheduled to speak to the Woman's Auxiliary of our Burlington Church on our colleges. She knew Elon College. She was born and reared near the college and is an alumna of the college. When she began speaking about our colleges the whole time was consumed about Elon. She was so enthusiastic in her presentation and the good women were so interested in it that the suggestion was made that they visit Elon College and see for themselves. Mrs. Pollard had told them things about the college that they never knew. There was an interruption in the progress but finally the idea matured and on Monday, April 3, these visitors came to our campus. A tour to the grounds and buildings was conducted by students. Student hostesses received them in the Listening Room where punch was served which was provided and presided over by Mrs. L. E. Smith. Afterwards, they assembled in the auditorium where Fred Sahlman, a student, gave an organ recital. This was a very enjoyable occasion. We are greatly indebted to Mrs. Pollard for the idea of having our friends from Burlington visit us. We are always happy to have visitors at the college, particularly, those who are interested in its progress and well being.

Perhaps the ladies of our other Congregational Christian Churches near Elon College, or at a distance, would be interested in paying us such a visit. This is a cordial invitation to you to come. The invitation is also extended to the ladies of the churches of all denominations particularly those who are near the college. Just write us a card and let us know when you could come and every possible arrangement will be made for your comfort and pleasure. We were happy to have our friends from Burlington visit the college.

DR. WALTER C. RAWLS AT ELON COLLEGE.

In response to the invitation of the Board of Trustees of Elon College which was approved by the church, I arrived on the campus of Elon College on November 1, 1931, to assume the presidency of the college. In the spring of 1932, Walter C. Rawls, then of Suffolk, called by phone to say that he would like to donate a television set to Elon College and if acceptable he would bring it up the following week and give a demonstration. Mr. Rawls was at that time manufacturing television sets. This is reported to be the first television set manufactured for commercial purposes. Mr. Rawls came to the college and presented the set which is still in possession of the college.

Dr. and Mrs. Rawls, now of St. Louis, Mo., visited the college in March. We were delighted to have them as our guests. On the morning of March 22 at the chapel hour, Dr. Rawls presented the college with a beautiful oil painting representing a campus scene. Painting is a hobby with Dr. Rawls. He operates a brokerage business for a living and paints at his leisure. The painting is on the best of material and is non-perishable. The students and faculty received this gift with appreciation and enthusiasm. It will be displayed at a prominent place in the college.

Dr. Rawls has expressed great interest in the college practically all of his life. He has been a generous supporter of its causes. In the last effort to clear the college of its debts he gave $5,000.00. Since then he had made modest contributions. He is making a contribution to the gymnasium fund and plans to make a substantial gift to the college later.

Dr. Rawls is a native Virginian and a life-long member of the Christian Church. He now holds a very important position in Pilgrim Church, St. Louis, Mo., which is one of the great churches of our denomination. It was a real pleasure to have Dr. and Mrs. Rawls visit the college again and they are welcome at any time it is convenient for them to visit us.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Shortly after the founding of the college the late Dr. W. W. Staley presented to the Southern Convention a resolution for the support of Elon College by the church. The resolution authorized the Convention to apportion to the several conferences constituting the Convention a definite amount for Elon College. The amount apportioned to the conferences was in turn to be apportioned to local churches. This was an effective plan for the beginning of the support of Elon College on the part of the church. All through the years this plan has been followed. It has proved to be of great assistance and perhaps the most practical way for the church to give annual support to its college. At the approaching session of the Convention the matter of support of the college will be before the Convention for disposition. Because of the interest that the Convention has in the college we are all confident that ample provisions for its support will be provided. At present, the amount apportioned totals $15,000. This amount should be increased. The college will be interested to know what plans the Convention will make for its continued support.

When the hydrogen bomb is made, there will be in men's hands weapons far more destructive than those which blasted into ruin two Japanese cities. Now that the race to make these super bombs has been started it will only end either by their use in war or by international agreement to prohibit or control their manufacture. This is the only alternative—destruction or agreement. It is the duty of all who value our civilization to urge, while there is time, the outlawry and control of this devilish weapon.—Archbishop of York Cathedral, Liverpool, England.

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

PHILOSOPHY OF MISSIONS UNDER STUDY.

Protestant mission schools in Africa need to reorient their curricula in order to channel African native ambitions along practical lines and into more productive occupations, Dr. Walter C. Lowdermilk, former missionary educator in China, and noted soil conservationist, declares.

Addressing a luncheon sponsored here by Agricultural Missions, Inc., an affiliated agency of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, Dr. Lowdermilk said that mission schools along with the "false goals" set up by the white man in Africa, have stimulated native ambitions for careers as politicians, clerks and white-collar workers at the expense of more practical professions.

Reporting on a ten-month, 40-thousand-mile trip to Africa and Israel, Dr. Lowdermilk said that "in Africa the majority of natives have been taught to emulate the white man, who has operated on a kind of 'no physical work program' as a desirable goal."

"As a result, the natives do not have any desire to enter such professions as civil or mechanical engineering, agricultural engineering, or just plain dirt farming," he continued. "This kind of attitude, for which some mission schools are partly responsible is inadequate for an intelligent adjustment to the pressing problems of the African environment."

In suggesting a change of emphasis in mission school teaching, Dr. Lowdermilk asked the Church to stress a theology that "teaches we must be born again out of philosophy of economic exploitation into a philosophy of conservation."

Regarding his study of soil conditions in eight African countries, on which he reported to both the British Colonial Office and Agricultural Missions, Inc., Dr. Lowdermilk observed that in "too many places while the souls of the African natives may be going to heaven their soil is going to hell."

Characterizing Africa as "a land where so little is being done in the face of so much," Dr. Lowdermilk recommended that governments and missions undertake the development of "rural reconstruction pilot projects."

Such projects he said might well serve as a part of President Truman's widely discussed Point IV proposal. He said that these projects should aim to increase the productivity of the land and of the individual; stimulate the manufacturing of equipment, such as vehicles, tools and farm implements, and seek to improve village facilities, such as transportation, hospitals, roads, water supply and sanitation.

"The condition of the land under use becomes the measure of any government, religion, educational system—in short a people's culture," he said. "Unless people cooperate with God's forces as exemplified in nature, they are doomed to failure. Scriptures written in the land testify to a people's stability."

He stressed the need for a larger recruitment of agricultural missionaries to serve "as pioneers in building the Kingdom of God on this holy earth." He reported that in parts of Central Africa, where Protestant missions own large tracts of land, not a single agricultural missionary is available to demonstrate what can be done with the land.

Dr. Lowdermilk, who was accompanied by his wife, visited the Gold Coast, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Southern and Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, the Union of South Africa, Algeria and Israel.

LAY MISSIONARIES APPOINTED.

Louis Allen Bergdolt, World War II veteran, and his wife, Doris Schnelle Bergdolt of St. Joseph, Michigan, and Evansville, Indiana, with their two small daughters, Beth Marie and Antia Louise, have just been appointed as lay career missionaries for Christian educational work in Southern Rhodesia, Africa, by the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Massachusetts. It is hoped that the Bergdolt family will sail for their field in July. For a year before taking up their permanent duties they will study the native tongue, Chindau, probably at Chikore, Southern Rhodesia.

Mr. Bergdolt, son of Louis F. Bergdolt, 314 Hess Avenue, Evansville,

Indiana, was born in Evansville, 26 years ago and spent three and one-half years as a U. S. Army Air Force officer serving as a meteorologist. During that time he was in Africa, Arabia, and Turkey. On his discharge in 1946 he returned to Evansville College to resume his education which was interrupted by the war and to work for a Bachelor degree in Secondary Education. Since then he has done practice teaching in the Evansville Public Schools and for two years has been on the faculty of the St. Joseph Junior High School in St. Joseph, Michigan.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bergdolt are musicians, he having played in bands from the age of 12 and for three years prior to World War II as a member of the Evansville Philharmonic Orchestra. Mrs. Bergdolt is an organist and choir director. Both the Bergdolt family are leaders of Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, 4-H Clubs, and various church youth groups.

Although always active in his home church, Mr. Bergdolt's special interest in Christian missionary service was stimulated while stationed in the Middle East with the Armed Forces at which time he visited American Board Schools in Turkey.

"The fellowship, the happiness and sincere purpose of all the teachers and administrators there in helping others greatly impressed me. It became my hope that I could some day participate in similar work in sharing experiences with people of a foreign land. . . . It seems to me that religion should embrace all of life. . . . In daily work I feel I ought to do that which not only builds up my character, but also I ought to aid my fellowmen in building their characters so that they, too, may have a more abundant life. As a teacher I can share with others those things I hold prime in the building of character."

KYOTO STORY CONTINUED.

Miss Frances B. Clapp of La Mesa, California, and Portland, Oregon, Congregational Christian missionary of music at Doshisha University, Kyoto, Japan, sailed Thursday, March 23, from Los Angeles, California, on the SS President Cleveland bound for her post in Japan after furlough in the United States.

She first went to Japan in 1918 under the American Board when Japan was making great progress toward liberalism and economic development. Then came the ominous

ANNUAL SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

A record attendance is expected for the School of Missions to be held on the Elon College campus June 13-15. The emphasis given announcements at all the Spring Rallies of the Women's Missionary Conferences throughout the Convention has caused many churches to begin already to plan large delegations from local missionary societies. One woman was heard to remark: "They had better begin to prepare the veteran's apartments for the crowd." There will be, however, plenty of rooming space, delicious meals, and a most delightful fellowship.

The program will begin on Tuesday afternoon (13th) at 2:00 o'clock with Mrs. O. H. Paris, president of the Women's Convention, presiding. There will be an opening worship service. Following this call to Christian fellowship and study will come the presentation of literature to be studied and used in the local societies the coming year. This part of the program will be done by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. The Rev. Arthur R. Detwiler, pastor of the E. & R. Church in Lenoir, will conduct a program of songs, fellowship, and a period of getting acquainted, closing the afternoon session in plenty of time for relaxation before supper.

The feature of the evening service will be a specially designed mission study picture, giving all members of the school a new insight into the place of visual aids as well as a chance to think constructively about the scope of our work.

Wednesday morning real study of the new courses for next year will begin in earnest. Dr. Fred D. Wentzel of Philadelphia, director of Christian Education and Publication, and himself the author of one of the mission study textbooks will teach the course in Home Missions. Following his course will come Miss Margaret Ruth Blemker, Near East and European secretary of the American Board, who will teach the text for Foreign Mission study. The third and final morning period will be taught by Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson of the faculty of Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Virginia. He will teach the Bible study course. There will be given ample recess time during the morning sessions. The same line-up of courses and teachers will be used on Thursday morning.

On Wednesday afternoon a real treat is in store for all leaders of local societies in their program building for the coming year by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman and Mrs. Tucker G. Humphries, both well known to our women as the wives of our pastors at First Church, Greensboro, and First Church, Reidsville, respectively. They will suggest programs for the coming year, and give actual demonstrations as to how they may be planned and put on. It is believed that this will be one of the most practical parts of the entire session.

A friendship banquet emphasizing friendship throughout our Foreign Mission work, as well as that at home, will be under the direction of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. This will mark a high spot in the whole school. The sessions will close at noon Thursday after the second series of courses have been taught in the morning as suggested above.

In June the Elon campus will be at its prettiest. Many friends, fellow-workers and leaders will be awaiting you. Plan now to have three great days of rededication to the work of Missions. Bring several automobile loads of women from all local missionary societies. Enlarge your outlook, and increase the power of the work of your societies throughout the coming year. A more detailed description of courses and leaders will be given in succeeding articles.

FRIENDLY SERVICE FOR MIGRANTS.

Have you sent your gifts to migrants yet? They are to be sent to Rev. and Mrs. Paul Cassen, 836 Biscayne Avenue, West Palm Beach, Fla.

Recently, we sent a package from Winston-Salem, and received a lovely letter of thanks. The letter mentioned the fact that interesting information concerning migrants might also be had by writing. It also mentioned the fact that a year-round program of assistance is being given to migrant families by the Missions Conference of North America, including several denominations. The church, it stated, is the only agency which seeks to give aid to these needy families, and so our gift boxes are joyfully received.

Some of the gifts suggested are:

Sewing kits (thread, needles, pins, scissors, thimbles, scraps or larger remnants of cloth, cotton or woolen, and yard goods for little garments).

Health kits—made of colored, but sturdy, washable material, or envelopes made of oil cloth to hold wash cloth, tooth brush, tooth paste, soap, mirror, comb, nail file, etc.

Painting aprons for small children. Edges may be bound or cut with pinking shears. Need not be of new material. (These could be made from men's old shirts or textile prints.)

Stuffed animals and dolls.

Sun suits for pre-school children.

Boxes of clothing.

No doubt, you have been reading some of the misfortunes which have come to some of the migrant families—without work, no income, hardly any food, threat of losing their living quarters. Many of these families have been suffering this year because of crop failures. The ministry of church women would go a long way toward helping them keep their self-respect. See what can be done in your woman's group.

EASTERN VIRGINIA RALLY.

Three hundred and sixty-nine people registered for the Family Life Institute held Thursday, March 23, at the Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia. The church was filled to capacity with interested laywomen, laymen and ministers. Every church in the Conference being represented with the exception of three.

Mrs. William T. Harrell of the Liberty Spring Church (Nans.), president of the Woman's Missionary Conference of Eastern Virginia, presided over the morning session, while Mrs. Garland Spratley of the Dendron Church, superintendent of Family Life of the Woman's Convention, presided over the afternoon session.

The morning meditation was led by Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton of Ahmednagar, India. She brought the human and warm touch to the morning session as she pleaded for a world economy that would give surplus food to the starving millions instead of destroying it.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR READERS:

Here is a true story that I want to share with you. When the Moultons, missionaries from India, came to speak at our church a few weeks ago, they told us many interesting things. But in the question and answer period this story was told by Mr. Moulton. One of our members asked him about the Jains.

Mr. Moulton explained that the Jains were a very high class group who combined the beliefs of Hinduism and Buddhism and they lived lives of gentleness trying never to harm or kill a single living creature, not even an ant or a fly. They wear gauze masks on their faces and carry cotton brooms to sweep the road before them in order not to hurt anything.

One day a Jain follower came to visit Mr. Moulton in India and talked and offered him a religious book about his religion. After a half hour or so Mr. Moulton asked the Jain to take a copy of the Bible written in Hindu script and the man agreed to take it.

Later, in the village, Missionary Moulton heard that some of the villagers teased this man for having a Christian Bible. But he said, "Is it not a religious book? Can anyone of you prove that there are false things in this book?" And so he stopped the jibes of his tormentors.

The paths of the Jain and our missionary friend were to cross again. Once Mr. Moulton met him in a distant village and there he was sweeping the street with his broom and still carrying the Bible under his arm. Another time he had a card of greeting from the man.

Then one day, there came to Mr. Moulton a card written in a script he could not read. When it was translated he found that his friend, the Jain, was dying of smallpox and had asked a man to write and tell the Christian teacher that he was dying and that he remembered him. Mr. Moulton never learned the end of this story. He knew that the man could not be vaccinated for smallpox because serum involves an animal's death.

How strange are the ways of God's children around the world, but yet how alike. The slowness and backwardness of a Jain-like people can be replaced by the life-living and giving of Christianity.

A MOTHER'S VOICE.

By MARY STARKEY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Phyliss Bentley and her sister, Madge, were sitting out on their front lawn knitting and watching a group of small children in an adjacent yard. The little tots were playing house. The dolls in their carriages were the babies, and as they were tucked in and lifted out they were scolded or soothed according to each little mother's idea of what was right and proper. One youngster was keeping up a shrill monologue of scolding.

"Phyliss," murmured Madge, "you'd declare that child's voice was the voice of her mother. Those poor children must hear nothing but fault-finding. I hear her early in the morning and late in the evening."

"Now, Barbara," screamed the small tot, dancing around her doll carriage in pretended fury, "one more bit of noise and you'll get a good spanking."

The sisters smiled. "Yes, it is plain to see that she is simply copying," said Phyliss. "I see examples of this sort of thing every day in the store. A store is a wonderful place to study parent-child relationships, and so very much is expressed by the tone of a voice. I've come to the conclusion that a person shows a good or poor upbringing the minute the mouth is opened for speech."

"I suppose you're right." Her sister turned to look at her own child, who was now leading in the procession of doll carriages. "Now, there is Mrs. Lennox who was at the Club last night. Her clothes are on the shabby side for that crowd, but her voice when she speaks makes everyone sit up and take notice."

"Yes," returned Phyliss, "a pleasant, clear voice is an open-sesame to respect, and one comes to know much about parents whom one has never seen, from their children's voices."

"Yes, I can understand that," agreed Madge, "from watching those children. You must see a lot more of it when getting them fitted in the store."

"I do. Some of the children are very difficult—interrupting their mothers and me when we are discussing prices and often shrieking at each other across the department. Not infrequently it winds up with Mother giving Sonnie or Daughter a shaking and a talking-to that ends in tears. I am embarrassed, the mother is ashamed, and nobody is happy. What a difference when well-taught, intelligent mothers come in with their children. It is a satisfaction to serve them. The body or girl may remark unfavorably on the different hats or dresses I show them, but it is a pleasure to listen to their sweet voices. They speak with restraint—like their mothers. You can tell that they have not been screamed at or told to 'shut up.' Do you remember, Madge, the teacher we had who used to shout at the class? I was very small, but I thought it sounded pretty dreadful."

"Yes, I remember. I hope my little brood won't have a teacher like her. She didn't belong in a school-room. But I don't think they have teachers like her any more."

At that moment Barbara's mother came on her porch and shouted at her child to "come in this minute." It was not so much what she said that made the listeners apprehensive for that child's future, as it was the way she said it—her voice so plainly showed she expected to be disobeyed.

years when materialism and anti-western agitation rose to the final, awful climax of World War II.

After serving in Honolulu, and as assistant at the First Congregational Christian Church in Portland, Oregon, during the war, Miss Clapp went back to Japan with the first group of missionaries in the post-war period. She found not only a warm welcome but discovered that barriers raised in the early 1930's had melted. Doshisha University had the largest enrollment in its history. Freed from the iron-clad military regime which had considered western music unpatriotic, music-hungry young people thronged into Miss Clapp's classes.

Among the extra curricula work which Miss Clapp has been doing in Japan was aid to a group of Japanese mothers and babies whose fathers were American G. I.'s who had left Japan before the babies were born. These children, loved and cared for by their Japanese mothers to the best of their ability, are exceptionally attractive children, says Miss Clapp.

ing Dr. Truitt because of his work with young people. Timothy Chang, a Chinese student at Duke, Pattie Lee Coghill, and many other outstanding people of our Conference will take part on the program. There will be several quartets, trios and duets to take part during the sing. To climax the program a play entitled "Answered Prayer" will be given by one of the groups of young people. If you miss the good time that is planned for you, I can truthfully say that you will be sorry.

Our last Rally was held at Seagrove Church in January, and was the best attended of any Rally ever held in our Conference. About 300 young people filled the Seagrove Church. The following churches were represented: Asheboro, Hank's Chapel, Liberty, High Point, Union Grove, Seagrove, Shady Grove, Pleasant Ridge, Pleasant Union, Sophia, Flint Hill (R), Albemarle and Needham's Grove. The Eastern North Carolina and the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences were represented also. We wish to extend a welcome invitation to those churches and to any others regardless of what conference you may be in to attend our next Rally.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is one of our main sources of letting our young people know about the rallies. After you read this please tell the young people of your church about it. Many of them would appreciate it if you would bring them to the Rally. Everyone is invited, so bring your Sunday school along and let's all have a good time together.

AMOS ATTACKS SOCIAL INJUSTICE. (TEMPERANCE.)

LESSON IV—APRIL 23, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Hate the evil, love the good, and establish justice in the land.—Amos 5:15.

LESSON: Amos 4:1-2; 6:1-6; 8:4-7.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Jeremiah 18:1-8.

By Way of Background.

As was stated in last week's Notes appearances were deceiving in Israel in Amos's day. To all external appearances Israel was prosperous and peaceful. But there were many social evils and much social injustice, and the nation was in great danger. And all the more so because the leaders did not see the danger. During the time of Amos the powerful nobles and richer classes had moved into the cities which had taken the place of many villages. The middle classes had not fared so well, for largely as a result of wars which ravaged the country again and again, they had been reduced to what was virtual serfdom. They had borrowed from the rich folks at exorbitant rates of interest, and unable to pay, their land had been mortgaged, and eventually they had lost both their lands and their freedom. If they went to law they got no satisfaction for the courts were dominated by the very people to whom they were in debt, and invariably they got only injustice. On the other hand, with their great wealth the rulers and nobles had given themselves over to luxurious living and display, and this in turn had made them insensible to the sufferings of the poor who were the victims of their greed and their injustice. Here then, at the top were wealthy, powerful, unscrupulous, unfeeling people, with a stranglehold on special privileges, while at the bottom was the mass of people, sad, sodden, and crushed by their lot in life. One ought to understand at least a little of this background in order to understand the message of Amos and the other eighth century prophets.

Amos "Tells the Women Off."

In today's lesson, Amos levels his guns at three classes. First of all the wealthy women draw his fire. "Billy" Sunday must have read Amos' picturesque and pungent style. At any rate Amos refers to these women as "the kine of Bashan." The kine of Bashan were fat, sleek cows. It was pretty plain talk, and one may be sure that these well-fed, well-clothed sisters of luxury did not take kindly to such plain, pungent speech. But Amos knew the disturbing and destructive power of women with the wrong ideals. He knew how men and society had been corrupted by luxury-loving, high-living, pleasure-seeking females. These women saying to their lords, "Bring and let us drink" (or feast as another translation has it). Life for them was one grand grab-bag, one round of pleasure after another, one constant search for some new thrill. They kept their husbands or some other woman's husband on the go to furnish the wherewithal to sling these big parties. It took money, lots of money and the men folks had to get the money, get it, no matter how they got it. If they had to "oppress the poor, and crush the needy" what difference did it make? They were just "poor white trash" anyway. Many a man has been driven in desperation to resort to all kinds of shady and sinful practices in order to satisfy the whims of a luxury-loving, socially-ambitious, pleasure-crazed wife or woman. Come to think of it the ideals of the women of a country are very important. It might be said that a nation rises or falls with its women. And Amos told these "kine of Bashan" that a day of reckoning was coming. As was often the case with captives in those days, they would be led away with hooks through their lips or noses. God is not mocked.

*Amos "Tells Off" the Leaders

Amos then opens fire on the leaders of the nation. Here they were a group of men, living at ease in Zion, building lovely summer homes in the mountains, furnishing them with every conceivable kind of luxurious appointments, including beds of ivory, eating only the lambs and the calves, inventing new instruments of music, slinging all kinds of wild parties, and going to such excesses in drinking that they used bowls instead of regular wine glasses. They anointed themselves with fine-smelling oils, and ate, drank and were merry. Alas they "were not grieved for the affliction of Joseph." Their wealth and their way of life, as is so often the case, had made them careless and callous concerning the fortunes and fate of their fellowmen. There was no concern and no compassion in their hearts for their fellowmen, most of them their own victims. That is one danger of riches—the danger that they will make men careless and callous of others. It is no sin to be rich, but it is a sin to use one's riches selfishly. Jesus emphasized that in the unforgettable story he told about Lazarus and the poor beggar that lay at his door. And He put it in even more dramatic fashion in the parable of the judgment of the nations . . . inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it not unto me; depart from me ye workers of iniquity. A nation is safe only as the "haves" share generously with the "have nots," only as all men are bound together in a "fellowship of those who care."

Amos Also "Tells Off" the Business Men.

Amos has something to say to the business men of the day. And he says it in a straightforward way without pulling any of his punches. Here were men who had started out to get money, and they had ended up by their money getting them. They gave short weight, and demanded overpayment. They foreclosed mortgages, and took unlawful collateral. They even sold the "refuse of the wheat" which should not have been marketed at all, and they sold it at a big price. They were very scrupulous (?). They did not do business on the Sabbath or during the feasts. But they might well have been doing it, for all the time they were wondering when these holy days would be over, and worrying because they broke into their unlawful gains. He who knew what was in man, and who spake as never man spake before (or since), was constantly warning men against the danger of money or material things. It is not only hard, it is impossible for a man to serve God and mammon. Covetousness is almost an unnamed sin among men but it is one of the most prevalent. In our modern world we worship at the shrine of material things. In many areas of business life profit is the dominant thing. Men put gold before God, profit before personality, possessions before personal integrity. As one writer of another century put it, "Ill fares the land to hastening ills a prey, where wealth accumulates and men decay."

THE SEARCH FOR GOD.

A Vesper Sermon

By REV. JOHN F. C. GREEN, D. D., McKeesport, Pennsylvania.

"O, that I knew where I might find him . . . Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him: on the left hand where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him."—Job 23:3, 8, 9.

"Oh, that my words were now written! Oh, that they were inscribed in a book! That with an iron pen and lead they were graven in the rock forever! But as for me, I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that at last he will stand up upon the earth: and after my skin, even this body is destroyed, then without my flesh shall I see God; Whom I, even I, shall see upon my side, and my eyes shall behold, and not as a stranger."—Job 19:23-27.

Job of the Old Testament, is an heroic, faithful figure. He faces the riddle of life and death and does not flinch from that which he beholds. "Behold," he says, "he will slay me; I have no hope: but I will maintain my way before him." That is the glory of the Old Covenant, and that of this spiritual interpreter of deep faith, that man, despite the riddle of life; despite the worst that the world can do to him, still believes, yet continues to draw his strength from the depths of the mystery of God.

A person, successful as the world counts success, writes that she has attained to the good life, because she has a large income and can maintain herself in comfort. But what when the winds blow and the storms beat upon her house, as surely, they will do, soon or late! What then? Will the memory of a large financial income look to her as a good life?

Men have ever sought God; ever they have searched for the riddle of life. Always they will do so, because they must. But they make many—alas—too many!—unworthy judgments. Either they become skeptical, or cynical: "There is no God." And, mayhap—"All that I am and that I possess, has been earned by the labor of my hands, by the intellect of my mind; by the strength of my will." But that is a lie, most base, because it deceives him that makes it. What part did chance play? Or family connections? Or fortunate position; the right place at the right time? Or a body and mind responsive and equal to the occasion. Did that self-satisfied person create his own body, his own mind? Or, on the other hand, there may be resignation, or even despair. And on that route there can encroach a cold fear of the morrow; that tomorrow which is unescapable? Christianity—at its best—trains for the return of the soul to its true home; so that the translation is neither in surprise nor in defeat. Even the Church has spoken of the Church Triumphant: that Home of the Souls, where in speedy turn all must find their place. And the saints and seers have rejoiced in the vision of the White Throne of the Lamb, at the feet of God.

Job searched all over his world for the answer but could not find it anywhere. His friends, in cold and barren moralism, would have him believe that his misfortune was caused by his own wickedness. But then: had not his earlier good fortune been due—under that judgment—to his saintliness? And does God reward spiritual merit in the coin of the realm, in the treasures of life: health, happiness, long days, large and happy families; recognition and mundane honor? Or can it be that the best may suffer most; causing Jeremiah to cry out: "Why do the wicked prosper?"

As the drama concludes, God comes to reveal himself to Job and his friends, and chiding the friends for their base materialism in the spiritual world returns to Job his worldly possessions, wealth, health and family.

But not always does God so work. He is the hidden God, whom none can see and know or hold, except through faith, on earth.

And ever here have been, and about us there are, those who have lived the victorious life of faith: those who have borne their burdens, sometimes grievous ones; who have passed into the valley of the shadows, with hearts courageous, because believing. They are our saints who guide us and make us brave, when we follow them; as they followed the Way of Life walked, in the Passion, by the Master.

"I know," says Job, "that my Redeemer liveth, and that at the last he will stand upon the earth . . . and shall behold, and not as a stranger."

In the supreme faith, the search for God has its reward of the "Good Life," in this world, for the World Everlasting. Amen.

Picture of the Month . . .

"NO SAD SONGS FOR ME."

This is the gripping drama of a woman who masters one of life's greatest problems—how to meet life and death with equal poise. Handled with delicacy, good taste and integrity, "No Sad Songs for Me" (Columbia) is one of those heart-warming films which occasionally come along to instruct and inspire the spirit as well as entertain the mind and move the emotions.

We meet a normal American family living happily together as people who love and trust one another, taking everything which comes along with a "togetherness" that is the stamp of strong life, sharing in the life of a congenial community.

Then disaster, in the form of illness, strikes. Mary, the mother, discovers from the family doctor that her lease on life cannot be a long one. Motivated by her great affection, she keeps the truth from them, sparing her husband sorrow and preparing her daughter to be reliant by imparting to her a feeling of life's beautiful continuity, no matter what happens.

Some may think there is not in the film a sufficiently outspoken expression of spiritual and Christian approach to the situation, but we feel it is strongly implied. When Mary learns of her husband's friendship with a lonely young woman—a relation he relinquishes when he recognizes its danger—she realizes the girl is a nice person and becomes her friend. These situations might have been overdramatized; instead, romance, drama and happiness are well blended and, above all, naturalness prevails. The film is realistic, impressive, intelligent. Margaret Sullivan is superb in her role as a wife and mother; most American women will want to identify themselves with her.

There are flaws such as the New Year's Eve scene where champagne is served. There are better ways of entering the New Year. But on the whole, the film is a good step in the right direction toward depicting decent and courageous living.—Protestant Motion Picture Council.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Thank you, thank you! Our report speaks for itself this week. Our girls and boys will have something new for Easter. They are very pleased with so many gifts of clothing and money for clothing. It has been a very busy week for all of us here at the Orphanage. Whether you carry many or few children into the city to select clothes you have a job. I am learning all the time. It is fun, and although bed-time finds one tired, tomorrow is a fresh new day.

Our first presentation of a children's program prepared for spring and early summer will be booked for April 16. Would you like to have us come to your Sunday school or church? Write us your wishes.

Easter Sunday morning will see a sunrise service put on by the young people of the Elon Community Church on the orphanage campus. Many of you know on what a beautiful eminence our campus is planned. How beautiful the sunrise is here across our green fields of growing grain. (Yes, I have seen the sunrise here!) The campus is being cleaned up and mown, and it really is becoming more and more beautiful, thanks to Messrs. Wagoner, Hilliard and the boys. How lovely it will be to have our community gathered on our hill to sing at sunrise on Easter morning joyous praises to our risen Lord. All of us here and there and everywhere owe Him so much let us serve Him better and better.

Humbly and gratefully I thank you for this report.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

THE NEW DAY IN MISSIONS.

being of the United States. The United Nations, the Specialized Agencies such as the Food and Agriculture Organization, and the World Bank, the European Recovery Program and the Point Four Program bear testimony to the fact that the world is one, that peace is indivisible.

The distinction between the "Christian" world and the "pagan" world has all but disappeared. Who today will dare say what nation is "Christian" and what nation is "pagan." It is in so-called Christian lands where experiments are going forward in the making of a hydrogen bomb capable of destroying humans on an unprecedented scale. If this race in arms which threatens whole cities with destruction and whole populations with death by burning and strangulation, if this be one of the characteristics of our so-called Christian civilization, may God have mercy on our souls!

In the United States one marriage out of every three comes to grief. News of earth-shaking importance is crowded off the front page of our newspapers to announce the birth of a movie star's son born out of wedlock. This sex exhibitionism is a symptom of the moral decay of the West. The fact of the matter is that secularism, which is only a "high falutin'" word for paganism, is everywhere prevalent. Christians of today, as in the early centuries, are a minority in the midst of a pagan world.

Dr. Van Kirk speaking during the Midwinter Meetings stated that in his opinion the next 50 years would see the development of a more comprehensive missionary strategy with the missionary of tomorrow, even more than in the past and in the present, "concerned with life and living conditions, labor relations, housing, health standards, the price of rice, improved methods of agriculture, racial justice and political freedom."

As a preview of this new missionary strategy, Dr. Van Kirk cited the work of several present-day missionaries who exemplify it, namely: Dr. Albert Schweitzer; Dr. Frank C. Laubach, Christian literacy expert; and Michael Scott, Anglican churchman in South Africa. "Albert Schweitzer, Frank Laubach and Michael Scott, each operating in his own way has identified the gospel of Jesus with life. . . ."

EASTERN VIRGINIA RALLY.

B. Jarvis sang "Fear Ye Not" with rich spiritual insight.

Dr. Paul Reynolds proved to be an extremely interesting speaker.

The home is the best teacher, and the church has the best training, he said, and home, church and school working together can deepen the resources to meet the needs of children.

Mothers should give up the less important outside activities, he said, and spend more time in developing the character, moulding the minds and developing more healthy bodies. Mothers, he said, are prone to shift their responsibilities to others. He said they send their children to "play school" at an early age and leave all of the religious training to the Sunday school instead of giving the child spiritual training themselves. They send their sons and daughters to the Scout organizations for training which they themselves should administer, he added.

In discussing broken homes and delinquent children, the speaker listed four causes: transition of the family; "population on wheels"; independence of women, and the pressure of industry.

During the past 50 years, more country families have moved to the city than ever before in history, he said. This adjustment is hard on the families because the living conditions are different. In the country, he said, one has space and freedom, whereas in the city one gets a "closed up" feeling to which it is hard to get adjusted.

More than 56 per cent of the country's population moves every year, he said. This causes insecurity in the family and affects the lives of the children, for they never feel family security.

Never in the history of the world has woman had more independence, he said, but women are seeking careers rather than giving their time to their children.

A father should never have to work on Sundays, said Dr. Reynolds. His hours should be arranged so he can spend more time with his family, especially his sons. Fathers often never see their children long enough to get acquainted with them, he said. They should spend more time with their sons, he urged, and not leave the entire training up to the mother.

The speaker offered another solution to inadequate family life. He stated that 600 colleges in America offer courses in family life. Our children should take these courses whenever possible, he said.

In closing he said that to make a happy home and happier children there should be plenty of old-fashioned love and kindness.

Our greatest disappointment was that Mrs. Russell T. Bradford, superintendent of Spiritual Life of the Woman's Convention, was unable to conduct the afternoon meditation and consecration service, being detained because of a funeral in her church at the same hour. However, Mrs. W. B. Williams conducted this service with great reverence. She was assisted by Mrs. J. E. Neese, Mrs. W. L. Wood, Mrs. G. S. Tyree, Mrs. T. Hayes Holland, Mrs. A. B. Jarvis, Mrs. William T. Harrell and Mrs. Roy Gordon. The soloist being Mrs. L. W. Vaughan and the pianist Mrs. W. B. Simpson.

Ministers of our Conference appearing on the program were Dr. Jessee H. Dollar, Rev. W. Millard Stevens, Dr. H. S. Hardecastle and Rev. Ellis Clarke.

The women of the Woman's Auxiliary of the host church did an excellent job of serving 369 guests a most delicious meal. We are grateful to them and Dr. Hardecastle, host pastor, for their gracious hospitality.

PROVIDENCE WOMEN AT GRAHAM.

The Lura Montgomery Missionary Circle of Providence Church in Graham decided to have a bazaar to build up the treasury and made over $100.

On February 24, we held two World Day of Prayer services in the Presbyterian Church, cooperating with other denominations. The night service was conducted by the pastor of the host church, assisted by two pastors of other churches. Mrs. O. L. Stuckey introduced our own Timothy Chang who spoke to the group and showed slides taken recently in Shao-wu. Timothy made a big hit with Graham churches. They all love him. The offerings to the United Council totaled $54.24. The five church women's groups each gave Timothy $5.00 and he is sending it to his family. We commend him for his love, loyalty and thoughtfulness and are glad to help him help his people.

The circle has undertaken the task of enrolling all the new babies in the Cradle Roll. There are sixteen families with new babies to be visited. Our attendance and interest are increasing with each meeting.

Council Aims for a Million New Japanese Christians

After hearing the reports from the East Asian Christian Conference held in Bangkok, Thailand, December 4-11, the Hakone Conference of the National Christian Council of Japan has set in motion an evangelistic drive to gain one million new Japanese Christians.

"Being conscious that we are now in a situation similar to the Apostolic Age," the Council, meeting February 1-2, moved to establish a research commission on methods of evangelism, to strengthen the laymen's evangelistic movement, to organize local branches of the Council and to endorse the expanded program of the Youth Conference. Excerpts from the Council's resolution follow:

1. Being conscious that we are now in a situation similar to the Apostolic Age, we are determined to press forward in the proclamation of the Gospel, clerical and laity rising up together as witnesses, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and we shall set as our goal the increase of the number of Christians to one million.

2. Realizing anew the important role of Christian education in the field of evangelism and desiring to see the principles of religious education permeate the Christian schools, we determined to establish a closer cooperative relationship between the churches and schools.

3. Feeling a deep responsibility for the past sins of our nation against the nations in East Asia, we pledge ourselves to be of any service to them in any possible way, humiliating ourselves before God and man.

4. We desire to establish a closer fellowship and cooperation with the National Christian Councils in Eastern Asia to share our responsibility in the world ecumenical movement.

5. Confronting the present world crisis, we are greatly concerned over the position of our country, which is striving to rebuild its structure on the principles of peace and goodwill and we wish to offer our prayers and efforts toward the firm establishment of the peace of the world, according to the teachings of the Prince of Peace.

6. We desire to see all the Christian forces of the country mobilized for the realization of the above-mentioned goals, and wish to strengthen the organization of the National Christian Council and thus develop a strategy for united cooperation.

Getting Ready for Church

HOW long does it take to get ready for church? Don't answer that until you stop to think about what is included in getting ready. There's more to it than brushing your coat or putting on your hat. The important thing is coming to church with a mind ready to receive truth, and a heart ready to respond with thanksgiving.

It is not easy to reach your pew on Sunday with an undisturbed mind. Any mother who can get breakfast for her family, make sure her husband has a clean shirt, dress the children and keep them from getting dirty before they get to church, and who yet can have a mind serene enough to benefit by worship has much of the stuff of sainthood. Not every man knows how to clear the top of his mental desk and put away in the drawers the vivid thoughts which business problems produce.

Being up late on Saturday night spoils many a Sunday morning. Drowsy eyes, listless spirits, and unresponsive attitudes indicate late hours. It is difficult to be interested in worship when we are physically weary. It is hard to be alert when we are tired out. The best of worship will be dull to wilted senses. A good sermon needs a good sleep—but not at church.

A member of one church council remarked, "My family rarely stays out late on Saturday night. We try to come to church on Sunday morning fresh and wide awake." It can be understood therefore why he was getting something good out of his attendance.

Folks think of a certain woman as a saintly soul. But if you talk with her you will find that she is just a common-sense Christian. She knows that if she is to find the worship at church worth while, she must have made a start at it before she leaves home. "What I do," she said, "is to read the Gospel and Epistle for the Day and think a little about them before I go to church. When I do that, I find that the service and the sermon add to the thoughts I have. It seems to me that ideas love company, and the ideas I get from the service must find some companions already in my mind; otherwise they don't stay with me."

In our movie-minded age many people expect to be mere spectators at church, just as they are in the theatre. They have no thought of taking any active part in the program, and therefore they make no preparation for it. To their way of thinking the whole burden for producing a stirring experience of worship rests on the pastor.

But Protestant worship at its core is a congregational activity. It is what the people do. Their pastor is their leader, not their entertainer. They come to church to hear the Word and to respond to it with prayer and praise.

Therefore when Protestants truly understand what worship is, they expect to take part in it. They prepare themselves to do their part. Their mental motors are already running when they enter the church. They come expecting the presence of God. They are prepared to think of His loving kindness in the midst of His temple. With such preparation they are likely to find, as John Wesley did, that their hearts are "strangely warmed."

News Flashes

Miss Margaret Abbot and Edgar S. W. Dameron, Jr., were married Sunday afternoon in our Henderson Church. Rev. J. Frank Apple officiated.

Miss Gladys Atkins and Mr. Bernice Flint Turner were married on April 8 at Mt. Zion Christian Church. Rev. W. W. Snyder performed the ceremony.

Rev. Henry E. Robinson and Rev. G. O. Lankford conducted funeral services on Wednesday of last week for Joseph Holman Freeland, former mayor of Burlington.

The Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches met in New York City last week. Dr. R. C. Helfenstein of Richmond, who is a member, attended.

Supt. John G. Truitt conducted the devotionals at the April meeting of the Elon P. T. A. Mr. R. L. Wooten, director of instruction in Alamance County, was the guest speaker.

The spring meeting of the Southern Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church is being held this week, April 18-20, at the Hebron Church, near Winston-Salem, N. C.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle reviewed Missions at the Grass Roots Wednesday evening for the Rosemont Missionary Society. Mrs. J. A. Herrington presided and Mrs. H. G. Council, Jr., gave the devotionals.

The Rev. and Mrs. Stanley Carne are now in St. Petersburg, Florida, where they will be for ten days. The Rev. Mr. Carne's pulpit at First Christian Church, Portsmouth, was filled Sunday by the Rev. George Poole, who has now largely recovered from the severe injuries he suffered in an airplane crash in South America.

Miss Rachel Rosenberger's engagement to the Rev. Frederick B. Eutsler is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer A. Rosenberger of Cedar Falls, Iowa. Miss Rosenberger is a member of the faculty in the department of music at Meredith College. The wedding will take place June 7, at 5:00 p. m., in the United Church of Raleigh, of which Mr. Eutsler is the minister.

First Church, Burlington, has issued an attractive and comprehensive program, setting forth the activities and goals of its several organizations. Mr. E. N. Pierce, chairman of the official board, states: "It is the firm opinion of the officers of the church that a comprehensive program coupled with an informed and devout people is the most effective instrument by which to realize the purposes of Christ's Kingdom." Rev. Henry E. Robinson is the pastor.

DR. SCOTFORD TOURS THE CONVENTION.

A visit by John R. Scotford is an event in the life of a church. Many of our churches turn to Dr. Scotford for counsel in building and renovation. Fortunately, in addition to his duties as editor of Advance, he is able to take many churches in his stride.

John Scotford began building his backlog of information on church architecture as a result of an interest in photography. A minister with an interest in journalism, he bought a camera and spent several years in free-lance writing. In eighteen years doing publicity work for the denomination, he gradually shifted the camera from home missions to church architecture. This has been one of the distinctive features of Advance under his editorship. His publication received honorable mention at the meeting of the Associated Church Press.

"Form follows function" is Dr. Scotford's dictum. The form of a church, he insists, should proclaim its function in unmistakable fashion.

Another typical Scotford emphasis is this: "A church should proclaim its purpose through the use of a very few symbols featured in a dramatic fashion. If this is done effectively there is no need of repeating ecclesiastical motifs all over the building. One strong impression is worth a multitude of weaker ones."

Protestantism should utilize the eyes as well as the ears of their worshippers, Dr. Scotford feels. He concludes: "A church is truly a church when it has a message for the eyes of the congregation; other accessories are incidental." R. L. H.

EASTERN VIRGINIA LAYMEN MEET IN SUFFOLK.

The Eastern Virginia Layman's Fellowship met at the Suffolk Christian Church Saturday, April 15. The meeting was attended by well over one hundred laymen, thirty-three churches being either represented by laymen or their pastor as follows: Antioch, Burton's Grove, Eure, Holy Neck, Liberty Spring, First (Norfolk), Shelton Memorial, Suffolk, Windsor, Barrett's, Centerville, Mt. Carmel, Franklin, Hopewell, Rosemont (Norfolk), Richmond, Union (Southampton), Berea (Nansemond), Cypress Chapel, Berea (G. B.), Isle of Wight, Newport News, Oakland, South Norfolk, Wakefield, Bethlehem (Nansemond), Dendron, Holland, Johnson's Grove, Christian Temple (Norfolk), First (Portsmouth), Waverly and Spring Hill.

Beginning at 2:30 p. m. with W. B. Williams, vice-president of the Southern Convention Fellowship, presiding, the meeting centered its thoughts around the theme, "Every Man Working in His Place in His Church." An inspirational song service was conducted by W. H. Baker, director, with Mills C. Luther as pianist. The Devotional Service was conducted by H. W. Lee of Portsmouth followed by a solo by Mr. H. L. Collette and a quartet from Rosemont. An address on Workmen was given by John Ramsey of Suffolk. Superintendent Scott presented a Layman's Hand Book, prepared by the Southern Convention Office and the Convention Fellowship. Special music was rendered by J. E. Gibson of Christian Temple.

Four conference groups were directed as follows: Duties of Deacons, in charge of J. Letcher Eley of Franklin; Duties of the Finance Committee, conducted by H. S. Harcastle; Duties of the Official Board, conducted by L. G. Robinson of Christian Temple; Organization in Our Rural Churches conducted by Dr. I. W. Johnson. These conferences brought brief findings to the entire group and proved to be very profitable.

Officers were elected as follows: Chairman, Mills E. Godwin, Jr., Oakland Church; Vice-Chairman, W. B. Williams; Secretary and Treasurer, L. G. Robinson, Christian Temple.

A delicious banquet was served to the Laymen by the women of the Suffolk Church. Mills E. Godwin was the toastmaster. Following an informal sing, Walter A. Graham, National Director of Congregational Christian Laymen, delivered an address.

It was decided to hold the next meeting on a Sunday afternoon and evening and great enthusiasm was expressed for the continuation of this development of our church life.

HENDERSON.

Another Easter has come and gone. Easter Sunday this year was a great day for us here in the Henderson Church. The Sunday school attendance was the highest of all time, about fifty more than last Easter. The church attendance, too, was extra good. The sanctuary was filled to capacity with members and friends of the church. The choir rendered a beautiful and an inspiring anthem, "Christ Is Risen!" The minister spoke on the topic, "Why the Master Appeared to Mary Magdalene First." Four members were received into the church at the close of the message.

It was a great joy to have some old time friends from Burlington in the service and in the parsonage. The mother and grandmother in the group was the mother of a Christian home into which many of us ministerial students went while in school at Elon College. This home was a real "preacher's home." The memory of it is a benediction to us.

All phases of the work here seem to be making progress. The outlook is bright. God be praised.

Pastor.

WINCHESTER.

The 27th continuous annual Easter Sunrise Service was held in the Winchester Church, Sunday morning at 6:00 o'clock. The morning worship was conducted at 11:00 a. m.

Rev. Robert A. Whitten, pastor, reports that twelve new members were received into membership of the church on Palm Sunday and on Easter—nine on profession of faith and three by letter. Four babies were consecrated Easter Sunday morning.

The two-week revival campaign—March 19-April 2—was well attended. A total of 2,805 people were in attendance at the 16 services held. Many souls professed faith in Christ and pledged themselves to live a Christian life. Many church members rededicated their lives to Christian service. The church looks forward with renewed zeal to her task of Kingdom building.

REPORT FROM REIDSVILLE.

Easter Sunday was a red letter day at the Congregational Christian Church of Reidsville. It was a red letter day in more ways than one and when the day was over every one who had had a part in the day felt that their efforts were well spent, for the community, for the church and for God's kingdom.

Maundy Thursday evening the last supper was celebrated in a church beautiful in candle light.

Friday afternoon just at the twilight hour our new chimes pronounced God's benediction over the entire city. These chimes were installed Friday morning at a cost of over $2,000. They are Norton chimes and can be played automatically or from the console of the organ, and an additional microphone allows readings and prayers to be broadcast from the pulpit. This fine addition to our church was made possible by the many good friends of the entire city, who oversubscribed the necessary fund by almost $1,000. This campaign for funds was sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the church. So many fine re-

WANTED—A LITTLE INFORMATION.

The committee for securing homes for delegates to the Southern Convention which will meet at Oakland Christian Church, May 2-4, will appreciate very much, advance information or requests from those who desire over-night accommodations in the homes of the church and community. If you want such accommodations, will you please notify Mr. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., or Rev. H. S. Hardecastle at once.

Oakland Christian Church is about nine and a half miles from Suffolk on Highway No. 10, between Suffolk and Chuckatuck, and about a half-mile from Chuckatuck. Delegates coming down Route 460 will turn off that route at "Elephant Fork" as if they were going to Smithfield or Newport News.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

PROTESTANT EDITORS AT SYRACUSE

It is a good thing for church editors to get together, for theirs is a difficult task and they need every available ounce of inspiration and guidance. Many editors must work in relative isolation and suffer the lack of editorial fellowship. The annual conclave of editors means much to the members and the church press.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Associated Church Press was held last week in Syracuse, New York. Nearly a hundred people attended the two-day session in Hotel Onondaga. The meeting was held in Syracuse in order to utilize the Syracuse Journalism faculty in the seminars. These seminars, which were arranged by Prof. Roland E. Wolseley, offered practical guidance on news writing, article writing, editorial writing, picture editing, principles of make-up and publishing problems. The chief regret was the inability to attend all seminars. The influence of this meeting should have a silent but perceptible influence in the toning up of Protestant journalism. It was a grand experience to attend such a meeting and enjoy such a fellowship.

RESOLUTIONS

Manifestly a group of editors cannot speak authoritatively for all their readers. They could not, nor would they presume to do so. But editors are in a position to represent their readers rather accurately on basic issues. The Associated Church Press can therefore reflect as well as influence public opinion. Protestant editors have vital contact with a large segment of responsible American citizens. The following resolutions unanimously passed by the A. C. P. should, therefore, have considerable weight.

I. American Embassy to the Vatican

WHEREAS, The Associated Church Press representing the leading Protestant Church papers in the United States has on several occasions in annual meetings expressed its disapproval of the maintenance at the Vatican of a personal representative of the President of the United States with rank of Ambassador, and has urged the recall of Mr. Myron C. Taylor and the termination of the unconstitutional relationship between the United States Government and the Pope which his office has maintained, for ten years; and,

WHEREAS, The resignation of Mr. Myron C. Taylor was recently presented to the President of the United States and has been accepted by him; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Associated Church Press in its annual meeting in Syracuse, New York. On April 14, 1950, hereby unanimously expresses its satisfaction to the President of the United States for having accepted Mr. Taylor's resignation, and its profound hope, which is sustained by an unalterable conviction, that no successor to Mr. Taylor will be appointed, that the office which he has filled since his appointment in 1939 by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, will be abolished; and that no steps will now or later be taken by the Department of State toward the constitutional establishment of an American Embassy at the Vatican by the appointment of an Ambassador for confirmation by the Senate.

In our reasoned judgment as Editors of the Protestant Church Press such an Embassy at the Vatican would violate the historic American principle of the separation of church and state; therefore,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States and the Secretary of State.

II. Freedom of Information

WHEREAS, Freedom of information is essential to the exercise of religious liberty for which the Associated Church Press stands; and,

WHEREAS, Freedom of information and the freedom of the press in acquiring and publishing news and opinions is in jeopardy throughout the world and in our own country because of political tensions and scientific advances; and,

WHEREAS, The United States government has successfully exercised its influence abroad in opposition to censorship; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Associated Church Press at its annual meeting in Syracuse, New York, on April 14, 1950, hereby commends the actions of our representatives abroad for their efforts to clear the channels of communication between peoples and urges the legislative, judicial and executive departments of the United States government to reexamine practices which have grown up since the end of the Second World War restricting freedom of information in our own country.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That we commend the United Nations Commission on Human Rights for its implimentation of international freedom of religion, speech and press.

THE MEASURE OF MISSIONS

Spreading Christianity abroad is sometimes an excuse for not having it at home. A man may cut grafts from his tree till the tree itself has no top left with which to bear fruit. In the end the power of Christian missions will be measured by the zeal of enlightened piety at home, as the circulation of blood at the extremities of the body will depend upon the soundness of the lungs and heart. I do not say that we should not send the gospel abroad; but that there must be more of it at home. We must deepen the wells of salvation or drawing will run them dry.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A CONSCIOUSNESS OF THE DIVINE.

A Sermon

By REV. C. C. THOMAS, Pastor,
First Cong. Christian Church,
Norfolk, Virginia.

"Speak, Lord, for thy servant
heareth."—I Samuel 3:9.

In ancient Israel, God spoke to Moses in a burning bush on the desert. The wandering hosts were led through the wilderness by a "Cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night." The Eternal spoke to Samuel in the quiet of the evening hour after the boy had turned to his couch for the night. Isaiah beheld "The Lord" in a vision when he visited the temple in a time of stress. Gideon received signs with his handful of fleece. Elijah heard a voice in the calm which followed the wind, fire and earthquake. Jesus found such an intimate fellowship with the Divine that he was led to proclaim the Fatherhood of God. Paul's experience on the road to Damascus was so vivid that he was changed, from the narrow fanatic who sought the destruction of the followers of Christ, to the great missionary apostle who carried the message of life to the gentile world.

So, down through the corridors of time even to this day, men have somehow been made aware of the spirit of the Eternal moving to change chaos to order and beauty through their own consciousness and labors. The men of our Hebrew-Christian tradition and the great reformers have been like the very mirrors of God bringing light and hope to sorely troubled man in times of chaos and distress, reaffirming again and again the nearness of Divine light and strength to man.

Yet each succeeding generation seems to find itself in such a state of confusion that there are times when men cry out for some current manifestation of divine guidance which will brighten their darkened paths and succor their suffering. The voices of the past grow dim, crowded into oblivion by the babble of modern life and the grim necessities forced upon us in the struggle to keep body and soul together in an age when material values are ascendant. We long for a sign that will somehow relate our lives to the Eternal and give them meaning and purpose. Still, in the face of our yearning and confusion, there is no sign. Only the common events of daily living come to us. We go to bed another day and cry out anew for guidance, but still there is no burning bush, no rainbow, no thundering voice from a mountain top to astound us. And our quandry remains to perplex us.

What does it mean? Why, if the Eternal was heard so in the long ago, is He silent now? Why do we have the stories of wonders unfolded to ancient men, if God is going to remain silent today? These are the questions which spring to our lips to confuse us.

I shall not attempt to answer these questions, for I feel that they are not called for. I feel that it is we who need to be questioned rather than any so-called "silence of the divine." If there has been any turning away between God and man, it has been man who has turned his face and not the Divine. If the scriptures have any meaning at all for us today, it is certainly in their peculiar insistence that man can develop a consciousness of divinity that will give him strength and guidance.

I.

The first and foremost comes in the needs of our fellowmen. It seems to me that the parable of the last judgment in the New Testament speaks very definitely on this subject. Anyone who is familiar with it and does not see this in it can read it with new hope now, for Christ has spoken in such a way as to make it impossible for us not to hear the Father speaking in the needs of others. Ministers and others who seek to help people generally have made much of "calls" from the Divine. Analyze any one of them and you will come ultimately to the time in their lives when they had their eyes opened to some need or some suffering from an injustice. William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army and one from whom we might expect an exciting story of divine intervention, said that he knew no call in any supernatural sense. But he did say that, as he walked the streets of London, he saw so much filth, suffering and debauchery that he could not live with himself and not make an effort to help these unfortunates. Later, on an important anniversary, when he wanted to send a wire to his leaders in other parts of the world and needed to keep expenses down, he chose one word to express his desire. That word was in true keeping with his earlier statement of his "call." It was "others."

Still we want to be astounded by some miracle. So much a part of our culture is this idea of the working of God that we fail to see Him in the hungry eyes of the neighbor children or the ignorance and malnutrition of tenant farmers or the despairing cries for relief from the raw winter's cold of the people in Europe.

I once heard a group of people singing a hymn which has haunted me to this day because of two lines which have stuck in my memory. The hymn is: "Seek Not Afar for Beauty," by some religious genius unknown to me and the two lines which I remember are:

*The simple duty that awaits thy hand,
Is God's voice speaking his divine command.*

How much busier about the Master's business, how much happier, how much richer life would be for us, if we could all commit these lines to memory. For in the needs of those about us we can become conscious of the Divine.

II.

Another way by which we can develop a consciousness of the presence of God is through some attention to the things that dissatisfy us. Some of the greatest good to come to man has been wrought by men who felt the call of the divine in something which dissatisfied them. Amos was a simple shepherd from the hills of Palestine, but he was to become an honored prophet after he saw and was dissatisfied with some of the injustices and evils of the people who lived by their sins and grew fat and repulsive. Jesus' greatest teachings came when he was dissatisfied with emptiness of the formulation to which the religion of his fathers had degenerated. His only public exhibition of rage came when he drove the money changers and those who made commerce from the temple at Jerusalem. Luther was dissatisfied with the abuses practiced by the Roman Catholic Church. Wilberforce, Gladstone and Lincoln could not rest so long as there were men and women in slavery to others. The heroes of the medical world were dissatisfied, some of them sacrificing their lives, until certain diseases were conquered. From

ECHOES FROM WINSTON-SALEM.

The Young Adult Workshop held at our church in Winston-Salem March 25th and 26th was unusual in that it was the first of its kind held in this area. It was outstanding in its leadership and the forty-five who attended gained many new ideas and heard good viewpoints from each other as well as from Miss Coghill, Mr. Twiddy and, of course, Dr. Reynolds.

The first afternoon one person from each church that was represented was chosen to tell of their young adult group and the activities in their churches. Some of the groups are purely social, others combine social and worship activities, and most all of them have a service project or two which they carry out during the year. Some of the groups are newly organized, many of them in fact; others have been in existence for some time. The general theme of all Dr. Reynolds' talks, as well as those who attended as delegates, was that the general trend in most churches nowadays is to stress activities which will attract young adults, which is the greatest gap, or has been for the past few years, in church attendance; there is an encouraging increase in the last two or three years in young adult workers in church. Dr. Reynolds' feels, as did all of the others there, that the social life of young adults should be centered in church, for young adults are going to indulge in social activities and where else but in the church can you get healthy, good, clean recreation? Therefore, most of the churches are awakening to the fact that in order to attract the young adults back into the church, and to keep them there, we must have social activities, service projects, Sunday school classes and departments in which they can work and play, for it is the young adults who have the enthusiasm, strength and a great deal of ability to give something to the church as well as for the church to mean something to them and build for them a strong foundation of character in their lives, as well as fostering a love for their church.

Mr. Andes and the members of his church, especially the young adult group of the church, were perfect hosts for the workshop, entertaining the delegates in the homes with unexcelled hospitality shown by all. Saturday afternoon was taken up by registration and a general get acquainted period and the talks referred to above. After a fine supper served in the basement of their church, we went upstairs and were shown a film and heard short talks by Dr. Reynolds and Miss Coghill. Following this we enjoyed folk dances and games in the basement recreation room. Just before adjourning for the night Mr. Andes led a very impressive meditation service in the sanctuary. Sun-

"DECLARE IF THOU KNOWEST IT ALL."

By Dorothy Ames,
East Corinth, Maine.

This day God made. Let fettered faiths explain

The roses blooming on the trellis here,
Soft maple green — new-washed by last night's rain

Where trees shake out their greeting to the year.

There's blessing in the breeze, you misanthrope;

Your nose, in spite of you, is scenting spring.
Unloose your cynicism; give it scope.

It will come back to you on limping wing.
Your world of gears and pistons, balanced force,

Fumbles its answer to the song of birds,
While tympani within reflect the Source:
A whirlwind voice to pierce obscure words.
Fear-fattened heaviness may last the night,
But joy, He promised, cometh with the light.

day we attended Sunday School and Church services in Mr. Andes' church. Dr. Reynolds preached the sermon. We were taken downtown to lunch at the S. & W. cafeteria. We came immediately back to the church and heard a final talk by Dr. Reynolds on the value of families doing things together and working as a unit both at home and in the church. Miss Coghill elaborated a little further on the young adults in the church as well as the home. We adjourned about 3:30 feeling that it had been an inspiring and helpful two days spent with fine young people from all over North Carolina.

BERKLEY PLANS COOPERATIVE BIBLE SCHOOL.

Preparations are already going forward for the Berkley Daily Vacation Bible School, which will be held June 19-30, and two ministers have been named co-chairmen of the program for the school.

The co-chairmen are the Rev. David C. George, rector of St. Bride's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Charles C. Thomas, pastor of the First Congregational Christian Church.

Department heads and officers of the school will be designated in the near future and will be asked to meet for a planning session well before the school is due to open.

Churches sponsoring the school include Berkley Avenue Baptist, Memorial Methodist, Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian, St. Bride's Episcopal and the First Congregational Christian.

JUDGE SAYS MANY WETS FAVOR LANGER-BRYSON BILL.

Judge Harlan M. Calhoun of the 22d Judicial Circuit of West Virginia, has written Senator Kilgore of that State expressing his interest in Senate Bill 1847, intended to bar liquor advertising from interstate transmission. Judge Calhoun says that in his opinion just as many Wets as Drys are keenly conscious of the need of such a law. His letter, in part, reads:

"Definitely this is not a mere Wet and Dry issue. I am not a Dry in the sense of being an abstainer myself, nor in the sense of favoring a return to Prohibition. I am confident, however, that just as many Wets as Drys are keenly conscious of the need of a law such as this.

"... I feel that all those individuals or groups who were responsible for Repeal owe to the American public a responsibility for keeping faith. There can be no denial of the fact that the theory back of Repeal was that liquor was a necessary evil... Reasonable regulation was to follow Repeal.

"But the most ardent advocates of Repeal never once asserted that Prohibition should be repealed because of liquor represented a public good. They never once, in urging Repeal, asserted that there should be a greater consumption of liquor for the good of the country. They never once urged that any individual consumer should consume more, nor that the number of drinkers should be increased. Most certainly they never

THE STALEY-ATKINSON-NEWMAN MEMORIAL FUND.

The Convention took a long step toward capturing the imagination of the church for Elon and in providing for the much needed additional support for our Department of Christian Education when it authorized the establishment of the Staley-Atkinson-Newman Memorial Fund. The Convention called upon the local churches through their conferences and through college officials to provide $100,000.00 for the proposed fund, the same to be a part of the college endowment fund and the income used for the financing of Christian Education in Elon College. Because of the prominence and high regard in which the names memorialized were held throughout the church and the purpose for which the fund was to be used, many of our local churches responded gladly and generously. This fund should have been completed months and months ago. The entire $100,000.00 was raised in cash and pledges. Many of the pledges have not as yet been paid. The Convention is meeting in biennial session on May 2 with Oakland Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia. It will be my privilege and responsibility to report on the Staley-Atkinson-Newman Memorial Fund. We will have a good report as it is but we should complete collections for this fund. I am sure you will agree. At present, we need $11,133.84 to complete the fund. We have more than that amount in pledges. Letters are in the mail to all churches with unpaid pledges and to all individuals who owe on their pledges. I am anxious to make a much better report to the Convention than I am prepared to make now. If your church owes a balance on your obligation, won't you please speak to the proper officials and see if something can be done about your balance before May 1. In addition to getting this fund completed you will render a sorely needed service to the college. You may think that business is moving slowly. If you were in the Business Office at Elon College, you would know that collections are much more difficult, also that funds are needed with which to meet current bills. Won't you, my brother pastor and brother laymen, please give serious consideration to these facts and see if it is possible for you to make some contribution toward this fund that it may be completed, making further appeals unnecessary?

ARE YOU A DELEGATE?

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches is scheduled to meet in biennial session May 2, 3 and 4. The Convention will meet at Oakland Church, Chuckatuck, Dr. H. S. Harcastle, pastor. Some years ago the Convention voted that each church in the Convention should be represented by at least one delegate. These delegates are to be nominated by the local church and elected by the local conference to which the church belongs. I trust that every conference constituting the Convention has taken the necessary steps to see that each of its several churches is represented at the approaching session of the Convention. If your conference has not taken the necessary steps have your local church to nominate its delegate or delegates, send them to the Convention and the officials of your conference can then elect and authorize your seating them as delegates. There will be many questions of great importance before the Convention. The entire church should consider these proposals and vote without prejudice for the enactment of such measures that are deemed advisable. In all probability, there will be a large attendance at the Convention but the point is that the delegates should be there to vote in the interest of our church and its program for the future. Dr. John G. Truitt is the President of the Convention, Rev. J. E. Neese is Secretary and Dr. W. T. Scott is Superintendent. Should you have questions regarding the program or other interest concerning the Convention, if you will address either of these I am sure that he will be able to answer you satisfactorily. At any rate, let us all get together, go to the Convention and work in harmony and in the spirit of the Master.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Every day it seems that the needs of the college become more acute. Practically everything that is required for the conducting of the school seems to increase in price and money with which to pay seems scarcer and more difficult to get. Nearly half of the conference year has passed. Has your church paid one-fourth of its apportionment for the college? If not, won't you please make a special effort to see that a contribution is sent before the Convention meets. All of these things are entered into the college's report and every contribution will help to make that report better and thereby encourage the college in its approach to the church and friends for continued assistance. The college continues to look to the church for encouragement and support.

SUFFOLK ALUMNI OF ELON TO MEET.

The annual dinner meeting of the Suffolk Chapter of the Elon College Alumni Association will be held Friday night.

Rev. Duane N. Vore, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church, will be the featured speaker at the gathering, to be held at 7:00 p. m. in the Hotel Elliott.

Two students from Elon's Music Department will furnish entertainment. Charles Lynam will sing, accompanied by James Clyburn on the piano, and the latter will also play several solos.

Officers of the local chapter are J. K. Kirk, president; Mrs. John G. Truitt, vice-president; and Miss Gladys Yates, secretary-treasurer.

Large schools offer many opportunities, but the chances of achieving leadership in life are three times as great if you attend a small college as if you attend a large one. Of college graduates listed in the current Who's Who in America, 1.7 per cent came from large schools, while 5 per cent came from small schools, notwithstanding the fact that many times more students attend the larger institutions.—J. Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

A TRIBUTE TO FOREIGN MISSIONS.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The question is asked from time to time, "Does India still want missionaries?" Here is an answer by an Indian in high position, His Excellency the Maharajah of Bhaevanagar, Governor of Madras, speaking recently at Vellore Christian Medical College on the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the arrival in India of the founder of the college, Dr. Ida S. Scudder.]

We have recently seen many tributes paid to the work that foreign missions are doing in India by eminent men in all walks of life—by statesmen, by ministers of government and by professional men like doctors and teachers. This has not always been the case. There were periods, though they have happily passed, when foreign missions were regarded by a good many people with a certain degree of suspicion. The main suspicion was one that linked up the idea of foreign missions with our rule by a foreign government. To the uneducated and even to some of the educated the great work that was being done by these missions, especially in the medical and educational fields, was lost sight of. The thought uppermost was that they were foreigners—and not only foreigners but westerners. It was immaterial whether they were British or not and that they had other work to do with no idea of interference in politics. There also followed a similar prejudice against Christian missionaries, forgetting that some of the earliest Christian communities in the world existed in India long before the spread of the religion in the west.

It is one of the highest tributes to the work done by these missions that they were able not only to conquer this initial prejudice but to win the affections of the people and the regard of their leaders, and to do so long before August, 1947, and the dawn of freedom in this country. The reasons for this prejudice are now entirely a thing of the past. When we turn and look at this country with its vast social problems, its immense medical and educational wants, we cannot cease to be grateful to these missionaries, who, for so many hard years in the past, worked with devotion and care to alleviate the suffering of our people; we cannot cease to be grateful for all the unremitting labor, often unrecognized and unrewarded, that they did during these years. India knows no distinction between Hindu, Moslem or Christian. The work that is being done for the poor and suffering, whatever their religion or community, is work which is done for all. Our missionary bodies, with nobility and devotion to the cause of humanity, never confined their labors to any one section of the community or one religion in particular.

This spirit of gratitude is a tribute to your work which you will find among all our people. It is emphasized even more by our leaders and those on whose shoulders has fallen the burden of administering this country. We have all heard of the welfare state, but India is a long way yet from approaching that idea. Our ministers and our rulers know that with the many problems that confront us, our finances do not permit as much expenditure as we would like on social services. Our country is crying for more hospitals, for more medical colleges, for more universities and schools and it has been left to missionary bodies like yours to contribute and contribute so very largely toward meeting these demands. You have not only succeeded; you have done your part more than adequately. The hospitals, the college and the schools you run in this presidency—and I have seen many of them—are some of the finest in this land and enjoy a high reputation. And not only in these colleges and large hospitals do we see the results of your work; these results can be seen in countless villages and hamlets throughout this land.

Few of the institutions, I think, can boast of a prouder record than the Vellore Medical College and Hospital and this we owe almost entirely to the great pioneer work done by Dr. Scudder. We celebrate today her golden jubilee, for she began her work here as a doctor fifty years ago. But her association with our land goes much further back and we are proud that we can consider her as Indian-born as any of ourselves. Her father and grandfather did similar work in India and Ceylon for more than a hundred years.

She realized, as few have done, more than fifty years ago that the greatest service that can be given to the people of this country is in the field of medicine and public health and she has devoted her lifetime to this task. Our gratitude is written not only in the hearts of the students who have passed through this college but in the hearts of thousands of people here and in the villages outside.

Dr. Scudder, you are one of us, and I am voicing the feelings of all when I join the prayer that you may be spared many more years to come for the service of our motherland.

KYOTO, JAPAN.

Esther Hibbard writing from Kyoto, Japan, reports difficulties at Doshisha University.

The stage is set for a great Christian educational opportunity, but, unfortunately, as a whole the Doshisha is neither equipped to meet the opportunity nor alert to it. We are groaning under a seventy million deficit which our treasurer tells can be made up only by taking in three times as many entering students as we have had before. And this without increasing either the staff or the number of classrooms proportionately! There is only one part-time religious director for the whole student body of over ten thousand. The required Religious Course is taught by the lecture method to groups of several hundred at a time in rooms so large that the lecturer's voice can scarcely be heard. Not one student in ten can find suitable lodging in the city, yet the university can offer no housing in dormitories for men. The women's dormitories are crowded to capacity, with three girls to every ten square feet. The Doshisha Student Church faces the staggering task of ministering to these hordes of young people with no more staff than its pastor and no more equipment than the school auditorium.

You may be sure we missionaries have not been sitting quietly on the sidelines while the school is being transformed into a huge factory. We have protested loudly and frequently. After much debate, we issued a statement to the administration regarding maximum teaching loads for missionaries and the nature of the courses we would teach. Many of us feel that we are wasting our energies in teaching English to those without any aptitude for it, particularly when we have had some special training, such as social service, and would welcome a chance to convey our knowledge in that field,

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MAY FELLOWSHIP DAY.

The date of our May Fellowship Day this year is May 5. The theme chosen is of fundamental importance to families: "Our Daily Bread"—A Christian Economy, the Concern of Church Women.

The subject of economics is one in which many of us are interested but on which we have not taken time to inform ourselves.

It is a fact that women are owners of sixty per cent of deposits in our Savings Banks and beneficiaries of two-thirds of the insurance policies.

The Church Women of America should be good companions to their children. Our economic life very vitally affects our family life. There is, therefore, much in this field about which we as Christian women need to inform ourselves.

Do we realize what part women have to play in the production of "Our Daily Bread"? Do we know how many mothers go from their homes every day as wage earners in one field or another? Are we familiar with the conditions under which many of these women work and the wages they receive? These and many other questions could prove interesting study for our May Fellowship program. The packet at 25c must be ordered from The United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., not later than April 21. Particularly good for distribution is "My Economic Temperature Chart." Copies may be had at 2c each.

Is it too much to hope that every society in our Southern Convention might unite in the study of this interesting theme and the observance of May Fellowship Day?

MRS. ROBT. A. WHITTEN, Supt., Interdenominat'l Cooperation.

FELLOWSHIP—FOOD—FUN.

The School of Missions offers every woman an opportunity to become better acquainted. It is through this fellowship that we learn of the activities of the various church groups. The exchanging of ideas and thoughts are relayed to our local women when we return home; through this channel we gain stimulating and interesting ideas to carry on our missionary program.

When we think of food, we naturally think of women. It is the woman in the home who plans the food and oftentimes prepares it for the nourishment of her family. The School of Missions at Elon offers a rest period for the homemakers. Don't you think it is a grand and glorious feeling to go to the table not knowing what has been planned and not having to prepare it yourself? As each woman will be relieved of the responsibility of preparing food for the physical body, each one will gain and be strengthened spiritually for her duties when she returns home. The morning devotional just before breakfast will prepare each one for the activities of the day. The inspiration of the Bible Study and Holy Communion will more than repay each one for a few days away from home.

You have many times heard the old saying, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." It is true. As people grow older, with the multiplicity of cares and responsibilities, the pressure of so many things upon their hearts and minds, it is well to spend a little time having fun. I can assure you it is fun having fellowship with the women of the Southern Convention. Heretofore, upon our return to our local groups whenever we told of the fun we had experienced during the social hours, the seed of desire was sown. You, the women of the Southern Convention, have an opportunity to bring to fruition this desire on June 13-14-15 at the Elon School of Missions.

Fellowship—Food—Fun are awaiting you! JENNIE B. SPRATLEY.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE.

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference on October 6, 1949, was one of great enthusiasm and inspiration and by many, conceded to have been one of the very best since the first, which was held at Mt. Carmel October 30, 1913.

In November, we had cause for real Thanksgiving with the Thank Offering program as Rev. W. Millard Stevens, with his good wife, had accepted a call to The Temple.

Our December Luncheon Meeting with Mrs. J. Frank Morgan speaking on "Christian Homes," our January review of These Are Written by Mr. Stevens, our March Luncheon Meeting with Mrs. W. T. Harrel, President of the Eastern Virginia women, giving a review on our Home Study, were all excellent programs. For May Fellowship observance, we plan to have a special program on Family Life with a guest speaker.

For the coming year, our foreign study will be on the "Near East." We shall have an evening meeting in June with a sound-color picture on some phase of our work there, just as we had "Kyoto Story" last June in view of our study on Japan. At this meeting we shall have our Pilgrim Guild Group, and others who cannot attend afternoon meetings.

We gained help and inspiration by attending the Leaders' District Meeting in South Norfolk on February 16, the Family Life Institute at Oakland on March 23. We hope to be well represented at the Elon School of Missions, June 13, 14 and 15.

One outstanding thing we did this year, along with some others, was to prepare Year Books with the year's work outlined.

MRS. L. W. STAGG.

WAKE CHAPEL.

On Wednesday evening, March 15, the Woman's Missionary Society of Wake Chapel was host to the Missionary Societies of Plymouth and Amelia Churches at a supper meeting at 6:00 p. m. in the Assembly Room of the new annex. This special meeting was for the purpose of a review of the Home Mission Study Book, Missions at the Grass Roots. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Educational Secretary, was present and presented Mrs. Carl Wallace, Superintendent of Spiritual Life in the North Carolina Conference, of Greensboro. She gave a most interesting and helpful talk on the history of Home Missions and the challenge facing our churches today not only to carry on the unfinished task of reaching the unchurched in our midst, but also to make more real Jesus Christ and His gospel of love to the children, youth and adults already in our churches.

Forty-six ladies, including nine from Plymouth, ten from Amelia and twenty-six of our own membership enjoyed the fellowship supper and several ladies from the Methodist Church joined the group for the review.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Do you know your minister? I hope you do. Many boys and girls go to Sunday School and almost never to church and do not see or hear their minister. When he calls it is often in the afternoon when children are in school, or at night when they are asleep.

If you know him when you see him and say, "Hello," call him "Mr." and not "Rev." Reverend is not a title, it is used to indicate that he is about God's work. If he has a doctor's degree you may call him "Dr." When you write him, write "The Reverend" or "The Reverend Doctor." Grown-ups are oftentimes confused by this, but ministers are plain, ordinary human beings. They like being addressed as "Mr."

What do you know about your minister? Did he go to college? Did he go to Elon? Did he attend a theological seminary? Does he go to ministers' meetings, Southern Convention, General Council meetings? If he does, he will know many things that are happening in our religious world.

Many of you meet your minister rather intimately just before Easter in a pastor's class. The minister can tell you interesting things about your church building, its architecture, its decorations. He can tell you church history, denominational history and many things about the Bible.

If you have the opportunity, visit in your minister's home. Usually the minister and his family live in a home that belongs to you. Yes, that is right, it belongs to the people of the church, and you are welcome there. You will find that the minister's family lives much like your own, but is apt to have more interruptions as the telephone rings and the door bell sounds many times each day. Ministers do not come home at the end of the day to spend the evening free. Most of them have meetings scheduled for nights or study.

Your minister is your friend. He not only knows you, he knows your family, he knows your friends and your Sunday school teacher. He will talk with you about the church or being a Christian. He helps boys and girls who are in serious trouble by going to court with them or by helping their parents. Ministers have good ears, and will listen to your sorrows, or your good news.

Jesus was a minister. Not like the ones we have now, to be sure, but a teacher and preacher. He was good to children everywhere and they loved to be with him and hear his stories. He was what ministers should be: patient, kind, loving, tender and full of the joy of life in God's world.

SCIENCE AGREES WITH THE BIBLE.

Just give it time, and science may yet catch up with the Bible.

Scientists at the University of California, at Berkeley, recently discovered a new kind of atom, the heaviest ever known. It is Element 98 and may be called Californium. The Associated Press dispatch announcing the discovery said:

"It (the new substance) adds to scientists' still limited understanding of how matter was originally formed.

"No. 98 is wildly radioactive; after a few hours the new atom becomes curium again.

"This explains why Element 98, as well as its built-up predecessors, sheds light on the formation of matter.

"There is a theory among scientists that all possible forms of matter were created almost instantly in one cataclysmic event at the very beginning of things.

"The forms, the theory holds, included all the regular 92 elements plus all the possible variations. This would include the hundreds of isotopes, the heavier or lighter chemical duplicates of the 92 conventional kinds of atoms. These isotopes have been made by the atom smashers.

"Many of the other variations, like No. 98, are radioactive and therefore unstable. It is theorized that soon after the instant of creation the unstable ones began turning into more stable forms, until finally there were only the 92 regular and comparatively stable ones left.

"The wildness of 98 seems to fit into that picture."

Concerning creation, the Bible says: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void" (Gen. 1:1-2).

"The worlds were framed by the word of God" (Heb. 11:3).

"By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth . . . he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalm 33:6-9).

The scientists, at last, are apparently saying the same thing—in just a little different language. How momentous will be the day, toward which we seem to be moving with accelerated speed, when science will find that the Bible has been right all along, and that all true knowledge conforms perfectly with the revelation contained in God's Word!—Exchange.

"HE'S NO BURDEN—THAT'S MY BROTHER!"

One of the greatest exponents of genuine brotherhood who ever lived, Abraham Lincoln, often demonstrated his interpretation of brotherhood by a story which he told on many occasions during his lifetime. Here is the story:

Lincoln was standing at the bottom of a snow-covered hill watching two boys using a single sled. After coasting down the hill together, the older boy would carry the younger one to the top of the steep hill, simultaneously dragging the heavy sled behind him. At the top of the hill the older boy would rest a while, huffing and puffing from the effort. After the routine had been completed two or three times, Lincoln called to the older boy and said, "That's quite a burden you are carrying, sonny."

The boy replied, "That ain't no burden, mister, that's my brother." To Lincoln, that was always the truest definition of real brotherhood—"he's my brother."

According to figures compiled by the United Stewardship Council, contributions made by the 1,184,661 members of the Congregational Christian Churches for the year past, amounted to 54 cents a week per member, or an annual per capita figure of $28.01. The Evangelical & Reformed Church, with a total of 718,635 members, attained a per capita figure of $29.61 for the year, or a little less than 57 cents a week per member. Southern Presbyterians led with $52.64 per capita, or slightly over $1.00 a week per member. The combined contributions of the 52 denominations reporting for the first time exceeded one billion dollars, the exact figure being $1,001,574,371.

SOUTHERN LEGACY. Hodding Carter.
Louisiana State University Press.
$3.

It takes courage for a Southerner in the deep South to write such a book as Southern Legacy—a very readable discussion of the mores of the South. Mr. Carter thoroughly understands the land of his birth and of his ancestors. He is not blind to the faults, the inconsistencies, the foibles of the South, but he also knows that back of all of them are causes which need to be understood before they can be corrected.

A Pulitzer Prize Winner journalist, editor of the Delta Democrat-Times of Greenville, Mississippi, a graduate of Bowdoin and of Columbia School of Journalism, holder of honorary degrees from Bowdoin and Harvard, Mr. Carter brings to all of his work a sharp intellect combined with a sense of humor and a deep human interest. His articles have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly and in the Saturday Evening Post. His innate sense of justice and his fearless presentation of facts have made it necessary for him often to keep a pistol at hand against the threats of hot-heads.

This book ought to be read by every Northerner who seeks to pose as an interpreter of the needs of the South. There would be less half-cocked judgments if the "do-gooders" of the North were to seek to understand causes before applying remedies. There is a vast amount of good common sense in Hodding Carter's approach to the complicated problems of the South. All of us need to understand the backgrounds of the sections of the country we seek to criticize, whether it is the Southerner viewing the New England town or the Northerner trying to interpret the South.

A MODERN VERSION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. C. B. Williams. Being reprinted by Moody Press, Chicago, Illinois.

First released by the author in 1937, Dr. Williams' translation is especially noted for its accurate rendering of the Greek text. It has been out of print for several years, but is now being republished by Moody Press in response to demand by leading theologians.

However, the work is not limited to scholars. "It is indeed a translation in the language of the people. The translation is fresh and modern, avoiding both technical and colloquial expressions," states Ray Summers, head of the department of New Testament at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Edward A. McDowell, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary concurs in this opinion: "This translation gives the most accurate rendering of the Greek text of any translation with which I am acquainted. At the same time it maintains a good modern English style and contains many pungent English expressions which fittingly represent the original."

The author received his doctor of philosophy degree from Chicago University, was a teacher of Greek for many years, and is now retired. He is also a man who believes that the entire Bible is the Word of God. "Although there is undoubtedly value in any translation by a competent scholar," states the publisher's preface, "there is special value in the reader's knowing that the author is thoroughly acquainted both with the text and also with the spirit of the text."

One illustration of Dr. Williams' meaningful style is found in I John 3:8-9: "Whoever practices sin belongs to the devil. . . . No one born of God makes a practice of sinning."

THE GOSPEL OF ST. MARK IN ZOQUE.
(New Language.)

Now for the first time the Zoque Indians, who live around the town of Copainala in Chiapas, Southern Mexico, can read the story of Jesus, as told by St. Mark, in their own language. The Gospels, bound in bright colored paper and printed with the Spanish text in a parallel column, were published by the American Bible Society.

The translation has been prepared by William Wonderly, Ph. D., working with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harrison, all of the Wycliffe Bible Translators, with several native informants. Dr. Wonderly has been studying the language for eight years. It is not always easy to find a qualified native informant who is also a devout Christian but Dr. Wonderly persisted in that principle. A Christian community is growing up through the work of native evangelists working under the direction of the Rev. J. R. Kempers of the Dutch Reformed Church for the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. There is also a very active work by nationals of the Seventh Day Adventists.

About eight years ago a Spanish-speaking native bought a Spanish Bible, read it and was converted. His enthusiasm spread until there grew up three communities numbering about 200 or 300 members, who regularly hold services in three prayer houses and eagerly seek for further guidance. Dr. Wonderly visited one of these groups and was more than ever convinced of the need for bringing the Gospel to them in their own tongue. He writes: "It has been my privilege to visit three native congregations which have sprung up simply through the reading and hearing of God's Word. For the first time in my life, I was able to stand before a group of believers in their own bamboo-and-thatch 'house of prayer' and read and explain the Word to them in Zoque! Some 200 or more believers gathered together on the occasion of our visit and our cups were filled to overflowing at their hospitality and at the hunger they showed for the Word."

There are approximately 10,000 Indians who speak this dialect with perhaps an additional 10,000 who speak a somewhat different form of the language. Literacy campaigns are underway and the arrival of the brightly-bound Gospels will undoubtedly stimulate them.

The strongest and most persistent theme at the second annual convention of the National Council of Presbyterian Men, which brought 1,000 laymen to Chicago recently, was the danger to America of what one speaker, a manufacturer from Pennsylvania called "huge, paternalistic, bureaucratic, highly centralized government." Several speakers denounced church leaders and organizations which issue "social ideals" statements. The delegates passed resolutions condemning "totalitarianism, both religious and political," calling upon President Truman to seek international control of atomic weapons, and authorize the setting up of a commission to seek cooperation with laymen of other denominations to promote joint Christian service on both local and national levels.

AMOS TEACHES ABOUT WORSHIP.

LESSON V—APRIL 30, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Let justice roll roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.—Amos 5:
24.

LESSON TEXT: Amos 4:4; 5:4-9, 14-15, 21-24.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 13:1-6.

Form in Worship.

Let no man deceive you—there is a value in form in worship. Here as elsewhere the divine dictum is, "Let everything be done decently and in order." Form in worship can give dignity, beauty, impressiveness and power. To lead in worship without preparation is as bad as to preach without preparation. The experience of worship, one of life's highest arts can be enriched by worship through forms through which the Spirit expresses itself. Form, order, plan, have a place in service of worship.

Formalism in Worship.

It was not form in worship, but formation in worship that aroused the ire of Amos and which called forth his biting and bitter denunciation. The forms of worship had become an end in themselves instead of being means toward an end. That which had been designed to bring men to God and God to men, had become a barrier between men and God. Formalism had been substituted for the spirit of worship. The thing had generated to the place where the people thought that the forms of worship were more important than the spirit of worship. What counted with them was what went on outside of the man, not what happened inside the man. It did not seem to make any difference what kind of man he was so long as he performed the act of worship in a prescribed and particular way. Sacrifice, for them, was a matter of what one brought and not the spirit in the man who brought it. Worship was what one did, regardless of how one lived.

Thus it was that with biting irony this plain man Amos invited them to "come to Bethel, and transgress, to Gilgal and to multiply transgressions, to bring their sacrifices every morning, and their tithes every three days." What difference does it make, he would say. The whole thing was sham and a shame. For if the heart was not right, nothing else could be right.

The Object of Worship.

"Seek ye me, and ye shall live . . . seek Jehovah and ye shall live." Here this prophet of that far off day put his finger on the heart of worship. Men are to worship God, to seek God, to enter into a quest for God. Many people still use the term, "Preaching service." But the public services in churches are primarily and fundamentally "worship services." The whole program ought to be a means whereby men come into fellowship with the living God. Many people will stop going to services of worship because they do not particularly care for the kind of preaching they hear. To be sure preaching ought to be interesting and inspiring, but one should not go to church simply to listen to a sermon—one should go to church to worship God. And if he goes in the right spirit he will find God, sometimes through the sermon and the music, sometimes in spite of both sermon and music. The supreme object of worship, it needs to be repeated, is God—God as revealed in the face of Jesus Christ.

Worthy To Be Worshipped.

The word worship really means "worthwhile." It is the giving of our adoration and reverence and praise and obedience to one or something "worthwhile." Amos believed he had such a God and he presented this God to his fellow-countrymen as one worthy of worship. He was a God who created the vast heavens and the heavens of heavens, and who sustained and order the vast universe which He had created—a God of infinite wisdom and power, and also a God of mercy and of love. If men would repent God would be gracious unto them. If they turned to Him they would find life.

Positive Religion.

Like the Master who came centuries later, Amos put the emphasis upon the positive note in religion. Men were to seek the good and not evil. They were to love the good as well as to hate the evil. They were not simply to refrain from being unjust they were to be positively just in their dealings with their fellowmen. Then indeed God would be with them. Then indeed they would find that God was gracious unto them.

Ethical Religion.

The insistent demand of Amos was for what is called ethical religion. Ethical means pertaining to moral character. Amos plainly and bluntly said that feasts and offerings, no matter how often or abundant, were not acceptable, unless the life was right, unless there was some correspondence between creed and deed, unless there was some likeness between profession and performance. The same thing was true in regard to songs and music. Acceptable music comes from the heart and not from the lips. The only thing that can give meaning to worship is moral righteousness. In words that have come thundering down through the centuries Amos says, "But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a might stream."

WHAT WE DRINK.

Although the annual consumption of all beverages is about 33 billion gallons, contrary to general opinion, more than half of that amount is water.

The average per capita consumption of water is about one quart a day or 91.25 gallons a year, accounting for 18½ billion gallons.

Next most popular beverage is milk, of which we consume 7½ billion gallons annually, while coffee is in third place, with annual consumption at 6½ billion gallons.

Principal beverages drunk on an annual per capita basis go down something like this, in gallons: water, 91.25; milk 52.23; coffee, 45.77; beer, 18.85; whisky, 1.03; wine, .98; brandy, .25; gin, .05; rum, .01.

No figures were available for soft drinks, tea, or cocoa.—The Sacramento (Calif.) Union.

DOGS ONE HUNDRED YEARS AHEAD OF HUMANS.

The famous dogs who belong to the Saint Bernard Hospice in the Swiss Alps are still described and depicted, as in past decades, as having miniature casks of brandy tied to their collars while out looking for travelers lost in the snow. And yet no alcoholic liquor has been carried by these Saint Bernard dogs for more than a hundred years.

A CONSCIOUSNESS OF THE DIVINE.

the lives of these men we see the spirit of the Divine moving upon men with such compelling reality that we cannot escape it.

Yes, manifest in the feeling of shock which frustrates us with the things of injustice and evil that we see is the voice of the Divine making its will known. In the shame that comes to you when you are dissatisfied with a life devoid of pity, mercy and love, the Divine speaks. In the indignation that we feel in the face of some flagrant violation of our moral codes, God speaks pleadingly for a human voice. And in all this I find a hope that there may yet grow in the consciousness of man a fellowship with goodness, beauty, love, truth and justice which will erase evil from us and plant the seeds of the kingdom of God.

III.

Also in the counsel of good friends, we are often brought to a realization of the divinity in and about us. One of the most touching stories of the Old Testament is the experience of Samuel in the temple with Eli. You will remember how, after Samuel had retired for the night, a voice came to him calling his name. Thinking that Eli had need of him, he arose three times to answer the old priest's needs. The third time the truth was borne in upon Eli. He instructed the boy to go back to his couch and at the call of the voice to answer, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." If I were to choose a text for this sermon, these words of Samuel's friend would serve nicely. "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." A man came to my study recently and told me of his meeting with a blind man. This man had been deprived of the sight of his eyes by a freak accident and upon realizing that he would never see again fell to cursing his fate in despair. Some friends came to him in his hospital room to comfort him, but he ordered them away. They kept coming and insisted upon repeating their assurances. Finally the day came when the unfortunate one could pray. Now, reported my friend, "his face shines like a beacon of cheerfulness, for he has found the everlasting arms which are underneath."

Many have had some of the impositions of life lifted from their shoulders because of the kindness of some friend. Many have found a haven in the time of trouble because someone has extended warm hands to embrace when someone else was hurt. A poet has said:

*I did not know God loved me in so sweet a way before—
'Tis He alone who can such blessings send;
For when his love would new expression find,
He sent thee to me and he said,
Behold, a friend!*

These relationships are the ones that give life its meat and drink. This is the answer God has for the prayers of the weary. For in the warmth of the love of friends and in their wise counsel, we come to a compelling realization of the presence of God in human life. His will is then made known.

So, we can become conscious of the Divine in our world today. It may not be borne in upon us through burning bushes, in thunder or in any of the things that men have labeled miraculous, but it will be just as real. A young man of my circle of friends once answered my question as to why he became a minister by saying: "I have always had a sort of feeling that I was compelled to enter the ministry." There's nothing so lacking in dramatics or the supernatural as that statement, but it is indicative of the way the divine moves upon our spirits to guide and help us. In the needs of men and women and little children; in the shock, shame and dissatisfaction that frustrates us in the face of injustice, falsehood, cruelty and waste; and in our warm friendship with others, which brings strength and light, we can develop a consciousness of the God of the universe and find our peace and fulfilment.

A TRIBUTE TO FOREIGN MISSIONS.

through an interpreter if necessary. As we have a number of specialists in religious education, we hope to introduce more modern methods and materials into religious courses. The dearth of suitable materials is appalling. For instance, the text used in the junior high school is a volume of John Calvin's sermons! In order to remedy this lack, we are now engaged in collecting, editing, and having translated some of the more recent religious books for young people published in the States.

CHRISTIANS IN FOOCHOW.

Malcolm White, in a letter recently received from Foochow, tells of a Christmas sermon he heard, and of other sermons, in out of the ordinary circumstances:

"Rev. Clare Scratch of the Christian Herald Orphanage preached at the Lawe Memorial Church on Christmas Sunday. He said, 'Last Christmas we were full of fear and despair. We feared that next Christmas we would not be allowed to come to church or sing Christmas carols. Today is Christmas; we have a new government, and we are still worshipping God in this church and celebrating the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. For this blessing we are all truly thankful.'

"Chinese Christian young people have had a custom of going out to sing Christmas carols all night Christmas Eve. Since we are under semi-martial law, it was necessary to secure permission to be out on the streets late at night. A group of theological students visited the 'Peace Preservation Corps' headquarters, seeking permission. 'What is Christmas?' the officials asked. A student opened a hymn book and explained thirty Christmas carols. 'Who is Messiah?' another man asked. And again a theological student, one of fervent faith, had an opportunity to give witness. Communist soldiers and minor officials attended some of our Christmas entertainments, enjoying the music and the playlets, but when someone got up to give a short talk or sermon, they followed instructions and left the room. But now, some of our finest young Christians were given an opportunity to tell the gospel story to those who understood it least. The authorities granted Christians permission to carol freely from 9:00 a. m. to 1:00 a. m."

CALLS DAY ATOM BOMB FELL "JAPAN'S DAY OF RELEASE."

Dr. Takuo Matsumoto, who was the president of Hiroshima Girls' School on the day of the atom bomb in 1945, recently in the United States, made the following statement:

"That day, August 6, 1945, was the day of great release for Japan—release from two great evils: from War itself, and from the tyranny of that element in Japan that led the Nation into the outrageous attacking of a traditionally friendly Nation, and the strongest Nation on earth. August 6 began our liberation, and from that day we moved onward."

If you measure your indifference toward Christ, that is the exact distance between yourself and Christ.—Nichol.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

This week our report shows receipts from several churches and a number of friends, making a total for the week of $391.24. This is good for the first week after such a big Easter report. There are yet packages which we have not checked in as well as a goodly number added this week to last week's most excellent report.

The lawn and campus has been cleaned from front gate to barns and dairy. It looks good, and with work it must look better and better. Classes and friends are still helping us with the inside of the buildings. We do not wish to say too much about Burlington because you might be jealous, but friends there are good to us here, both through their church, and as individuals. Before long we hope to have a bit of good news about the big kitchen, pantries and dining room of the main building. Maybe we shall invite you to come and see us prepare a dinner and then sit down and eat with our matrons and children.

I wish you could see the seventeen beautiful Palestinian costumes we have just completed here for our high school boys and girls. One onlooker described them as being "out of this world" and I replied that A. D. 30 was a good while ago! Well, they are not the prettiest I ever saw, but they are very pretty—and on girls and boys they are beautiful. Our spring program will be shown twice this third Sunday. Rev. C. Fred Allred, pastor of Pleasant Grove Congregational Christian Church, near Biscoe, N. C., will welcome us to his congregation Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock and the Rev. Clyde L. Fields will receive us at Union Grove, near Ramseur at 7:30. Besides a dramatization there will be two solos, a speech of welcome, a Scripture lesson, a chorus by the entire cast, and perhaps a few remarks (somebody will laugh at that) by the superintendent.

After we have "warmed up" with these two showings we shall make a trip to Eastern Virginia, April 21-23, giving our program at South Norfolk Friday night at 7:30, Holy Neck Saturday night at 7:30, Bethlehem Sunday morning at 11:00, Cypress Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3:30, and Suffolk Sunday night at 7:30. Friends of these children are urged to see this program at one of those places. I wish to thank the pastors and congregations for their kindness in making this trip possible. And I wish to thank everyone who is helping with this job of making a Christian home with Christian hope for these lovely children.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FROM REIDSVILLE.

sponses have been received by Mr. Humphries and members of the church that they feel that the tower music must be a source of inspiration as the bells pealed out Jesus Christ is risen today at sunrise and now the day is over at the twilight hour.

There were 435 in our Sunday school on Easter Sunday—and it would be impossible to say the number at morning worship. The Sunday school room was opened and then smaller rooms opening into the larger Sunday school auditorium were opened—opened and filled to capacity. A public address system allowed them to hear perfectly.

Miss Marion Foust used three choirs of about 60 voices and violin music accompanied the organ. The music was excellent.

During the service Mr. Humphries baptized 16 adults and 24 were received into the fellowship of the church.

We of the Reidsville church thought that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN might like to share our happy Easter. For we of this church went to our beds saying it was good to have him in God's house.

ADA MITCHELL.

ARE PLANES TO BECOME TAVERNS.

A problem of serious proportions has been launched with the news that American Airlines, a major transcontinental operator, is going to ask for licenses from the States over which it flies to serve liquor on its flights.

The carrier would be bound to respect the liquor laws of those States which have elected to remain dry. Already on overseas flights American Overseas Airlines, the transoceanic division of American Airlines, has felt it necessary to serve liquor to meet the competition of foreign airlines.

Aboard aircraft passengers who do not like liquor are forced into proximity with drinkers. Cupled with this is the problem of managing a drunken person aboard a plane who may become abusive in language or violent. And, if a situation should develop requiring alertness among passengers, drunken persons could easily imperil the safety of other travelers.

It is now a well-documented fact that the effects of a single glass of liquor are doubled when it is taken at high altitudes.

It is ironic that the same carrier which pioneered in family fares for air travel is now asking for liquor licenses. Many family heads are going to decide that air travel is not for their families if planes are to become taverns.

The airlines now have a fairly strict rule against admitting obviously tipsy persons on board flights. Both flight and ground personnel are authorized to remove such persons from planes. Are the airlines going to take on a heavier problem by inviting liquor on board. — Christian Science Monitor.

In Memoriam

MacCLENNY.

Whereas, God gave to us a man of great moral character, deep spiritual conviction, and wise counsel in all things, our brother Deacon Wilbur C. MacClenny, and in His wisdom has called him again unto His own presence; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the deacons and members of the Suffolk Christian Church, bow in humble submission to God's will, realizing that what He gave in love has returned unto Him in love.

2. That our fellowship, not only local but the fellowship of the Southern Convention, has lost one whose knowledge of the development, importance and strength of our denomination was without parallel; that our city has lost one wise in the traditions and in the needs for the future of the community; his family a devoted husband and brother.

3. That although for the past five years prohibited by physical infirmity from attending the services of worship, his prayer, concern and influence were a constant source of strength to the church. Our knowledge of this fact lays upon us the responsibility to continue in the same concern for the church and the convention. We will miss his advice and counsel.

LEATHERS.

Whereas, God in His love and wisdom has seen fit to call unto His own presence one of our faithful and devoted members, Deacon W. V. Leathers, and in his death we know a deep sense of loss, yet, are strengthened by the faith and hope that were his; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the Board of Deacons of the Suffolk Christian Church, bow in humble submission to the will of God.

2. That our church has lost a member whose loyalty was constant, our community a citizen who was wise and courageous in his desire for the growth of its physical and spiritual condition, his wife a devoted and loving husband.

3. That our interest and concern for the church and the Kingdom it represents be quickened by the loyalty and devotion he gave through years of service.

DAUGHTREY.

Whereas, on February 26, 1950, God in His wisdom, saw fit to call home the life of our beloved brother, William Allen Daughtrey, and in his going we know a keen sense of loss; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Suffolk Christian Church and its Board of Deacons in view of the great loss we have sustained, wish to express our sincere appreciation for his untiring effort in behalf of the church and the Kingdom. In whatever capacity whether great or small he was called upto to serve, he gave to it his best at all times.

2. That our church has lost one whose love and vision brought strength and purpose to its work; that his family suffers the loss of a devoted husband and father.

3. That we honor his memory and consecrated life by carrying on the work so dear to him until that day when we shall know even as we are known.

LESTER.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom called Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Lester, widow of the late George Thomas Lester, to her eternal reward on February 11, 1950, in her ninety-first year of age; and, where she was a life member of the Woman's Missionary Society of Mount Bethel Congregational Christian Church, serving as a saintly example both in word and deed; and, whereas she was held in the highest honor and esteem by her fellow members and the entire community, be it resolved:

1. That we hereby express our gratitude to God for her long and useful life reflected in her children, her grandchildren, and her great-grandchildren; and that we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will.

2. That we express our sympathy and affection to the bereft members of her family, one of whom, the Rev. F. C. Lester, D. D., has become one of the most influential ministers in our denomination.

3. That in the going of Mrs. Lester our church and community at large has suffered the loss of one of our best beloved members.

A TRIBUTE TO SALLYE M. ROANE. Rosemont Church, Norfolk, Virginia.

God has called a worker home,
Her physical labors are o'er,
But the haven she gave to her Sunday School Class
Will be working for many years more.

Those seeds of love, of patience, of faith,
She planted along her way,
Will be growing and blooming in somebody's heart
For many a future day.

We thank God for a life well spent
And pray that He'll give His increase Upon every effort that she made For the sake of "The Prince of Peace."

argued that our youth should be urged to consider drinking a social necessity or to believe that all 'men of distinction' are necessarily drinkers.

"On the contrary, the very logical, plausible argument for Repeal was that liquor, as a necessary evil, should merely be made available for those who insist upon having it, and that it should be reasonably regulated. In that, I feel, we must keep faith.

"As an argument against this proposal, it is urged that it represents one step toward the return of Prohibition. On the contrary, the best insurance against a return of Prohibition, is for the liquor and beer industries to submit to reasonable regulation. . . .

"... I have discussed the matter with perhaps hundreds of people. I am quite certain that the vast majority of these people drank to some extent, some to a most unfortunate degree. I have not yet encountered a single individual, wet or dry, but who favored such a law. . . .

"... I am not an advocate of Prohibition, nor a 'Dry.' Nevertheless, perhaps I am in a better position than the average citizen to note the havoc which is being wrought by liquor on an America which owes it to the world to be strong. Other judges of my acquaintance agree with me that at least 50 per cent of criminal law violations in our courts of record relate in some way to liquor or its use. I cannot estimate the cost in divorce, broken homes, juvenile delinquency, public welfare grants, poverty, loss of health, or loss of mind. Any impartial observer, whether Wet or Dry, must agree that liquor probably constitutes the greatest curse of civilization next to the institution of war. Why, then, permit a systematic, immensely-financed program to extend its evil tendencies?

"I am the father of two teen-age children. There is a very sordid side to liquor and beer not portrayed in the enticing advertisements in expensive magazines. I believe American parents may reasonably expect the cooperation of Congress in their efforts to shape the thinking of their teen-age youngsters along lines you and I know to be sound."

The West showed the Japanese how to construct battleships and other paraphernalia of war. It must teach them now the spiritual values of justice, mercy, honor and tolerance; of personal initiative and accountability; of intellectual curiosity and democratic self-rule.—Joseph C. Grew.

The rung of a ladder was never meant to rest upon, but only to hold a man's foot long enough to enable him to put the other somewhat higher.

STILL THE BEST

By Charles A. Wells

Books on how to conquer worry and control anxiety have been pouring out over the country, revealing the underlying sense of inadequacy and fear that plagues many lives. But the remarkable thing is that these books offer little that is new, although most of them have the approval of the latest scientific findings. It has all been written before, and for countless generations the solace and restoration of body, mind and spirit have come to those who have sought divine truth as the source of strength. Nearly all distress and worry come from our sense of failure, frustration and inadequacy. When men keep conscious of the place of God in their lives, they feel power instead of inadequacy, purpose instead of frustration, and divine significance, instead of failure, in all they do. "Introverted living" is another phrase for selfish living. Jesus taught the science of "the outgoing life" with magnificent skill. It is a matter of losing oneself in God's will.

RELIGION IN AMERICAN LIFE.

Organized religion has expressed its appreciation to the nation's advertising industry for the part it played last year in emphasizing the importance of religion and religious institutions to the American way of life.

A certificate of appreciation and gratitude was presented to the Advertising Council at a meeting of its board of directors at the Hotel Pierre April 13. It was presented to the board chairman, Samuel C. Gale, vice-president of General Mills of Minneapolis, himself a prominent Protestant layman, upon behalf of the "churches and synagogues of the nation associated with the United Church Canvass."

In making the presentation, Rev. Thomas K. Thompson, minister of the United Church of Christ (Congregational Christian) of Cranston, Rhode Island, paid tribute to the whole-hearted cooperation extended by the advertising industry to the Religion in American Life interfaith campaign last November in which more than 2,000 communities participated. Other speakers were Joseph Boyle, vice-president, J. Walter Thompson Co., and Robert W. Boggs, assistant manager, General Publicity, Union Carbide and Carbon Co., who served as coordinator for the first religious campaign conducted by the Advertising Council.

The certificate "in recognition of a great public service" read in part:

"In November, 1949, The Advertising Council made available its facilities for a campaign on the importance of religion and our religious institutions to our American way of life.

"This effort, 'Religion in American Life,' paralleled the Council's campaigns to strengthen our social and economic foundations, and brought to bear on it the power of the entire advertising world.

"Over 2,000 communities cooperated in the drive. Business men worked with religious groups more closely than they had ever worked before. Advertising, using all the modern means of communication, set a new standard for effectiveness in behalf of religion.

"The results are evident in daily reports of increases in church attendance, financial support, and spiritual benefits to our people.

"It is not too much to hope that the 'Religion in American Life' campaign, by strengthening our religious institutions, will help bring about a clearer insight into our American ideals of cooperation and understanding—even bring us nearer to 'peace on earth, good will to men' . . . For its whole-hearted support and cooperation."

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Oakland Church to Entertain The Southern Convention

DR. H. S. HARDCASTLE, Host Pastor

OAKLAND CHRISTIAN CHURCH, CHUCKATUCK, VIRGINIA

The Thirty-Ninth Biennial Session of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches meets at Oakland Christian Church, near Chuckatuck, Virginia, May 2-4. The sessions begin at 2:00 p. m. Tuesday, May 2, and will adjourn at noon on Thursday, May 4.

This is the "big" meeting of our Convention. All officers, board members, committee members, ministers and delegates from local churches are urged to be present. If delegates nominated by local churches and elected by the conference find it impossible to attend, the Executive Committee of each conference will act for the conference in certifying alternates.

It will be a great help to Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, host pastor, if those expecting to attend the sessions will notify him of desire for over-night accommodations. Oakland Church members will open their homes to our delegates and visitors, and their hospitality will be unexcelled.

Those driving to Oakland should take Virginia State Highway No. 10 out of Suffolk, and Oakland is located about 10 miles from Suffolk.

An excellent program has been arranged, and significant actions will be taken by your Convention. Be there.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

DR. JOHN G. TRUITT, President

DR. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

THE FORTHCOMING CONVENTION

Why attend the Convention? Go, first of all, to visit that delightful section of Tidewater Virginia in and around Chuckatuck. Go and see what a large and progressive rural church like Oakland can do. Go and get personally acquainted with more of our Convention personnel, both lay and ministerial. Go and acquaint yourself with the procedure and the program of the Convention, its boards, institutions and enterprises. Go to hear the new voices scheduled for this Convention. Go to represent your church in the larger life of the denomination, remembering that "ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular."

While the work within our Convention leaves much to be desired, the total results of our present program are by no means insignificant. We have many competent ministers and officers, a host of lay workers, numerous committees, boards and institutions. All of these are rendering devoted service. We are to hear a report of their stewardship for the biennium. Don't miss it!

Moreover, we are interested not only in the past, but also in the future. Great issues must be confronted. We need new light on our problems. Plans must be formulated, duties defined and goals established. We need wisdom, both corporate and divine. Oakland should be the point of departure for a greater biennium, a greater program, a greater church. See you at the Convention!

PORTSMOUTH HOME COMING

Every person should hold in affectionate regard three homes: one's paternal home, the church home and the eternal home. No one can live at his best without the influence of these essential homes. Memory and hope join hands and give strength on occasions of homecoming.

It is fitting that a church should observe home coming. Such an occasion revives friendships, renews loyalties, opens the sluice-gate of memory, and points to new vistas for days and years to come. The ties that bind are strengthened, the embers of loyalty are rekindled, and latent powers for kingdom service are released. Why shouldn't all churches observe home coming? A call back to fundamental loyalties, to basic institutions can be appropriately sounded on this day.

Sunday, April 30, will be Home Coming Day at First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Virginia. It will be a grand occasion. Fellowship has been rich in that church through many years. Friendship yields its dividends, and in many instances the interest is compounded. The loyalty of some of the members in this church has been unsurpassed. The joys of home coming should assure them that their labors in the Lord have not been in vain.

Many families from Congregational Christian Churches in North Carolina and Virginia, and elsewhere to be sure, have moved into Portsmouth. Some of these have neglected their Church relationships. The churches of our faith and order are numerous in Tidewater Virginia. Given the loyalty of all our people who live in proximity to First Church, Portsmouth, it should move steadily upward in the ranks of strength and leadership in Eastern Virginia.

DR. HELFENSTEIN REPORTS ON EVANGELISM

An important annual meeting of the Department of Evangelism of The Federal Council of Churches was held in New York City April 14. Members of the Department from as far as Los Angeles, California, and from the deep South were in attendance. Visiting delegates from The United Church of Canada were also present.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein of Richmond, Virginia, who has been a member of this Department of the Federal Council since 1920 was also in attendance at the meeting. Dr. Helfenstein has been closely associated with the work of the Department of Evangelism down through all these years, having been one of the seven speakers on the Pacific Coast Visitation Evangelism "Five Weeks' Mission" in 1925, Missions being conducted in the seven principal cities of Oregon, Washington and California. Dr. Helfenstein was also a member of the Federal Council Team in the Washington (D. C.) Mission, in several Missions held in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New York State. He was also a Guest Leader in the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) "National Teaching Mission" and a member of the Speakers Team with six ministers of as many denominations in the National Preaching Mission conducted by the Federal Council at Fargo, North Dakota, in 1942.

Dr. Helfenstein was requested by the editor to submit a report of the recent meeting to The Sun. He reports that, "The meeting of the Department of Evangelism held last week revealed a marvelous development of the Department down through the years, as well as revealing the fact that Visitation Evangelism is one of the major emphases of The Federal Council. Four hundred and sixty-four churches have cooperated in the National Christian Teaching Missions during the past year, which Missions discovered 211,632 people as the immediate evangelistic responsibility of the cooperating churches."

He continues: "Twenty nine Visitation Evangelism Campaigns were conducted under the auspices of the Department in the larger centers of population throughout the country. All these campaigns were characterized by a hearty cooperation on the part of the various denominations. The enthusi- (Continued on page 15.)

At Home and Abroad

A LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

Union High School,
Foochow, Fukien, China,
March 20, 1950.

DEAR FRIENDS:

These last few days have brought us some unexpected blessings, several letters from home folks which had not been sitting around somewhere for weeks and letters from friends all over. What a feast of friendship we've been having? Some letters had been only two weeks en route, so we've felt very much in touch with the world once more, despite blockade and bombings.

The other night Union High had a supper meeting welcoming the new students of this semester. The dining tables and stools were set up in a big circle outdoors. In the center was the big wooden bucket of rice for the faculty, while each boy and girl had his own little clay pot or mixing bowl of rice. Since this was a special meal, there were a number of bowls of good vegetable and meat dishes to be eaten before we started on the rice, as well as little dishes of things to be eaten along with it. We drew slips telling which table and which seat were ours—table named Peace, seat 4 of Patience No. 6, etc. A couple of tables of older students were the leaders, keeping up songs and yells and requesting others to do certain stunts. From the singing of Grace to the leaders' song announcing the end of the meal and adjournment to the auditorium, we were reminded of youth conferences in America. But back of these boys is many a story of hardship and deprivation. The majority of them have to work along with their study in order to earn their tuition and expenses. They are enthusiastic and love fun as do American high schoolers; but life is far more serious for them.

Some other schools have not yet begun the second semester, partly because of the threat of bombing and partly because of the students' inability to pay the fees necessary to run the schools. Union High, being an agricultural vocational school, has more work scholarships to offer its students. As I look out the window now I can see boys watering the fields with their big wooden-spout buckets swinging from shoulder poles. One boy helps in our little garden and pumps water for us, the house we live in having a regular plumbing system which survived the Japanese occupation.

Dick has become a real teacher now, with four classes in industrial arts and all the students for physical education, plus a class in visual education at the seminary in town once a week. Dorothy is teaching English, a very light load since the government has cut it to three hours a week, an elective course.

A few other classes have been changed a bit, too, to allow time for all the political science classes and extra-curricular government training courses. With all their special courses for teachers, their student meetings and their controlled newspapers, we wonder just how much real change the new regime can effect. The day celebrating the new treaty between Russia and China is an illustration of this point. That day was well chosen by the authorities, the third day of the Chinese New Year, Sunday, February 19, our calendar. Shops were still closed and everyone was still in holiday mood. In fact, preparations were already begun for the big Lantern Festival, March 3. In this festive atmosphere, the treaty was announced and celebration date set. Parades and posters, soldiers and Communist youth were everywhere, whole schools turned out with banners and costumes. Everywhere we foreigners went we were caught in the crowds. Every parade had its banners proclaiming the joys of the new treaty, the generosity of Russia and the wicked imperialism of America. Students impersonating caricatures of Uncle Sam and Chiang Kai Shek sometimes took part in skits showing how China and Russia would overcome these enemies. Hatred of Americans seemed to shriek at us from signboards and parades; yet not even one malicious look was cast our way. If we were noticed, it was with the usual curiosity or with a smiling pleasure at the fun everybody was having parading and beating gongs and drums, etc. We were just a part of the grand holiday and perhaps a lot of that propaganda was taken in the same spirit.

The great difficulty in reaching many of these four hundred and fifty million people isolated by illiteracy as well as poor communications and bound by ancient custom as well as by poverty, may slow down this "new day" and bring about unexpected compromises in its program. It must be hard for those who saw similar demonstrations of a hopeful new day when the former party came to power. Enthusiasm for reformation ran high then, too, and some progress was achieved in the face of great obstacles. But the years of war and hardship took their toll. Morale collapsed and the quality of leadership deteriorated shamefully. In the economic distress, ancient loyalty to family rather than community or country, became uppermost and families were enriched at the expense of the public. The old picture of fabulous wealth in a poverty-stricken country showed all who cared that there must be a chance. Empty promises only hastened the turning to another leadership, and there was only one who offered a program. We only hope enthusiasm won't be wasted in condemnation of those who don't follow the line. Already many words and much ink are so wasted. The lot of many people grows daily bitterer. China never could afford the armies she's been using.

The coming of a new regime has hastened the change already begun in missionary plans and programs. Though our problems have been increased and our very living made harder, the need is greater than ever. The need for economic assistance is so great as to overshadow all else. Take just one phase of this economic problem: the salary for one American missionary would pay six to twelve Chinese teachers' salaries. What is the Christian's responsibility in the face of such a discrepancy in living standards? Money alone would never solve the problem. This much we know, more and more missionary effort must be in the background; more and more initiative must come from the Chinese. The missionary's very living must be less conspicuous; perhaps a simpler, more frugal plane of living might bring him into closer fellowship with the people.

Our hearth warmed today when a Mrs. Lee, pastor's wife, came to us with a project of her own to help church members. Some do not have enough to eat; their husbands or sons are in Formosa and cannot send money back to their families. Mrs. Lee as a child learned to make wheat

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Our State President, Mrs. F. C. Lester, and family, have been recovering from illness while making a visit in Florida. We have missed them greatly during their absence, and we wish for them a speedy recovery and return to North Carolina, where they are sorely needed.

ASHEBORO DISTRICT HAS WOMAN'S RALLY.

The Asheboro District women held a special rally on April 11 at the Asheboro Church, with Dr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton as guest speakers.

Mrs. E. P. Boroughs, District Chairman, reported that eight churches out of fourteen were represented, totaling thirty-eight women. There were several visitors and four ministers present.

Mrs. Moulton was especially glad to see and greet many old friends from former visits.

BURLINGTON NEWS.

Mrs. E. H. Oulds of Roanoke, Va., will be guest speaker at the May meeting of the Burlington Woman's Auxiliary. Her subject will be "Home and Family Life."

Mrs. Florence Moulton of Ahmednagar, India, spoke to the women of the church on Monday morning in Burlington. Many felt, after hearing Mrs. Moulton speak, that, although the women have accomplished much, much has been left undone and all must strive ever harder to do more and give more to help those who have less.

This opportunity to share comes through their Friendly Service for next month. This gift goes to Japan, where Dr. L. E. Spikes is now serving our government and writes that "The Japanese people are wonderful, especially the children."

NATIONAL FAMILY WEEK TO BE OBSERVED MAY 7-14.

Mrs. Garland Spratley, Chairman of the Family Life Department, reminds the women of the Southern Convention that National Family Week will be observed May 7-14. The theme will be "God Works Through Homes," which inspires families to cultivate a finer life within the home.

She suggests several leaflets which are helpful in your plans for the observance. Pages of Power for Home Religion is a splendid booklet at five cents a copy, with devotions for one week in the home. Your Home and National Family Week and How the Church May Cooperate are leaflets at two cents each, containing suggested plans for a Christian family to use. These may be obtained from International Council of Religious Education, 206 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Dr. Paul Reynolds has compiled the following "Family Life Book Shelf" with interesting and instructive books which can be used in connection with the National Family Week observance:

I. General.

There's No Place Like Home; It Runs in the Family; Just a Durable Parents—Three popular books by James Lee Ellenwood. Amusing, entertaining yet sound and helpful. Intriguing illustrations. Worth many a chuckle.

Stop Annoying Your Children—Dr. W. W. Bauer, Director of Health Education for the AMA. Provocative, stimulating, practical.

Bringing Up Ourselves—Mrs. Helen Hogue. Written out of long experience. Tells parents and teachers things they ought to know. Simply and sympathetically written.

When Children Ask—Marguerite H. Bro. Another "standard equipment" book for the church library.

Sex Guidance in Family Life Education—Frances Bruce Strain. One of the best in its field. Mrs. Strain is a minister's wife.

Pamphlets:

Enjoy Your Child; Ages 1, 2 & 3; Understand Your Child, from 6 to 12; Keeping Up With the Teen-Agers; Making The Grade as Dad—Public Affairs Pamphlets. 20c each. Very good.

II. Religion in the Home.

Opening the Door for God—A Manual for Parents by Herman J. Sweet. Practical, simple, usable. Good basis for parents' group discussions.

Christian Happiness in the Home—Dr. F. W. Wiegman. 13 short chapters suitable for group study and discussion.

Our Family Grows Toward God—Mary Clemens Odell. One of the best new booklets about religion in the home. Reasonable in price (50c), readable, grew out of family experience.

God Lives in Homes—Lulu S. Hamilton. Excellent devotional materials. Prayers for special days.

The Family Worships Together—Mazelle W. Thomas. Pictures, stories, actual family experience with various types of worship in the modern home. Low in cost, 50c.

Tell Me About Jesus; Tell Me About God; Tell Me About the Bible—Three books by Mary Alice Jones. Beautiful children's books. Many pictures in color. Excellent gifts for families with young children.

The Family Looks at One World—Mildred C. Widber. Another of the excellent "Family Books." Good for family "out-loud" reading. Pictures and letters from all over the world.

III. Preparation for Marriage.

From Friendship to Marriage—Roy A. Burkhardt. Helpful steps. For senior High and up.

Family Living—Evelyn M. Duvall. New (1950) High School text book for courses in this field. Good illustrations. Interesting reading.

When You Marry—Evelyn M. Duvall and Dr. Rueben Hill. Very popular college level text. Entertainingly written yet sound. Questions, clever illustrations.

This Man and This Woman—Frederick W. Brink. For the engaged couple. Clear, sound, helpful, religious frame of reference.

This Love of Ours—Leslie R. Smith. For newly-weds. Realistic, practical, deeply religious.

Conserving Marriage and the Family—A Realistic Discussion of the Divorce Problem by Ernest R. Groves. A "must" book for the minister's library.

Building Your Marriage—Duvall. Public Affairs Pamphlet. 20c. Much helpful material in very compact form. Attractively presented.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The sixtieth session of the Elon College Commencement will be held May 27, 28 and 29. Saturday, May 27, will be Alumni Day. The program will consist of the Class Day Exercise at 10:00 by the Senior Class. Class reunions will follow. A picnic lunch for all alumni and visitors on the campus will be at 12:30. The business meeting of the General Alumni Association will be in the afternoon at 3:00. At this meeting the Alumni Secretary will make his report and a detailed report will be given concerning the construction of the new gymnasium, the amount paid, pledged, and due. A reception will be given by President and Mrs. Smith at 6:00 honoring the senior class and the reunion classes. The alumni banquet will be served at 7:00. Dr. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Virginia, will deliver the alumni oration. On Sunday morning at 11:30, Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean Emeritus of Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Connecticut, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. The Music Department will give its usual program in the afternoon and the Elon Singers will present The Seasons by Haydn at 8:30 in the evening. A program by the Elon Singers is always well received. The Board of Trustees will meet at 9:30 Monday morning for the purpose of authorizing the awarding of degrees to all who have completed requirements for graduation from the college and certificates to those who have earned them. Graduation exercises will be held in the auditorium at 10:30. The Honorable Ralph Bradford, Executive Vice-President of the United States Chamber of Commerce will deliver the address. This will be the largest graduating class in the history of the college. There are more than 150 students classified as seniors. Approximately twenty of these will not complete their requirements for graduation until summer school is over.

At the conclusion of the morning exercises the college will confer honorary degrees on six distinguished citizens of our country. The college is awarding six such degrees this year in consideration of the 60th anniversary of our commencement occasions.

We feel that a very excellent program has been arranged and are anticipating a most worthwhile occasion for the college and all who are interested. This is an earnest invitation to the members of the church, alumni and friends to attend any or all items on the program.

CLASS OF 1910.

The Class of 1910 is invited and will be observing its fortieth anniversary on the approaching commencement occasion. The enrollment of the school from 1906 to 1910 was not large. Most of the time there were fewer than 200 students on the campus, consequently, the Class of 1910 was not a large class. There were only eleven members, four young ladies and seven young men. The ladies were Nannie Baker Farmer, Macie Farmer (Mrs. A. C. Hall), Nannie Emma Farmer and Carrie Boyd (Mrs. W. R. Dees). These young ladies were all from Pleasant Grove Church, Halifax County, Virginia. There were seven young men (young then) members of the class: J. W. Barney, W. W. Elder, C. C. Fonville, A. C. Hall, A. L. Lincoln, L. E. Smith and W. Frank Warren.

The members of the Class of 1910 have entered into different professions, have had rich experiences, and have made notable contributions in their fields.

Nannie Baker Farmer and Nannie Emma Farmer have been and are successful teachers in the public schools of Virginia.

Macie Farmer married Lon Hall. The Halls live in Greensboro, N. C., where Lon is a member of the English faculty of Woman's College and has been for years. He is not only a teacher of note but an author and lecturer of influence.

Carrie Boyd married W. R. Dees. Mr. Dees is a prominent business man in Freemont, N. C.

After graduation John Willis Barney studied at the University of Virginia, University of Wisconsin and Columbia University. He has devoted his life to teaching. For a number of years he taught in the public schools of Pennsylvania and Michigan. Many years ago he was called to serve Alma Mater and he has rendered faithful and efficient service. It will be remembered that John Willis Barney was a good student while in college. He is now Professor of English and is rendering significant service.

"Billy" Elder went places in the United States Navy as a Chaplain. He was advanced to top rank. He was slated to retire during the war but his services were so valuable that he was retained by the Government for the duration. Billy took a second trip to the marriage altar. For his second wife he came to the college and took one of the most popular deans of women that the college has ever had, Julia Mae Oxford. They now live in Concord, Georgia.

Claude Fonville is a successful business man in Burlington, N. C., where he is engaged in the real estate and insurance business.

Liggett Lincoln earned his degree in medicine after graduating from Elon College and located in New York City. He is a very prominent physician. He is connected with Bellevue Hospital and with Cornell Medical School. His friends will recall that he was physician to the late Paderewski, the famous Polish pianist.

Frank Warren has devoted his life to teaching in the public schools of North Carolina and has done an outstanding piece of work in the field of secondary education. At the time of his retirement he was Superintendent of City Schools, Durham, N. C., which at that time was the most coveted position in the public school system of North Carolina.

The writer of this article was a ministerial student while in college, continued his training at Princeton Theological Seminary and Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey. He was graduated from the Seminary in 1915 and from the University in 1916. After spending 29 years in the pastorate, by persuasion and fate he became president of the college in which capacity he is serving at present.

All members of the Class of 1910 together with their wives or husbands are invited to have breakfast with Mrs. Smith and me at the Alamance Country Club on Saturday morning, May 27, at 10:00.

It is the hope of all that this class shall gather on the campus Saturday, May 27, 100 per cent strong for refreshing of minds, renewing of acquaintances, recalling experiences, and reminding and checking up on ambitions. A picture of the Class of 1910 taken on the occasion of graduation will be displayed and it is the present plan to have pictures of the

The Psychology and Stewardship of Church Building

"You don't believe the impossible can be done? Well, I'm one who has seen it done. Let me tell you about it. I can easily recall the doubts and fears expressed at the congregational meeting when we first talked of a new church. Oh, we all were aware of the inadequacy and the appearance of our building—inside and out. We knew changes and improvements were necessary to meet our increasing requirements, expanding programs, greater population problems. We recognized the danger of our becoming less effective in our work, and the need of keeping up our prestige in the community. But . . .

creased our building fund from $7,000 to $9,000. This, with the bequest, would give us at least $69,000, and possibly $89,000. An architect drew us tentative plans of a new sanctuary, with an estimate of the cost in the neighborhood of $120,000. Perhaps that might be pared to $100,000. How could we, or could we, raise $31,000?

"We read about the new service provided by the Board of Home Missions. "Well, the congregation met and decided upon plans for the new church, and voted to secure the services of this Church Financial Adviser to direct us in our efforts to raise the money. You see, we had discovered that the Board of Home Missions was really giving us a service in this connection. The only cost to the church would be, in addition to his hotel accommodations, meals and minor incidentals like laundry, a contribution of $100 to the Board of Home Missions. We found that every church in the country, regardless of where it was located, paid the same amount. After a mutually satisfactory date had been decided upon we presented a formal application for his services, approved by the Superintendent of the Conference, and accompanied the application, as required, with an advance of $50 towards our $100 contribution.

"In plenty of time to make proper and necessary preparation—I admit now—we received the outline of procedure to be followed throughout this entire program. This included that which we should do during the six weeks preceding the arrival of the Church Financial Adviser, and also that which was to be done during the week he personally spent with us. And I want to confess right now, as I look back over everything, that had we followed all that was printed in that booklet, and adhered to the instructions as per schedule given, we would have found the entire project progressing more smoothly, and with less strain on us all. I do not mean to give the impression that we didn't enjoy it—it was the happiest week we ever had in our church.

"The first thing that struck us as we looked at the booklet was the title, Financial Project for Churches. Not a campaign! Throughout the booklet, we saw the emphasis on the difference between a Stewardship—that was it—A Stewardship Financial Project and a secular campaign to raise money. Now, we had had many experiences working on or directing money-raising campaigns for various causes, and consequently were trained in the techniques employed in those affairs. Were we not having this man here to raise money for us? What's this talk about Stewardship? Well, we had asked this fellow to come. We would go through with it. But—again—but . . .

"We had done the first requirement—that of deciding upon the nature of our building program, approved at a regularly called congregational ments, expanding programs, greater population problems. We recognized the danger of our becoming less effective in our work, and the need of keeping up our prestige in the community. But . . .

"Finally, after much argument and discussion, we launched a campaign for a new building. Twenty workers responded and we raised $7,000.00. Couldn't do much building with that, could we? A little later we were informed of a legacy of from $60,000 to $80,000 we were to receive from the estate of a former member who deeply loved his church. Now things looked brighter. We had insions since January 1, 1948. They now had a man, called the Church Financial Adviser, who counseled, advised and helped in financial programs 'involving new buildings or expansion or renovation projects.' He also aided churches with their attempts to liquidate existing indebtedness. We found he spent a major portion of his time in directing financial projects for churches, giving them a carefully planned six-week program. This included all the steps necessary to be followed and gave the type of publicity and information material to be used, as well as a carefully prepared time schedule.

meeting, arrived at a monetary goal, and voted to secure the services of the Church Financial Adviser. Now, the booklet said, hold various Discussion Group Meetings with the different groups of leaders so that they become thoroughly conversant with all aspects of the program. Then we were to have different persons with spiritual enthusiasm to appear before each and all groups and societies to inform them of, and to inspire them of, the cooperative task ahead. That seemed somewhat foolish to us, but we did it. And found that the speakers themselves not only got a great deal of pleasure out of it, but that a feeling of one-ness and enthusiasm was beginning to appear throughout the entire church. The various topics for discussion and the suggested films, filmstrips and slides helped tremendously in the meetings.

"The next suggestion was that the minister preach at least two Stewardship sermons during the pre-canvass week period. We generally didn't like to hear the minister talking to us like that. I see now we just didn't want to have these things brought too forcibly to our attention. Yet, the minister did it—two fine thought-provoking sermons.

"It was also listed that we should have at least three laymen speak on different Sundays, on some phase of the program, and how well we should support it. There were to be for about ten minutes during the regular worship services. This was a little hard to do. The men hesitated about getting up before our people and expressing their feelings publicly. However, three men finally did it—with good results to themselves and for the project. You see, I'm calling it 'project' now, too, instead of a 'campaign' or 'drive.'

"Meanwhile, we had met with our Conference Superintendent, discussing the entire project with him, and acquainting him with all phases of our program. His suggestions were very helpful. Especially, was the one of adhering strictly to the instructions in the booklet, and following all the requirements contained therein.

"Leaflets on Stewardship, Christian giving, and handling of money were ordered from those advised in the booklet and were put in each letter sent out. They were also placed on the church literature table, and comments were made upon them from the pulpit.

"The instructions stated we should secure workers for the project equal to 25 per cent of the number of calls to be made for subscriptions and pledges. And that these canvassers should be men only. That seemed strange to me—not to use women as workers. Why, they were the best workers we had in the church! To get 108 men to commit themselves to this was a physical impossibility. (We had 426 calls to be made.) The most we ever had together working on a campaign or canvass before was 20. One hundred and eight men! Crazy! Well, as I said, we had a good chairman. And our minister was a peppy, sincere, much-loved individual. They convinced us we could secure 40 men.

"The booklet said the final results of the financial project would be in direct proportion to the number of workers we got, and who attended the training sessions. Somebody said, 'How much money do you think we can raise?' The average opinion was $16,000, but the minister managed to get us to raise our estimate to $20,000.

"Then we were supposed to arrange at least three afternoon meetings of women. 'Thought he didn't want to use women in this project,' someone said. 'Better cooperate,' another added. So we appointed a chairman to arrange for these gatherings. And set up a session with the Church School officers and staff, and one for the young people. 'See what comes out of it,' the chairman said.

"The prospect cards—'Information Cards' they were called—were secured from the Missions Council Office. We were to prepare these, showing the family name, and then the individual name of each member of the family. In addition, his or her connection in any and every way with the church or its many departments should be checked. Then the cards were to be routed geographically so that as little travel time as possible would be consumed in the visitation. In the meantime, the workers were to be paired into teams according to rules for such procedure stated in the booklet. The routed Information Cards were then to be assigned to the teams, again according to advice in this connection. We were to keep in mind eight calls per team, so that each team could have one-half hour per call during the canvass time from two to six Sunday afternoon.

"Yes, there were lots of other things to do. There were four letters to write. The booklet said what was to be contained in these letters and when to mail them—one each week beginning three weeks before the Canvass Week, the fourth to go out during the Canvass Week. But it was up to us to compose the letters from the outline given.

"In the first letter, from the trustees, was to be included a brochure. We found detailed advice for preparing this in the booklet, and were sent samples to give us some ideas about the format. We argued about costs, whether it would warrant the expense, and how far we should go in the type of brochure. A lot of time was consumed before we decided to follow instructions.

"The Financial Adviser's booklet said to send with the second letter (from the Canvass or Building Committee) that which he called Arms of the Church. The exhibit of this in the booklet looked nice—a church with 'arms' radiating from it, showing all the activities of the church. 'Now why do you suppose he wants that?' was asked. 'Don't know, but suppose we have to do it!' 'Who will or can?' 'It says here that this should be more of a home-made affair—not as elaborate as the brochure. We can mimeograph it in the church office.'

"So with good-natured grumbling we started those things. And did we find out things about the church we never realized before as we prepared them! That in itself was worth a lot to those who worked on the brochure and The Arms of the Church, so they said.

"The two letters were prepared. And the minister worked on his. The fourth letter, from the canvassers, looked as though it might be important, but that had to wait.

"First thing we knew time slipped up on us and we were a week late in starting our mailing. However, we felt all was in good shape. We would be ready when the Church Financial

PSYCHOLOGY & STEWARDSHIP OF CHURCH BUILDING.

Canvasser arrived. As ready as we thought necessary.

"I still vividly remember that first meeting with the Adviser. On Monday night, the Trustees, Finance and Building Committees, the Canvass Committee, Heads of Departments and the Pastor met with him. What promised to be just another routine meeting really woke us up. And with a bang! After explaining that he was a former banker, and that he would be speaking as one layman to another, the Financial Adviser showed us that this church building project was a greater event than we even thought it was. And it looked big enough to us as it was! He proved to us that this was an event that generally happened only once in the lifetime of the average person. Then he developed his approach to church financing—that we should be interested in developing the lives of the givers rather than in a mere money-raising campaign. If we accomplished the first, the second would naturally follow. You know, we began to feel that there was something to this.

"Then, before we knew it, he began quietly to review that which was to have been done by the time of his arrival (and we had had a timetable checklist provided for that purpose in the booklet). We got along fairly well on the early preparation. When we told him we were a week late in our mailing, the Adviser pointed out that in order to get the story across in a manner that the people would read, short, well-written material, properly spaced for mailing was an essential factor. We thought of the letters unread that went in the waste-basket in our homes, and how we criticized if too many letters were received in one week. The minister got his letter out quickly so that it would not conflict with the Canvassers' letter, I can tell you. And the canvassers' letter! I laugh now when I think of when the Adviser came to that. He said, 'This letter is purportedly to be from all the canvassers, saying they have faith in this project, and that it can and will be done. It also asks that in return for the time given by them, they felt justified in asking the receivers of the latter to remain home until called upon. Now to omit a name might cause some ill will. I trust you have all the men needed to do the work already committed, and paired into teams of two. I see you expect to make 426 calls. One-fourth of that—the number required—is not quite 107; 108 will give us an even 54 teams. You ought to have at least 110 men to take care of any emergency that might arise.'

"With chagrin, we said that we had secured only 40 men. 'Those 40 men are all that we can get to serve,' we said. 'We've fine-tooth combed our entire membership to get that amount, too.'

Well, didn't he politely, but firmly, show us that he was only seeking less than one-third of our manpower. 'Yes,' we said, 'but most of the remaining men are inactive—never did anything for their church.' 'Why not use women?' someone else asked.

"I still remember his reply, and how truthfully his utterances bore fruit. I only use men, not because I do not recognize the ability of women, but because I am aware of it! In too many churches the women do most of the work. It is time the men responded to their duties—and privileges. By using women, we give the men another grand opportunity for shifting their responsibilities to women. Get after these inactive members. I'll return a group of active men to you at the end of the week.'

"So prompted and urged on, we did get 76 men—almost again as much as

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS & GIRLS:

The other day someone was telling me how they had made an interesting stained glass window. They saved broken bits of crayon for this purpose. You may like to make some, too.

Choose a piece of paper the size you want. If you plan to cover a whole window, use a large piece of wrapping paper. A small piece made as a medallion to go in the middle of the window would be just as pretty. When you have decided on the size and shape that you want—think of the shapes you have seen—fold your paper in the middle. Then open it, and on one side of the fold shave bits from the crayons. After you have your colors on, fold the paper again. Now move it carefully to your mother's ironing board. First lay a thickness of newspaper over the board and then put on your paper with the shavings—make sure the colors are not all in one spot, but spread over the paper. Next, press it lightly with a warm iron. Open it and hold to the light. The wax of the crayon will run into the paper and make the colors look very much like stained glass.

Do you like the lovely colors of stained glass windows? Perhaps your church has beautiful windows. If not, do visit some church that has them. The most beautiful windows in our part of the country are at the Duke University Chapel at Durham, North Carolina. Their colors and shapes are most inspiring. The feet of the figures are very modernistic, and very striking to see—the Bible characters look as if they had really used their feet to have such big joints. St. Paul's Church in Richmond, Va., has some famous windows, too. They are not so lovely as the ones in Duke Chapel, but are famous for their historical significance. One of them is a memorial to General Lee and others have been given by or in memory of famous people.

The people of Europe who were the artisans that built the great Gothic churches, gave their lives to church work and spent great portions of their lives working on churches. Some carved stone, others wood; but many worked with glass. They shaped the pieces of colored glass and fastened them with the lead that holds them together. They were dedicated in their task.

Our First Church at Portsmouth has two magnificent windows—probably the loveliest in the Conference. The people in the church have always been proud of them and keep them in good repair. And keep them clean—for dirt dims the colors. One of the ministers of the church was married there—and the bride chose a time when the rays of the sun would shine through the glass in radiant splendor and it did!

I know a man in Richmond who makes stained glass windows as his hobby. He makes a pattern, then cuts the pieces, and fits them according to the pattern. While he is not a professional artist, he has made some lovely windows. He is a man interested in church and one who gives much to the church.

Make your windows for home and Sunday School.

PSYCHOLOGY & STEWARDSHIP OF CHURCH BUILDING.

we thought possible. Of course some had to take time from their office or factory to do this, and to also pair them into teams. Then we had to complete the routing and assigning of the Informatin Cards. And get out the Canvassers' letters. This all took longer than we anticipated. How we wished now that we had worked a little harder before the Canvass week and done things in the proper order. For we were wearing ourselves down, and using energy which now I see could and should have been used for other things. The Church Financial Adviser had so many additional ideas and suggestions that would have proven extremely valuable. We didn't have time to do them all. But how enthusiastic we were becoming as night after night passed. We were beginning to get the spirit of 'People instead of Dollars,' 'Developing the Character of the Giver rather than Making Money.' And while we were doing all this, we collected material and mimeographed a Fact sheet of technical questions and answers which were considered impractical for inclusion in the training sessions. This sheet was included in the Canvassers' kits. We had the teams ready for announcing Thursday night, and gave out the kits and assignment of calls to the workers at the Friday meeting. This enabled the Canvassers to study the approach for each call in accordance with the techniques given during the training evenings.

"Canvass Sunday was a big, eventful day. The Adviser spoke in the various departments of the Church School and got those youngsters to tell that which he told them to their parents. Smart stuff. We just had everybody talking and pulling for this project. During the church service, the canvassers were formally—and, it proved to be, dramatically—commissioned to go forth on the Canvass, not as 'beggars,' but as ambassadors of the church—of God's work. They were to afford an opportunity for those upon whom they called to invest with them in Christianity. The Adviser preached a challenging sermon at this service.

"You notice that the plan given to us included no luncheon or dinner meetings—hip, hip, hurrah affairs. But we did have dinner for the workers immediately after the church services. This made possible last-minute adjustments and announcements. The big thing was that it kept the workers together, not permitting a let-down between the inspiring service and in the time for starting on the calls.

"After the dinner, for the first time, we met in the church sanctuary. There the Adviser gave his last talk to us, the shot-in-the-arm before we went on our missions. Then we each one made our own pledge. I see now the wisdom of that. We had to sell ourselves before we could sell others. Next, the pledges were gathered and given to the team having the card of the canvassers' family, and upon whom they were to call. This gave that team a good-sized pledge with which to start out, instilled enthusiasm into them, and raised their sights still higher.

"Then we had our picture taken. We thought that suggestion of the Adviser was somewhat childish, but as I now look back on it, there was good psychology in doing it. We laughed and joked as we were properly grouped—a oneness was created, a solidity and determination of purpose established. I prize that picture now as one of my choice possessions.

"Promptly at 2:00 we were on our way, and until 6:00 we made our calls. At 7:30, we returned with our wives or sweethearts—a happy, unbelievably inspired number of men. While we made our reports to well-selected auditors, the adviser met with

HOSEA, THE MAN AND HIS MESSAGE.

LESSON VI—MAY 7, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge.—Hosea 4:6.

LESSON TEXT: Hosea 4:1-9; 6:1-3; 10:12-13.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 121:1-8.

The Man and His Times.

We know little about Hosea, and what little we know comes from the prophecy that bears his name. He undoubtedly came from the Northern Kingdom, and was a contemporary of Amos during the latter days of Jeroboam's reign, that is Jeroboam II. In his time some of the evils predicted by Amos had begun to appear. Calamities crowded thick and fast upon Israel, the fear of Assyria hung like a pall over Israel, and made the leaders helpless, and religion had become corrupt and had lost its saving power.

Hosea's message came out of his personal experience. He had married a woman named Gomer. She bore three children, but there was a reasonable doubt about the paternity of some of them. As a matter of fact she proved unfaithful to Hosea, and finally left the home, deserted her children, and became a woman of the street. So low did she sink that she was finally put on the auction block and sold as a slave for a mere pittance. Hosea heard that she was to be sold and went to the auction and bought her. He could not take her back into his home at once, but he did provide a house for her and took care of her, in an effort to effect her redemption. The story does not tell whether he was successful or not. But the story does show this tragic experience in the man's family and personal life gave him insight into the heart of God in His feelings toward and His dealings with the nation of Israel. For as he denounces the sins of the nation, his message throbs with feeling, and we catch through the stinging words the sobs of a man with an aching and breaking heart. Amos declared the justice of God; Hosea proclaimed His love. The writer of these Notes remembers the dramatic scene in Green Pastures in which God and Hosea are talking with each other, and he recalls vividly the words "Being God ain't no bed of roses" as spoken by the character in the play. To be sure there was justice in God's character and dealings with the nation. But there was an element of mercy and He did not deal with the people after their sins, or reward them according to their iniquities.

The Man and His Message.

The lesson for today tells us much about the times in which Hosea lived by giving us the gist of his message for those times. He puts the thing in the form of a "controversy with the inhabitants of the land." As in the case of Amos, the times were out of joint, and Hosea had been sent by God to put them right.

1. Religion and the Good Life.—What had happened in the land? One almost shudders as he reads about the low state to which the moral life of the nation had sunk. "There is no truth . . . in the land." A man's word was not to be trusted. Lying was prevalent. Faith in the spoken or written word had been undermined. Think of a society in which there was no faith or trust in the word of men!!!

Neither was there any "goodness . . . in the land." People openly and brazenly did wrong, and made no bones about. The life of the nation was like a festering sore. To be sure, here and there must have been folks who had not gone completely to the dogs—God always has His seven thousand—but by and large corruption and immorality and wickedness flourished and ran rampant.

"There was nought but swearing, and breaking faith, and killing and stealing, and committing adultery, in the land." Read that list again and see to what a low level the moral life of the nation had come. One shudders as he thinks of a nation reduced to that state of affairs. How come all this? How did it get that way anyway?

Morality was at a low ebb because there was "no knowledge of God in the land." Morality is a broken reed unless it is undergirded and redeemed by religion. Morality ultimately is rooted in God. God is the source of all good, including the good life. There is no real goodness apart from the goodness that comes from Him.

God and good are intimately related to each other. Only as ethics grounded in religion can they be trusted. This talk about men being good apart from God is all poppycock. Men will not long treat one another right if they leave God out of their lives.

2. Another Shocking Thing Incurs Hosea's Righteous Indignation—the Example of the Priests and Religious Leaders.—Strange as it may seem, and as embarrassing as it is to say it, the religious life of the nation had gone into eclipse because the religious leaders of the nation had forgotten their high calling and were prostituting their sacred offices to base ends. They had become greedy, intemperate and even immoral. It was a case of like people, like priest. It may seem unfair to demand a different standard of conduct from a minister or a Sunday school teacher than one expects from the run-of-the-mine church member, but this seems to be the divine imperative. One thing is sure, a stream does not rise higher than its source, and standards of conduct will never rise higher than the ideals set by the leaders of religion.

3. Superficial Repentance Also was Denounced by Hosea.—In words of biting irony he shows how in time of crisis the people had "returned to Jehovah" but it was from fear of punishment rather than from any desire to do better that they returned. Their conception of God was so superficial and even so false, and their idea of repentance was so inadequate, that the whole thing was a farce. Punishment was certain unless true repentance found expression in their lives.

4. Hosea Announces the Law of the Harvest.—The people were to "sow righteousness" so that they might reap love and kindness. Their lives were to be filled with the spirit of love for their fellowmen. They were to change their way of life if they expected any good results. Old habits had to be changed and new character formed.

(Based on lesson copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education.)

We must believe in a Being, a divine will, or in an intelligent purpose behind the world. And we must live as if the world had sense, not as if the world were meaningless. Cold, cynical people are not only unhappy, but are dead to the spiritual values that make life. Only the positive attitude in acts of kindness and peace will give the joyous life.

The Orphanage

MY DEAR FRIENDS:

Thank you for $751.77 this week. You are very good to us here, and we humbly appreciate it. The Big Chart is climbing up with names of Sunday Schools and Churches on the list. If every Sunday School or some class or other organization would send us a monthly offering we could make the grade here. Thanks also for the much help with sponsoring children. This is becoming more and more effective, and the children themselves have a feeling of belonging. It helps a great deal to bolster up their character and development.

Our Children's Program: "The Children Learn About Jesus," was a good success at both Union Grove and Pleasant Grove. It is being given this weekend (April 21-23) to five churches in Eastern Virginia. Such a trip is a major undertaking, and we greatly appreciate the help of our churches and pastors in making it possible.

Perhaps many of you have heard about a fire from defective wiring in the pantry and kitchen of the Johnston Hall. It occurred last Sunday while the program was on the road. Some $1,200 worth of damage was done, and our insurance companies are allowing us a fair and proper coverage. We are all sorry it happened, and shall do some re-wiring of all our buildings to keep the "load" from additional electric equipment from making a hazard. We are so thankful the fire did not occur at night. No one was injured and friends and fire companies were exceedingly good to us.

We are looking forward to using the dining room at our main building as a central dining room. The big commercial range in that kitchen is plenty large, and the dining room is adequate for the present. The kitchen is being enlarged in equipment, and also the pantries. The dining room is being painted. In a few days we hope to be ready to eat in one central eating place. This will make us a single unit; will conserve food and work; will bring us together for all sorts of announcements, training in worship, etc. It will save us the cost of new ranges in two buildings also.

This Home Coming Day—September 2-3—we shall have a bazaar for the benefit of the orphanage. The bazaar will be held on Saturday, September 2, and will offer many donated articles for sale, as well as a good program. Anyone having anything they can donate for this bazaar should get in touch with the superintendent. Such a bazaar will get many people acquainted with our work here as well as be a source of help in making this the home it ought to be for our children, and for the many more who are knocking at our doors. I appreciate the kindness of so many, many friends in all their good will and boost of the increasing program being instituted for the sake of the needy and homeless ones coming to us.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

class made on this fortieth anniversary.

We are not only anxious for the Class of 1910 to return to the campus 100 per cent strong but wish the same for all reunion classes for this occasion. I write of the Class of 1910 because of my acquaintance and knowledge of its members. I invite each member of the class to write his opinion. All such opinions presented will be published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, our church paper, and in the Alumni News, the official publication of the Elon College alumni. You are at liberty to agree or disagree with the information presented in this article.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

I would like to congratulate our Sunday Schools and Churches on their response to the needs of the college. I feared that contributions for the college to date totaled less than a year ago. On checking the records, however, I find that the reverse is true. Contributions amount to $844.57 more than the total of a year ago. This is good! Excellent! Encouraging, but I am sure that we could and will do better. It would certainly be heartening and encouraging if some of our Sunday schools and churches that have not been contributing during the year would have a change of heart and send in contributions however small. You may have had some question about the conduct of the college and its curriculum but certainly no one could have any question about the need of the college. Certainly, no denomination has made a balanced contribution to the civilization of its day without a college for the training and direction of its leaders. All may be assured that there is honesty, sincerity, efficiency and consecration put into the total effort of Elon College in training the young men and women who come to its campus. Every dollar that the church contributes to the college will bear rich dividends in character and personality.

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

straw into hats and fans. Union High wheat will soon be harvested; hot weather will soon bring a demand for hats and fans. Her idea is to teach the needy women to make these things, advancing them rice, of course, before the objects are sold so that they might live while awaiting their earnings. Here is a woman who takes the burdens of others to her own heart and mind, trying to find a constructive solution. How thrilled we missionaries are to help with such Christian activity!

Little Lewis likes our new home very much; the fields and animals offer lots of entertainment and he is gradually getting acquainted with the Chinese children and foreigners here. The Chinese adults he takes to immediately, apparently being more used to them from Shaowu days. A few Communist soldiers have been visiting us occasionally and Lewis has never objected to their attentions even when they pick him up, something foreign adults must be very slow in doing. These men are nice fellows; and though we're a little guarded in our conversation, we enjoy their friendliness. (We have heard that regular Communist soldiers and civilians are not supposed to talk with foreigners.) Lewis can draw a smile from many of them; after all they're men, too, and away from home.

We know a little of how it feels to be away from home; but we're looking forward to a home-going in 1951. Meanwhile, keep the letters coming (better use water-proof ink, by the way; a big batch of mail got wet at Amoy and some of the news was washed away) and keep China in your hearts and prayers.

Yours sincerely,

DICK & DOROTHY JACKSON.

P. S. March 29:

We had hoped to mimeograph this letter and send to you folks individually; but no machine is available. In the meantime two bits of news have reached us from America—one discouraging and one hopeful. The former is news of the deep concern a mission board member has that our board and other mission boards are finding financial problems still more difficult in addition to his concern regarding new recruits for the mission fields. Facing the increasingly dark problems out here on the field, you can imagine what a blow it is to us to think that mission workers at home are having difficulty securing money for this work and that of other missions as well. But the second news is from Dr. Scott—he believes we can count on support from home. Further, he is looking forward to the Southern Convention meeting at Oakland in May. And so are we. May it bring you inspiration and renewed strength. We hope to be with you in person at the next meeting in 1952, and to see you even before that.

PSYCHOLOGY & STEWARDSHIP OF CHURCH BUILDING.

the women. Desiring, while he was with us, to share the experiences gained from contact with churches all over the country, he got the women to talk about our church—its strong and its weak points. The strong points were enlarged upon, so that we would have many things about which to talk to the unchurched person in our several neighborhoods. For the weak points, he gave us many constructive ideas to improve our program. Notes were taken upon his request, and we discussed these matters in subsequent meetings of our various organizations. And you would be amazed to see how we have benefitted from this in our church life!

"Then, when the auditors were ready with the final report, we all got together in the social hall. What fun we had as the men told of many interesting experiences gained during their visitations, not mentioning names, of course. By actual count, we found that using the approach in which we were trained 24 prospects for the church, and 9 prospects for the church school were obtained in addition to securing the pledges for our project. Many proportionate givers were developed. Then, the total pledges (for two years) were announced. Remember, the most we thought possible to get was $20,000, with a maximum of 40 men working. Now we had 76 Canvassers, and the total amount was given us as $34,872.00. You see, the impossible had been done! Can you picture the response made to that announcement! At first we couldn't believe it. Then there was a wild outburst of applause, people clapping each other on the back, many—including rugged men—crying for joy and thanksgiving. Then, another big thing happened. Men got to their feet, saying, 'We have no active men's organization. Something happened this week—an impetus, a power we never knew we had. We can't let this go.' And believe it or not, before another week passed, we were organized, officers elected, and are now a flourishing, energetic men's group.

After coffee and doughnuts, much talking, and singing a hymn of praise and gratitude, we went home, with a warm feeling inside, for a good night's sleep.

"Since this project with us, I have talked with the Church Financial Adviser. He told me that our experience is typical of all projects conducted in this manner. He says that to date he has conducted building financial projects for 32 churches and met with 42 boards and church leaders scattered across the country. He has helped churches raise $1,133,950.00.

"The only thing I can add now, looking backwards, is that the intangible by-product results of the project were more important to our church than the money secured."

EDITORIAL.

astic interest of the laymen of the churches participating was credited as being one of the major secrets of the marvelous success of these campaigns.

"Thirty-seven Evangelistic Missions among student bodies were directed by the Department in colleges and universities throughout the nation. More than 158,000 students, one-fifteenth of the student population of our American colleges and universities were enrolled as participants in these University Christian Missions of far-reaching significance.

"The report of the Committee on The United Evangelistic Advance revealed the inspiring results of this great movement in various sections of our country—some of the local churches participating having increased their membership 25 to 30 per cent during the year. One large Lutheran Church in the Middle West received 625 new members during the year as its reward for participating wholeheartedly in this evangelistic emphasis.

"The Department is promoting a nation-wide United Protestant observance of Reformation Day next fall. Schools of Evangelism are to be conducted in various sections of the country this spring and fall. The Department is sponsoring Kagawa's visit to America this summer and early fall to address inter-denominational Mass Meetings throughout the country. Announcement was made at the meeting that Dr. Frederick K. Stamm, a prominent minister in the Congregational Christian Church, is to be the writer of the 1951 Fellowship of Prayer which the Congregational Christian Churches, down through the years, have shared with the various other denominations—one of the many contributions of our denomination to A United Protestantism."

Dr. Helfenstein believes that our churches in the Southern Convention should derive substantial benefits from an intelligent and wholehearted cooperation with the Department of Evangelism.

IT'S EASIER IN YOUTH

By Charles A. Wells

How few conversions to a better life there are after middle age, and how easy it is to make the climb in youth! Yet the very fact that young people can transform their lives in just a few steps causes them constantly to postpone the decision. "I know what I'm doing isn't good for me, but I can stop any time I want to" is the statement the religious counselor often hears from the young. But the further they go, the deeper the path gets grooved into life and the steeper the climb to higher levels. This reveals why it is that unless we are surrounded by religious influences in youth we seldom are able to lift above the dead levels of indifference, cynicism and futility. Yet millions of parents are robbing their children of this desperately needed opportunity to learn the way to a better life at a time when it can mean most—a time that may never come again. "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth!"

NUMBER 18

"O Come Let Us Worship"

BECAUSE OF

The example of our Lord. "He went as His custom was."

BECAUSE OF

The Scriptural exhortation that echoes across the centuries, "not forsaking our own assembling together as the custom of some is."

BECAUSE OF

The uplift which comes through worship. Who is not conscious that his greatest need in these days is "A Presence which disturbs me with the joy of elevated thoughts"?

BECAUSE OF

The harmonizing of the soul with the music of the spheres. Our age cries out for those who are "in the spirit on the Lord's Day."

BECAUSE OF

The joys of Christian fellowship.

BECAUSE OF

The courage and Christian optimism received.

BECAUSE OF

The contribution that worship makes to the building of a peaceful world. "The rich and the poor meet together. The Lord is the maker of them all." World brotherhood can be realized only as it finds its source in our hearts, our homes, our communities, our nation.

BECAUSE OF

The development of a sensitive conscience. It is when we see "the Lord high and lifted up" that we cry "Woe is me for I am undone, for I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips."

BECAUSE OF

The acquiring of a passion to serve.

BECAUSE OF

The glory worship ascribes to God. "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." Our age needs to recover its lost appreciation of the glory and majesty of God.

News Flashes

Funeral services for Mrs. Martha Heritage Hall were conducted at Providence Memorial Church in Graham on Monday, April 17, by the pastor, Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds.

Funeral services for Dr. S. W. Cadell, retired physician, were held in the Elon Community Church on Monday of last week. Drs. J. H. Dollar and W. T. Scott officiated.

Dr. W. W. Sloan gave the last of a series of lectures to the Mentor Book Club in Burlington last week. The general theme of the lectures was, "What is Europe Thinking?"

The Rev. J. S. Taylor, pastor of the Elm Avenue Church in Portsmouth, has announced his resignation, effective June 1. He began his present ministry in 1946, and has resigned to become the pastor of Grace Baptist Church in Norfolk.

Dr. D. J. Bowden was honored on Wednesday evening of last week at a supper meeting in First Church, Burlington. The testimonial supper was given in recognition of Dr. Bowden's services as interim pastor of the church during four winter months.

May will be Loyalty Month at Rosemont Church (Norfolk). The major emphasis is being placed on church attendance. Sunday will be Communion Sunday. Youth Sunday, Family Sunday and Guest Sunday will be observed in succession. Family Visitation Week, May 15-19, will be followed by Preaching Mission Week.

PARSONAGE BOUGHT FOR DR. HARDCASTLE.

At a special conference held at Oakland Christian Church the members of that church approved a motion to buy the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Saunders for the sum of $12,000 for a parsonage for Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Hardcastle.

The parsonage will be bought on a joint sharing basis with Berea Christian Church and includes a modern heated and lighted home with double garage and other large buildings together with concrete driveway and beautifully kept lawn and shrubbery. The property adjoins Wesley Chapel Methodist Church in Chuckatuck, and possession will be given in the late fall.

DEDICATION OF "GOD'S PORTION."

A service of uniqueness and distinction was held at our Pfafftown Church, near Wiston-Salem, Sunday night, April 16. This was the Dedication Service of "God's Portion" as the people in the Pfafftown Church are setting aside certain things for work of the church. The service used was entitled, "An Order for the Dedication of the Seed, the Soil and the Sowers" by James W. Sells.

In this area the plan is called "The Lord's Acre." In the middle west of our country many churches call the plan, "God's Portion," and it means about the same.

We at Pfafftown are dedicating money, ground, grain, livestock, quilts, etc., to the service of God. This fall we will have the Harvest Festival. Thus we hope to add much to our Building Fund and create in the hearts of all a sense of better stewardship to God.

Guest speaker at the dedication service was Rev. Garland Stafford, a neighboring Methodist minister and chairman of the Rural Life Commission of the North Carolina Council of Churches. As he closed his message, he led the dedicatory service. Francis Robertson and Watson Flynt presented corn seed on a platter, symbolizing the various types of seed that would be planted in the community. James Cohn and Fred Stout presented the soil, symbolizing the earth of the community in which seed would be planted and the harvest would be brought forth. Placing these upon the altar, Mr. Stafford placed the open Bible between them and led the people in the Act of Dedication.

Our rural churches need to find new sources of strength. Here is an opportunity for greater Christian living and the development of our rural churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH LISTS MANY ACTIVITIES.

On Sunday, April 9, the Rev. Joseph Moulton, Missionary in India, spoke at the regular evening service of the Plymouth Christian Church on his work and experiences in India. The meeting was publicly announced and there were representatives there from other churches in the community.

During the last nine months, the Sunday school at Plymouth Church has experienced a 100 per cent increase in attendance. We feel this is due to an attendance contest held over a three-month period and climaxing in a chicken dinner for the entire Sunday school, the re-organization of new classes giving better grouping of the different ages, and also the regular monthly meetings of the officers and teachers and other interested individuals in the Sunday school. We have divided one of our larger classrooms making two small rooms and provided separate meeting places for the beginner and primary classes. During the past year these two classes have been using the flannel board to assist in teaching. We feel that we have had a truly dedicated group of teachers and officers to serve in the entire Sunday school during the past year.

Our church has installed gas heaters and also started a church ground improvement program. We have seeded a temporary lawn and are underpinning the church. The Ladies' Missionary Society is planning now to plant shrubbery and make further improvements to the church grounds during the coming year.

The deacons of the church have begun meeting quarterly and have been responsible for erecting an attractive sign at the church. They have also had the highway department to put up the proper signs on highways leading to the church. Plymouth is located on Rural Route No. 3, Raleigh, North Carolina.

In January, 1950, the ladies in the Plymouth Christian Church along with our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Fred P. Register, met and organized a Woman's Missionary Society. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. C. C. Ferrell; Vice-President, Mrs. H. S. Sauls; Treasurer, Mrs. Manley Harmon; and Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Ennis.

The Wake Chapel Woman's Missionary Society of Fuquay Springs has been very helpful in getting our society organized by meeting with us and having us meet with them. For our March meeting, we met with the Wake Chapel Society at the Wake Chapel Church and heard Mrs. Carl Wallace Explain the book, Missions at the Grass Roots, by Dr. William P. Shriver, which we enjoyed very much.

At the present time the Plymouth Woman's Missionary Society has 15 ladies on roll.

ODE TO RICHMOND.

Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, speaking last Sunday morning on the subject, "Richmond's Greatest Asset," spoke from the text, Psalm 1:1—"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of scoffers." He made comment that "though the beauty of Richmond's Flower Gardens was an asset of which any city, regardless of its size, might well be proud, that Richmond's Greatest Asset was not the riches of its beautiful gardens, its artistic homes, its inviting stores, its business advantages, its educational opportunities, its transportation facilities, or its ideal location. Neither is Richmond's Greatest Asset its spacious parks, its congenial citizenry, its splendid hospitals or even its imposing church edifices. Richmond's greatest asset is the moral and spiritual idealism and worth of its men and women and boys and girls who 'delight in the law of the Lord' and who with love and reverence worship the Lord God Almighty. These are the people who always keep their city's welfare and good name in mind and in heart. These are the people against whom it is not necessary to lock our homes and stores. If all our citizens and those who pass this way were of their type, think of the incalculable saving our city would experience in the maintenance of its courts and police force! Richmond's greatest asset is definitely its people who have solemnly affirmed their belief in God—its praying people, its worshipping people, its people who believe in the God and Father worshiped and revealed to mankind by the Man of Galilee—and who daily seek to do their Heavenly Father's will.

"Our city owes more to its men and women and boys and girls of religious faith from every church and synagogue of Richmond—both those who today bless our city by their lives and those who once living here have passed from labor to reward. Not until 'the Books of the Judgment Unfold' will it be fully known how great is the debt of our city to the people who built its churches and synagogues that they and their posterity might worship God in the beauty of holiness, and serve Him with their lives, their love, their talents and their resources. Take all the churches and synagogues and their various agencies for service out of our city, and even the non-church folk would no longer be content to live here. What is true of Richmond is true of every town and city is our nation—their greatest asset their sincerely religious-minded men and women and boys and girls."

PORTSMOUTH SERVICES.

On Sunday evening, May 9 at eight o'clock, the laymen of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, are planning for a special service, handled entirely by laymen.

Mr. Mills Godwin, president of the Eastern Virginia Laymen's Fellowship, will be the speaker. Special male voice music will be featured. The men of the Thursday noontime Bible class, meeting each week at the YMCA will attend and assist in the service. We feel sure that great numbers of people will want to hear Mr. Godwin's message on "Living Together."

On Sunday, May 14, an evangelistic campaign will open under the leadership of Dr. Harry Ironside, a former pastor of the Moody Church, Chicago, for over twenty years. Song leader for the campaign will be George Poole. The public is invited.

STANLEY CARNE.

DEDICATION OF A NEW HOME.

Bill and Polly Fansler of our Winston-Salem Church stood before the large fireplace in their new home and solemnly declared, "We recognize Christ as the head of this home, its Guest and also its Lord." Their friends, the Young Adults of the Church, gathered round them and solemnly pledged their love to this fine young couple. Saturday night, April 15, will long be remembered by those who attended this "Home Dedication Service."

There are many new homes springing up in our communities. Many are like that of Bill and Polly. The last word in modernization and mechanization of the house, the superb beauty of a modern home filled so minutely with adorable antiques and a delightful young couple to call it their own, all add up to a happy home. Yet with all of this at their side, they choose,

FARMER JESUS

The number of farmers who know the botanical names of what they are raising, the zoological name of the insect that eats it, and the chemical name of what will kill it is increasing. While this knowledge is not altogether essential to good farming, it is an asset. Guesswork on the farm is yielding to knowledge. The old-fashioned almanac is being supplanted by the modern, scientific farm journal. Many farmers of yesterday depended on the oral advice of relatives and friends. Some were, and still are, skeptical of "book larnin'" with reference to farming, but the modern farmer augments his individual storehouse of experience by studying the up-to-date findings of the experts.

There is unending speculation on what Jesus would do if he returned to earth. What would he do if he returned to the farm, your farm? Jesus, we recall, was interested in farm life. He knew farms, farmers, flowers, different types of soil and the possibilities as well as the penalties of the harvest.

It should require no distorted stretch of the imagination to picture Jesus not only as an interested observer but also as an intelligent and enthusiastic participant in modern farm life. The carpenter of Nazareth and the itinerant of rural Galilee would be at home in Rural America. How eagerly would he utilize the knowledge and facilities of our age and demonstrate new measures of stewardship!

Those who bear the name of Christ have the opportunity of bringing Christ back to the soil. During these spring days it may be said of countless ones: "A sower went forth to sow"—in the name and spirit of Christ. Christian farmers face a day of great opportunity. The unprecedented knowledge and equipment of our age enables them to lift their stewardship to new levels, "some thirty, some sixty, and some a hundred fold!" Christ and the farmer—what a partnership!

Thank God for our rural churches. We look to them in hope and confidence. Among them should now appear a new order of Churchmanship. For them, we confidently believe, the best is yet to be.

THE CENSUS: BANE OR BLESSING?

Said one lady to the census taker: "If I get all these questions right, what do I get: a washing machine or a refrigerator?"

For many people the census taker may be an annoyance, one to be rid of at the earliest possible moment. Considerable criticism has been leveled at the details of this current census: it is superficial, inadequate, superfluous.

This writer does not feel called upon defend or make apologies for the U. S. Census. Nevertheless, it does seem that the advantages of such a census should be recognized. Statistical information of this kind lends itself to many uses. One should find considerable satisfaction in the realization that authentic information concerning the population of our nation is available.

Both sociology and religion are rightly insisting that we should quit guessing when factual material is at hand. Here is the raw material for many sociological studies. Denominational and interdenominational planning will receive new impetus, and new benefits.

Of all statistics, none are more interesting and significant than vital statistics. Ours is a nation of people. And people are important in our civilization, every one of them. Yes, there is religious significance in a census. Thank God for it, cooperate in it, and utilize its benefits.

THE ROLE OF EDUCATION IN GREECE

"Greece is like a man who has been very ill. The crisis has passed, but he is still weak and worn and a long period of convalescence lies ahead. This is no time for his friends to leave him. A little more help now will make more secure all that has been done for him so far," reports Carl C. Compton, President-elect of Anatolia Colleg, Thessaloniki, Greece, on the eve of sailing back to his post in Greece.

"Our Government, recognizing the strategic importance of Greece, is helping in material reconstruction, but does not include aid to education in its program. That has been left to the Greek people themselves and to private institutions like Anatolia College. The war and its aftermath have left deep scars in Greece, not only on its buildings, roads and fields, but even more in the hearts and minds of its people. Our task is to help heal these scars and help prepare young people for the great work of reconstruction that lies ahead. The Communists have been defeated in the mountains, but it is equally important to instill in the youth of Greece the ideals and the attitudes that are the best defense against either Communism or Fascism," says Mr. Compton, who succeeds as President of Anatolia College, Rev. Ernest W. Riggs.

Mr. Compton, who is a missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, has had more than 35 years of educational and relief service in the Near East covering both World Wars I and II. During World War II he was for over a year Assistant Chief of the Relief Section of the Blockade Division in Washington and was in charge of the Trans-Blockade Feeding of Greece. Later he was Director of UNRRA for Northern Greece.

Goodwill to others is constructive thought. It helps build us up. It is good for your body. It makes your blood purer, your muscles stronger, and your whole form more symmetrical in shape. It is the real elixir of life. The more such thought you attract to you, the more life you will have.—Prentice Mulford.

The Importance of Preaching

By REV. EARL T. FARRELL

Delivered before the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association

In my own efforts to preach, I often think of the late Dr. Joseph Fort Newton who wrote in the introduction to his widely read autobiography, River of Years, of a friend who commented, "Much present day preaching is worse than is necessary."

As long as we live we strive to improve our preaching, or else we dream about it. Either we work on it or we put it off one more week, or after next vacation; then, we say, we are going to do and give our best. Often enough we have plenty of unused advice, left over from college or seminary. There is no substitute in successful preaching for a lot of hard and prayerful work and study. The successful preachers tell us that.

I.

Preaching has always played a vital part in the life of the Christian Church. The way was prepared for Jesus by John the Baptist preaching in the region of the Jordan, proclaiming the coming of the Messiah. In the spirit of the prophets before him he called the people to repentance.

Jesus was drawn from His quiet life by the preaching of John, and went to him for baptism in the Jordan. Immediately following Jesus' temptation experience, He "came into Galilee preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God . . . repent ye, and believe the Gospel."

Through His preaching men left their fishing nets and followed Him. And Jesus, "taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes." Jesus chose His disciples to preach. He sent forth the disciples, "and as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of Heaven is at hand" (Matthew 10:7). At the end of His ministry He gave the great commission for the disciples to go everywhere preaching the Gospel, making disciples, baptizing them and teaching them to observe His commands.

After Christ's resurrection it was Peter who through preaching made Pentecost indeed a "day of the Lord." According to Walker, "it marked an epoch in the proclamation of the gospel in the disciples' conviction of Christ's presence, and in the increase of adherents to the new faith."

It was by the preaching of Peter, Paul, Barnabas, Timothy and others, and by unknown preachers that the gospel was carried to the gentile world. In three centuries Christianity was the foremost religion in the Roman Empire. The importance of preaching to the Christian Church can be seen by a study of its history.

We are told that a Russian prince was converted, and that the cross of Christ was set up in the land of the Slav. Boniface tramped into the northern countries of Europe preaching the gospel and established the Christian faith among the Teutonic peoples. Augustine crossed the English Channel, tramped the fields to Canterbury, and in Britain was established the Christian Church. Through preaching the church has expanded!

In periods when the church compromised her gospel to win popularity and admit new adherents; in those periods when she was in danger of losing her soul, always some fearless spirit came forth preaching in protest! Once it was a retired merchant, Peter Waldo. Again it was John Huss who was burned at the stake for raising his voice in protest. Two hundred years later Martin Luther nailed to the doors of his parish church his ninety-five theses. As the sound of his hammer rang out, so rang out the voice of Luther against the decadence of the church, "The just shall live by faith." So through the preaching of the Word the Reformation was born. And the story goes on until now it rests upon us to preach the "... unsearchable riches of the gospel of Christ."

II.

The quality of Christian living in the life of the church has been measured by the quality of Christian preaching. Broadus said, "Since those early triumphs of the gospel the quality of preaching and the spirit and life of the church have advanced or declined together. Of every age it is true that there has been no great religious movement, no restoration of Scripture truth and reanimation of genuine piety without new power in preaching" (On the Preparation and Delivery of Sermons, page 3).

There is no substitute for preaching. It does appear that the fire dwindles in the pulpit before it does in the pew. "No power in human experience has wrought such mighty works as the spoken word: it has beaten down impiety, taught righteousness, given freedom to the oppressed, and created nations (John Watson in Heart of the Yale Lec- tures, page 5). Thus the importance of preaching!

All the revivals of religion have come to pass through preaching. When Isaiah preached a new concept of holiness was born. When Amos left his flocks and preached a new idea of justice came into being. With St. Francis there came a new compassion for the poor and outcasts. There are Luther, Calvin, Wesley, Kagawa, and others who have added new vitality to the church because they preached with their feet, "shod with the preparation of the gospel," bearing witness to the truth that they saw in Jesus Christ.

Preaching has played a vital role in the life of the church, and in the life of the world. No one can tell the alternative in history if it had not been for great preaching. But on the other hand, if all of us had urged the gospel as the "way" upon all people as we have urged so many lesser things we might be nearer the kingdom of heaven.

III.

The preaching of the gospel is as needed today as ever. There faces us a challenge as great as that which faced the apostles. The leadership of the Christian ministry is today greatly needed, because the world's tragedy is due more to lack of vital religion than to any other cause. The cure will come only in more and better religion. The task of awakening the people to this need rests upon us. There is no need, nor any excuse for sorry preaching. Our preaching will be rewarded if we "endure as seeing Him who is invisible."

It has been said often before and I say again this morning that the people are confused and bewildered. H. A. Keek says that, "The very stones would cry out against us if in these days we failed to point out God's way in human affairs."

Winston Churchill spoke to the British people during the war and said, "Unto you it has been given so to bear yourselves that, even though the British Empire lasts another thousand years, men will look back at you, and say that was its greatest hour." If democracy and Christian civilization should last another thousand years it may be that history will look back to our time and say of us, "That was their greatest hour." In the midst of world-wide confusion we who preach the gospel must speak in "no uncertain sound."

We must know God in order to interpret His mind and will to the

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

AFTER GRADUATION FROM HIGH SCHOOL, WHAT?

During the months of May and June this year literally thousands of young men and women will graduate from high school. They will graduate into a society and a world that are confused and bewildered. No one seems to know exactly where we are going or when we shall reach our destination. Desirable jobs and positions are becoming more difficult to find. Young men and women who are fully prepared are more fortunate in securing desirable employment or profitable positions. If present trends continue within three or four years only those who are adequately prepared will stand much chance in reaching comfortable and set goals in life. If desirable employment is available at graduation from high school the big question is, "Shall I accept that position or shall I go to college?" This is a question for the parent to answer. I know that in "the fading light" of so called progressive education a high school graduate is to decide this important question himself. This is a most vital question and much depends upon the answer. Perhaps the parent out of the richness of his experiences could be of help to his son in offering wise counsel. Of course, the student must answer the question for himself, "Which shall it be, four years in college and perhaps two to three years in graduate school or shall I face the world and tackle its problems with my present mental equipment?"

Three years ago, a young man in his 30's with a family and a good business entered Elon College. He married while in high school and immediately entered business. Somewhere in life a spark of ambition has been ignited in his soul. He wanted to be a doctor. After building a business that netted him some $700 monthly he kept his investments but turned away from business and entered college. Last summer he graduated. Now he is in medical school and expects eventually to realize the goal of his ambition. He is convinced that his life even though half spent will mean more to humanity than it would have had he remained in business.

A few weeks ago the Dramatics Department of the college presented the Greek tragedy, "Antigone." One of the leading characters was a mature young man who is a freshman. He performed excellently and effectively. After the play, I congratulated him on his performance and inquired as to his class in college. He promptly replied, "I am a Freshman." He is 38 years old, is married and has had a great deal of experience in life. He said, "I was one of those wise guys who thought I could make it in life without a college education and after butting my head against impossible situations for some years I realized my mistake and I am determined to graduate from college and see if I can do better for my fellowman and for myself."

Of course, there are hundreds and thousands of young men and women who after graduating from high school enter college. These all might be held up as worthy examples. The two characters herewith presented would seem to constitute convincing evidence as to the profitableness of a college education. There is no better time to settle the issue than when you receive your high school diploma.

Elon College, our church institution, has carefully constructed a curriculum and with the utmost precision selected and employed a faculty to execute that curriculum. If you are a high school graduate you are invited to consider Elon College and its many advantages. If you are interested in teaching, full and complete courses are offered that you will prepare you for effective service in any and all grades in our public schools. We offer very excellent courses in Dramatics and Physical Education. We also offer pre-training in all professional fields including engineering.

Elon College is open twelve months in the year and offers a curriculum for the summer quarter in keeping with the requirements of the total enrollment. Summer school begins June 5 and continues for twelve weeks—two six-week periods. The regular session opens September 5. If you are interested in entering in September it would be well to make application now. We have rooms for only a few more than 50 per cent of our student body. Others commute and are enrolled as day students. You may address the writer for additional information.

DR. F. CROSSLEY MORGAN TO BE AT ELON COLLEGE.

Dr. F. Crossley Morgan, eminent Presbyterian minister and Bible conference leader, will conduct a series of religious services at Elon College, beginning Sunday, May 7, and continuing through Friday, May 12. He will speak at regular chapel exercises each morning and will conduct services each evening.

Dr. Morgan is a former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Concord, North Carolina, and is well known throughout North Carolina. His work in other parts of the United States during the past thirty years has earned for him a large following among Christian workers in all parts of the country.

He was born in London in 1898 and received his early education in English schools, first at the Holm School in London and later at the Douglass Collegiate School at Cheltenham. He served as an officer in the British Army during World War I and was decorated by King George V for gallantry in action at Ledegham, Belgium, in October, 1917.

Dr. Morgan came to the United States in 1919 and completed ministerial studies under his father, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, being ordained to the ministry in 1920. After a first pastorate in Indiana in 1920-21, he pursued further studies for one year and came South to Georgia. He was granted the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity by the University of Georgia in 1927.

After eight years as an itinerant Bible teacher and minister from 1932 to 1940, he accepted the pastorate at Concord in 1940, but resigned that post in 1944 to resume Bible Conference work.

ELON ALUMNI MEETINGS AT MANY POINTS.

Elon alumni from Atlanta in the South to New York City in the North are getting together this spring in a series of chapter meetings, designed to arouse a renewed interest among the "old grads" in their Alma Mater.

Four of the local chapter meetings have already been held, according to Alumni Secretary James F. Darden, and four others are scheduled during April and May. The local gatherings will serve as background for the annual meeting of the General Alumni Association, which is to be held here at commencement time.

The alumni in the Norfolk area led off with the first of the spring meetings on Tuesday, February 28. This chapter, which embraces both Norfolk and Portsmouth, is under the leadership of William L. Cooper of the Class of 1936.

Second in the series of meets was at Charlotte on Thursday, March 22, when Conner Hutchison of the Class of 1921 presided. Dr. William M. Brown was a special speaker, along with Secretary Darden, who has shown movies of the new gym at this and all other meetings.

Secretary Darden himself was the principal speaker at the Atlanta meeting, held at the club house of W. L. Monroe, Class of 1918. J. L. Floyd, Class of 1920, was elected for another two-year term as president of the Atlanta unit.

President Leon E. Smith and Dr. Brown each spoke at the meeting of the Richmond alumni group, which was held at the William Byrd Hotel in Richmond on Saturday night, April 1. Ryland E. Johnson, Class of 1936, presided over the meeting.

Dr. Truitt and Mr. Darden were present at the meeting of the Suffolk group on Friday, April 21. Rev. Duane N. Vore was the principal speaker, and Chapter President J. K. Kirk presided.

Other meetings scheduled include the Guilford County Chapter meeting which will be held at Greensboro on Friday, May 5; the Vance County unit at Henderson, Friday, May 12 and the New York City chapter at the Winthrop Hotel in that city on Thursday night, May 18. There are 90 alumni in the New York area.—Maroon and Gold.

HISTORICAL MARKER PLANNED FOR ELON.

The importance of Elon College in the history of North Carolina has been recognized by the state officials, and it will be told to the world by a new historical marker, which is to be placed at an early date to commemorate the establishment of the institution in 1889.

The marker will be similar to the hundreds of others that may be seen along the various highways in the state. It will be placed by the State Department of Archives and History, which chooses spots for such markers.

ELON COLLEGE SENIORS HEAR ADDRESS BY NOTED WORKER.

Pointing out that America has a fear complex today, Dr. Arthur E. Roberts, world-famous youth worker from Cincinnati, Ohio, urged Elon College seniors to face life with courage, and to consider spiritual as well as material values in choosing or accepting an occupation.

The advice was given in an address to the student body and faculty at the regular chapel gathering. He also spoke before the history classes of the college later in the morning and addressed a special faculty meeting.

The Cincinnati Boy Scout leader, who has made seven tours abroad in the interest of youth work, pointed out to the seniors that they may find it difficult "to fit a $5,000 education into a $10,000 job" at the start, but he declared that there is a job ready for everyone who has something to sell.

He further challenged the seniors to consider the altruistic professions, such as education, the ministry and other types of youth work, despite the fact that those occupations are not the best paid. He told them that they must consider spiritual values and commented that "if we are to get rid of war, it must be on a spiritual basis." He made a point of the fact that the majority of persons found in "Who's Who" came from homes with incomes of $1,200 or less.

Dr. Roberts then described in vivid language some of his many experiences in foreign countries, pointing out that he had observed first-hand conditions in every principal nation of the world except Australia, New Zealand, Venezuela and Bolivia. He dwelt particularly upon experiences in Prague in 1938 at the time Nazi Germany was marching to seize the Sudetenland, praising the courage of the people of Czechoslovakia at that time.

It was the first visit for Dr. Roberts to Elon College and North Carolina, and he expressed himself as well pleased with what he found. He declared that the smaller denominational college has much to offer students which they might not obtain in attending the larger institutions.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The summer months will soon be here. The regular session of the college closes with May. Summer school will barely pay its own expenses. This year as never before we will need financial assistance from our Sunday schools and churches. When you make a payment on Conference apportionments for Elon College you are not simply making a donation to the college but you are making an investment, an investment not merely in buildings and grounds but in life. These young men and women are facing the issues of this complex age and are endeavoring to prepare themselves for worthwhile services. These investments that you make in human lives will bear dividends that will not perish but shall endure for all all times. Other investments that you make will one day come to naught but investments in human lives, for the enrichment of character and the enhancement of ability, will go on for years and will become richer and more telling with every passing year. Elon College shall endeavor to see that your investment bears the largest dividends possible.

LAY MISSIONARIES COMMISSIONED FOR TURKEY.

An impressive ceremony took place Sunday morning, April 16, in historic Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims, Congregational, Brooklyn, N. Y., Dr. Wendell Fifield, minister, when Mr. and Mrs. David Albert Bergmark, since 1946 on the staff of Plymouth Church, were commissioned as career lay missionaries in the Near East by the American Board.

The American Board is sending Mr. Bergmark to Turkey where he will be stationed in Istanbul and take over the post of Treasurer and Business Agent for the entire American Board Near East Mission.

Since 1946 Mr. Bergmark has been Executive Secretary of Plymouth Church and Mrs. Bergmark has aided in the church school, the choir and the Women's Guild. Mr. Bergmark has had complete supervision of the extensive church plant covering half a large city block, administrative supervision of a day choir and has been active in many community projects.

A World War II vetran, Mr. Bergmark served with the U. S. Navy in Rhode Island and later in Washington, D. C. Prior to World War II he was with the New York Telephone Co. in Brooklyn for seven years.

"I see in Christian service abroad a chance to be of greater influence in the world-wide promotion of a realization of God's will through Christ," says Mr. Bergmark. And Mrs. Bergmark adds, "I want to know about the other peoples of the world and their ways hoping that with this increased knowledge and understanding and skill in languages, I shall be just a little better able to do my share of spreading Christianity and peace. I feel that it is important, too, to have the chance of bringing up our three children in tolerance and understanding of the world as well as of America."

DO MISSIONARIES RETURN? AND HOW!

Rev. and Mrs. Arthur F. Christofersen of Naperville, Illinois, Congregational Christian missionaries under the American Board in South Africa sailed back to their posts Friday, April 14, on the S. S. Silverstreak from New Orleans, La.

Mr. Christofersen, who combines some of the duties of a bishop, state superintendent and old-time circuit-riding parson with those of a builder, architect and educator, is also a friendly counsellor and trouble shooter among the Bantu Christian Churches of Ifafa on the lower southern coast of South Africa.

Mrs. Christofersen, the former Julia Rau of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, does educational and church work, especially among the Zulu women, and conducts a small clinic in her own home.

The Zulu churches among which the Christofersens work are known as "singing churches." They are made up of poor farmers living in isolated villages scattered over a wide rural area. Mr. Christofersen sometimes travels 2,000 miles a month in the line of duty over very difficult terrain using his auto as far as possible but usually being forced to make part of the journey on foot.

The Christofersens are a missionary family. Four of their five children were born in Africa and three of the five are already engaged in foreign Christian service, namely, Miss Mabel Christofersen teaching at Inanda Seminary, Inanda, South Africa; Mrs. Eric Dahle of Adams College, Adams, South Africa, and Dr. Howard R. Christofersen, at present Assistant Surgical Resident at St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, Illinois, under appointment by the American Board of Foreign Missions with his nurse wife for service at the McCord Zulu Hospital, Durban, South Africa.

Mr. Christofersen taught in one of our summer conferences at Franklinton a few years ago.

"Like Father, Like Son."

Dr. Howard Rau Christofersen and Mrs. Ruth Gregersen Christofersen, R. N., have just been appointed by the American Board for a five-year term as Christian medical missionaries in the McCord Zulu Hospital, Durban, South Africa.

Dr. Christofersen was taken to Natal, South Africa, by his missionary parents when a baby and spent most of his first sixteen years in a country mission station. Following his discharge from the Navy he worked nights in a doctor's office during his last two years of school and interned at St. Luke's, where he met his wife.

The hospital to which Dr. and Mrs. Christofersen are going was founded by Dr. James B. McCord, now retired, but for 41 years a medical missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions in Africa. It is the first hospital for Africans in the Natal Province; the first hospital to train African nurses in Natal, and the first hospital to train African midwives in South Africa. It has pioneered in several medical programs and led government hospitals along these lines. In 1935 this Christian hospital was turned over to a local board of directors made up of Durban citizens, including 15 South Africans, three of them black. In the white South African membership are business and professional men, state officials and members of Parliament. The Medical Superintendent is an American Board Missionary doctor, Alan Boardman Taylor, M. D., who had an extensive speaking engagement in the states, including North Carolina and Virginia, on his last furlough.

"WHAT ARE YOUR ORDERS?"

You will recall the old story of the Duke of Wellington. One day a minister came to him and asked if he thought foreign mission should be carried on. The Iron Duke said, "What are your orders?" The minister quoted the great commission. "What!" exclaimed the Duke, "those are your orders and you discuss doing it?" To a man whose first instinct was to obey an order it seemed treason to debate the matter. So it is!—J. A. McAfee.

HEATHEN AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Every once in a while I hear some one growl against foreign missions because the money and strength put into them are needed at home. I did it myself when I did not know better. God forgive me! I know better now, and I will tell you how I found out. I became interested in a strong religious haven and set about investigating. It was then that I learned what others have learned before me, and that was the fact that every dollar you give away to convert the heathen abroad, God gives you ten dollars' worth of purpose to deal with your heathen at home.—Jacob Riis.

The real class war will be a war of intellectual classes and its conquest will be the souls of children.—George Bernard Shaw.

MISS BLEMKER TO SPEAK AT SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Miss Margaret Blemker will present our Foreign Mission Study for next year at our School of Missions at Elon College, June 13-15. Miss Blemker is secretary for the Near East and Europe of the American Board. She came to her post from three years as a teacher in the American School for Girls, Izmir, Turkey. The Near East mission which includes Turkey, Syria, Greece and the Lebanese Republic, are her special responsibilities.

"Bubble gum, popular songs, American cars, slang, movies, the new look in clothes—such is the picture newspaper reports are giving of modern Turkey," says Miss Blemker. "While it is true that Turkey is no longer the land of the Sultan, the veil, the harem and the fez, there are still many old and picturesque features to delight the traveler."

"On the other hand nothing so much impresses the visitor to Turkey as the similarity, in many respects with western life, and the modernization which has come rapidly since the establishment of the Turkish Republic 25 years ago," she adds.

Born into an Ohio Reformed manse, Miss Blemker is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Blemker. Her father is now pastor of the Union Evangelical and Reformed Church of Bascom, Ohio.

Following graduation from Heidelberg College, Miss Blemker taught English and Latin in two high schools in her own home state of Ohio for four years. She then went to Syracuse University where she had an Assistantship in the Office of the Dean of Women while studying for her Master's degree in Personnel.

In 1942 Miss Blemker became Director of Residences for University Hospitals in Cleveland, Ohio, and three years later went to Turkey under the American Board. Finishing her term of service in the Near East in the summer of 1948, she joined the faculty of the Hopewell-Loudon School in Bascom, Ohio, until called to her international post in Boston early in 1949.

Although Miss Blemker's three years of teaching abroad were spent in Turkey at the American School for Girls in Izmir, she devoted her summer vacations to travel throughout Turkey and into Syria, Palestine and Egypt, so she has a well-rounded picture of the American Board fields in the Near East.

The young people of Turkey, Miss Blemker points out, are awakening rapidly to the problems of this modern One World and are weighing old customs and practices. Primary school education under the Turkish government is reaching even into the villages but even so our American Board schools are still getting more applicants than they can admit.

VISUAL AIDS.

By MRS. WILLIAM T. SCOTT,
Chairman of Visual Aids, Woman's an's Missionary Convention.

Your Visual Aids Committee has been quiet long enough! You deserve to know what is happening and we are ready now to bring you up to date in the events of what we consider a "big stride" forward in the use of "Visual Aids" in the entire Southern Convention, as well as in our Woman's Convention work.

The appointed committee is as follows: Rev. Henry E. Robinson, Ministers' Representative; Mrs. W. T. Scott, Woman's Missionary Convention Representative; Mr. A. H. Blalock, Layman's Fellowship Representative; Miss Melva Foster, Young People's Representative; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Member Ex Officio.

On March 10 this committee met at Elon College and after electing unanimously Rev. Henry E. Robinson chairman, the committee immediately got down to work on plans for setting up an adequate library of visual materials and discussed, at length, plans for making these materials available to the churches of the Convention. It was voted that a bulletin of available slides, film strips, records and sound films be distributed in the Convention. This vote you will hear from soon.

Next, the Committee discussed the Convention needs for some suitable equipment for exhibiting films, etc. Out of this discussion grew the plan and the program which is now already in progress. Here are a few details in the Equipment Fund Plan.

The Laymen, within easy driving distance of Elon College (the area of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference) are volunteers in sponsoring and collecting a fund to underwrite the expense of the said suitable equipment. The estimated cost will be $375. To date, approximately one-third of this amount has been raised. Only a little figuring and we can see there are still "two-thirds to go." In clearer financial parlance—we still need $200.00 plus!

It is the intention of the committee to buy a sound projector, a record player, a splicer, a screen and an auxiliary amplifier—all of which will be owned and used by the Southern Convention.

Perhaps you may have an opportunity to present these facts to the laymen of your church. If so, please tell them how very much we need Visual Equipment in the Convention and assure them that any contributions that they may send will be real "boosters" to the well-begun Fund. Please ask that contributions be sent to:

Mr. A. H. Blalock, Treas.
114 East Front Street
Burlington, North Carolina

Other articles will appear here as time moves on and other suggestions will be made which we hope can be helpful to our Woman's Missionary Convention.

Here is one last word for today: If you wish to see for yourself what is happening "Today in Japan"—the facts as presented in our Foreign Mission Study booklet—then by all means see the film, "Kyoto Story." The price of this film is $6.00 and may be ordered through Missions Council,

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. House, Editor

DEAR BOYS & GIRLS:

The Southern Convention is meeting this week. Your minister is supposed to attend, and each church may have one or more delegates depending on the size of the church.

This is the most important meeting of our North Carolina and Virginia churches. It comes every two years and at that time plans are made for the next two years. It is customary to have good speaking, excellent reports and very good food.

Since the Convention meets at Oakland which is the best section of rural Virginia—food will be ample and delicious—Virginia cooks are unsurpassed.

But eating is only a minor phase of the Convention. It would be wonderful if all the people could agree on all the reports and all the suggestions one time, but then—that would probably be a sign of weakness—too feeble to care. These different ideas give enthusiasm to the speakers, they cause the delegates to think, weigh the values of the discussion and to make earnest decisions for our future.

The Southern Convention is responsible for Elon College, the Orphanage and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE SUN is the oldest of the Convention's children, and all of these are worthy of our work and money. The heads of these institutions will make reports: financial, statistical (that's when they count to see how many students, or children, or subscriptions), and then an appeal is made for future work.

Ministerial students under the Conferences and money loaned to ministers is considered. Home and foreign missions are studied—it was at a meeting of the Southern Convention that the Jacksons first thought of giving themselves to China. So you see what a tremendous meeting it is: filled with fellowship, fight, yes, that's right, fight against unchurchly things—prayer and praise. Hope you may be a delegate some day.

"FORBID THEM NOT."

Parents who provide clothing, education, and homes for their children but do not devote attention to their religious education are failing. For they are treating their children as creatures of time and not of eternity. And we reside in eternity and need to be conscious of ourselves as citizens of an everlasting country.

Such parents fail for they do not realize what the knowledge of the power and presence of God can do for their children. This knowledge is the most precious possession which can be given a child. Through it he learns that the kingdom of righteousness stands first and that those who recognize this are provided with moral stamina and the necessities of life. Through the knowledge of God and his Universality the child loses a sense of fear and takes on assurance. Through the knowledge of God the child attains to his rightful happiness.

There is much to be said for the almost forgotten custom of bringing children and parents together for reading of Scripture and for prayer in the early morning. In the hurry of our day, in the thrust of circumstance we tend to do away with this period of spiritual refreshment. We lose in so doing. We lose moments of access to the realm where there is no moth or rust, to the existence which does not pass away. We lose the moral strength which accrues to those who commune with God.

"Suffer little children and forbid them not, to come unto me," said Jesus of Nazareth. And we who see the children receive instruction in the teachings of the Master are obeying his counsel.—The Dayton Herald.

WHO ARE THE GREAT?

Here is a fine contribution from one of our church publications on the question, "Who are the Great?" We feel that it is worthy of being passed on to our many readers:

"Life has a way of confirming this truth. A few years ago H. G. Wells listed as his choice of the six greatest figures in history the following: Jesus of Nazareth, Buddha, Asoka, Aristotle, Roger Bacon and Abraham Lincoln." Whereupon, Bruce Barton, who had interviewed Mr. Wells, commented as follows: "Think of the thousands of emperors who have battled for fame, and fashioned their immortality into monuments of brick and stone. Yet there is only one emperor, Asoka, on the list; and he is there because he devoted himself to the betterment of his millions of subjects.

Think of the hosts who have struggled for wealth; yet no millionaire is on the list, except Asoka. Who sat on the throne in Rome when Jesus of Nazareth hung on the cross? Who ruled the hosts of Persia when Aristotle thought and taught? Who was king of England when Roger Bacon laid the foundation of modern scientific research?"

"These six men stood on the corners of history," said Mr. Wells. "Events hinged on them. The current human thought was freer and clearer because they had lived and worked. They took little from the world and left much to it. They did not get, they gave, and, in the giving, gained eternal influence."

In contrast, a newspaper editor sensed the emptiness and futility of a self-centered life when he published the following paragraph, headed A Short Biography—"The famous Chauncey Mitchell Depew's son and namesake is dead of pneumonia at his home in New York. Here's the tale of his life: Born fifty-four years ago, little known to the public, unmarried, took no part in business or professional affairs and lived a quiet bachelor's life, inheriting half of his father's estate of $17,000,000. That's all." That's all!

On the other hand, on the day of David Livingstone's funeral in Westminster Abbey, the London Punch printed the following tribute:

*He needs no epitaph to guard a name
Which men shall prize while worthy work is known;
He lived and died for good—be that his fame;
Let marble crumble; that is Livingstone.*

—The Standard.

A shamefaced employer was summoned to the office of the senior partner to hear his doom. The least that he could expect was a blistering dismissal. He might be sent to prison for years. The old man called his name and asked him if he were guilty. The clerk stammered out that he had no defense. "I shall not send you to prison," said the old man. "If I take you back, can I trust you?" When the surprised and broken clerk had given assurance and was about to leave, the senior partner continued: "You are the second man who has fallen and been pardoned in this business. I was the first. What you have done, I did. The mercy you have received, I received. God help us all."

Youth at Work in the Church

MORE GOOD NEWS.

We have reached our goal! In the fall of last year, the Youth Council, representing all young people of the Convention, adopted a work camp project, which meant raising at least $600 and finding a qualified young person. And now you can see that we have succeeded in raising and exceeding the original goal, and we have Max Vestal to represent us at a work camp in Agape (near Turin), Italy. Only with the cooperation and interest of young people and adults were we able to succeed. It is the answer to our dreams. With a similar spirit, you, the youth of the Convention, can do even greater things in His name.

There is an excellent possibility that we may be able to send a young married couple to a work camp in Puerto Rico. Their applications have already been sent in to the work camp office, and we are awaiting word from there. If they are accepted, there is an opportunity for us to accept this as part of the work camp project adopted last fall. It would be "over and above" our expectations. The P.O.W. Fund would have to be extended until we raised at least one hundred ($100) dollars in addition to what we already have on hand. As soon as we hear from the New York office, you will be informed immediately.

PLEASANT RIDGE (R) JUNIOR HI'S.

We organized sometime ago and are now having monthly meetings. We meet with a different member of our group each month and have a worship service and a fellowship hour together. We sometime use the "Junior Hi Kit" to help us plan our program for these meetings and sometimes we just plan them all ourselves with the program committee and sponsor working together. We try to plan programs that we feel God would want us to have.

This Junior Hi group and the Senior (Intermediate) class consist of the same boys and girls and have the same officers for both. These officers are: President, Harris Rumley; Vice President, Robert Williams; Secretary, Norman Smith; Assistant Secretary, Kitty Lee Cox; Sunshine Fund Treasurer, Clifton Hayes; Assistant, Clyde L. Fields, Jr.; Adult Advisers, Theodore Cox, Mrs. Tommy Cain and Rev. Clyde L. Fields; Sponsor, Tommy Shoemaker.

We feel that this news will be of interest to other people and also that it will help our own group to work harder and do more for Christ in this Junior Hi group.

REIDSVILLE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Church was held with Marion Faust at the home of Mrs. D. E. Mitchell, Friday, April 28, with 17 members present. The president, Miss Mary Ellen Ware, presided.

The Play Committee reported on three plays which had been considered since the last meeting. Acting upon the counsel of the committee, the group voted to give the play, "Cracked Nuts."

All members were urged to cooperate with Myrtle Dyer, chairman of the Cheer Committee, so that cards could be sent to the sick people in the church and community.

Further business included discussion by the group as to the feasibility of suspending with the regular Sunday evening meetings of the Pilgrim suspend these meetings for the summer months. The group also decided to have a combination supper-business meeting on the fourth Saturday night in each month. Rev. and Mrs. Tucker Humphries will be hosts of the next meeting.

Other plans include a fellowship gathering for all the young people from other churches in town.

Mrs. Edd Chilton read a letter received from Miss Pattie Lee Coghill asking the young people to aid in establishing youth activities in churches where there are none. The group decided to ask for more information before making definite plans.

The young people decided to recognize Mr. K. B. Hook through a letter of thanks for his generosity and good will upon so many occasions, and to invite him to the next meeting.

After the business meeting Mr. Humphries dismissed the group with prayer and then the social hour followed.

WHAT MAKES A WINNER.

"On many occasions during the time that it has been my pleasure to coach young men and women in athletics, the question has been asked of me what makes an athlete a winner in sports contests? Too often coaches are too busy to formulate answers to such queries but it always seemed important to me that the inquirer be informed of the makeup of a winner in athletics.

"One requirement for a winner is the possession of some special physical abilities including endurance, prowess, agility, timing and intestinal fortitude. The entire group of these physical abilities can be accumulated by a normal child under the supervision of a capable coach.

"A second requirement is the possession of a sound body with which we acquire the physical skills. This, of course, presupposes a total abstinence of any form of non-nourishing material from entering the body. Participation in athletics requires a well-nourished body ready to act at a moment's notice. Any form of alcohol which is taken internally tears down body tissues and dulls the nervous system so that reaction is hopeless. There is no middle road to take in becoming a winner in sports. Small amounts of alcohol taken internally are harmful."—Gil Dodd.

HOSEA REVEALS GOD'S FORGIVING LOVE.

LESSON VII—MAY 14, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely. Hosea 14:4.

LESSON: Hosea 11:1-4, 8-11; 14:4-9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 130.

Out of the Abundance of the Heart.

As was stated in the Notes last week, Hosea's message came out of his own experience, or was colored by his own experience. He loved a woman and married her. But she proved unfaithful and finally left him to ply her trade of shame in the city streets. She went from bad to worse, and finally ended up as a slave about to be sold. Hosea heard about her sad plight and went to the auction and bought her. He could not take her at once into his own home, but he did provide for her and bestowed upon her his love, warm and tender and true. The book which bears his name does not state whether she ever became penitent and whether he took her into his own home again. It does bear clear evidence of his patient and yearning love for her. And it was against this background that he preached and wrote.

A God Who Cares.

Perhaps nowhere in Scripture is there a more tender message than in the opening words of the eleventh chapter of Hosea. The prophet puts his truth in the language of the home, and in terms of the care of a parent for a child. It is the picture of a young child just taking his first steps and learning to walk. "I taught Ephraim to walk; I took them on my arms. I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love . . . and I laid food before them." Those of us who are parents well remember the first steps our children took. Who is there that ever saw his child take these first steps that can ever forget the sight or the emotions of that great event! To see that little one tottering along, swaying uncertainly from side to side, trying at time desperately to balance himself, and as often as not, not succeeding, and falling down or sitting down unceremoniously. Usually there is a smile of satisfaction and the glow of achievement on the face of the little one as he moves along. And the light on the face of the proud parent is something ne'er seen on land or sea. And if perchance the little one took a bad tumble, mother or daddy was there to pick him up and to hug him in loving arms and to kiss away the tears. Some of you who read these Notes know what I am writing about.

Well, said Hosea, that is just the way God felt about His chosen people of Israel. When He called him out of Egypt he was, as it were a young child. And God tempered the wind to the shorn lamb, to change the figure of speech. He lovingly and patiently watched over Israel, and ministered unto him. But even in those early years there were evidences of that wayward spirit, and that hankering after strange gods that was disturbing and distressing to Jehovah with His fatherly heart and His great care and concern. Hosea was emphasizing the fact that the God of Israel, and our God is a God who cares.

This truth finds emphasis in the succeeding verses of chapter eleven. To be sure there is the quality of justice in the character of God. He is bound by His own law and by His own nature—they are the same—to loathe sin, and to allow the natural penalty of sin to come upon the sinner. But this justice is overshadowed and redeemed by His mercy and His love. "How can I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I cast thee off Israel? My heart is turned within me, my compassions are kindled together. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger. I will not return to destroy Ephraim. For I am God and not man." Ah, there's the difference. He does not deal with us after our sins or reward us according to our iniquities. He returns good for evil. He is just but He is merciful. The Cross of Christ reveals how His mercy expresses itself even as His justice is satisfied.

God's Forgiving and Redemptive Love.

Chapter fourteen expresses another variation of the theme of chapter eleven. "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him." They were sinful and ungrateful and even unrepentant, but He loved them just the same. And He would always go on loving them, no matter what they did. Even when His justice demanded that they reap the penalty of their sins, His heart was breaking because of His great love for them. And this love would be redemptive. There would be a remnant which would return, the nation would produce the fruits of righteousness again. The time would come when in shame Ephraim would say, "What have I to do any more with idols?"

The Ways of Jehovah.

"For the ways of Jehovah are right, and the just shall walk in them; but the transgressors shall fall therein." Many years before this one of God's great spirits had said in the face of all the confusion caused by evil in the world, and the problem of suffering, "Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" That statement marked one of the great milestones in the moral and spiritual history of the race and of religion. The ways of Jehovah are right. He doeth all things well. He is too wise to make a mistake and too good to be unkind. And some day we will understand. We shall see that "He is able to make all things, all things, to work together for good to those that love Him."

NEW WOMEN'S GROUPS ORGANIZED.

Here are a few new women's groups recently organized, with the President listed in each case:

Pleasant Cross—President, Mrs. Graham Craven, Route 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Union Grove—President, Mrs. Paul Wilson, Route 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Sophia—President, Mrs. W. T. Madren, Sophia, N. C.

These are all in the Asheboro District. A new society was organized last summer at Spoon's Chapel, with the President, Mrs. Gillis Luck, Route 1, Asheboro, N. C. Congratulations and best wishes to these groups!

The group at Sophia was started in February with fourteen members. Six new members have been added since then. Other officers at Sophia are: Vice-President, Mrs. Troy Hall; Secretary, Mrs. Marvin Staley; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. G. M. Yow; Treasurer, Miss Doris Lee Hayes.

MISSION SOCIETY HOLDS MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Cypress Chapel held its April meeting at the church. Mrs. G. C. Mann presided and led the devotionals using a part of the 10th Chapter of St. John. Mrs. W. S. Harrell reported $37.00 realized from the Ruritan Supper.

Mrs. G. C. Mann, Mrs. Grady Brown and Mrs. J. P. Byrd were appointed to meet with other people from the different organizations of the church to discuss and make plans for remodeling the recently purchased building to be used for Fellowship Hall and educational building.

IMPORTANCE OF PREACHING.

people. Then our message will be validated with experience and we can speak as men who have authority. Latourette says that in spite of the threats of the age of storm, the church must take counsel, not of its fears, but of the commands of Christ. "Christians must take God at His word, dream in large terms, and reach the entire human race for God." We must have courage, after we have something to say, to say it! Deliver it with persuasion. When we have a message from God, declare it! Dr. Halford Luccock reminds us that Jesus was not crucified for saying, "Consider the lilies how they grow," but rather for saying, "Consider the thieves in the temple, how they steal."

The role of the minister to me is not that he must be a priest, or that he must be a prophet, but that he must be both priest and prophet. In his ministration, a priest to the sorrowful, sick, discouraged and hopeless. He must champion the cause of the disinherited, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom of God with its claims upon every person in the world, in the spirit of a prophet! My soul, what a task! "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature . . . telling them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

More people in our country are expressing interest in religion than ever before. We have a larger percentage of our people as church members than ever in our history. We must take these people where they are in their concern of religion and lead them on to commitment in Christ as Saviour. In a period that is confused and uncertain, people are turning to the church for peace of mind. People are not returning to the church because of a religious revival among the ranks of Christian believers, not because we have gone out and compelled them to come in, but out of fear of bombs and guns people are looking for peace of mind.

Rise up O men of God

Have done with lesser things and speak to this fevered race:

"My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

Jesus called Himself the Shepherd. We are to be shepherds. What if in our own time the hungry sheep come and look up and are not fed?

Not alone does our job rest in the pulpit. We must give ourselves to prayer, to study, and in all our conduct to let our light so shine. Not alone are we to preach, but to be what we preach. At least with all our heart, mind and strength, we must press on toward the mark of our high calling in Christ. Listen to St. Paul, "I charge thee in the sight of God, and of Christ Jesus, who shall judge the living and the dead . . . preach the Word; be urgent in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all longsuffering and teaching . . . be thou sober in all things, suffer hardship, do the work of an evangelist, fulfil thy ministry" (II Timothy 4:1-2, 5).

I want to close by telling you part of a parable that I heard Dr. Russell Dicks tell sometime ago. A man stood in his home and saw a man coming down the walk. There was something about him that looked familiar. He came in and introduced himself as the new minister in the community. "There was an air about the way he talked, the interest that he took in me and my family that I thought strange, but it seems I have met him before. Long ago a man stood on the temple steps in Jerusalem and preached. He was dragged across the city and crucified. That's where I met him!" That is our task as ministers.

The sacred rights of mankind are not to be rummaged for among old parchments or musty records. They are written, as with a sunbeam, in the whole volume of human nature, by the hand of Divinity itself, and can never be erased or obscured by mortal power.—Exchange.

He who influences the thought of his times, influences all the times that follow. He has made his impress on eternity.—Elbert Hubbard.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

The children—21 of them—enjoyed their trip to Eastern Virginia. The beautiful churches, both city and rural, attracted their attention, and the generous reception given by the pastors and people made them very happy. They were delighted with the ocean, the Norfolk azalea gardens, and many sights and wonderful places. They did their work well and we were all tired but happy when we arrived safely home.

Burlington invited us to give the program at their Family Night picnic supper Wednesday and the children enjoyed this very much because they felt so much at home and because of the bountiful supper and kindness of the Burlington Church. The first Sunday in May they will be featured at the afternoon session of Long's Chapel Church's annual home coming services.

The talk of our campus is the central dining room arrangement which is to be put into operation very soon. The dining room of the first main building which is quite large will be used. It is being redecorated. The big kitchen is being modernized and redecorated. The big back porch with its door opening into the dining room will be the place of entry so that the coming and going will not disturb the front sections of the main building. The superintendent will dine with them frequently, join with them in their "grace at the table," their songs, their plans for the day, etc. Announcements can be made where all the children and all the matrons can hear them at the same time. A study has been made which indicates this new arrangement will tend toward unity, economy and efficiency. We are all looking forward to it.

Come to see us. Eat with us. Bless our children by your presence and interest, and encourage us with your visit. Thank you for all your kindness.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

GEN. MacARTHUR HAILS WORK OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

General Douglas A. MacArthur "confidently" expects completion of a project for the distribution in Japan of 10,000,000 Scriptures before the end of 1951, it was revealed in a letter made public recently by the American Bible Society. The Society launched a campaign on April 12 for signatures in a huge "Good Will" book which will contain the names of contributors to the Bible distribution project.

General MacArthur, in his letter, suggested that a "Good Will" book be presented to the Japan Bible Society for permanent inclusion in its archives.

The American Bible Society has set three million Scriptures as its goal for distribution in Japan in 1950, and a further five million next year. The 1950 quota includes 35,000 complete Bibles, 980,000 New Testaments, and 1,985,000 portions of the Scriptures. In 1951, 50,000 Bibles, 1,240,000 New Testaments and 3,710,000 portions will be distributed.

The 8,000,000 Scriptures, in addition to the 2,000,000 previously distributed, will bring the total to the 10,000,000 goal set by General MacArthur, according to Dr. Robert T. Taylor, Bible society general secretary.

LET'S KNOW MORE ABOUT IT.

Life Magazine, in a full page advertisement, presents the case of the Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc. They claim jobs for 1,100,000 men and women covered by an annual payroll of $2½ billion, dividends for 200,000 stockholders.

In a review of this advertisement, Miss Laura Lindley of the Temperance League of America, comments that workers lost 29,700,000 working days from acute effects of drinking last year, which means that every person employed in the liquor industry was responsible for some other worker's losing 27 days because of drinking. For every stockholder, society has lost $5,000 on alcohol addicts and alcoholics.

If the $8.8 billion spent on alcoholic beverages in 1948 had been used to purchase useful goods, there would have been a greater demand for food crops, for containers, for freight, for labor in processing and distribution.

Miss Lindley, however, concedes that the Licensed Beverage Industries have made business—business for the police, for the courts, for jails, prisons, coroners, social workers, mental hospitals.

In Memoriam

WRIGHT.

WHEREAS, God has in His infinite wisdom and love seen fit to call to his reward our beloved sister and co-worker, Mrs. Lucy Pierce Wright, and we, as a church and individuals, desire to record our appreciation and sorrow in our loss; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That the Isle of Wight Christian Church and Woman's Missionary Society, of which she was a member, has lost one for whom they mourn.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers that God's blessings may fall upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.

Mrs. W. J. DARDEN,
Mrs. H. M. WILSON,
Mrs. R. F. WHITLEY,
Committee.

HOLLAND.

On February 1, 1950, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call to his reward our dearly beloved Senior Deacon and Brother, Frederick Carlton Holland of Bethlehem Church (Nansemond), and in his death we feel a deep sense of loss, yet are we strengthened and inspired to a higher plane of living by the admirable faith that was his; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That the Board of Deacons of Bethlehem Church, which he loved so well, bow in humble submission to the will of God.

2. That our church has lost a member whose loyalty was constant, our community a citizen who was wise and inspirational in his desire for the growth of its physical and spiritual condition, his family a devoted husband and father.

3. That we honor his memory and consecrated life by carrying on the work so dear to him, Brother Fred, as he was lovingly known, although an invalid for 25 years, accomplished a great ministry from his wheelchair.

W. EMMOTTE WHITE,
C. F. SARAGE,
A. C. HUNGERTY, Sr.,
Committee for Board of Deacons.

DAUGHTREY.

William Allen Daughtrey was a man for whom the church was the most vital and significant thing in life. His interest and his effort have been a source of strength to the Suffolk Church for many years.

From the time he came to Suffolk some two years ago, he had labored faithfully that the church might prosper and increase in its effective service to the community and to its God. For many years he served as chairman of its ushers, for the past five years he had served ably as chairman of its Board of Deacons. His interest in the Baracca Class brought vision and strength to the men's program in the church.

Mr. Daughtrey's unflinching devotion to the church was infectious. Not only those who served with him on committees and boards but all whose lives he touched and all whose lives touched his were inspired by the knowledge that here was a man of faith whose faith worked constantly. One could not be in his presence without realizing the innate goodness of his life. He was a friend to all, a wise counsellor when his advice was requested, a source of comfort and strength in time of need and a source of joy to all who knew him.

In his death Suffolk Church suffers a real loss but he has bequeathed to the church a fine vision for the future and a firm understanding of how that vision, under the help and guidance of God, can be accomplished.

THE H-BOMB AND THE WORLD'S CHILDREN.

Some Affirmations for Men and Women of Good Will

By FRED EASTMAN.

One of the blackest crimes in the annals of infamy was King Herod's Slaughter of the Innocents. At most he murdered a few hundred children. He did it for the sake of his own security.

Now, nearly two thousand years later, our Government has announced its intention to produce a hydrogen bomb which may be dropped upon Russia killing multitudes of civilians including their children. Our Government maintains that such use would be in defense of our security.

WE AFFIRM that our Government has taken this action without the consent of the governed.

WE AFFIRM that we do not wish to purchase our security, even if we could do so, at such a price.

WE AFFIRM that the use of the H-Bomb, or other instrument of mass destruction, upon the children of any nation would be in defiance of the laws of God and humanity. Should we be the first to use such instruments we would create fear and hatred of us and would precipitate a war that would slaughter more children than any war mankind has ever experienced.

WE AFFIRM that our immediate duty to the children of the world is to feed the hungry, clothe the ragged, and teach all as best we can the truth that makes men free.

WE AFFIRM that the real strength of our people is primarily moral and spiritual, and not in our bombs, strategic bases, raw materials and other resources of military might. Our strength is rooted in our religious faith out of which have sprung our convictions about the worth and dignity of man, has right to life and liberty, and his duty to "do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with his God."

WE AFFIRM that our security among the peoples of the world depends upon their good will toward us. We create that good will by acts of mercy and of mutual aid, not by violence.

THEREFORE—

WE URGE OUR GOVERNMENT, as the first step to halt the arms race toward a new war, to enter into negotiations with Russia through the United Nations in a patient and continuous effort to settle the basic political conflicts between East and West.

WE URGE OUR GOVERNMENT at the same time to make the widest possible use of radio and other media of mass education in order to reach all the peoples of the world, including our own and the Russians, with messages designed to tell the truth about America and our sincere desire for peace, to dispel fear and distrust, and to build mutual confidence.

WE URGE OUR GOVERNMENT to do all in its capacity to strengthen the United Nations so that its power to prevent war is made effective.

WE URGE OUR PRESS to distinguish between the Russian people and their Politburo, remembering that the Russian people are much like ourselves, loving their children as we love ours, and desiring peace as we do.

WE URGE OUR STATESMEN, as they deal with the complex problems of our tragic crisis, to seek their solution in the framework of religious faith rather than the framework of power politics.

WE URGE OUR FELLOWMEN in all countries to lift the world's children into the focus of world thought. The future belongs to them, not to us. Only as we save them from a new Slaughter of the Innocents in a holocaust of bombs do we fulfil our first responsibility to them and to future generations.

After today's re-write of News on the Drunk Front, we cannot help but recapitulate: beer, whiskey, wine—the glasses that cheer! Well, that cheer must be for the ear that was bitten off; the bullets that landed in the spine, stomach, heart, hip, elbow; the car wrecks which injured an 18-month baby, a three-year-old child, several adults; the chain which beat a wife; the seduction of young womanhood; the disgraced element of a small town; an inebriated five-year-old child; the comic who jumped from the second-story window; the ex-G. I. who went berserk; the repeal bootleggers, and that pay-off item—the bill to let drinks go "on the cuff."

TEMPERING THE BLOWS

By Charles A. Wells

We hear a lot these days about doing something to stop communism in Asia. We are prepared to spend billions to accomplish this, but it is revealing to discover that we are already represented behind the iron curtain by powerful forces. The Christian missionaries all over Asia are right now at grips with communism in a manner more vital than any other method we could use. Our warships and bombers might drive back the armed Communist troops but they can't drive back Communist ideas. All over Communist China Christian missionaries are still carrying on, healing, teaching, ministering to the people. Responsible Christian workers report that the Communist leaders are even sending their children to Christian schools. Talk about infiltration behind enemy lines! Can you think of anything more dramatic or effective than this widespread penetration of Christian thought in the very areas the Communists are trying to make their own—especially in view of how little we spend on such a program in contrast to armaments and diplomacy!

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE 1950 SESSION OF THE CONVENTION.

The 39th biennial session of The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, Incorporated, is history. The significance of the meeting held at Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia, May 2-4, will be determined by what we do with the good resolutions and forward-looking actions taken there. It is believed that the good spirit, unanimity of action, and projected plans for a needed advance were sufficient to spur us on to new and greater things. Let us hope and pray that we may have the courage to put into action our high purposes manifested at Oakland.

The attendance at the Convention sessions was better than usual. Despite rain almost throughout the meeting, the church was filled at every session except the last morning, and approximately 100 persons attended that last session. Dr. H. S. Hardcastle and His Oakland people provided generously for every comfort of delegates and visitors. The program was of high order. The statesmanlike addresses of Dr. Truman B. Douglass, Executive President of the Board of Home Missions, New York, and Dr. Ross W. Sanderson of our denominational department of research, challenged us. The reports of Boards, Committees, Institutions and Auxiliaries gave us a new confidence and hope for the future. The presence of so many of our pastors and lay people give us a hope that the actions of the Convention will find sympathetic and favorable response in our churches.

Three distinguished "church fathers"—Dr. I. W. Johnson and Drs. N. G. and C. E. Newman—were with us in spirit and in truth, giving of their able counsel and inspiration.

We are grateful to President Truitt and all other officers, boards and committees for their faithful discharge of their duties.

The Convention was saddened by the tragic accident which took the life of Mrs. D. R. Fonville, Sr., of Burlington, who with her husband and Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Robinson, was en route to the Convention.

Again, thanks to everyone for helping to make a great session of the Convention. In the spirit of the "new togetherness" manifested at Oakland, let us move forward courageously in a "needed advance."

Faithfully yours,

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

REFLECTIONS ON MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day has done much to help men understand God. Christ projected the idea of a God of love in a world where concepts of God had been chiefly in the terms of a god of wrath, stern justice and vengeance. The love of God, made so manifest and dramatic by the teachings and life of Christ, even then remained somewhat a mystery to the minds of man. The commemoration of motherhood has done much to help man realize the nature of divine love as a basic attribute of God's presence in life. Motherhood is universal, its nature unchanging. The visible love of motherhood marks clearly the path of invisible divine love. Men can be sure of God's love through the human channel made thus available to us. Mother's Day should draw men away from their selfishness, hatreds and prejudices and a little closer to the love of God made manifest in Christ.—Charles A. Wells.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Mother's Day was established by an Act of Congress and the second Sunday in May was so designated. The bill was signed by President Woodrow Wilson and William Jennings Bryan. This was on May 8, 1914.

The idea originated in the mind of Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia. Some of the things we are supposed to do are as follows: Every family that has an American flag is supposed to display it that day; sons and daughters away from home are urged to write mother a letter if she is living; if your mother is living be sure to wear a red flower that day; if she is not living, wear a white flower.

Churches can be made much more interesting if extra flowers are on hand for those who may forget. Carnations are thought of, but any flower—white or red—will do.

Volumes have been written about this saint of saints. She was last at the Cross and first at the Tomb.

Little girls like dolls—it's a God-given instinct. Raphael's Madonna will always remain the world's master painting.

A mother's love, how sweet the name;

What is a mother's love?

A noble, pure and tender name

Enkindled from above.

To bless a heart of earthly mold,

The warmest love that can't grow cold,

This is a mother's love.

THE FOURTH ESTATE*

The Christian Sun is a small star in the galaxy of religious journalism. It contributes its rays of light to the great white way of Christian truth, Christian service and Christian idealism. What does one small light matter, when there are so many others, and some are much larger? The answer may be surmised by recalling the testimony of the historians during our own generation as they described the lights going out, one by one, throughout Europe. Many of those lamps of enlightenment have never come on again. Some never will. St. John testified, "The light shineth in the darkness and the darkness has never (completely) put it out."

The Findings of the Madras Conference carried this statement: "The Christian movement must speak . . . through the writers and editors of books, pamphlets and periodicals, in an ever enlarging circle of students and readers. God grant it may be so."

The Church Press

The Protestant church paper can help shape future American culture, declares Dr. Benjamin P. Browne, director of Christian publications of the Northern Baptist Convention. He says, "The mass mind has become so thoroughly secularized or so drugged with the stimulants of gadgets and sex as to be incapable of even understanding what the lofty concepts of the Christian heritage are all about. We must train thousands of writers who can flood into American life until news reporters, fiction and feature writers, magazine publishers and book authors are craftsmen committed to captivating America for Christ."

The Sun is a part, and a member, of the Associated Church Press. A responsible member of this body wrote:

What do you know about the power of the religious press of America? Has it occurred to you that every week, year in and year out, it goes into hundreds of thousands of the finest homes in the United States? That it is read and re-read and passed along? That hundreds of thousands of people, among them the outstanding leaders of thought in our country, have faith in the high integrity of these journals and that their lives are motivated by the principles for which they stand?

Alongside the chaotic life of the world today, as you see it mirrored in your daily paper, put the world that is visioned in the pages of the religious press.

For which would you vote—the world as it is or the world as the religious press believes it can be?—the world for which it pleads in its every issue? And remember the constant reiteration of that plea, as it goes into hundreds of thousands of homes. Don't underestimate the power of your religious press.

Editors

The Associated Church Press meets annually. This year the meeting was held in Syracuse, New York. Religious editors of various denominations came from many states and from Canada. For three days they discussed their common problems, compared notes, and listened to the experts. The speaker came away with a few definite and vivid impressions of these editorial practitioners.

1. Religious editors are quite human. However, they may yearn for the power of the prestidigitator, the magic word, the secret abracadabra that would open all doors, resolve all problems, and heal all wounds, they must admit and accept their terrestrial status. Even at their best they have marked limitations and their "ex cathedra" pronouncements may be taken with the proverbial grain of salt. Two topflight editors spoke at Syracuse of their trips to, and impression of Yugoslavia. Their impressions and explanations were markedly divergent. Editors are not omniscient.

2. Editors, although human, may be underestimated. Any smart alec may make mincemeat of their messages, but they may be ignored at individual and corporate peril. Thus, in mid-August, 1914, the first month of the first World War, H. G. Wells wrote a brief paper for the London "Nation." He had been prophesying the general European war for years. No one paid any attention to him. They said of him what was said of the prophet Ezekiel centuries before: "The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off" (Ezek. 12:27). Once the storm had broken, Wells wrote, "I am not prophesying now. I am running as hard as I can beside the marching facts, pointing at them." No generation can afford to bridle or ignore its prophets and editors.

3. Religious editors have their problems. And how! The majority of them are handicapped, financially or otherwise. Some have their hands tied by denominational boards. Those who have ample time, competent help and up-to-the-minute press work are the exception rather than the rule. One lone religious editor boasts that all his assistants are graduates in journalism. Many have no full-time assistants and some have to do jobs in addition to editorial work, believe it or not. All this indicates that religious journalism has a long way to go.

Yes, problems abound. Every editor needs a sixth sense of journalism to tell him what to print and what not to print, when to hold his fire and when to "shoot the works." Now he is accused of using unpoetic license, again he finds himself in the dialectic doghouse. Copy must meet the deadline as weeks go by in monotonous or maddening rapidity. The endless process of meditating, incubating, germinating, assimilating, refrigerating, and incinerating continues without interruption or respite. Rain or shine, sickness or health, blizzards or blisters, vacations or vaccinations, deacons or damsels, editors' easy chairs of popular lore because the uneasy babies or bumpkins—copy must go to press. Thus the chair of experience. "Do you think I should put more fire into my editorials?" a writer asked. "No," said his adviser, "vice-versa."

*Biennial report of the Editor to the Southern Convention at Oakland Church, May 2, 1950.

4. There is hope. The Associated Church Press is indicative of a large reservoir of talented and devoted personnel in the ranks of Protestantism. They endeavor to read the signs of the times, rise above sectional and historical attitudes and cultivate a world-wide perspective.

This is a great age for religious journalism. More schools are adding classes or departments in journalism. Articles and books on the subject are being written. New and improved techniques of printing are prevalent. While few editors can maintain a cursive pen aglow with crusading ink, a host of pen-prodders habitually give mental and spiritual sustenance for innumerable readers.

Survival Power

Dr. N. G. Newman used to speak concerning the recuperative power of the church. How true! Consider also the survival power of our church paper. It has survived more than a century, and as one centenarian tersely observed, it is stronger at the beginning of the second century than it was at the beginning of the first. While there are those who have felt its pulse, taken its blood pressure, listened to its heart murmurs, diagnosed its ills, and even made plans for its funeral, still the "Ole ark's a moving along."

There is in the book of Ecclesiasticus a lovely verse which says, "And, lo, my brook became a river, and my river became a sea" (Ecclus. 24:13). The trickle of words, sentences and paragraphs which began back there with Daniel Kerr at Junto Academy in 1844 has become a life-giving and life-sustaining stream.

From time to time we hear of the financial plight of The Sun until some people get impatient and others lose heart (all those who have never had financial difficulties will please stand on their heads at this point). Now and again someone will say: "Why doesn't someone do something? Why not stay out of debt or quit publishing the paper? Can't we cut it in half, or publish monthly?" Of course, one might timidly reply that the very fact that our paper has been published weekly for more than a hundred years would indicate that somebody has been doing something. After such a worthy record of service by our church paper, who would dare be a party to its dismemberment?

Subscriptions

While the editor has no direct responsibility for subscriptions, he is concerned and feels a bit depressed at times when it is reported that a given number have not renewed. Why didn't they renew? Were the editorials uninteresting, or was it because of the inordinate amount of energy required to prepare and forward a renewal? The experience of a Vermont editor may be apropos. He sent one Hiram Sparks a notice that his subscription had expired. The notice came back with this laconic scrawl: "So's Hiram." Subscribers, like church members, come and go.

Some readers are hard to please. The editor of a small weekly paper in a Nevada town was in need of some material to fill his columns; so he had the printer set up the Ten Commandments, and he ran them without making an editorial comment. Three days after the paper was published, he received a letter saying, "Cancel my subscription. You're getting too personal."

There are hundreds of people throughout our churches who would both enjoy and profit by The Sun. You, ministers and layworkers, can help find them and enroll them among our family of subscribers.

The majority of our church members know too little of the work of the churches, both within and without our fellowship. We busy pastors do not have time to keep them up to date on all phases of church thought and activity. The church paper helps greatly and consistently at this point. Few pastors can afford an assistant. Few can visit every member weekly. The church paper can visit every member every week and find them at home! Nor does this journalistic visitor waste time talking about the weather or other non-essentials. Its visit is devoted entirely to religion and the church. Here is your best opportunity to give your people a weekly shot of religious adrenalin. So, why not go out and get subscriptions?

By the way, this Convention is an ideal time and place to subscribe or renew. A story with a moral comes to mind. An Alabama editor tells of a farmer who, too stingy to subscribe to his church paper, sent his little boy to borrow a copy from his neighbor. In haste, the boy ran over a stand of bees and, in ten minutes, he looked like a boy with the mumps. His father ran to his assistance and, failing to notice the barbed wire fence, ran into that, ruining a nine dollar pair of pants. Then the old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, got in the corn field and ate so much green corn she was sick and almost died. Hearing the strange commotion, his wife ran out, upsetting a four gallon churn of milk into a basket of little chickens, drowning the entire batch. In her haste she dropped a thirty-five dollar pair of false teeth on the cement steps and broke them. The baby, being left alone, crawled through the milk into the parlor where there was wet paint on the floor. During the excitement the oldest daughter eloped with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens and the calves chewed the tails off three white shirts on the clothes line.

The moral of this story is: "Don't borrow your neighbor's church paper. Subscribe today." The price is two dollars; pretty steep, we admit, but slightly less than a philanthropic investment.

Church News

One of the rigors of editorial work is the weekly scavenger hunt for news. We think often of Horace Greely, who always insisted that the word "news" was plural. One day he wired to his reporter: "Are there any news?" The return wire brought the reply: "Not a 'new.'"

Well, there are news, on our doorsteps. Things happen in our churches. Some of you prepare reports for your local paper but neglect sending the same news to your church paper. That, dear friends, is what is known as sin of omission. Considerable distress has been experienced by those who complain that news items have appeared slightly distorted in (Continued on page 9)

A New Togetherness for a Needed Advance

Keynote Address Given at the Southern Convention

By PRESIDENT JOHN G. TRUITT

And they were all with one accord in one place . . . and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit.—Acts 2:1 and 4.

Both by tradition and the program committee it has been suggested that I make a few remarks upon the opening of the 39th biennial session of the Southern Convention. I regret that it is called a "keynote address." For two years something of the burden of the Convention's work and welfare has rested upon my heart. Daily have I prayed through these two years that I might be given grace and wisdom to do my share humbly and well. I have felt the responsibility I assure you.

The Miracle of the Magnet.

I shall never forget the thrill and wonder that possessed me as a lad when I saw for the first time what I felt was the miracle of a simple horseshoe magnet. To me it looked like a piece of iron, but I noticed that it seemed to come alive with power when pieces of steel were placed near it. How they jumped with some unseen power to it! How it held them! But its wonder overwhelmed me completely when I saw that small nails became possessed of its unseen power when they touched it so that they in turn could draw other nails to them and hold them fast. To me in after years I looked upon it as a law of God in His universe and it has made the text spoken by Jesus to His disciples come alive when He said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me." I pray that in the power of His person, His power and divine help, we may be drawn together to achieve His will, working in all our hearts.

Jesus and His disciples had come very near the end of their earthly way together. He had ridden into Jerusalem with a very small triumph staged at His own direction by a small party of His followers and friends. But the humble beginning of this triumphal entry took upon it the hosannas of the children and youth and kindled the hearts and hopes of the rapidly growing multitudes of adults as it pressed its way through the narrow, crowded streets to the Temple. At this annual passover period the Chosen People pressed into Jerusalem from many nations, so that beholding this spectacle were representatives from among the Parthians and Medes, strangers from Asia, Egypt and Rome, and Jews and proselytes from all the lands and countries thereabout. These all had the opportunity to see Someone who was "more than a king."

Jesus Himself had looked forward to these days with concern beyond our comprehension, and had set His face like a flint toward their fulfillment. On one occasion He had told His little band: "I must go up to Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised up again the third day." His conversations with them, full of light and life and love, were spoken as He expressed it "before I suffer."

Fruit-Bearers.

It was in this week of suffering the Master was drawing His disciples closer and ever closer to Him. Drawing them aside He sat with them in an upper room. He shared with them the tragedy of the cross before its enactment. They heard those solemn words which christendom dare never forget: This is My body broken for you. In the closing days He lifted the veil and let them glimpse eternal life, and the many mansions. Perhaps for us here the view of our hearts coming at last into the eternal presence of it is not as vivid as it was to them, but that does not mean it should not be. It gave assurance and strength to them, and to the saints and master-marcher across the centuries. They heard His new commandment to love one another as He had loved them—which was unto the death. They were commissioned to be His fruit-bearers, and to be one even as He and His Father were one. They were given the rich assurance of the coming to them and to their successors of the Holy Spirit; and they were offered the avenue of prayer as the source of power; and they were assured that just as He had overcome the world so should they. More or less falteringly they followed Him to the cross. They displayed their human frailties. But His love would not let them go. He took the little they had to offer and made it the cornerstone of the Kingdom of God on earth, the hope of the fulfillment of the Lord's Prayer: "Thy Kingdom come."

After His resurrection He commanded them to wait in prayer until they be endued with power. He kept His promise and the Church was born. The Kingdom of God had a bridgehead in old Jerusalem. And the march of the Gospel began to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Briefly I have recounted those things for His promises are to us and to all that are afar off. That is the story of Jesus with the men and women who followed Him. You and your churches—this Convention—are in the wake of those first years. He dealt with them. He is dealing and will deal with us, through His Holy Spirit. True they had their imperfections, their faults, and their failings; but they had His power because they were a team—there was a togetherness from which they could go to set the world upside down for Christ.

How the world needs new followers of Him who are banded together in the inseparable bonds of love and discipleship! Let us honor Him for the things He has done for us, and through us. In our Convention He has given us five Conferences, with 196 churches. These are the buildings of the noble men and women who have gone before. They are a heritage, a field and opportunity. He has given us a great college, built out of the vision, and brawn, and sacrifice of our predecessors. Here is the place of vision, the broadening of our horizons. We dare not let it discontinue its growth and good favor. Where there is no vision the people perish. It should be made more and more effective by our support and planning every year. Our Convention and our country need its contributions.

Of long standing and great worth for the spiritualizing of our efforts, and the carrying out of the Lord's command that we go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature is our Mission Board. Through this Board we marshal our gifts, consecrate and inspire our giver, and have some small share of paying the price of Christian Missions across this broken and needy world. What an inspiring job! Compared to the immeasurable need ours is indeed but a small part, but it is one heavily demanded of our Lord. How do we know what will be the fate of Dick and Dorothy Jackson, and many others who stand in such places? It is ours, under God, to do our best. To do this we need a new realization of our partnership with Jesus, a new togetherness in all our ranks. A new laying down of petty difficulties, and a new lifting up of the cross of Christ.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

LOSSES.

Elon College suffered two unfortunate and severe losses during last week:

MRS. D. R. FONVILLE.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Fonville of Burlington, N. C., together with Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Robinson, pastor of the Burlington Church, were driving to the Southern Convention meeting at Chuckatuck, Va. Between Franklin and Holland, Mr. Fonville lost control of the car which left the highway, overturned and was wrecked. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson suffered minor bruises. Mr. Fonville suffered a sprained ankle, broken rib, and other minor injuries. Mrs. Fonville was fatally injured. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Robinson assisted by the writer, Saturday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

Mrs. Fonville was prominent in civic and social affairs in Burlington. She was a devoted member of the Burlington Church and gave her time and service freely. She was a teacher in the Sunday school, director of young people's work, and an officer in the women's work of the church. She was capable, efficient and consecrated. Her services will be greatly missed.

Mr. Fonville is recovering satisfactorily. He is a member and secretary of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

OSCAR F. SMITH.

Thursday evening of last week while participating in the annual horse show at Sedgefield, N. C., Mr. Smith was stricken and fell from his horse. He was rushed to the hospital but was pronounced dead by physicians. Oscar Smith is known throughout the Convention. He has made notable contributions to his local church, Rosemont, and helped to make it one of the best equipped small churches of our Convention. He rendered his services in a quiet, unassuming manner but could always be depended upon to do what was necessary. His interest and services extended beyond his local church. He has made notable contributions to the missionary interest of the Southern Convention and has assisted financially in the remodeling and building of many of our churches in the Convention. He was very fond of children and has demonstrated particular interest in the Christian Orphanage at Elon College. For a number of years his church has given to the orphanage an amount far above the average of the local churches in the Convention. At times the has made direct contributions to the Orphanage.

For a number of years Oscar Smith has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College and was one of the original directors of the Elon College Foundation. At the time of his death he was vice-president of the organization. Since the first effort to clear Elon College of its debts Oscar Smith has been a very generous contributor to the college which has been of great assistance. In addition to his financial support he has given freely of his time, his counsel, and his advice. Because of his experience and successes in business his services in these particulars have been of inestimable value to the college. Indirectly he has helped to guide and pilot the college through its periods of uncertainty and rejoiced to see it resting on more solid foundation. He was greatly interested in the Elon College Foundation. He saw in this work an opportunity to interest men of means in the college and for the securing and handling of funds for the benefit of the college in a safe and constructive manner. His services and support will be greatly missed by the college. It will be necessary for all of us to work harder, contribute more generously and pray earnestly for the success of our college.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Had it not been for the churches in the Southern Convention the college would never have been brought into existence. Had it not been for the interest and support given by the Convention the college could not have conducted its program of education for our young people. As the college has been dependent upon the churches in the past so it is dependent on the church in the future and shall ever be. It is the responsibility of the college to communicate its needs to the church and to assure the church that its contributions are greatly appreciated and used to the greatest possible advantage. There are so many young people and many of them in our church who desire an education but are not financially able to meet the requirements. Every contribution that the church makes to the college makes it possible for the college to be of greater service to the youth of our country and to the church of which it is a part. During the summer months we shall need the support of all. We appreciate every thought and every contribution.

THE FLOWERS AT OAKLAND.

We all wondered whether the Rev. Henry E. Robinson would overcome the difficulties of the hour and preach the Convention sermon this past week at Oakland. Coming into the pulpit he asked me as the presiding official to do a favor for him. I promised even before I knew what it was. Would I look at the beautiful daisies in the silver bowl and write a poem about them. He preached a great sermon, and the next day I penned these lines:

Daisies.

Daisies sweet and fresh are they,
On our altar where we pray;
A work of beauty deftly planned
By grateful heart and skilful hand;
Lifting up both mind and soul,
Shasta daisies in silver bowl.

Sentinel stems stand in between
Lacy leaves of living green,
While ray-like petals snowy white
Symbolize pure shafts of light
Encircling round, as they unfold
A central sun of shining gold.

Grant we as well our lives may yield
As these sweet flowers of the field;
And help us, Lord, by night or day,
As we meet to sing and pray,
To be as pure in all our praises
As this bowl of Shasta daisies!

The tragic announcement the next morning causes me to desire humbly to dedicate the above poem to the memory of the life which had enriched so many years even more beautifully than the bowl of daisies had enriched our place of worship on the evening before.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR MISSION APPORTIONMENT?

The beginning of two new churches awaits funds. The Mission Board wishes to help these two and other promising fields to have churches. The Board is the agency of our churches and Convention. Without funds the Board cannot do its job. This is Mission Period. Each church is urged to send its Conference Apportionment for Missions now. Please help extend the cause of Christ in our Convention area by sending your Mission Apportionment to The Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

CAREER MISSIONARIES APPOINTED.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald K. Abbott of New York City have just been appointed as career Congregational Christian missionaries by the American Board for educational and ministerial work in East Africa. Mr. Abbott was for four years in the United States Navy during World War II during which time he saw action in every theatre of war.

The Abbotts hope to sail for their new work in Africa around the first of August. They will be working in the East Africa Mission of the American Board where the work centers at Chikore and Mt. Silinda. They will learn the native tongue, Chindau, after they reach the field.

DISPLACED PERSONS DIRECTOR.

Rev. and Mrs. William Fairbank Hastings of San Juan, Puerto Rico, reached New York City by plane Sunday, May 7, to assume direction of the Displaced Persons Program of the Congregational Christian Service Committee at 110 East 29th Street, New York City.

The Hastings succeed Rev. and Mrs. Howard Kester, the present directors of the Service Committee hostel and Displaced Person's work, who are leaving to take over the John C. Campbell Folk School in South Carolina.

On Monday evening, May 8, at 6:00 o'clock there was held a farewell dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Kester in the Parkside Hotel, Gramercy Park, New York City, at which time the Hastings were given a welcome.

Mr. Hastings has been minister of the Union Church at San Juan, Puerto Rico for the past six years. This church, including more than 20 denominations, is situated at "the crossroads of the Americas." It is the only all English-speaking church on the Island.

Mr. Hastings comes from a preacher-missionary family. His father is a Congregational minister, still preaching at the age of 84. His mother was Elizabeth Fairbank, born in Ahmednagar, India, the daughter of a distinguished missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

Before going to Puerto Rico he was minister of Christian Education at Watchung Avenue Congregational Church in Montclair, New Jersey, for two years; pastor of the First Congregational Church of Ithica, New York, for three years; pastor of the Middlebury (Vt.) Congregational Church for five years. He has taught mathematics in high school; physics in college and Old Testament in seminary. For three years he was Chairman of the Committee on Evangelism of the New York Congregational Conference and also Chairman of their Social Relations Committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Hastings co-authored the book, Puerto Rico Today and Tomorrow, used for interdenominational mission study by young adult groups in the U. S. A.

The saying that knowledge is power is not quite true. Used knowledge is power, and more than power. It is money, and service, and better living for our fellowmen, and a hundred other good things. But mere knowledge, left unused, has no power in it.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

LINVILLE CHURCH HAS FAMILY LIFE PROGRAM.

As National Family Life occurs during the week of May 7-14, the Linville (Va.) Church held a special service on April 23, last preaching service before that week.

A special message was given by the pastor, Rev. E. J. Rohart. A visual-art presentation was given and a special musical number presented. These were all centered on Home and Family Life. Special reading material and leaflets, "Let's Worship Together in the Family," were distributed.

MAY FELLOWSHIP DAY IN WINSTON-SALEM.

The Winston-Salem Council of Church Women had a very fine meeting for May Fellowship Day, Friday, May 5. A representative group of women gathered into one of the lovely parks where a business session was begun at 11:00 a. m. Among the items of business was the election of new officers.

A pot-luck picnic lunch was enjoyed at 12:00 o'clock, and at 12:45 an address was heard by Prof. Floyd Moore of Guilford College on the theme, "Our Daily Bread." Prof. Moore has spent some time in Germany and Palestine and was well qualified to speak on the subject. "The women of America," he said, "have a definite responsibility for the economic welfare of the world."

BURLINGTON AUXILIARY.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Burlington Church had as its guest speaker Mrs. W. L. Parker of Greensboro on Monday, May 1. In speaking on the subject of "Home and Family Life," she not only held the interest of the women present, but left a deep desire in their hearts to create an atmosphere in their homes which will not only unite their families in personal relationships, but one in which they will serve as instruments to serve God.

Circle No. 6 met in the evening, at which time Mr. John Graves spoke on the subject of "Home and Family Life." Mr. Graves, as always, brought a real message to his listeners.

On the same evening, a most inspiring message was given to the Margaret Lightbourne Circle when Miss Genevieve Burton, Field Secretary of the State P.T.A., spoke on "Home and Family Life."

The current issue of Guide Posts (May-June) carries a most impressive modern parable entitled "A Church Woman." It is suggested for use preceding an installation service or the first meeting in the fall. It would be quite effective whenever used, and is something for all women in the church to consider.

EDITORIAL.

our publication. Others have faced this same problem.

Mark Twain, in his reporting days, was instructed by an editor never to state anything as a fact unless he could verify it from personal knowledge. Sent out to cover an important social event soon afterward, he submitted the following story: "A woman giving the name of Mrs. James Jones, who is reported to be one of the society leaders of the city, is said to have given what purported to be a party yesterday to a number of alleged ladies. The hostess claims to be the wife of a reputed attorney."

The editor is anchored to two jobs and finds it impossible to check every detail for accuracy. Much must be taken for granted. He must depend heavily on others. There is good authority for this time-honored mode of reporting. Remembering the well-known columnist who wrote, "I give unto you that which I myself also received."

Boners.

Yes, THE SUN can be depended upon to come forth with its full quota of typographical errors, for which we receive due condemnation. Now here is an enigma. When a paper in Petersburg, Virginia, reports that "The doctor felt the patient's pulse, and admitted that there was nothing he could do," or when a Tennessee daily states that "Columbia, which calls itself the largest outdoor mule market in the world, held a mule parade yesterday, headed by the governor," these items are hailed by delighted readers and given prominent mention in national publications. But when THE SUN refers to "pastors" as "pesters" the bluebloods look down their noses at us. Just wait until The Reader's Digest gets THE SUN into its "Slips That Pass in the Type" and we'll be coming into our own!

THE SUN does not pretend to be a high-brow literary magazine. It is a religious newspaper for the rank and file of church members. The Moreland (Kansas) Monitor once had an editor who wrote: "Some of the smart alecs have criticized my grammar. I want it understood that I use poor English for three reasons: First, I don't know any better; second, half of you wouldn't understand good English; third, if I could write correctly, I would probably be some place else and you would lose the best editor in Graham County."

A Decade.

This biennium rounds out a decade of service for the present editor. The score is 500 issues. There are no illusions (only a few allusions!). I am not a great editor, but it is great to be an editor. Thank you for this grand experience; the opportunity of specialized service. Dr. John Wright Buckham has described the experience: "That which has come to me, has come to me as to no one else. Therefore it is mine to put into words, or deed, to make it part of myself and to give it back to the All Giver, and to my fellows, individualized and expressed. In the manifold wealth of the whole, this is my peculiar portion, my especial service, slight though it be, it shall not be lost, for it is part of the Common Good."

Finally, Brethren.

A final observation. Surely we need to cultivate a higher opinion of our fellowship, our institutions and our total mission. We are a grand fellowshipship. Within reason, we can do anything we resolve to do. We have in our church paper a medium of exceptional power and usefulness. It is mechanical; but the mechanical may become mediocre or miraculous, monotonous or milliferous. As the paper is blessed by your prayers and patronage, it will continue to be a blessing.

When our twentieth century civilization is weighed in the scales of divine judgment, will it be found wanting? We help to answer that question. Ours is the task of building the church, extending the Kingdom and helping make society genuinely and permanently Christian.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

GROWING UP.

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

While on a trip to California my husband and I stopped off for a day's visit with our nephew. As we stepped from the plane his eleven-year-old son, Don, rushed to meet us. He and his Uncle Ross shook hands. "Why didn't you give Uncle Ross a kiss?" I asked. "Men don't kiss, Aunt Helen," he answered. "We're men!"

Later in the year, When Don was visiting with us, we were invited to dinner by the parents of six-year-old Mary Sue. Her heart was completely won by the young guest of honor. "I liked Don, Mommie," she confided. "He didn't treat me like a baby."

Then there is our small neighbor Betty—five-and-a-half years old. Her mother had allowed her to spend thirty minutes of her bedtime with some guests. A cousin of her mother's rushed up to her, caught hold of her arms, and called everyone's attention to the child's new frock. Betty drew back. The relative looked hurt, but her husband quickly stepped forward, extended his hand, and in much the same manner that he had addressed his hostess, he said, "Good evening, Betty. How are you?" The sensitive youngster straightened up, held out her hand and smiled. "Very well, thank you," she answered. "How are you?"

Children should not be treated as though they were younger than they are, and the dignity which a particular occasion in their lives demands should be respected. Boys, especially, are apt to resent being babied by any member of the family in the presence of a third person. Also, the mental attitude of the child at the moment should be taken into consideration. "Don't call me Lamb, Mom—call me Tiger," said little Bobby. This was the spirit of an enjoyed conflict—such as might be gloried in by any healthy youngster when he has fought his way home from school through a raging storm.

Some children begin very early to put childish ways behind them. This should not be discouraged, but neither should be accentuated by Mother and Dad. Boys and girls should not be rushed from babyhood into adulthood; childhood is a distinct period of life with opportunities and joys all its own. We do not want early sophistication for our children, but we do want them to feel the added importance that each completed year of achievement has brought to them naturally. Even a very little child should have small but regular daily tasks, and these should be replaced by more difficult ones as he grows older. One of our newspapers recently carried a report on an "interview" with a young executive who believes very strongly that boys and girls should be given definite responsibilities at an early age. "My three-year-old selects each morning the tie I wear to the office," he was quoted as saying, adding, "I keep a spare at the office in case the choice is not appropriate."

Mary Joe, "going on thirteen," cares for her baby sister when Mother and Daddy go out for an evening. Also, she has the responsibility for her own room—making her bed before school every morning. Her brother, a year older, has a paper route, takes care of the lawn, and runs errands for his parents and one of their neighbors.

A certain lawyer was heard to relate, "I believe the reason my brother and I (both honor students at college) have never been successful in our professions is that our father had the ridiculous idea 'young gentlemen' didn't work with their hands—it was not 'genteel'! While the other boys were hustling around, earning money in any honest way, we learned the art of laziness." Children should be taught that it is most admirable to have good old Yankee get-up-and-get.

It is easy to start early to help our children in the growing-up process—neither holding them back nor pushing them forward, but encouraging them to enjoy and profit by the present, to the utmost.

gational Christian Churches meeting in Chuckatuck.

The funeral was conducted at the Burlington Congregational Christian Church, and burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Fonville's husband was slightly injured when the car went off the road about 11:00 a. m. The Rev. Henry Robinson, pastor of the Burlington Church, and Mrs. Robinson were in the back seat, but their injuries were inconsequential. Mr. Fonville was hospitalized but was discharged on Thursday.

Mrs. Fonville is survived by her husband, a son, D. R. Fonville, Jr., of Burlington, and a daughter, Mrs. Lewis M. Millsaps of Norfolk.—Norfolk Virginian Pilot.

SUFFOLK CHURCH ACTIVITIES.

On April 23, the Suffolk Christian Church acted as host to the United Men's Bible Class of Suffolk. It was a real thrill to see between 650 and 700 men fill the sanctuary not only with their physical presence but with the warmth of their fellowship and the strength of the church that they symbolize. The pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church had the privilege of addressing the group on the subject of "Fellowship for What?"

The Christian Education and Daily Vacation Bible School Institute was of real value to the churches of the Suffolk District. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and her deputation are to be commended for the excellent presentation of new materials and their use in these two important fields.

The Baraca Class has performed a real service to the membership of the church in the construction of a new parking lot at the rear of the church. Space for 48 cars has been marked off with railroad ties and a double driveway has been constructed to facilitate easy movement of traffic.

The Youth Fellowship sponsored another party Saturday night and doubled the attendance over the first one. The program of games and fun had been planned under the direction of Miss Virginia Rebick. It is hoped that in the fall a regular bi-weekly schedule of Saturday evening parties can be sponsored not only for the young people of our church but of the community as well. Of course chaperones will be enlisted and a schedule of hobbies, games and fun planned.

A lie may keep its throne a whole age longer if it skulks behind the shield of some fair-seeming name.

PROGRESS AT BAYVIEW.

Several weeks ago I promised the readers of THE SUN more information concerning the progress here at Bay View. Before too many items claim my attention it seems best that I tell you what has been accomplished over the past few months.

On Sunday morning, January 22, 1950, a special drive was opened to clear the church of its indebtedness. We were to make a special effort to pay the tremendous bill of $821.64 to the City of Norfolk on the Street Sewage Assessment. In order that we might have round figures to work with, we set out to raise $900. On this Sunday in January we had a few pledges toward this bill, and in the morning service opportunity was given to members and friends of the our services, and some of them have united with our church.

Several weeks before Easter, Mr. B. C. Haskett, Chairman of the Board of Finance, informed me that we had secured enough to pay off the City of Norfolk, and pledges had exceeded $900, and money was still coming in. The Sunday prior to Palm Sunday the church witnessed the burning of a token note of our full payment to the City of Norfolk on the Street Assessment. Yet, money kept coming in! Suggestions were made that we strive to secure enough funds to pay off all debts while we were about it. The week following Easter we had a Finance Meeting to bring in all old bills and any obligations that might be outstanding against the church. At the close of the session that night it attendance for the past five weeks has been one hundred and twenty-one. We feel we are able to perform the miracle of miracles when we put that many into our cramped quarters. The Bartholomew Class (Men's Class) continues to meet in the home of the minister, and this alleviates much of the congestion.

The morning services have been running to the capacity of our small building, and plans are in the making now to begin dual church services in the fall. With worship services at 8:30 Sunday school at 9:45, worship services at 11:00, and another service at 8:00 p. m. This will give a full schedule, but it will be worth it.

The Young People in our church are a blessing to us. Since the last news item, they have volunteered to church to make pledges or outright contributions. Several more pledges were made on that date. Previously, it had been suggested to the members of the church through the Deacon's Board that February 22 (Ash Wednesday) be set up as a deadline for raising all pledges on this debt, and April 9 (Easter Sunday) as deadline for the final payment of pledges. The members of the church accepted these assignments with interest, vim and vigor.

Needless to say, every organization in the church realized the importance of this drive. Every organization went to work to raise funds. They gave unselfishly of their time, energy and money, toward every project. The Sunday school began to grow, and the worship services on Sunday were utilizing our capacity of space. New people who had never attended our church before began to come to was discovered that we had sufficient funds to meet all obligations including our last year's apportionments which we had not been able to pay. On April 17 checks were written to all concerns clearing us of all obligations. Happy people- I'll say we were!

There are times when churches spend too much time talking about money. I have taken the liberty to mention it first in this article, because money has been a concern to us here at Bay View. Yet, we have made advancements in other fields.

There has been a decided interest and devotion in our church as I have never witnessed in any church before. A program has been presented, and the people have responded beautifully toward it. Our Sunday school has been on a steady increase since the beginning of the year. For the second quarter the average attendance was one hundred and one. The average paint the recreation room of the church and also the kitchen. They excelled in both jobs. As many of you know, the cradle roll has been meeting in the kitchen for several years. It was a deep concern to the minister and teachers of the department that something be done. Bare cinder block is not very conducive to the worship atmosphere of a tiny child. The huge gas range detracted much from the possibilities of the room. However, a plywood cover has been made for this monstrosity, and the kitchen was painted a beautiful white. The small chairs were painted various pastel colors by many of the members of the church. This past week two men from the church, Mr. C. C. Mountcastle and Mr. A. C. MacAuslan, put inlaid linoleum on the tables and this added to the beauty of the cradle roll department. Miss Shirley Dunbar, the

DEAR FRIENDS:

We are so thankful for the rains. Our oats, wheat, corn, gardens, and hay crops are getting off to a good start. Our campus is green and pretty. Our children and workers are happy, and working together as a well organized team. We respect and honor one another, and seek to work together in such a way as to make our work a good success, and to bring joy both to those whom we serve and to ourselves.

Last night we had a meeting of our seven matrons. I wish you knew them everyone. It is quite a task to reorganize our work so that there is only one kitchen instead of three, only one head dietitian, only one dining room, and many problems connected with so great a change; but every matron on the hill showed the spirit of real teamwork. I could not help but be proud of them, and I want you to know them and be proud of them, too. I wish again to say just here that we have a real master farmer in L. W. Wagoner, in Garner Hilliard, a dairyman who loves his cows and his boys and does a piece of work in which you can all be proud. He was reared right here at the Orphanage, has a lovely family and a sweet little home.

One of our finest boys was "away without leave" for a day and night. He had had a little scrape with some of the boys. He was frightened and lonely. He slipped off to his mother. She sent him back and asked him to report to me and his matron for whatever was his dues. When he came to me I heard his story. I remembered when I was a lad of 12, and when I was frightened and confused at times. I told him he had a friend who understood something of his temporary loneliness and fear, and that I was for him first, last and always, and that he had nothing to fear, but everything for which to be happy. He finally arose brushing the tears from his handsome face and thanked me. His cheery call back to me was that of a lad who had grown a bit.

Please help us make the very best possible substitute for a genuinely Christian home for the fine girls and boys. Do not begrudge us a nickle but rather give us your help and encouragement, and come to see our opportunities and our needs. Long ago we have learned not to let our "wants" bother us, but we are still working and striving under God for our "needs." God bless the many friends and big hearted people who are taking this matter as a part of their own privilege and duty, and are doing something real and tangible about it.

PROGRESS AT BAYVIEW.

teacher, is doing a commendable job of teaching and training these youngsters in devoted Christian living. We could not get along without our young people, because they encourage and inspire us all.

Easter Sunday provided several special thrills for us here at Bay View. A Sunrise Service was scheduled for 5:45 a.m. to be followed with a breakfast prepared and served by the Men's Class. We had excellent attendance at this early service, and the men prepared and served an excellent breakfast. Two ladies suggested ways of arranging the tables and placed flowers on them for us, but aside from these aids, the men carried the full burden. A charge was not made for the breakfast, but a basket was placed at the door for free will contributions to help us meet expenses. At the close of the meal it was discovered that the group had come out $35.00 to the good. Needless to say, this full amount was turned over to the Building Committee treasurer as an initial installment on our new Education Building.

The Sunday school on Easter Sunday ran a total of 139 with only four visitors. This was an interesting report, because we only have a 142 on roll. This was an excellent percentage even for Easter Sunday.

At the morning service on Easter Sunday the church was filled to over capacity. Extra chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate our crowd. At this service three children were consecrated. Sarah Jane Albert and Lynn Albert, daughter and son of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Albert; and Janis Merritt Kello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kello, to the love and safe keeping of our God.

At the evening service the choir under the capable leadership of Mrs. H. J. Kivette, director, and Mrs. Mary Hughes, pianist, rendered the Easter Cantata, "Crown After Cross." This was a fitting and proper finale of a perfect Easter Sunday. We hope all churches everywhere experienced a perfect day as we had.

What have we done since Easter? Well, far be it from us to slow down now. At the Quarterly Meeting Wednesday night, April 26, a new deacon was voted to the Board of Deacons to be installed Sunday morning. Mr. A. C. MacAuslan who came to us from the Evangelical Congregational Church in Grafton, Massachusetts, was highly recommended by his former minister to us for this high office. Other members in our church serving on this Board are: Mr. L. D. Albert, Mr. B. C. Haskett, Mr. J. W. Cline and Mr. C. C. Mountcastle, Chairman of the Board. We are blessed not only with the attendance of Mr. MacAuslan, but also Mrs. MacAuslan and their two daughters, Mary and Ellen.

We plan to have much legal business to transact in the coming year with our prospective building program, and it was imperative that we have several more trustees appointed. At the Quarterly Meeting Mr. Conrad Hoellregel, Mr. H. R. Forlines, Mr. Bernard Jewel and Mr. W. M. Sydenstricker were nominated to this office pending their acceptance. They all agreed to accept, and they were duly installed at the morning service April 30. Mr. Hoellregel came to us from the First Lutheran Church in Portsmouth; Mr. Forlines hails from the Christian Church in Virgilina; Mr.

Jewel united with our church a year ago on profession of faith; Mr. W. M. Sydenstricker has been a member of long standing in our church. Other members of the Board of Trustees are Mr. J. S. Gray and Mr. J. W. Cline, Chairman.

The trustees began working before they were installed in office. The church voted to have the exterior of the church painted as soon as possible. Money to finance this project will be raised through individuals who will donate enough money to buy a gallon of the best paint. Many of you know that our church is constructed of cinder block, and this will necessitate a special kind of paint. Part of the church has never been painted, and this will require two coats. The men of the church have volunteered to do the work.

Six new members have been added to our church roll since the last writing, and there are several more prospects in our community and neighborhood. Much of our encouragement has been brought in with the presence of new members. Bay View has suffered for need of manpower. Three men and their good wives make up our list of new members. All three men have been placed on the highest boards of our church. We are, indeed, blessed with our new members who so readily and sincerely step immediately into responsible positions.

Following the morning service on April 30, the church sponsored a covered dish luncheon, and several of our members remained for this enjoyable occasion. There was food in abundance, and love and fellowship unlimited. How could you defeat a spirit such as this working in the church?

As minister of the Bay View Church I can write this item of progress unashamed. Some would praise the minister for the work accomplished, but let me assure you the praise is not mine. The praise must go to the members of the church who have labored long and tediously because they love their church. They love their church because they have given themselves unto the service of Almighty God. At times I can distinctly hear the words of the Master as he spoke to the faithful stewards. "Well done, thou good and faithful servants, thou hast been faithful over few things, I will make thee ruler over many things."

JOHNSON L. GRIFFIN,
Minister.

The agencies which degrade and destroy never sleep—shall the Church slumber.—Exchange.

A NEW TOGETHER FOR A NEW ADVANCE.

We need a new denying of ourselves, and a new affirmation of our Savior. Churches at home and Mission fields abroad demand a more liberal accounting of our stewardship, the assuming of some self-denial, the seeking to see how much we can do for the only enterprise that has any hope for the distraught world.

The Gospel is still new and fresh. Men and women come alive when they enter enthusiastically into the work of the church, when they give themselves to duty for the Christ, when they band themselves with a Christian enthusiasm for the advancement of the Church in the community and in the world. What outstanding records are being made by many churches where laymen and laywomen are taking the work of the Church seriously.

Consider Reports.

As I read the reports which you hold in your hands there comes to me that scene where Christ is standing with His little band of followers. Perhaps they are very close together. Perhaps his hand rests upon Simon Peter, maybe His arm is about the shoulder of young John the beloved. At least there they are a little compact group, and I hear Him saying "greater things than these shall ye do." How this word haunts me! How I hope for its realization on the part of the fine men, women, young people and children who make up the constituency of the Southern Convention. I repeat it. He dealt with them. He will deal with us if we but only let Him. "Greater things than these shall ye do," and He added the reason why: "Because I go unto the Father!" He is making intercession for His followers. He is still giving Himself for His Church. His power and His grace is unlimited when we get close enough together in harmony and love—one accord they called it in those first days—for Him to use us.

As I read the reports which you hold in your hands—see the work of the various boards, institutions, committees, churches, conferences, and peoples I see how much we need a new togetherness of advance. He who prayed "that they may all be one, even as we are one" revealed in that prayer the divine principle of togetherness without which there is little hope for growth and good success. As a definite expression of this principle the staff of Convention workers has been established. The growth of our Convention, the complexities of our times, the multitudinous details make it necessary if we are to take our place in the efficient promotion of all our work to have the workers in the over-all picture. The deepening of our own personal devotion and consecration and the pooling of all our interest and activities are absolutely essential to the betterment and work of all our enterprises. The business, educational and scientific world have already long since seen this. They forge ahead. The Church, please God must not lag behind. The principle which Jesus inaugurated for the little band of followers in the New Testament times still holds. His prayer that they may be one must be answered in our hearts and hopes, and in our endeavors. Out of that unity comes the joy which he vouchsafed to his disciples.

In conclusion let me add: Good and sincere men and women have labored with the various reports and recommendations which you hold in your hand. I humbly trust they will be taken seriously, that in the main their work will stand approved, and that their recommendations will be carefully and patiently considered in the light of the needs of our Convention and that we shall work constructively and harmoniously together to map the way for growth and development all along the line. If you call this a keynote address let the keynote be the will of the Christ, the guidance of the Holy Spirit, that working together in the bonds of love and Christian patience and goodwill we may achieve the things within our Convention we should achieve for Christ in the coming biennium. We are a part of the church universal. Let us humbly pledge ourselves to bring honor upon the name we bear, and do our best, in His name, in full cooperation with our larger denominational advance. Let us be good stewards in the larger realm, as well as brethren and co-workers in the local scene. Let us go forth with renewed faith that as He dealt with the faithful in the past He will vouchsafe to us his grace and power for the present and the future.

When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will render powerless the checks provided of one government on another, and will become as venal and oppressive as the government from which we separated. —Thomas Jefferson in a letter to C. Hammond in 1821.

May Queen and Attendants at Elon

The annual Elon College May Day festival was staged on the South Lawn of the campus at 5:30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, May 9, with the program planned around the general theme of the United Nations. It was staged under the joint auspices of the Physical Education Department and the Music Department.

Miss Nina Wilson, of Burlington, N. C. (seated), reigned over the festival as the 1950 May Queen. Members of her court, shown left to right standing, are: Miss Maxine Abercrombie of Burlington; Mrs. Dorothy Parker of Elon College; Miss Beth Raines of Harrisonburg, Va., Miss Shirley Joyner of Franklin, Va.; and Miss Laverne Russell of Graham, N. C. Miss Raines was maid-of-honor, while the others represented the junior and senior classes.

ASHEBORO CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Asheboro, North Carolina

DR. F. C. LESTER, Pastor

The Convention and National Mission Boards have assisted a devoted membership in Asheboro to organize and erect an adequate building, and to have efficient ministerial leadership. The Asheboro Church is growing. Last year with a membership of 100, more than $10,000 was raised. The church has become a symbol of unity and progress in the Western North Carolina Conference. The success of this work bears witness of what can be repeated in a dozen other points within our Convention if funds can be made available for adequate buildings in new places.

News Flashes

Rev. Lee C. Fisher is preaching this week and next in revival services at the South Norfolk Church.

Dr. W. M. Brown of the Elon College faculty was guest speaker Sunday for the Memorial Service at Shallow Ford Church.

Rev. Duane Vore was the guest speaker last Sunday afternoon at Holy Neck Church. A Memorial Service was held for those buried in Holy Neck Cemetery.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle was the guest speaker at the Fourth Annual Woman's Banquet held last Friday night in the Suffolk Christian Church. Mrs. Hubert Young served as toastmistress.

Rev. Howard P. Bozarth, Minister of the United Church, Walpole, Massachusetts since 1939, has accepted a call to become pastor of the Elon College Community Church. Mr. Bozarth will take up his work at Elon about the middle of August.

An Ecclesiastical Council will be held Friday afternoon, May 26, at the First Christian Church in Burlington, to hear a statement of faith and religious experience by Rev. Henry G. Robinson. A public service of installation is scheduled at 7:30 p. m. Mr. Ralph Newman is chairman of the committee of the church.

Rev. Tucker G. Humphries of Reidsville was the principal speaker at the Alamance Scout Memorial Service in Burlington Sunday afternoon. I. W. Roberston, who has directed the Memorial Service since it was originated 25 years ago, directed the service and he was assisted by Lon G. Turner, Alamance County's oldest Scout leader.

Supt. Scott gave the sermon at a special Mother's Day service held at First Evangelical and Reformed Church in Winston-Salem, Sunday night, May 14. Rev. Hiram Davis is the pastor of this church. Mr. Davis and his people make a great deal of this special Mother's Day service which was instituted some years ago. A lovely floral decoration attracts large numbers of people to the church each year.

PALM STREET (GREENSBORO).

On April 27, Rev. and Mrs. Mack V. Welch and their daughter, Patricia, moved into the parsonage to take up their work with the Palm Street Church. The church had redecorated the parsonage inside and out and rearranged the kitchen equipment.

The first service of the new pastor was held on Sunday morning, April 30, and at the evening service the installation was held. In the installation Superintendent Scott presided and gave the charge to the church; Dr. John G. Truitt delivered the sermon and Dr. D. J. Bowden gave the charge to the minister.

On May 6, a reception for the pastor and his family was held at the parsonage. This reception was sponsored by the Sunshine Class. Mr. and Mrs. Welch received gifts of crystal, china and linen.

The morning service of May 7 was well attended and at the evening service of that day five new members were received into the fellowship of the church.

Mr. Welch succeeds Rev. J. L. Neese who had to relinquish his work because of ill health. Recent reports from Mr. Neese are that he is improving in health. We wish him earliest recovery and we pray God's richest blessings on Mr. Welch in his work at Palm Street Church.

The center pages of this issue of THE SUN are being used to bring you the Minutes of the recent Convention session at Chuckatuck, Virginia. Pull out the center sheet and fold the pages marked 4 and 5 together, slit the top with an envelope opener or knife and you will have the complete Minutes in pamphlet form.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE COST OF REDEMPTION.

Sermon Notes for a Communion Meditation

By REV. W. R. CATTON,
Decatur, Illinois.

Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him might not perish, but have eternal life.

Theology used to say that His death was the most important thing about Christ. We are coming to see that His life, and what He said and did, is even more important. But he did die; and dying, for a young man not yet much over thirty, is not an easy thing to face.

He died for us!

In dying He set the seal upon His life. He was loyal, absolutely, to the way of life He thought the best.

He died because He had aroused the bitter opposition of powerful persons. Even today, the Christian way of life will be difficult, and will meet opposition. Christian people have to face this issue—whether to be Christian or to be safe.

In dying He showed God's love. The most effective way a loving father can redeem his son is to let him see how the wrong the son is doing hurts the heart of the father. Thus God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself.

Christ is not the only one who has died for us. Or lived for us! Or sacrificed for us. We are inescapably debtors to a host of those who have served us. One of the great spiritual realities of life, which we must recognize, and with which we need to come to terms, is that we serve, and live for, and sometimes have to die for, one another. Our lives are debtors to others in this way, and we are called on, likewise, to live and die for humanity.

How can this be done? It seems to contradict some of the strongest of our instincts. Why should men live and die for others? Why will men do this.

They must have love for those they serve. Thus they find their own fulfillment, paradoxical as this may seem, in the happiness and success of those they love, even when this is achieved by their own self denial.

They must have hope for the future, in which their own self-denial results in better life for others whom they love. Hope is the projection of ourselves beyond the present, beyond our present self-denial into the future where the self-denial has borne its fruit and there is fulfillment.

They must have faith in God, and in God's world of law and love in which their sacrifice will not be in vain but will bear its fruit of redemption.

These matters are too profound for words entirely to express them.

The sacrament is a "doing," that transcends words. In the sacrament we "show forth the Lord's death." This something we do, in remembrance of Him. As we take the sacrament, this day, to our comfort, we enter into a fellowship: the fellowship of those whose lives have been redeemed by sacrificial love, and faith and hope: the faith and hope and love of God, who was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself. We enter into fellowship with those whose lives have been so magnificently enriched by the sacrifices of a host now gone before. And we pledge ourselves to be worthy of this sacrificial love, this love of God, of Christ, and of all these others, and ourselves to give our love in faith and hope, to God and to all men and women whom God loves.

LET US PRAY.

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN D. D.

"Our God, our help in ages past, our hope for years to come," we acknowledge Thee as the author of life, and the supreme possessor of power and of love. We recognize our absolute dependence upon Thee. Recognizing our limitations, we call upon Thee for wisdom and for strength—believing Thy promise that Thou wilt give liberally to all who ask Thee.

We pray that Thou wilt forgive us our indifference, our disloyalty, our selfishness, our lack of faith, and our unwillingness to follow Jesus into the hard places of life. Help us and all Christians of our nation to realize that the real test of Christians faith is not what we say we believe happened in Palestine 2,000 years ago, but that the supreme test of Christian faith is what we believe would happen in America now—today—if all who call Christ "Lord" would commit themselves unreservedly to the leadership of Jesus in his spirit and program of courageous, loving service to humanity.

Save us, O God, we pray from mistaking our petty prejudices for convictions; and give us true convictions of faith in the power of love, and of truth to meet baffling situation in human relationships that may confront us. Give us faith in the power of the love of God, when enthroned in human hearts, to lift the world out of its wreckage and ruin.

Save us from an attitude of complacency in a world of need. Save us from being satisfied with the joy of religion, and make us willing to take the dare of religion to cooperate with the eternal God in helping to "set things right."

Be Thou our Guide. Be Thou our strength. Be Thou our light as we find our way through the darkness, the uncertainties and the disillusionments of our day in our effort worthily to serve Thee and Thy world in our generation.

In the name of our Lord and Master, we pray. Amen.

HOLIDAY COURSES OPEN TO TRAVELERS.

Anyone travelling in Europe this summer has the opportunity to spend a few days at the Ecumenical Institute participating in one of two special laymen's holiday courses on the ecumenical movement, August 2-9 and August 14-25.

The groups gathering at Chateau de Bossey, Switzerland, from countries all over the world will concentrate on problems of the laymen's role as a Christian in his own social surroundings. Their Bible study will be held by Mlle. Suzanne Dietrich, and introductions to the ecumenical movement will be given by Prof. Hendrik Kraemer, director of the Institute, and Pastors Henriod and Walz.

Special leaders for the second course are Dr. Paul L. Lehmann, Professor of Applied Christianity at Princeton Theological Seminary, N. J., who will direct Bible study on "The Lordship of Christ," and Pastor Hans J. Baden of the Evangelical Church in Germany. Father Curtis, Church of England, is coming from the House of the Resurrection in Mirfield, to serve as chaplain for both courses.

Free time is left in the program for

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION

The Oakland Convention was episodic rather than epochal. It was an important event in the ongoing life of the Convention. No conspicuous Ebenezer was raised, but many sane voices were lifted. No Rubicon was crossed, but bridges of understanding were projected. No new atomic or hydrogen secrets were revealed, but carefully-prepared reports were given, considered, adopted. The church historian may chalk us up, "O. K. at Oakland."

Chuckatuck is certainly on the map now for all who attended the Convention. Mr. Mills E. Godwin and Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, expeditors extraordinary, left nothing to be desired in the way of entertainment. The cuisine (food, for short) was excellent, prepared and served in Eastern Virginia style.

Dr. John G. Truitt presided during the Convention. Those who have followed his career know that he is no fly-by-night luminary, but a steady witness-bearer and torch-bearer in a realm where all "see through a glass darkly." The fact that he has evidenced the kind of faithfulness that has not been found wanting gives many people confidence in his leadership. As pastor within the Convention, as president of the Convention, and now as Superintendent of the Orphanage, this experienced churchman labors in steady continuance.

Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, who works with his hands as well as his head, prepared and presented a gavel to the Convention. Dr. I. W. Johnson made the motion which was approved by a substantial majority to raise the subscription price of The Sun, effective July 1, to $3.00 a year or $5.00 for two years. The Convention voted to approve and implement the following recommendation included in the report of Supt. Scott:

We are now in the middle of the 20th Century, in the 158th year of our existence as a Christian Church in the South, and in the 330th year of our American Congregational Christian heritage. We have been blessed materially and spiritually. We believe we have come to the place where we need to commit ourselves to a general advance in the effectiveness of our work as Christians in the Convention. I should like to suggest that for the next biennium we accept the challenge of the theme of this Convention, "A New Togetherness for a Needed Advance," and launch what we may call "The Mid-Century Advance" in every area of our church life, this Advance to be a part of "Our Christian World Mission" of the denomination. I suggest the appointment of a Commission to formulate a plan of action for this needed Advance, and that this Commission be composed of representatives from the Mission Board, Board of Christian Education, Board of Trustees of Elon College, the Board of Trustees of the Orphanage, and the Finance, Evangelism and Stewardship Committees.

Dr. Ross Sanderson introduced his hearers to the semantics of sociology. He is currently trying to determine which churches in the South have grown, and why, also the par standard of growth and efficiency for churches of this region. The spiritual reproduction chart, according to his report, is lamentably low.

Dr. Truman Douglass was present, and spoke convincingly concerning the rebirth in Protestantism. He pointed to the amazing accomplishments of Protestantism in the last century and a half. The faith of our fathers, he assured us, is living still. In a second address, Dr. Douglass pointed to the growth of secularism in our educational system and the opportunity for evangelism in higher education. "Neutrality plays into the hands of competitive movements which are not neutral," he warned. He called upon the Church to enter the field of higher education with renewed determination.

Numerous speakers and reports called attention to the opportunities for service in the various departments of our Church. The Mid-Century Advance depends on us. Mrs. D. R. Fonville lost her life on the way to the Convention. Our lives have been spared and may be presented anew as a living sacrifice.

HIGH GEAR IN SOUTH NORFOLK

With the slogan, "Keep them rolling," gaining steadily in momentum, the churches of the Southern Convention are giving unprecedented attention to the transportation problems of their pastors.

After reflecting on the fact that their pastor had purchased and worn out seven cars and traveled approximately a half-million miles in the service of their Church, members of the South Norfolk Church decided it was time for the congregation to take the initiative. Consequently, on Sunday, April 30, one Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor plenipotentiary, found himself suddenly in possession of a custom built 1950 Ford Sedan. Deacon T. R. Eason did the honors and presented the key. The occasion had added significance since it marked the 32nd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Poythress.

We congratulate the South Norfolk pastor and congregation, and trust that this long and fruitful ministry may be indefinitely prolonged, stretching into future days of grace and service. One can easily visualize this black sedan making its way to the homes and hospitals of South Norfolk. At conferences and convention, ministerial meetings, picnics, weddings and funerals, one may confidently expect pastor Poythress. It is a comfort as well as a necessity to have a dependable means of transportation for these multiple appointments.

The South Norfolk Church never made a better investment. The transaction was a burden to no one, but a pleasure for all. Each had the joy of visualizing his contribution in terms of pastoral service.

"Keep them rolling!" This is our motto. The minister cannot render efficient service without a dependable car. An old car is a physical hazard, a financial liability and a psychological boomerang. If your pastor has purchased a car and worn it out in the service of your congregation, why not give him a new one and send him forth in high gear on a revitalized and thrilling ministry?

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

THE MISSIONARY SCORE.

Missionaries now sent abroad by American and Canadian Protestant Churches are more likely to be teachers and technicians than preachers or evangelists; more are college-trained and an increasingly large percentage are going to Japan, India and Latin America.

These are some of the trends summarized in the latest over-all report on missionary personnel released today by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, an agency serving the foreign mission boards of 54 major denominations in the U.S. and Canada.

The number of new missionaries sent out in 1948 decreased to 875 from a total of 960 the previous year, the report showed. The decrease was attributed partly to a drop in the number of boards reporting, from 64 to 50.

But among the new missionaries the number of college graduates increased in one year from 489 to 545, the number with graduate or professional degrees rose from 235 to 368.

At the same time, the figure showed an evident decrease in the number of missionaries ordained as ministers—a drop from 237 in 1947 to 175 in 1948; those who went as evangelists fell from 304 to 253.

A large part of this decrease was ascribed to a growing tendency to turn leadership of new missionary churches over to native Christians, while missionaries turned to technical jobs for which no local leaders are available.

Greater emphasis is placed on training new missionaries to speak fluently the language of the country in which they will work and to know its customs and culture. All of the specialists are given basic training in interpreting the message of Christ.

Largest increase in any category of missionary specialization between 1947 and 1948 was in education—from 192 to 294. New agricultural and rural specialists increased from 7 to 17, medical personnel from 124 to 130.

New classifications given in the 1948 table included 28 missionaries specializing in social service, 10 in literacy and literature, eight who were technical and industrial specialists.

Increasing interest in teachers and technicians is based partly on church interest in the government Point Four program for developing backward areas; partly on a need existing in mission fields for technical assistance and knowledge, according to Miss Mildred Drescher, acting head of the missionary personnel department of the Foreign Missions Conference.

Many of the missionaries now going to Japan are teachers, responding to General Douglas McArthur's call for missionary help in reeducation. The total has risen spectacularly from eight new missionaries in 1946 to 36 in 1947 and 103 in 1948. It will be even larger in the 1949 and 1950 figures, Miss Drescher predicted.

During the unrest and uncertainty of India's independence and partition, the number of new missionaries fell from 148 in 1946 to 110 in 1947 and 75 in 1948, but is now increasing sharply, being second only to that for Japan. Many of the young men and women missionaries going to India, Pakistan and Ceylon are technicians, "to give Christian help where help is most needed."

Latin America, once in third place, is now second only to Africa and the Near East in missionary interest. Figures given are 259 new missionaries to Africa, 46 to the Near East in 1946, 223 and 49 in 1947; 1948 figures are 192 for Africa south of the Sahara Desert, 56 to the Near East and North Africa.

New missionaries to Latin America rose from 171 in 1947 to 186 in 1948, and the number is still growing, it was reported. The increase is attributed partly to growing interest in the area since World War II, partly to the closing of some other fields overseas.

China, formerly in second place, has become increasingly difficult to enter and the number of new missionaries there had fallen from 205 in 1947 to 125 in 1948, is probably even lower now. It was emphasized however that missionaries are still being trained for this field; until China is once more open, many are going to Burma and Malaya, to work with the large Chinese populations in those countries.

The largest denominational group of missionaries sent in 1948 was 178 by the Seventh Day Adventists, who reported a total overseas expenditure of $5,185,209.

Second largest was 160 from the Methodist Division of Foreign Missions and the Women's Society of Christian Service. The two Methodist Boards spent $4,902,948 overseas.

Next largest missionary groups were 77 from the Presbyterian Church USA and 74 from the Southern Baptist Convention. The Presbyterian USA board reported overseas expenditures of $4,344,266; and the Southern Baptists reported $2,704,049.

AS THEY GO, GOD BLESS THEM.

Rev. and Mrs. John Richard Lepke of 2927 "P" Street, Lincoln, Neb., have just been appointed as Congregational Christian career missionaries in South Africa by the American Board.

Following graduation from Yale Divinity School, Mr. Lepke took the pastorate of the Blaine County Larger Parish in Nebraska. This is a mission-aided parish in the sparsely settled ranching country of the sand hills of Nebraska. In 1947 he came to minister to the Congregational students in Nebraska with headquarters at the State University in Lincoln, Nebraska. This work has included not only the usual pastoral duties among students, but much D.P. work, individual counseling, and service on various State Conference committees including the Nebraska Council of Churches and the Lincoln Ministerial Association.

The Lepkes were commissioned in Omaha, Nebraska on Sunday evening, May 7.

COMMITTEE SPONSORING KAGAWA'S U. S. TOUR.

Dr. J. Henry Carpenter, executive secretary of the Brooklyn Division of the Protestant Council, has announced that Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, noted Japanese Protestant leader, will visit the United States this year. He will arrive July 15, and will remain until the end of December.

Dr. Kagawa will speak at the World Convention on Christian Education in Toronto, Canada on August 15, and on September 15 he will attend the Missionary Meeting of the General Council of the United Church of Canada.

The Kagawa Committee, 252 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., of which Dr. Carpenter is secretary, will be responsible for the itinerary.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches met in biennial session with Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia, May 2-4. The Convention was very well attended, perhaps, better than usual. Officers in charge of the program arranged for interesting, instructive and profitable sessions. Out-of-state visitors appearing on the program were Dr. Truman Douglass, Executive Vice-President of the Board of Home Missions for the General Council and Dr. Ross W. Sanderson, New York, Director of Field Research of the Board of Home Missions. These visiting officials brought very instructive and helpful messages.

At the conclusion of the second day's program it was the general feeling among the delegates that thus far it has been one of the best sessions of our Convention. There seemed to be better understandings as to the problems that confronted the churches in the Convention and a desire on the part of the vast majority to work together in finding the proper solutions to our problems. There were some objections and some unnecessary questions that could easily have resulted in open contentions, however, the spirit of the Convention was such as to silence all such opposition and move on to the achieving of a higher goal in the interest of the boards and institutions of the church and ultimately for the church itself.

The report of the Finance Committee was of great interest to the college, particularly Item 4 which had to do with the college and read as follows:

We recommend that in addition to the regular apportionment for the College the Convention approve, and through its conferences and churches engage in an effort to raise a minimum average of $1.00 per member annually for a sustaining fund for Elon College; this effort to be a cooperative one to be participated in by the college administration, the Elon College Foundation, the Convention, Conferences and church officials; that a committee be constituted by this Convention, the duty of which shall be to work for the Convention in cooperation with the officials named above, to formulate the plan whereby this proposal shall be carried to the entire constituency of the Convention.

The second reading of this item was in connection with the report on Elon College. This particular recommendation, after discussion at length, was finally voted by the Convention. The ones of us who are interested in the program of the church and also the college were most grateful for the Convention's recommendation and interest that it expressed. The President and the Superintendent have already had a conference regarding the committee which the recommendation provides and the way by which the resolution may be realized as quickly as possible. The Board of Trustees at its approaching session on May 29 will again consider this recommendation and it will be recommended that the Board constitute a committee to cooperate with like committees from the Convention at large and the Elon College Foundation. The door is open and the way is recommended for real cooperation on the part of the entire church in the work of the college in general and the training of Christian leadership for our church in particular. The hope is expressed that this action of the Convention shall meet with the hearty approval and complete cooperation of the entire Southern Convention. The college has made commendable progress in recent years. It does have unusual and increased opportunities for service in behalf of the church but at the same time it does face difficult problems in the fields of finance. The cost of operation, including teachers' salaries, has greatly increased and contrary to the general opinion the cost is still increasing.

The college has always needed the encouragement and financial support of the church but the immediate future will require efforts along this line.

BUSY STUDENT ACTIVITIES PROGRAM AT ELON COLLEGE FOR SPRING TERM.

By LUTHER N. BYRD.

The students of Elon College have compiled a splendid record this spring in various fields of extra-curricular activity, with various student groups setting a high standard of achievement in such fields as athletics, dramatics, music and journalism.

These varied activities are all part of the program sponsored by the college, which works to develop well-rounded men and women. While emphasizing a high standard of scholastic achievement, the Elon administration also encourages each student to participate and to attain excellence in some activity beyond his or her regular classes.

Athletics at High Peak.

The Elon athletic teams have reached a high peak this spring, with the Christian baseball team boasting at this time a record of nine consecutive victories in the North State Conference race and bidding fair to repeat the Conference championship, which was won last year.

Coach Jim Mallory's baseball team shows a record of thirteen victories in the first seventeen games, and only one of the four defeats was at the hands of a college team. The others were suffered from professional and semi-professional teams. Included in the Elon record has been one victory over the strong Wake Forest nine and also a win over Ohio University. The Ohio team in turn defeated Notre Dame at South Bend by a 4 to 1 score.

The Christian golf and tennis teams have also been doing fine work, under the tutelage of Coach J. L. Pierce, with the tennis squad showing one string of five consecutive match victories. Elon was represented by a track team for the first time in several years, with a strong squad competing in the revived North State Conference meet at Guilford this week.

Added to these accomplishments in the field of varsity athletics, the Physical Education Department is sponsoring a full intramural schedule in softball, tennis, badminton, bowling and other sports, designed to give every student on the campus an opportunity to compete.

Dramatic Group Very Active.

The Elon College Players, student dramatic group, which has gained a reputation for the excellence of its performances, has also set a fine record during this final quarter of the 1949-50 term.

The Players opened the quarter's program by presenting a modern version of the old Greek tragedy, "Antigone." This play was presented to large and enthusiastic audiences on the evenings of April 11 and 12. Daily newspaper critics branded it the best of a long line of successes directed by Mrs. Elizabeth R. Smith, who is in charge of the dramatic program at the college.

This was followed on May 3 and 4 by the presentation of the annual student musical show. This show, entitled, "Are You Having Any Fun?" (Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

CHRISTIAN YOUTH WARNED AGAINST PIETISM.

Christian youth leaders should not depend on outward displays of pietism or on preaching evangelism, according to Miss Edith Lesley Sewell, a London social service worker, speaker at the fourth conference of European Christian Youth Leaders at the Austrian Evangelical Youth Center, Villach, Carinthia, recently.

Today, while society in general shows "apathy towards morality and religion," young people are faced with the basic problems of sex and religion, said Miss Sewell. Addressing the group of 58 youth leaders, she warned that evangelism can only be relevant to young people if its leaders sincerely live by the Christian Gospel.

Young people are aware of the heresy of the Church in being concerned only with their souls and not with their whole personalities, said Pastor Jean Joussetin, general secretary of the Protestant Youth Council of France. Accusations of exclusiveness levelled against Christian youth groups are often justified, he added, as most of them are too old-fashioned to serve the needs of modern young people.

Among those discussing evangelism problems at the Austrian conference were youth leaders from Switzerland, Finland, Madagascar, the U.S.A., and refugee youth leaders from Hungary, Latvia and Russia. Next year's meeting, to deal with the problem of the Christian family, including a Christian interpretation of the sex problem, will be held at the Agape youth camp of the Waldensian Church in Northern Italy.

BRAZILIAN YOUTH STUDY ECUMENISM.

Christian students from Minas, Parana and Sao Paulo, Brazil, recently spent almost three weeks studying the growth of the various Christian traditions towards unity, and the culmination in the World Council of Churches, under lectures from the Evangelical denominations.

Enrolled in the third course to be given by the Ecumenical Institute of the Christian Union of Students of Brazil, the young men learned the potentialities of the World Council, not at a super-church, but as a meeting ground for better mutual understanding among the Christian traditions. Director of the program is the Rev. Jorge Cesar Mota.

was written by Al Pearce and Nash Parker, two of the students. Parker also directed the production under the supervision of Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, and its enthusiastic reception by the audience attested the success of the student efforts.

Varied Music Program.

The Elon College music department, known throughout the South and the East for the fine performances of its students, has also sponsored a full program this quarter. Its program for the term featured the work of the choir, individual recitals and joint sponsorship, along with the physical education department, of the annual May Day festival.

The Elon Choir made its annual tour of northern and eastern states during spring holidays and the first days of the spring term. The singers offered programs in several Virginia cities and also in Rhode Island, New Jersey and Pennsylvania while on tour. The choir has also continued its regular weekly radio broadcasts each Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock over Radio Station WBBB in Burlington.

College Paper Wins Honors.

Maroon and Gold, the bi-weekly student newspaper, which features the writing of student journalists, has set an excellent standard this year, as attested by the fact that it was chosen for the second consecutive year as the best bi-weekly college paper in North Carolina. This honor was accorded by professional newspapermen, who served as judges for the annual contest held by the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association.

Not only did Maroon and Gold win the top honor in contest with other papers of the State, but three of the student writers on the staff won individual honors for their work during the year. Only nine individual student writers in the State won prizes or honorable mention, three of the nine being from the University of North Carolina, three from Elon and one each from Duke University, North Carolina State and Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

At the recent session of the Southern Convention held at Oakland Christian Church the Convention on recommendation of the Finance Committee voted requesting the conferences constituting the Convention to apportion to their constituent churches an amount equal to $15,000 for the college for the ensuing year. This is the same as was apportioned two years ago. The college endeavors to carry out to the best of its ability all actions and resolutions pertaining to its interest passed by the Convention. In turn the college trusts that the churches may take seriously the askings of the Convention and see that these askings are complied with in full.

A CHURCH WOMAN.

A Parable

By MRS. RUTH ANDERSON, Montana.

Once upon a time I embarked upon a journey to discover what it means to be a church woman. The way was long and sometimes rough, but always interesting.

My journey led me to a village. One said, "The church woman has just departed on her way, but she has left her deeds behind her." A woman had been unjustly accused and evil tongues were wagging. The church woman spoke in behalf of the accused and insisted that justice be done and that mercy be shown. Said she, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with thy God?"

"What did church women look like?" I asked eagerly.

"She was tall and strong and young and happy," said a bystander, "and she laughed and waved to us when she departed."

"I shall soon overtake her on the road," I said, "for we are going the same way."

At nightfall I stopped for lodging at a farmhouse. Several children were playing around the door. A vine grew up by the wall but the leaves were falling from it, and it was dying. "Has church woman been this way?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," said a small girl, "We were quarrelling when she came past. I told John I hated him." "Church woman gave us food from her basket, and put ointment on Johnny's hand where he had hurt himself. She said we should never hate. It makes us wither up inside like the leaves on that vine."

"What did she look like?"

"She was small and middle-aged," said the mother. "Her face was kind."

In the morning I resumed my journey. The way was rougher now and the walking was difficult. "Surely church woman will walk slowly on the road and I shall soon find her," I said to myself.

Upon the way was a steep hill, and at the foot of it, a long way off, I saw a commotion. There was a small village there. As I came closer, quiet seemed to reign. Many of the villagers had dark skins: some had black skins, some red, some yellow. But there were many people with white skins, too.

When I asked about the disturbance, I was told that a terrible disagreement had arisen between the white and dark-skinned people with its beginning in the difference in their colors. But the church woman came as tempers were at fever pitch. When she showed them the ways in which all people were alike they forgot their differences and their grievances against each other.

"But she left before we could thank her," said the storekeeper. "She was so small and she walked with a limp. I hated to see her go."

Presently the air was filled with lightning, and thunder filled my ears. And I came to a place where a great storm had taken place. Many had been hurt, but all had received help. Food had been brought to those who needed it and clothing had been provided. "Church woman has been here," whispered an old lady. "Where is she? What does she look like?" I said, looking anxiously around.

"She was old and weary," they told me. "Her hair was gray and she was tired; but her hands were very kind and the things she brought us were many."

"Perhaps she will stop to rest soon," I said, "and if I hurry I shall soon find her."

Soon I came to a pleasant little church set in a valley. There were two large chests by the door. Each person who entered the church raised the lids and put something in each chest, but I could see nothing.

"What do you put in the chests?" I asked an old man.

"Our hates and prejudices in one," he said, "and our gifts of money in the other." Then he quoted to me: "Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." Church woman said that one could not truly worship nor truly give if he held a grudge against another. So we put our hates in here, but strangely enough when we come

MICAH'S HOPE OF GOD'S SALVATION.

LESSON IX—MAY 28, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Micah 4:1-5; 5:2-4; 7:18-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 11:1-7.

The Supremacy of Jehovah.

"The mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills, and all peoples shall flow unto it." These words need not be taken literally. As is often the case in the language of the prophets, the words are symbolic, suggestive, pictorial. They mean that the glory of Zion is superior to all other holy places, that the influence of Jehovah is world-wide, that He will bring all nations to himself.

"For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem. "Figurative as the language is, it is also literally true. Through the Jewish people God made known His eternal and unchangeable laws that even to this day are the guiding principles for all the nations. This does not refer to the countless and petty laws and rules concerning sacrifice and ritual to be found in the Old Testament. It does mean that the Jewish people, through their inspired books, and especially through Jesus Christ Himself who was a Jew, gave the nations of the world for all time the eternal principles that should govern them in their relations one to another.

"And He will judge between many peoples, and will decide concerning strong nations afar off." Think what a difference it would make if the nations of the world were subject to God's sovereignty, that is if they acknowledged His sovereignty and ordered their lives in harmony with it. But He is the Judge of all the earth. And He will judge the nations with equity. Eventually He will fulfill His purpose through, or in spite of the nations.

"And they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." It is another poetic way of stating a great truth. If the nations honored God and did His will, the weapons and instruments of war would be turned into the weapons and instruments of peace. For instance all the efforts of scientists would be devoted to harnessing the tremendous power of the atomic and the hydrogen bomb to peaceful uses. The materials which are being used for guns and armament and battleships would be used for making steel and iron and other metals for household and farm use. What a world that would be! Think how much lighter taxes would be if there were no military budget! Think how much fear would be banished if the nations junked all their military equipment! Think how much better off the world would be if the money that is spent for war and preparation for war was spent on education and medical care and better housing and what have you! Think how much time and thought and money is devoted to teaching young people how to "make war." The prophet gives a picture of a world under God's beneficent rule, free from the curse of war.

"But every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree, and none shall make them afraid." Fear like a giant incubus hangs over the civilized world today. Men are afraid and disturbed over the possibilities, and worse, the probabilities of another war. And it all because nations do not order their lives by the law and will of God.

The Coming of the Messiah.

But God was not defeated. His purpose had not been thwarted. The "good old days" were not in the past but in the future. In due time the "Promised One," the "Messiah," the Christ would come. And behold He would come not from the great city of Jerusalem or the capital cities of the nations, but from an obscure little Judean village, Bethlehem. God works in mysterious ways, His wonders to perform. Out of this obscure little village in a small province of a small nation, there should come the Messiah, the Christ, the Saviour of the world! "For now shall He be great unto the ends of the earth." That prophecy like the preceding prophecy has found literal fulfilment. Jesus Christ was born in Bethlehem as was foretold by the prophet Micah. And today His influence has gone to the ends of the earth. And more—

His influence waxes rather than wanes. We should thank God and take courage.

"And He shall stand and feed His flock in the strength of Jehovah." Of all the terms that were used in Jesus' day to express the relationship between the leader and the led, Jesus preferred and used the term "shepherd." He was the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd loved the sheep and laid down his life for the sheep.

The Mercy and Forgiveness of God.

"Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in lovingkindness?" Who is there indeed like God? Think of His wisdom, of His power, of His mercy, of His compassion, of His love! Though we sin against Him, He is ever ready to forgive and to restore the broken relationship—He does not and He cannot do away with the effects of sin outright. Though we prove unfaithful, He abideth faithful. Though we do not love Him, He continues to love us. Though we reject Him, He does not cast us away. He does not deal with us after our sins or reward us according to our iniquities. We have a great God. We have a good God. We have a gracious God. We have a generous God.

to get them back we can never find them."

"Is church woman here?" I said, getting ready to leave.

"No, she has gone," said the man.

"What is she like?" I asked him.

"She is large, and not beautiful," he said, "but her voice is gentle and her words are helpful."

"I must see her," I said preparing to go.

And then a voice from a grove of trees spoke to me. "I am church woman," she said, "but you shall not see me. I am all women who believe and follow the teachings of Jesus. Each one must do things in her own way. Some will teach, some will tend to the physical wants of people—all will give and all will pray."

"But how shall I know you, church woman?" I asked.

"By my works," said church woman. "You will see me in many forms. I am tall, short, old, young, beautiful, and plain, but in each form that I take I try to follow the teachings of Jesus, so that people may say, 'I see what it means to be a church woman.'"

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Thank you so much for the good report this week. From the churches through the regular channels we received $721.47. From other interested friends we received $304.15—a total of $1,025.62! How about that! I think that it is wonderful, and I do appreciate the inspiration and encouragement which this gives us here. Thank you. Have you had a share in that good sum? A little bit from many makes much. And no one is the worse for it.

Did your Sunday school send an offering in April? Are you on the Big Chart for that month. There are several blank spaces in January, some in February, still some left in March, and there are some blank spaces in April. Let us see what we can do in May. Your Convention has solemnly voted, ordered, that we continue the custom of taking that monthly offering. It is indeed a good custom. If every Sunday school would faithfully receive it—even though it be small, and send it in we could be truly justly proud of our Orphanage.

Tonight for the first time in more than a quarter of a century the children and all the matrons will sit down in a single dining room together. There will be a dinner which your kindness has provided, in a pretty newly decorated room which your kindness has provided, presided over by hard-working and faithful matrons which your kindness has provided. There will be songs, a prayer, a brief talk by the superintendent, and announcements by the dining room matron. All will be done happily and these children will know a new togetherness. Some day you will provide a larger dining room containing rooms for the matrons and girls who prepare and serve the meals and a bright new kitchen in which to cook the food. We are striving for economy, cleanliness, beautiful surroundings, with happy workers and children trained in good manners and Christian character.

The rains are coming. Grain and gardens are growing. We are all thankful and happy. Rejoice with us. Say every good thing you can for us. Pray for us. Help us. One of our most popular boys, growing in the love and beneficence of Mrs. Fields, the Rev. Clyde W. Fields' mother, who was buried this past Tuesday, lost a very dear friend. On her dying bed she reached for her tithing purse and told her loved ones to give it to Dr. Truitt for "Corky." In it was $75.65. During her long and painful illness she never once forgot him. It was really pathetic to see how he mourned her loss. He loved her, and she loved him, and did something to make him really strong and happy. She is gone but her years of nurture and friendship and the example she set will live on and on. She expected nothing in return, but God will see her kindness and reward her.

NAME NOTABLE FACULTY FOR 1950 ASHRAMS.

A notable company of Christian leaders will comprise the faculty of the five Ashrams which will be conducted this year by the Federal Council's Department of Evangelism under the supervision of Dr. H. H. McConnell.

Built around a specific Christian concept—"the Word became flesh"—the Ashrams, since they were introduced in the United States by the Federal Council in 1940, have grown steadily in numbers and influence.

"The Ashrams attempt, imperfectly, of course, in some real way to embody the idea of the Word become flesh in corporate living," Dr. McConnell said. "Those attending try to be the order they would like to see universalized."

"All who are interested in a closer walk with God, a deeper experimental acquaintance with Christ and a more useful life of service in the Church will find a hearty welcome."

Entire families are encouraged to come and, for the benefit of the children attending, a vacation church school will be held at each Ashram.

The places and dates of the Ashrams are as follows: Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., July 10-20; Northern Baptist Assembly Grounds, Green Lake, Wis., July 22-29; Keuka College, Keuka Park, N. Y., July 31-August 7; Mount Wesley Encampment, Kerrville, Texas, August 9-16; Camp Sierra, Calif., August 18-28. The faculty will include:

E. Stanley Jones, who will be present full-time in all the Ashrams; John Biegeleisen, Eden Theological Seminary, St. Louis, Mo.; Chester Warren Quimby, Cornell College; J. Blanton Belk, Richmond, Va.; Maragret Applegarth, World Council of Churches; Antonia Froendt, World Council of Churches; Travis White, Lubbock, Texas; Warner Muir, Los Angeles, California; Parr Armstrong, Fort Worth, Texas; Warren D. Bowman, Bridgewater, Va., and Anna Mow, Chicago, Illinois. G. Byron Deshler, Los Angeles, California, will serve as director of the Camp Sierra Ashram and H. H. McConnell of the Department of Evangelism will direct the other four. Hostesses, song leaders, directors of children and of recreation and music will be provided in each Ashram.

Those interested in attending an Ashram may write Rev. H. H. McConnell, Department of Evangelism, Federal Council of Churches, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Last Sunday in Sunday school we sang the hymn, "I Would Be True," and then again in church. As I sang the words I thought of the man who wrote them. He died when he was young—just 35, about the age of Jesus when he died.

After he graduated from college he went to Japan and while there he wrote the words:

I would be true, for there are those who trust me

I would be pure, for there are those who care;

I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;

I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

His mother shared that verse and the others with friends and it was printed in Harper's magazine. Soon her son came home from Japan and studied at Hartford Seminary, he was ordained a Congregational minister and then he went to India to work with the YMCA. He died of 'flu 30 years ago. His poem lives as a song set to the tune known as "Peek."

The young man who wrote those words was named Howard Arnold Walter. He belonged to church in New Britain, Connecticut, and that church has a plaque on the wall with his name and the words inscribed. It is such an inspiring hymn for young and old.

Once I saw a group of boys and girls dramatize this story. One was Mr. Walter and he told his mother good-bye and left for the journey, then he sat down and wrote his poem and gave it to the mail man, and so on through the story. Perhaps you would like to play the story and the stories of other hymns.

A CHILD CAN "LOSE FACE."

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Collins' father, Mr. Thurber, was spending a few weeks with his daughter and her family. He was a quiet, thoughtful man and said little, so that sometimes his daughter almost forgot he was present. The afternoon Mrs. Grant, with her little daughter, Gladys, came to call, Mr. Thurber was sitting in a high-backed wing chair in a corner near a window, reading. Little Billy Collins was lying on his stomach on the floor, coloring pictures in a book.

When the callers were seated, Mrs. Collins looked at her small son, absorbed in his work, and exclaimed, "Billy Collins, aren't you ashamed of yourself? You haven't said 'How d'you do!' to Mrs. Grant and Gladys. And look at the mess you've made on the floor—all those crayons and books! Get up!"

"Just a minute, Mother." Billy tried to finish coloring the red barn, but his mother ordered, "Get up! At once!" Billy rose slowly, his mouth set defiantly.

"Now come and speak to Mrs. Grant and Gladys. I'm sure Gladys doesn't keep right on playing when she has company. She speaks nicely to them, and and she picks up her things and puts them away. Don't you, Gladys?"

Gladys nodded primly. However, Mr. Thurber, watching from the corner of his eye, thought her expression indicated a hurried searching of her memory as to whether she really was so neat and wellmannered. But she seemed to decide that if a grownup said so, it must be true.

Under additional prodding, Billy went over to Mrs. Grant, mumbled something, and then looked at Gladys.

"Pick up your books and crayons and take them out to the dining-room table and let Gladys color some of them," commanded his mother.

That was too much. Let somebody else color the pictures in his own book! "She can have 'em all!" Billy cried and ran from the room in tears.

After the visitors had gone, Mr. Thurber spoke to his daughter in a decidedly uncompromising voice. "Well, Mary, I was certainly surprised to see the way you behaved this afternoon."

Mrs. Collins' eyes widened. She was already flushed and nervous. "How I behaved! What in the world do you mean?"

"In the first place, you didn't introduce me to Mrs. Grant. I stood up when the callers came in, but when I saw you weren't going to pay any attention to me, I sat down."

"Oh Dad, I'm dreadfully sorry. I forgot you were here—you're so quiet, and I can hardly see you in that chair."

"It doesn't matter—except that you were scolding Billy for practically the same thing you did. Then, you expected him to stop in the middle of what was very important to him and act like an adult. When he didn't do it, you shamed him. You shamed him in front of others, and, what was especially humiliating, before another child; this was bad for both of them. You made him 'lose face,' as the Orientals say. It isn't good for a child. It creates a poison of resentment and a lack of self-confidence that may affect him all through his life."

Mrs. Collins had seemed a little resentful herself, but now she sank into a chair, looking sober and thoughtful. "I—I can see that you're right, Dad," she said honestly. "All that I thought of was making a good impression on Mrs. Grant; this was her first visit. I was thinking more of that than I was of Billy. Thank you, Dad, for placing the case before me in so clear a light."

THE JAMES O'KELLY CEMETARY.

It was announced in THE SUN sometime ago that The Southern Convention had secured from the heirs of the late Dr. and Mrs. N. D. York a deed to one-half acre of land in Chatham County, N. C., where the remains of Rev. James O'Kelly have rested for 124 years. Following the purchase of this land, the Convention authorized Mr. H. S. Basnight of Chapel Hill, N. C., to receive money for the purpose of improving the cemetery lot. One church of nineteen members sent Mr. Basnight $15.00, and other smaller contributions have been received.

As one of the many intensely interested in every desire and act of the Convention in plans to put the cemetery in the condition that memory of the life and labors of Mr. O'Kelly are worthy of, I wish to most heartily endorse and pledge cooperation and support to the recent act of the Convention in session at Oakland in making a general appeal to our churches for money to be sent to Mr. Basnight to be used in this worthy and commendable undertaking.

Receive Honorary Degrees at Elon College

Six eminent men, including three from North Carolina, one from New York, one from New Jersey and one from the District of Columbia, are to be recipients of honorary degrees at the sixtieth annual commencement of Elon College, which will be concluded with graduation exercises on Monday, May 29.

The six candidates for honorary degrees are the Honorable Ralph Bradford, of Washington, D. C. (upper left), executive vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Rev. George W. Lawrence, of Ventnor, N. J. (upper center), pastor of the Ventnor City Community Church; Rev. Arthur Stanley Wheelock, of White Plains, N. Y. (upper right), pastor of the Church in the Highlands at White Plains; Prof. M. Yount, of Graham, N. C. (lower left), superintendent of Alamance County Schools; Rev. Robert Lee House, of Southern Pines, N. C. (lower center), Congregational Christian minister and editor of The Christian Sun; and Prof. Hiram Earl Myers, of Durham, N. C. (lower right), professor of Biblical Literature in the Duke University Divinity School.

KEY FIGURES IN ELON COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM

The three key speakers for the 1950 Commencement program at Elon College are shown above, portrayed against the background of Alamance Building's classic south portico. They are: Dr. I. W. Johnson (center left), of Suffolk, Va., who will deliver the alumni oration on Saturday evening, May 27; Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter (top center), of Hartford, Conn., dean emeritus of the Hartford Theological Seminary, who will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday morning, May 28; and Honorable Ralph Bradford (upper left), of Washington, D. C., executive vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who will deliver the graduation address on Monday morning, May 29. President L.

E. Smith (lower right) will guide the institution through its sixtieth annual commencement.

News Flashes

Supt. Scott is guest preacher this week during loyalty services at Rosemont Church, Norfolk.

Dr. H. S. Harcastle spoke on the Ladies' Night Program of the Suffolk Kiwanis Club held on Thursday evening of last week. He was introduced by H. M. Haynes, past-president of the Club.

Supt. John G. Truitt was guest speaker at the May meeting of the Graham Study Club. His appearance had special significance for some who remembered that he was pastor of the Graham Church while he was a student at Elon College.

AN APPRECIATION TO DR. NEWMAN.

The members and friends of this, the First Congregational Christian Church of Newport News, Virginia, wish here to express to Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., our appreciation of the services he has rendered us during the past three months.

It is rather difficult to say in limited space what we feel, but we think it has been a benediction to have had such a spirit as you amongst and ministering to us. Your sermons have been inspiring and helpful to our craving hearts, and we feel that we should be a better group because of your teachings.

It has been especially gratifying to have had you, the first minister of this church, return after more than fifty years and share with us the progress made over these years. Many of us feel that the success of this organization can be attributed in a great degree to the very wise and solid foundation (or start in the right direction), that you gave in those first five years. You never for once led us over any false paths, which we had to retrace, and our confidence in and admiration for you made it easy to follow even with our own many imperfections.

May God's blessings rest upon you, and we hope among the many memories of a well spent life in His service, you will realize fully this congregation's gratitude for your ministry and your interest in us at all times.

Adopted unanimously in a special called Conference Sunday, May 14, 1950.

VIRGINIA A. MOBERG, Church Clerk.

CATAWBA SPRINGS.

One of the most inspiring visits I have had in many a day was my trip to Catawba Springs. I had been invited to speak on a special occasion. I found a beautiful new, brick building—all paid for. I found a large and enthusiastic Sunday school housed mostly in lovely rooms on the ground floor. And the spirit of the Sunday school and church was very inspiring. The young pastor, the Rev. Franklin Pierce, taught the adult class and did a good job. It was a pleasure to meet a young fellow who was so enthusiastic for his work, and achieving such good success as a young minister. I preached at the 11:00 o'clock service to a large congregation, and without my suggestion they received a special offering amounting to more than $118 for the orphanage.

At the close of the service some 75 members of the J. E. Franks family met in the dining hall and spread a dinner worth writing about. Brother Franks was above 80 years young, strong and very happy. He and Mrs. Franks and their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren did ample justice to the bounteous meal, but there was enough to feed the large family again left over. I had three of our orphanage boys with me, and they enjoyed it just as much as anyone. This church is in a very prosperous section of Wake County. It has been served for many years by the Rev. J. Lee Johnson, under whose leadership the large brick structure was built. We can be proud of such churches, for they take their worship of God and the study of His word seriously. They are glad to give the church first place in their lives. The Christian influence of the Franks family is a big asset to the community. When

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Christian Education	4,000.00
Superannuation	4,000.00
The Christian Sun	2,000.00
Convention Fund	11,000.00
Per Capita Dues	2,541.00
Scholarship	1,500.00
Total	$ 90,041.00
Women's Home Mission Fund ..	7,500.00
Women's Foreign Mission Fund .	7,500.00

Grand total$105,041.00

We recommend that the $90,041 be apportioned to conferences as follows:

Eastern Virginia	$ 32,537.00
Valley Virginia	6,921.00
Eastern North Carolina	11,650.00
North Carolina & Virginia	31,250.00
Western North Carolina	7,683.00

Total$ 90,041.00

NOTE.—The report as it will be printed in The Annual shows the distribution by items.

2. We recommend an annual Operating Budget of $18,000 for Convention Leadership, Promotion and the Convention Office, to be administered by the Executive Board.

Proposed Sources of Income:

Convention Fund	$ 9,900.00
Mission Board	3,600.00
Board of Christian Education ...	4,500.00
Total	$ 18,000.00

3. We recommend the following annual budget for THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

For printing The Christian Sun $	8,000.00

Contingencies	1,200.00
Total	$ 9,800.00

Anticipated annual resources for THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

Subscription List	$ 4,500.00
Mission Board	1,000.00
Orphanage	1,200.00
Elon College	900.00
Advertising	200.00
Sun apportionment	2,000.00

Total$ 9,800.00

It is recommended that boards and institutions pay the amounts specified for the Operating Budget of the Convention Office and THE CHRISTIAN SUN in monthly installments; and that appropriations from boards and institutions to the Convention Office and the Board of Publications begin July 1, 1950, and run through the fiscal year ending December 31, 1952.

4. Elon College has made commendable progress and advancement in recent years. Its expanding program calls for larger and continued financial support.

We recommend that in addition to the regular apportionment for the College the Convention approve, and through its conferences and churches engage in an effort to raise a minimum average of $1.00 per member annually for a sustaining fund for Elon College; this effort to be a co-operative one to be participated in by the college administration, the Elon College Foundation, the Convention, conferences and church officials; that a committee be constituted by this Convention, the duty of which shall be to work for the Convention with the officials named above, to formulate the plans whereby this proposal shall be carried to the entire constituency of the Convention.

5. We recommend that Item 4 of the report of the Finance Committee adopted by the Convention in its 1948 session, providing that the Mission Board transmit 25% of its net income for the Convention Home Mission Fund to the Home Boards of the General Council, be rescinded.

We recommend that in lieu of the above item which is recommended to be rescinded that the Mission Board of the Convention determine the amount of the income for Convention Home Missions, which in the judgment of the Mission Board, should be sent to the Home Boards of the General Council, the amount to be proportionate to the askings from the Home Boards for the support of Mission work within the Convention.

6. We recommend that all churches be urged to raise their Missions and Benevolent Funds by securing subscriptions for their entire Conference Apportionments. Churches which do not raise their entire apportionments by means of subscriptions should receive a special offering for Missions at Easter, a special Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage, a special offering at Christmas for Superannuation, and a special offering for Elon College during the College Period. Until the regular contributions are sufficient to meet the apportionments, churches should seek to raise the apportionments in full by seeking special gifts from individuals.

7. We recommend the continuance of the present plan of regular monthly offerings for Missions and the Orphanage, and the Fifth Sunday offering for Elon College to be taken by the Sunday schools, until the amount of the apportionment for each shall be raised in full, thereafter all benevolent contributions from Sunday schools should be allotted to the other items of apportionments which have not been raised in full. Contributions from Sunday schools should be forwarded through the designated channels and credited on the respective Conference Apportionments.

8. We recommend that the Orphanage, the Mission Board and Elon College be authorized to make appeals for contributions, each during the periods designated, as follows: Elon College, January, February, September and October; Missions, March, April, May and June; Orphanage, November and December; and that at Christmas a special offering may be taken for the "Christmas Fund for Veterans of the Cross," said offering to be forwarded by the Board of Superannuation to the Division of Ministerial Relief as an emergency fund and extra appropriation to the superannuates. It is recommended that the practice of making appeals to churches, Sunday schools and auxiliaries for material or financial gifts at other times than during the periods designated be discontinued.

9. We recommend that the Board of Christian Education be authorized to appeal for offerings on Children's Day from Sunday schools, and from individuals during July and August.

10. We recommend that all funds contributed by churches, or by individuals who request their gifts to be credited to their churches, be transmitted to the Convention Treasurer through the Convention Office; that the Convention Office report such gifts to the Secretary of the conference in which the local church holds membership; and that each local church shall be furnished with a report of all funds sent from his church for Convention enterprises, together with the balances due.

11. We recommend that the awarding of scholarships to college and seminary students be the responsibility of the Board of Christian Education, and that such scholarships be granted only to ministerial students and students.

CONGRATULATIONS to the 150 seniors who graduate at Elon College this week-end. After the process of elimination, which usually has opportunity to function in a college curriculum, has done its worst, it is a mark of distinction to arrive safely at commencement. Congratulations to parents and faculty, also. As these fine young people graduate and enter the University of Life, we trust that religion will not be an elective. Realizing that young people from our churches will be graduating from other colleges, we extend congratulations to all graduates within our church family and hope that religion and education are permanently wedded in their lives.

FELICITATIONS to Dr. N. G. Newman, whose supply work in recent months at Suffolk, Oakland and Newport News has elicited many favorable comments. Ripe in wisdom, grand in spirit, unwavering in his ideals, he has now achieved the quintessence of theology in preaching, and happy is the congregation to which he ministers. The ancient words are fulfilled in his life and ministry: "And it shall come to pass that at eventide there shall be light." Dr. Newman ministered in Newport News at the beginning and the conclusion of this half-century. The Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., began his ministry there last Sunday.

SALUTATIONS to members of the Board of Publications! This Board met in Suffolk the week following the Oakland Convention. Members of the Board took time to acquaint themselves with the procedure and problems of publication, then began making plans for the next biennium. Chairman Duane Vore, Secretary Shirley Holland, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein, the Revs. S. E. Madren and P. H. Ricketts are capable pilots of our publication. Our thanks to the retiring Board—Dr. W. E. Wisseman, the Revs. W. J. Andes, S. E. Madren, T. F. Wright, W. M. Stevens—for valiant service during this concluding biennium.

THE SEASONING OF THE SOUTH

Hodding Carter is respected by many people today as a reputable Southern Analyst. His book, "Southern Legacy," was favorably reviewed recently in our columns by one who lives north of the Mason and Dixon Line.

Mr. Carter wrote: "The South may be described as the Bible belt in the same off-hand and derisive way that the Eastern Seaboard can be identified as the barbiturate belt, the roaring, raw cities of the Midwest the Tommy-gun belt, and the West Coast as the divorce belt. But the religious identification goes deeper. Though the citadels crumble, the South remains the great western-world stronghold of Protestant, fundamentalist Christianity. As such it is the legatee of the spiritually zestful, mystic and masochistic soul of its largely Celtic forbears."

If it is true that the South "remains the great western world stronghold of Protestant Christianity," then it is hardly the part of wisdom to lambaste and lampoon the benighted area. Even in the South, it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness.

Regional Council

One way of dealing constructively with the problems of the South is through the Regional Council of the Southeast, which embraces the Florida State Conference, the Southern Convention, the Conference of the Southeast and the Southeast Convention. Dr. Thomas Anderson is the energetic and resourceful chairman of the Council, which is just now coming into renewed usefulness. It was through the initiative of this Council that the services of Dr. Ross Sanderson were secured. Now a block of his time is being given to the study and appraisal of this region. His study is church centered. His avowed purpose is to "alert the entire denomination to its Southern Exposure."

Representatives of our fellowship from Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and Tennessee met in Atlanta last week with Dr. Sanderson, to hear reports of commissions and plan for fall and spring meetings. The Council is beginning to function effectively. The four superintendents within the region—Scott, Shepherd, Stanley and Tuttle team together on matters of mutual interest. The problems of the South cannot be solved apart from a virile religion, a healthy church.

Atlanta

The Council meeting was held in Central Church. During the six years of Dr. Anderson's ministry there, the membership has increased from eighty-four to well over four hundred. The budget has grown from $4,150.00 to $18,000.00. Many improvements have been made in the property and equipment. This church purports "to enable the people of the Congregational Christian Churches in the nation to make a larger contribution to the religious culture of the Southeast, and to aid those in the Atlanta area to have a more effective influence in the ongoing enterprises of the Kingdom of God, at home and abroad."

There is no one universal religious pattern in the South. While in Atlanta, the editor visited three churches: Central Congregational, the Baptist Tabernacle, and Peachtree Christian (Disciples). Len. G. Broughton of North Carolina built the Tabernacle. A youth revival was in progress last week which attracted approximately a thousand people nightly. This church adheres to its fundamentalist background, but continues to reach many people unreached by other churches.

Peacetrete Church is a modern, Gothic structure, well-staffed institution which is open for work and worship seven days a week. Beauty and efficiency are combined in this progressive Atlanta Church. Yes, one realizes with satisfaction, there are churches like this in the South.

Who knoweth but that thou art come to the South for such a time as this?

A Yankee Looks at the Southern Convention

By DR. ROSS W. SANDERSON

Director of Field Research The Board of Home Missions

This requested article is written with the understanding that the editor, or the reader, will supply whatever adjective, traditional or otherwise, may seem necessary before that word "Yankee."

I attended the biennial session at Chuckatuck with very great interest and unremitting faithfulness. It is one of the interesting aspects of my work to have time to watch the ecclesiastical wheels go round, and try to see what it is that makes the whole process tick. The meeting at Chuckatuck filled me with admiration for the fine spirit of comradeship, the candor and good humor with which the Convention faced moot questions and was willing to abide by decisions that could not suit everybody but represented a clear majority opinion.

Three phases of the life of the Convention distinguish it from the traditional Congregational Conference. First and foremost, it has a genuinely church-related college, Elon, which is so much a part of the life of the churches that a church like Burlington would be utterly different save for what Elon has contributed to its membership. Moreover the pastors of the churches in the Convention are so many of them Elon men that the influence of Elon is widespread. Perhaps the intimacy of this relationship is more normative than we have realized. Too many other colleges, with Congregational origins, have now only a very tenuous connection with the life of the merged denomination.

Second, THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a unique piece of denominational journalism. Ably edited, it is a symbol of that more primary acquaintanceship (in the sociological sense) that obtains among these churches. It is gossipy in a constructive way, chummy, filled with ecumenical news of importance and also with local personalia that make for fellowship. What William Allen White was to secular journalism, Robert Lee House is to denominational. His colleagues differ with him enough to keep him humble. For a full century the service of THE SUN has made it a must for the churches of the Convention.

Third, the Convention has an orphanage. This has the devoted emotional and practical support of the churches. Perhaps it is a step to some more up-to-date method of handling child placement, perhaps its functions may properly be transferred in due time to secular auspices; but it has been an institutional expression of the social generosity of the churches that has symbolized for them the claims of childhood on all the followers of the Friend of Children.

I thought I detected evidences of a change from a semi-patriarchal stage when a coterie of great men dominated the Convention, to a more corporate phase of its existence, when a larger number of persons, including young leaders under a limited tenure rule, can conduct the business of the Convention. Moreover it seemed highly probable that the present generous attitude toward discussion of administrative detail on the floor of the Convention may give way gradually to the discussion of major matters of policy, with details left to interim groups for the more competent handling possible when a few persons come to grips with matters too detailed for discussion by hundreds of persons.

Yet the sheer mass of the Convention is itself noteworthy. Mrs. Sanderson and I drove up at 2:00 p. m. on the opening day, in a pouring rain, to find that parking space was at a premium and that at an open country church the opening session got under way, with a crowded house, right on the dot. Dr. Truman B. Douglass, executive vice-president of the Board of Home Missions, gave two addresses that were strong meat. I had heard them before, but enjoyed them even more on second hearing. They seemed most acceptable to the assembled delegates.

The Convention obviously faces problems. With increasing prosperity its evangelistic index is down, and one suspects that it is not now raising up as many men for the ministry as it once did. Both of these matters are subject to improvement. Meanwhile there appear to be a host of boys and girls and young people coming along; the rural churches, though increasingly a part of a rural-urban fringe, are of astounding size and vigor; and the mental and spiritual caliber of the Convention leadership is excellent. Here, too, are lay people eager to serve their Lord and His Church.

Finally, as I have pondered the "CC" merger, I am convinced that Congregationalists are entirely too ignorant of the tremendous increment of strength that came to the united fellowship when the Christian Churches threw in their lot with those of the Pilgrim tradition. I could wish that there could be a systematic exchange of preachers, so that each group could come to know the other better. Congregationalism is a little further from the soil, a little more sophisticated than the Christian Churches, it seems to me. There is a pristine, almost apostolic simplicity and directness about the atmosphere of the Convention that is wholesome and healthy. If any of us Yankees have grown frigid and repressed, just to visit the Southern Convention will warm us up, re-vitalize our emotions, unleash our enthusiasms, and reveal to us another set of American beginnings to be gratefully bracketed with those at Plymouth and in the Bay Colony.

No Yankee permits himself to be wistful or envious, but if Christian loyalty permitted such attitudes, as a Yankee I could wish that throughout Congregationalism we could catch something of the spirit that expresses itself in the Christian Churches, as represented by the Southern Convention.

A RULE OF THREE.

Three things to govern — temper, tongue and conduct.

Three things to cultivate — courage, affection and gentleness.

Three things to commend — thrift, industry and promptness.

Three things to despise — cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude.

Three things to wish for — health, friends and contentment.

Three things to admire — dignity, gracefulness and intellectual power.

Three things to give — alms to the needy, comfort to the sad, and appreciation to the worthy.—Selected.

of Elon College, which will gather back at its Alma Mater for a reunion as a special feature of Elon's sixtieth annual commencement program.

The class reunion, commemorating the fortieth anniversary of its graduation, will be an outstanding event in the program of the annual Alumni Day exercises next Sunday, May 27, and leaders of the class hope to have all of the eleven members of the class here to renew acquaintances and to reminisce over college days long gone. Almost as amazing as the longevity of all its members is the fine record of service compiled by the members of this class, for each of them can look back upon lives and careers that have an's College at Greensboro, N. C. The other minister, in addition to Dr. Smith, is William W. Elder, for many years a Navy Chaplain, new retired and living in Georgia.

ELON COLLEGE BASEBALL SQUAD WINS NORTH STATE CON- FERENCE TITLE.

The Elon baseball squad chalked up its second successive North State Conference championship with a 14-game winning streak that included every team in the loop among the victims. The only defeat, with one game left to play, was a 2 to 0 loss to Western Carolina in a double-header at Cullowhee. There is not a senior on the squad, and Coach Jim Mallory can look forward to another strong outfit one year hence.

ELON'S CLASS OF 1910.

The three public school educators include W. Frank Warren, for many years superintendent of the Durham City Schools in Durham, N. C., but now retired from that position; and Misses Nannie Emma Farmer, now of Halifax, Va., and Miss Nannie Baker Farmer, now of Richmond, Va., both of whom taught for many years in the Virginia public schools.

Dr. A. Liggett Lincoln, of the staff of Bellevue Hospital in New York City, formerly personal physician to Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, is the physician of the class; and C. C. Fonville, of Burlington, N. C., is the successville business man, having prospered in the fields of real estate and insurance.

Mrs. Alonzo C. Hall of Greensboro, N. C., formerly Miss Macie Farmer, and Mrs. W. R. Dees, of Fremont, N. C., formerly Miss Carrie Boyd, are the two who have devoted their lives to successful homemaking.

It is the earnest hope of the class leaders and also of Elon College alumni officials that every member of the unusual class will return for the commencement, and all are looking forward to some highly interesting reminiscences.

ELON TENNIS TEAM WINS CONFERENCE TITLE.

The Elon tennis team has posted a record of seven wins and one defeat in Conference play to clinch the 1950 team title in the North State Conference, and Captain Bill Winstead annexed the individual singles crown to give Elon her best net record in years.

THE SPIRIT AND PURPOSE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

[Address delivered on Senior Recognition Day, May, 17, 1950, by Dr. George C. Enders at the Chapel of Defiance College, when the graduating class of 116 appeared for the first time in caps and gowns.]

Upon this Senior Class Day, we of the lower classes and of the faculty feel that we honor ourselves, in honoring you, our Seniors. We regard it as commendable in us to meet in formal, public recognition of the worthy achievement and the superior accomplishment, which your presence here in caps and gowns indicates. We underclass people, which of course, includes the faculty, believe it reflects credit on us, thus publically to recognize what you have done, and to indicate our respect for the cap and gown, which symbolizes your achievement.

Such a recognition service ought to bring to us various beneficial results; outstanding among which would be a better realization of what it means to graduate from an institution of Christian Education. It may be well at this time to direct our thought to

The Spirit and Purpose of Christian Education.

And as a basis of our thinking on this subject, let me call your attention to the words of the Great Teacher, as recorded in John 10:10—"The thief comes only to steal, and to kill, and to destroy; I came that they may have life and have abundantly." Two kinds of education are here indicated: the non-Christian and the Christian. Jesus had just been in conflict with a group of men, some of whom regarded themselves as well educated, even highly educated. But theirs was not Christian education. They did not have the spirit nor the purpose of Christian education. Their spirit was thoroughly selfish, and their purpose was to steal, and to destroy, even to kill if necessary to get what they wanted.

Now, do not misunderstand me. This does not mean that all graduates of secular schools, colleges and universities are non-Christian—far from it. Nor does it imply that all the graduates of Christian institutions are Christian; much as that may be regretted. While it is true that in the work of Christian education the Christian College has very real and important advantages, the test of whether a person is a Christian, depends not on his diploma, but upon the spirit and purpose which dominate his life.

The thief of the text represents a non-Christian class. He frequently possesses a high degree of trained skill and intellectual development. This class is not confined to the man who holds you up on the street, breaks into your house, robs your bank, or thumbs a ride, kills you and speeds away in your car. Unfortunately his class is much larger than that. It includes all those whose ruling spirit is selfish and whose chief purpose it is to get.

The text shows that the spirit of Christian education is unselfish, and that its purpose is to give. The distinction between the two may be illustrated by that, someone has made between the ward-heeling politician

CHINESE CHRISTIANS TO PLAN FUTURE LIFE OF CHURCHES.

An organized Movement of Christian Reform and a laymen's commission to "re-think" Christianity in China are among the predicted outcomes of the National Christian Conference being held at Peking, China, in August.

Comparable to the national conference of 1922 which set up the present National Christian Council, this meeting of delegates, lay and clergy, from all Christian groups in China will seek agreement on the basic principles to govern the future life and work of the churches.

Up for discussion is a central body with executive powers for all the churches, and the conference will probably request definite legislative action from the subsequent biennial meeting of the National Christian Council to secure closer cooperation among the churches.

Plans for the conference, reported in the National Christian Council News for February-March, 1950, are in the hands of a Preparatory Committee of the Council at its January meeting, and of the Standing Committee of 15 elected from it.

WORD FROM CHINA.

[Statement by Dr. Harold S. Matthews, China Secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, at Press Conference, Boston, Mass., Monday, April 17, 1950.]

On my trip home from China while flying across the United States at 19,000 feet above the earth I could not see the people walking in the streets or working in the fields. Here in the U.S.A. it is difficult to see the 400,000,000 Chinese people individually living their lives of adjustment to the new situation, but having just come from seven months lived behind the so-called "bamboo screen" I can see them.

Stiff Taxation.

Ordinary farmers and city workmen are struggling nobly to understand the implications of the present day changes. As of old their closest point of relationship is through taxation—very stiff taxation. Taxes must be paid in rice. If the person taxed has no rice he has to use money to buy it. If he has no money he has to sell something so as to buy the rice. Former debts have been forgiven so now few want to loan money even if they have it because there is no guarantee it can be collected later.

Not All Chinese Communists.

Even with avowed Communist leaders at the top it is not true that the millions of Chinese are Communists or certain that they ever will be. The area of life in which the Chinese are inclined toward anarchy is great—far greater than in our own land. So the common approach is not how to fulfill new regulations, but rather how to circumvent them. In an area of life before the new leaders can get far in bringing about radical change, they discover walls of resistance which are difficult to penetrate. Therefore, an honest effort is being made to carry the people along with them.

Much Indoctrination.

There is much indoctrination for all classes of people. There is a great deal of propaganda from street corners by students and others of the propaganda corps. Many new ideas are aired in frequent gatherings of a quite inclusive People's Assembly. The Christian element in the population is recognized by representatives in the local assemblies.

Anti-American News in the Press.

Apparently the principle followed in the province I was in is to interfere as little as necessary in the lives of the people, but seek to win friendly support for the present military campaigns and for reconstruction planned for the future. The daily papers carry much distorted anti-American information and misinformation and much pro-Soviet material. On Stalin's recent birthday one local paper came out with a large picture of him and all the type printed with red ink.

Religious Freedom.

The Communist army and the People's Government have adhered to the principles of:

1. Freedom of religion and freedom to oppose religion.
2. Protection of foreigners. They say they are not opposed to the common citizen of the U.S.A., but they do oppose the so-called capitalistic, imperialistic policies of our government, especially its attitudes expressed toward the new government in China and towards the Soviet government.

The army and the general populace are orderly.

Less Orderly in the Countryside.

Conditions in rural areas are much worse than in the cities. Officials in the country are more provincial, less educated, and less experienced than the city ones. They are closer to the farmer tax-payers. Delinquents do not get much in the way of lenient treatment. These officials deal differently with the rural conditions than do those in the cities. The provincial government authorities criticize the students being trained for government jobs because so few of them are willing to go to the country, preferring the comparative comforts of the cities.

Westerners in China.

Life for the westerners has not been much different than before in the province where I lived. There has been plenty of fresh fruit, vegetables, meat, eggs, milk and flour at steadily increasing prices. Travel is restricted. Freedom to go about the city in which they reside exists, but for any "out-of-bounds" travel specific passes are required and are usually quite difficult to obtain.

Cannot Generalize on What Chinese Think.

You can no longer say "the Chinese think this or that." In the face of mass indoctrination every Chinese has his own reaction which he is less free to express in unguarded conversation. In general, the good Christian is more Christian while the "fringe" Christian tends to drift away to other groups. This is a testing time which is to a certain extent salutary.

The new government appreciates the fact that certain Christian groups and projects have social values which should be preserved. Those groups with definite social service projects (rural and urban) are accepted.

Foreign Exchange.

Foreign Exchange is being handled very efficiently by the new banking system. Foreign drafts presented at the bank counters are exchanged at the prevailing rate and the equivalent in local currency paid at once. When I left in March the exchange was 40,000 to 1. Students in schools and patients in hospitals find it difficult to pay the fees in the area where war efforts claim the major attention.

Some Changes Were Inevitable.

Many changes now taking place in China were inevitable and would have taken place without the Communist (Continued on page 9.)

PLEASANT RIDGE WOMEN MEET.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Pleasant Ridge (R) Church met on Friday night, April 14, with Mrs. J. H. Pell at her home on Ramseur Route No. 1. The president, Mrs. Rosa Welborne, presided with 26 members and seven guests. This was the birthday party. At this party each member of the society brought a covered dish of a vegetable or meat. All who had birthdays in the same month ate at one table. Their table was decorated for the month in which their birthday was in.

Mrs. Lendon Williams was very delighted in winning the first prize for the best decorated table. (Her table was decorated for Thanksgiving). The June table won second prize. The August table placed third. Each of the other tables were recognized. The judges were Mrs. Victor Reid, Mrs. V. C. Cox and Mrs. Nettie Johnson.

The dining room table was decorated very beautifully. In the center of the dining table was a large birthday cake. After each member passed through the dining room and served their own plates. Mrs. Clyde L. Fields and Mrs. J. H. Pell served ice cream and cake.

The society voted to furnish white and red roses for all who didn't have a corsage on Mother's Day.

Rev. Clyde L. Fields gave a very interesting Bible study on St. John. The meeting closed with prayer. The next regular meeting will be with Mrs. Carl Craven.

WORD FROM CHINA.

development. Certain of these changes have been prevalent in the U.S.A. for many decades. For instance, the prohibition of teaching religion to primary students. I had no religion taught to me in my primary or high school days in this country. It was not until I reached the college level that I encountered required chapel and required courses in religion.

In China today primary age students may receive religious instruction in the home or in the church, but not in the school. In high schools and colleges religious exercises are voluntary and must not interfere with the regular school program.

English Disappearing as a Language.

English is disappearing gradually from the curriculum and Russian is replacing it as teachers can be found. More and more Russians are coming to China, especially North China.

United States Recognition of Communist China.

What changes would be effected should the U. S. Government find its way clear to recognize the People's Government of China, I cannot foresee, but I see little advantage in withholding normal relations between the two governments and leaving the Chinese recourse to only one direction—moving closer and closer to Moscow.

The Chinese people, friendly with America for a century, are entitled to all the spiritual help they can get from Americans. The missionaries in China continue to give daily expression to Christian faith, hope and love. I hope they can remain at their posts. Perhaps some day even the government leaders will become convinced that the missionaries are not spies or government agents and that they have no ulterior motives, and are social and spiritual assets to their respective communities. Such a result is well worth struggling for, even in the face of increasing difficulties.

Dr. Harold S. Matthews worked in China under the American Board of Foreign Missions for over 20 years. His earlier career was in North China where often his duties took him on rugged field trips into isolated areas.

He was for six months a prisoner of the Japanese invasion forces during World War II and returned home on the first Repatriation Ship Gripsholm. In 1944 Dr. Matthews was called to the post of China Secretary for the American Board of Foreign Missions at international headquarters, Boston, Massachusetts. He was born in Iowa, educated at Grinnell College, the University of Chicago and Chicago Theological Seminary. He is a veteran of World War I.

Dr. Matthews reached China for his administrative visit November 16, 1948, planning to return the following June, 1949, but various events made this impossible until late March when he flew from Hong Kong to Japan and from Japan to the U.S.A. arriving in Boston on April 5.

THE LORD SENDS FORTH HIS LABORERS:

I. To Ceylon.

Miss Eunice A. Goodfellow, daughter of Mrs. Rollin Goodfellow, 12 Circle Lane, Albany, New York, has just been appointed by the American Board for a three-year term as a teacher of music and English at the Uduvil Girls' School in Ceylon, founded 126 years ago by the American Board. She hopes to sail for her new work in the early fall.

Miss Goodfellow was born 23 years ago in an Evangelical and Reformed Manse in Cleveland, Ohio. Her father, later ordained as a Congregational minister, lost his life in the line of duty as a United States Army Transport Chaplain in World War II.

In Ceylon Miss Goodfellow will teach on a faculty predominantly Ceylonese and under the direction of Miss Ariam Paramasamy, head of the school, an attractive Tamil Christian educator, well known in Congregational Christian Church circles in the U.S.A.

The Uduvil Girls' School is the oldest girls' boarding school in the Orient and one of the largest. Uduvil is located in the northernmost part of Ceylon on the Peninsula of Jaffna.

II. To Africa.

An impressive service of ordination and commissioning took place Sunday afternoon, May 21, at 4:30 p. m. in the Ocean Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York, when Mr. and Mrs. Donald K. Abbott were commissioned as career missionaries in East Africa by the American Board, and Mr. Abbott was ordained to the Congregational Christian ministry.

Mr. Abbott is a veteran of World War II, having seen service in the United States Navy for four years in every theatre. He is a graduate of Brothers College of Drew University and Union Theological Seminary. During his last two years at seminary he has been Student Assistant Minister at the Ocean Avenue Congregational Church in Brooklyn.

The Abbotts hope to sail for their new work around the first of August and will be located in the East Africa Mission of the American Board where the native tongue is Chindau. The

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

One of the most pleasant sessions of church school is that time devoted to activities, handwork or craft period. It is pleasing to both pupil and teacher.

There is a new book to guide teachers and helpers along these lines. It is called Activities in Child Education, written and illustrated by Elizabeth Miller Lobingier, published by Pilgrim Press and costing $3.50. While some teachers will not want to spend that much on a book themselves, it is within reach of all church schools.

Mrs. Lobingier is well known to us in this area for two of her books, Hebrew Home Life and the mission study book, Ship East—Ship West. She wrote Educating for Peace with her husband, John L. Lobingier. The jacket of the book tells of her teaching experiences and where her landscape paintings have been hung. One of the places named was Rockport, Massachusetts, which is a famous art colony.

By far the nicest feature of the book is the collection of pictures done by her children in church school and photographs of the children in the midst of, or with, their activities. Another excellent feature is the author's firm insistence that anyone can learn to draw, cut, paint and letter—with application and study. So many, otherwise grand, teachers have gone down before the task of freehand work. Some of the illustrations by the children show great talent and are above average.

Freehand cutting, poster and charts, bookmaking and cover designing, dramatization and units of activity are well explained and outlined. It is an informative, helpful book. Put it on your must list.

* * * *

There isn't a museum in our town, but we are not without our art exhibits. The library has one wing devoted to art and historical exhibits. The current showing is work of the children done in the Southern Pines School. There were portraits, illustrations, designs, and even one bearing resemblance to cubism.

Several of our church school children were represented. I hesitate to name them because I may not recall them, but I will tell those I do remember. One was by Patty Britt, another was a very happy looking freckledfacied boy done by Billy Sugg and a woman with a very chic-looking hat by Lemuel Tew. There were pine cones, birds and dogwood blossoms. One showed happy boys and girls running past trees through a greenway. It is refreshing to see this work.

It is always thrilling to have an exhibition following the completion of a unit of activity. Bible School time will soon be here and there will be work aplenty.

RESPECTING OWNERSHIP RIGHTS.

By HARRIETT C. ANDERSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Terry and Jack are cousins and they are about the same age. Terry is generous, thoughtful, and very considerate of the property of others. Jack is selfish, thoughtless, and shows no respect for other people's property.

Jack's mother cannot understand why her son lacks the pleasing qualities of character which his cousin possesses. It is not to be blamed on the fact that Jack is an only child, for so is Terry.

What Jack's mother does not realize is that she is responsible for the very behavior patterns about which she is now disturbed. During the early, formative years, the child learns from observation. He is quick to follow the example set by the grownups around him. A comparison of the attitude of the two mothers may be helpful to many young mothers and other adults working with children.

Jacks' mother sees no connection between his unpleasant manners now and her lack of consideration and tact when Jack was just a little fellow. For instance, after he had spent much time on what he thought was a letter or a picture, she would refer to it as "scribbling." She would thoughtlessly push over what to her was "a mess" of blocks; to Jack these blocks represented a castle which he had carefully built for his play king and queen. This mother considered many of her boy's prized possessions "trash," and she disposed of any she wished without consulting the small owner.

Now, on the other hand, Terry's mother regarded her son as a person.

She thought him an individual of consequence. When he had written a letter, she would take time to say, "Oh, fine!" and then she would ask politely, "May I read your letter, Terry?" When Terry's chubby fingers had drawn a picture and he wanted to show it, again his mother took time to be interested, and again the polite request, "May I see it?"

To these boys, the letters they pretended they were writing and their attempts at drawing or painting were of value.

Terry's mother always appreciated her son's efforts, and she recognized his right to privacy regarding his work. Therefore, there is no need now to tell Terry that it is very rude to read another person's letter unless he has permission to do so. Terry's mother realized that even a plain little stick might hold special meaning for him in his play world. She treated all of his things as she expected him to treat the property of others. To Terry, it now seems the natural thing to show regard for the property of other people.

Stopping first to ask Terry, "May I use your wagon to transplant some flowers, dear?" made Terry eager to share his wagon with Mother; and, too, it gave him a feeling of satisfaction to realize he had something to share.

A child thrives on love and consideration. Parents and teachers should not expect small Terrys and Jacks to respect the property of others if they themselves set a bad example by their lack of respect for the child's property. The belongings of his small world may seem unimportant to an adult, but to the child they are as important as the adult's most prized possession.

WHY?

An ancient scribbler offers this analysis of church attendance:

Some go to church to take a walk;
Some go to church to laugh and talk;
Some go there to meet a friend;
Some go there their time to spend;
Some go there to meet a lover;
Some go there a fault to cover;
Some go there for speculation;
Some go there for observation;
Some go there to doze and nod;
The wise go there to worship God.

ELON P. F. ENTERTAINS BURLINGTON P. F.

The Elon Senior Pilgrim Fellowship entertained the Burlington Senior Pilgrim Fellowship on Sunday night, April 30 at the Parish House. Rev. Henry Robinson and Mr. John Graves accompanied the group. The Elon group with the assistance of Mrs. Mark McAdams and Miss Dorothy Foltz prepared a picnic supper and the Burlington group brought their program. They presented an inspirational worship service and showed an excellent film, "The Stoning of Steven." The fifty-two who attended the meeting enjoyed the fellowship.

BE A WORK CAMPER.

For many months you have been reading and hearing about the POW project and lately the extension to the project (sending a young couple to a Pureto Rican work camp). You may have learned what Baxter Twiddy did in Germany last summer. In spite of all this, you may still not fully understand the philosophy of work camping; there, very definitely, is one. Also you may find that the whole idea is extremely vague and impractical. You ask yourself why would a person spend his entire summer, or part of it, working for someone else—without pay! Because the movement is a comparatively new enterprise, it has not gained great following. But it is true that thousands of young people have caught the dynamic spirit of work camping. After a brief period of service, each person has found his own life changed. Christian love has become as real as anyone could possibly realize.

At this moment, a committee is busy working out plans for Weekend Work Camps in the Southern Convention this summer. In this way work camps will be close to Convention young people and young adults so that they can be participants and can learn first hand the power of the work camp movement. It is only in the past few years that weekend work camps have been operating. Philadelphia has been the scene of much activity (200 weekend camps); and hundreds of young people have found new joys and an understanding of social problems. For three years a group has been sponsoring these camps in Lancaster, Pa. The idea has spread even to London, Paris and Helsinki. Projects have been varied but always in areas of need or in places where there is an opportunity for service.

Following are some of the educational aspects of weekend work camp experiences:

1. First of all, most campers appreciate the joys of simple living, of roughing it, of cooperative housekeeping and informal recreation.
2. Some campers discover the satisfaction of doing needed dirty work, of learning new manual skills, of feeling "dog-tired" at the end of a day spent helping someone else.
3. Many campers discover substandard living conditions that they never knew existed before, a foreign world right in their own back yard.
4. Almost all discover unanswered questions, questions of economics, politics and religion.
5. Equally important . . . campers often perceive within themselves a basic sympathy and respect for those human beings caught in conditions which would discourage the best of us.
6. With repeated work camp experiences this basic sympathy may well develop into a feeling of belonging, a feeling of equality, a feeling of solidarity with those who are exploited.—Weekend Work Camping, An Opportunity.

This is just a brief introduction to weekend work camping. The best way to find out about work camps is to be a work camper yourself!

Do you desire further information about weekend work camps in the Southern Convention? If so write at once to C. Baxter Twiddy, Box 572, Elon College, N. C.

NEWS OF WORK NEAR LURAY, VA.

The Newport Christian Church young people had a most impressive Mother's Day Sunday school program on Sunday, May 14, with Miss Lorene Louderback acting as program leader. Mrs. Walter Higgs read the scripture lesson and the opening prayer was by Mrs. Grover Stoneburner. Among the others taking part in the program were, Mrs. Aldine Painter, Miss Norma Harlow, Carroll Lee Foltz, Miss Bettie Judd and Miss Bettie Lou Smith. Little folks included on the program were Nancy Higgs and Judy Louderback. Several appropriate songs were sung by the group, and a duet by Mrs. Kermit Kibler and Mrs. Vernon Foltz. The pianists were Misses Margil Higgs and Hazel Foltz.

With 133 members on the church roll, there were 112 present for Sunday school, and the offering amounted to $16.97.

Revival services, being led by Rev. Mark Andes, began on Sunday evening. There was a large crowd present for the opening service.

The church has recently carpeted the church aisles.

HABAKKUK TEACHES TRUST IN GOD.

LESSON X—JUNE 4, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: I will rejoice in the Lord; I will joy in the God of my salvation.—Habakkuk 3:18.

LESSON: Habakkuk 1:1-4, 12-13; 2:1-4; 3:17-19.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 67:1-7.

The Prophet's Confusion.

The prophet was confused and confounded. He just did not understand things. Here he was crying unto Jehovah, crying again and again unto Jehovah, and apparently there was no reply from Jehovah. Indeed there was no evidence that Jehovah was even listening, much less doing anything about it. The thing posed a problem. For here was Jehovah seemingly absolutely indifferent toward what was going on in the nation. Iniquity prevailed, strife and contention were everywhere, justice had failed, the laws were not regarded or obeyed, and wickedness apparently had triumphed over righteousness. And all this before Jehovah's very eyes. Could it be that Jehovah did not see? Worse still, could it be that Jehovah saw and did not care? That was what troubled the prophet. It seemed a denial of everything that he had been taught about the God of Israel.

It is the thing that troubles many people today. They see injustice and oppression and strife and contention and perverseness and wickedness on every hand. They feel that Truth is forever on the scaffold and Wrong forever on the throne. The heavens seem brass and their prayers are unanswered. And God goes not forth to destroy the wicked and to bring an end to their wickedness. There are many people who are perplexed by what they see in the world today. Sometimes they feel either that God does not care or that He is not strong enough to do anything about it if He does care.

The Prophet's Complaint.

Habakkuk has another complaint against Jehovah, perhaps even more grievous than the first. At first he was confused because God was not doing anything about the evil condition in his day and time. And for a long time back, for that matter. But when God apparently did bestir himself to do something about it, He was using a nation that was more wicked than Israel to punish His Chosen People. That just did not make sense. Here was a God whose nature cannot endure wrong, but who looks on silently while one of the most wicked and godless nations runs roughshod over His Chosen People!!!! "Wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy peace when the wicked swallow up the man that is more righteous than he . . . ?"

There were many people who were disturbed and discouraged by the way in which Hitler, the embodiment of ruthlessness and wickedness overran nations that were peace-loving and God-fearing. And by the way in which Japan ravaged Korea and China. And what about the way in which Godless Russia is spreading herself like a giant octopus over nations in which the church is established and which are far above her in moral idealism? And God does not seem to be doing anything about it! Like Habakkuk there are many people to whom it does not make sense.

The Prophet's Patience.

"I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will look forth to see what he will speak unto me and what I shall answer concerning my complaint." The man does not understand, but he believes there must be an explanation, so he decides to wait. He will remain at his post of duty, he will face the future expectantly, he will take the long look, he will try to see what the centuries have to say as against the moment, to paraphrase Emerson's great words. And although he does not learn all the answers, he gets the important answers. The law of the harvest applies to nations as well as to individuals. The Chaldeans are riding for a fall. Their arrogance and aggressiveness will be punished. They will become subject to the divine wrath and suffer punishment for their sins. The arrogance of Babylon is fatal—that is the first answer.

The second answer is this—the faithfulness of Judah is its own reward. Character in itself is its own blessing or curse. Character has its own reward, the reign of law in the moral realm is one of the most vital conceptions of religion. "The righteous shall live by his faith" or "the just shall live by faith" is the answer that includes all the other answers. If a man has faith in God, vital faith in God, then he can wait until such time as he sees the meaning of life, including the "meaning of his tears." As Jesus stood before those who were troubled and confused He said "Have faith in God." "Ye believe in God, believe also in me."

The Prophet's Faith.

Even as Micah with his words, "What doth Jehovah require of thee but to do justly, love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God" reached a high water mark in a definition of religion in the Old Testament, just so does Habakkuk reach a high water mark in his expression of a living faith as recorded in Habakkuk 3:17-19. "Though the fig tree shall not flourish, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail and the fields shall yield no food; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls, yet will I rejoice in Jehovah, I will joy in the God of my salvation. Jehovah the Lord is my strength;" His faith in God is independent of material things or success. Come what may, the man will believe in God. His faith and his strength are inner things—a source of confidence and assurance in the face of all external afflictions and all calamitous circumstances. This is indeed the victory that overcomes the world, even faith.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE FAMILY.

A Mother's Day Message

By AUBREY C. TODD.

The American family of the twentieth century is a peculiar institution. It has been made what it is chiefly by the industrial revolution; and, although we see the ill effects of the increasing mechanization of life, there is little that we can do to reverse or stop the trend. The glorification of the machine in American life has caused a general exodus from the farms to the cities, has replaced creativity with push buttons, and has given us too much time with too little to do in it.

The child raised on a farm has many advantages over a child raised in the city. On the farm the children are given definite chores and responsibilities so that they have a sense of contributing to the general welfare of the family; whereas the city mother has a tendency to send the children into the street or to a movie. The farm lad has long periods of meditative silence while he is plowing, feeding the animals, or pitching hay into the barn; the city child rushes through life to the accompaniment of automobile horns, juke boxes, and screeching tires. The city child misses the wonder of growing plants, the companionship of animals, and the feel of newly turned earth.

Regardless of how much we may regret the evils of our civilization, the machine is with us to stay, and we must learn to live with it. We can profit from our mistakes and do better in the future if we understand what it is that we want.

One of the main requirements in the training of children is that they be led from ignorance to knowledge. This cannot be done successfully if the parents themselves do not realize the importance of the search for truth. Prejudices, superstitions, and biases are easily transformed from parent to child, and the man or woman who is not willing to submit his beliefs to the test of all known facts is dangerous as a leader of the young.

To this end it is important in choosing the church or Sunday school which the family will attend. A church which puts emotionalism or dogma above the search for truth can do serious damage to developing minds.

It is important that children learn to respect the rights of others and to be sympathetic and understanding. All people are selfish at birth. They live in a world of their own, expecting to be waited on every time they cry. A part of the growing-up process is learning that others have needs and desires which are just as important as their own. If children have parents who are prejudiced and unkind it will have its effect regardless of how much teaching to the contrary may be done.

Children must be taught to have a wholesome attitude toward sex. Here again, the attitude of the father and mother is more important than thousands of words. If a child is to grow up with an adequate conception of true manhood and womanhood he must see these exemplified in his parents. The machine age is responsible for many misconceptions regarding parenthood because the modern method of employment has usually brought the mother too close to the child and taken the father too far away. When the father sees the children only at night, and feels no responsibility in their disciplining and training, the children are likely to receive a distorted idea of the role of a father. The relationship between the sexes can be lived before the children in such a way that many words will not be necessary.

So, if we know what things are important and needed we can overcome the ugliness and noise of modern life to a certain extent with the peace and beauty of Christian lives. The radio need not blare forth continuously with hill billy music and cheap stories—there are good programs if we take time to find them. Our conversation in the home need not always be monotonous chit-chat; there are exciting and interesting things in life to discuss. We do not have to be busy about our own personal affairs all the time; we can remember others, send birthday cards, arrange for visits, and write letters to friends.

If the American family fails, our society is doomed. If our homes are sound then our culture will endure.

The truly godly are instinctively humble. There is no humility so deep and real as that which the knowledge of grace produces.—Andrew Millar.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REPORT.

and the Treasurer's books, made by Walter F. Owen, C.P.A., Burlington, North Carolina, have been examined and checked against the reports. To the best of our knowledge, we believe the said reports and audits to be correct; and we recommend their adoption.

13. We recommend that churches using the services of the Board of Pastoral Supply, Boston, Massachusetts, as aid in securing pastors, be urged to make a contribution to the Board of Pastoral Supply toward its expenses.

14. We recommend that the Convention Committee on Finance be increased to ten members: five to be appointed by the Convention, and five to be elected by the Executive Board of the Convention, and that the Committee on Finance be requested to hold semi-annual meetings.

Respectfully submitted,

Abbotts will do church and educational work.

The Ocean Avenue Congregational Church will help support the Abbotts in their overseas work and a similar project relationship is being considered by the Flatbush-Tompkins Congregational Church, Brooklyn.

III. To Turkey.

Mr. and Mrs. David Albert Bergmark, lay Congregational Christian missionaries since 1946 on the staff of historic Plymouth Church of the Pilgrims (Congregational), Brooklyn, New York, sailed Friday, May 19, from New York City, on the Mohamed Ali El Kebir bound for Istanbul, Turkey, for service under the American Board. Mr. Bergmark will become treasurer and business agent of the entire American Board Near East Mission which includes work in Turkey, Syria, Greece and Lebanon.

Mr. Bergmark is a World War II veteran and prior to U. S. Navy service was for seven years with the New York Telephone Company in Brooklyn, New York. Since 1946 he has been the executive secretary of Plymouth Church, Dr. Wendell Fifield, minister, having complete supervision of the extensive church plant and administrative supervision of a day nursery.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Did you know that two of our girls are graduating this year from the Elon High School? These are your two girls. They have lived here several years, and done much work. One of them plans to continue her education, the other to enter the Nursing School at Lakeview Hospital in Suffolk. How about cheering their hearts by sending them cards of congratulations, or little graduating gifts? They would like it and you would get joy out of doing something for these two fine girls. They are Miss Deloris Hutchens and Miss Carol Loman.

We have a new boy in our orphanage—Bobby Garrett. His father and mother, who were very poor people, are both dead. The little fellow is almost a complete cripple, walks on two crutches. Has been "farmed about on charity," and a bit of county welfare money. The mother in the home where he was being boarded was herself soon to be a new mother and therefore he could no longer be kept there. He is able to dress himself, and to feed himself, but cannot run and play as other children. His smile is sweet and his face bright. He is fast making a place for himself with his bright speeches, and his friendly disposition. He needed us and perhaps we need him. Who knows how much he may mean to our fine healthy boys and girls. They are learning to be kind and gracious toward him, and may learn that while they themselves are needy they have so much more than he does.

This week there came a girl reared here to visit her old home. She was such an attractive mother with two darling little girls, about three and nearly five. When I drove up in the yard where they were waiting and meeting folks here on the campus, I opened the door, and the smallest of the two pretty little girls climbed right into the car and slid up into my lap. How proud of her two daughters the mother was! How thankful she is for the lovely home which she had established! It was a joy to talk with her, and to learn how much she appreciated the orphanage. She had been given a chance to make good in life by the work done for her here.

I pray that the boys and girls who are here now may do as well, and that we may make this place sacred and full of pleasant memories for them.

It is bad enough to be thrown out on the cold world in childhood with no one to love and no one by whom to be loved. We are trying to make this a place of real character building for each one here. The young people I meet here and there who were reared here seem to be proud to say, "I was reared at the Christian Orphanage." They speak it as though that means that their background is good, and that they may speak with pride of their up-bringing. And when I talk with them about what they are doing and how they are getting along. I am rightly proud of them.

Let me thank you for every dollar you send us, for ever good word of help you give us, and for the way in which you keep us in your church and Sunday school program. I am proud of the church which is proud of these children and the work we are all together doing.

JOHN G. TRUITT,

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

and the Christian statesman: "The politician is a man that goes up and down through his nation, always asking himself, how much is there in my country for me; while statesman goes up and down through his land, asking himself, how much is there in me for my country."

Unfortunately the people represented by this politician are the result, the victims of non-Christian education. Their training leaves them without moral safeguards. It leaves them with a defective philosophy of life. For instance they hold, that living in the free land of rich America, they have a right to an equal share of its wealth. What they do not understand, or care to understand, is that almost all the wealth of America is in the natural state, and must be transformed into usable wealth by the labor of mind and body, and that no free able-bodied man, who does not share in this labor, is entitled to share in the usable wealth it has created. The policy of taking without creating, of getting by killing, kills itself. The spirit of selfishness is suicidal.

On the other hand, Jesus came to give. He came that we might have life and have it abundantly. It is the business of Christian education to make life abundant. Human life is a vague term. It is hard to define. It has various shades of meaning. While human lives have much in common; they differ both as to extent and as to kind. They are not the same in quantity nor in quality. For instance, some lives are large and some are small; some lives are long while others are short; some lives are broad and others are narrow; and some lives are deep while others are shallow.

Again, if we consider the quality of lives you will find similar differences, for some lives are weak, while others are strong; some lives are rich, and others are poor; some lives are coarse, while others are refined; and some lives are bitter while others are sweet.

So it is the spirit and purpose of Christian education to make life abundant. That is to make it full, and large and well-rounded, to make it broad, and deep, and eternal; to make it strong and rich, and sweet. And this applies as distinctly to the physical life as to the spiritual: to earth as to heaven. The abundant life means a really higher standard of living which is supported by a worthy standard of life.

The spirit of Christian education is

Have You Read ?

THE DILEMMA OF THE IDEALIST. David Bryn-Jones. The Macmillan Company. New York. 1950. $3.

The avowed purpose of this book is to lead readers to the discovery of a reasonable doctrine of compromise between the ideal and the possible, a doctrine which will save us from a sense of overwhelming futility as we confront the international situation. Were these pages limited to the fulfillment of that purpose, they would be of interest only to churchmen who believe it to be the calling of the Church to lead the way in mankind's search for a workable political program, the end of which would be peace. Fortunately, however, there is an abundance of material in this book which will not fail to stimulate thinking concerning the life of the Church. For this reason it is a book to be read by all ministers or laymen who are willing to re-examine their own understanding of the nature of the Church and of Christian decision making.

When read in this manner, the book bristles with controversial suggestions. Here the thesis is presented that the Church must be understood as a human institution, partaking inevitably of the characteristics common to all institutions. There, the Church can not be expected to give to society any radical leadership, but must instead content itself with being only a short distance in advance of the society in which it lives. That which determines the nature of Church life is not the supernatural power of God at work within it, but rather, the working out of the natural dynamics of community life! Should you disagree with this interpretation you will find it challenging to match your ideas with the descriptive facts about actual Church life in America, facts which when marshalled together give a disturbing and discouraging soundness to the author's thesis. The upshot of the author's thesis is that it leads to the position that the policy of the Roman Catholic Church is "most realistic." Only the Roman Catholic Church has succeeded in incorporating into its life a philosophy of compromise, coupled with a recognition of the valuable witness and contribution made by those uncompromising spirits who are totally committed to obedience to the ethical demands of Christ.

It is interesting to find in this work on international politics the insistence that only the "penitent" can meet the problems of life today, for, only the penitent are shaken from that self-righteousness which is not only the most deadly of sins, but is also the greatest hindrance to cooperation among nations. However, the thesis that the "uncompromising spirits" succeed in nothing so well as stirring the compromisers to penitence, is certainly foreign to the experience of many. Instead, it has been found that when men within groups refuse to compromise, this has only angered the compromisers and caused them to take up their weapons of self-justification, which is the prelude to self-righteousness, rather than the prelude to penitence! This fact the author does not recognize.

Aside from the many suggestions by the author which are quite pertinent to the life of the Christian Church, and which make this book recommended reading for Christians, there is another reason for taking this book seriously: here is a rather penetrating analysis of the history of international politics in the past two generations and a firm insistence that peace will come only on the basis of decisions made by policy-makers who are thoroughly informed concerning the possibilities of each given situation. Because this is the so-called "realistic" approach to peace which is at present adhered to by the State Department and blessed by many churchmen, it is good for all citizens to become to a better understanding of this philosophy of peace-making.

DOCTORS COURAGEOUS. Edward H. Hume. Harper & Bros. New York. $3.50.

If Doctors Courageous finds its way to the browsing shelf of American public libraries, it will be read, and a lot of case-hardened men and women are going to have their hearts warmed by this book of Dr. Hume's.

This reviewer rejoices when the more-thrilling-than-fiction stories get into print and before the people. The book is composed of stories of the medical men and women of Africa, India, China and the Near East. It is a good book to review at missionary meetings and a good book to use as a basis for serious missionary study. It is also good reading.

Dr. Edward Hicks Hume is famous in the Christian world for his medical missionary work, his writing, lectures before medical bodies and just for himself.

He begins with David Livingstone and continues through the Asiatic countries ending with China in 1944. He tells little known tales of interesting events: How an American doctor used ether anesthesia in China before it was popularly used in this country, the rending of the veils in Moslem lands. There is the pain, the joy and the hope of the morrow.

"The doctor is called into the home during the crises of life—birth, sickness, disturbed family relations, death. Social customs of deep significance find their roots in these experiences. As he comes to know people during their emergencies, physical or social, the doctor becomes their counselor to an extent scarcely approached by trader or official, teacher or even pastor." Thus Dr. Hume begins to tell how medical missionaries paved the way for the change from the old to the new, Christ-like experiences.

Doctors Courageous would make an excellent gift for your physician, your minister, or program chairman.

service: whole-hearted, self-giving, self-realizing, character-forming service. And its purpose is the enlargement, the enrichment and the ennoblement of life. In a world on the brink of suicidal war, being caused by selfishness, and in our fair land being undermined by acts of treason, and the embittering selfish struggles of strikes, which threaten the destruction of those things that have made our America truly great, the need of the philosophy of the Great Teacher, of his spirit and his purpose in all education, has become imperative. Vitality important is it that we meditate upon such words as these of Dr. Santayana:

O world, thou chooseth not the better part!
It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes,
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
Columbus found a world, and had no chart,
Save one that faith deciphered in the skies;
To trust his souls invincible surmise
Was all his science and his only art.
Our knowledge is a torch of smoky pine
That lights the pathway but one step ahead
Across a void of mystery and dread.
Bid, then, the gentle light of faith to shine
By which alone the mortal heart is led Unto the thinking of the thought divine.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 1, 1950

NUMBER 22

Pastor-Elect at Elon Community Church

Nebraska-born Harold P. Bozarth will become the pastor of the Elon Community Church August 15. Mr. Bozarth is a graduate of Northwestern University and the Chicago Theological Seminary. He has served Congregational Churches in Oregon,, Illinois and Massachusetts. He comes to Elon from The United Church of Walpole, Massachusetts.

REV. BOZARTH

The United Church, which Mr. Bozarth now serves, is affiliated with the Congregational Christian Conference of Massachusetts, having taken its present name in 1927 when three local churches merged: Congregational, Methodist and Unitarian, the latter two being small. In 1940 a new church and parish house were completed and dedicated, and in 1948, the new parsonage which stands on the site of the old Methodist Church. Walpole is a Boston suburb town of 8,000.

During his seventeen years in the Massachusetts Conference, Mr. Bozarth has served as chairman of The Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, and also headed the Commission of Moral and Social Welfare for the Conference. He served one term as Chaplain of the House of Representatives of The General Assembly. Revell published his first book, "The Surprising Christ," in 1942, and the Christian Education Press published his second, "A World to Change," in 1949. *

Mr. and Mrs. Bozarth have three children: Donald F., who graduates from Amherst College, June 1950; James O., who will enter Elon in the fall; and Grace Ann, now a junior at Northfield School for Girls, who will complete her high school work in Elon High School.

News Flashes

The editorial of twenty years ago, "A Miracle of the Living Christ," provides food for thought in a time like ours.

Mr. Cecil Holmes, who had served both as deacon and Sunday school superintendent at Popes Chapel, was buried Sunday afternoon, May 21. The funeral was conducted by Rev. E. M. Carter, pastor.

June is the final month of Mission Period. Has your church sent its mission apportionment to the Convention Office? Please do so. The Board plans to start a new church this summer. Funds are needed.

Remember the Board of Christian Education offering on Children's Day. The Board is serving our churches, Sunday schools and youth. Funds are badly needed to finance this important work.

Recent evangelistic services at Wood's Chapel in the Valley Conference resulted in more than twenty new members. Rev. Clyde O. Koon is the pastor.

The Virginia Valley Sunday School Convention will meet at Antioch Church, Thursday, June 8. Mr. H. E. Liskey of the New Hope Church is President of the Convention.

Superintendent Scott assisted Rev. H. G. Councill, Jr., in special services at Rosemont during the past week. May was designated at Rosemont as "Loyalty Month."

The General Council meets at Cleveland, Ohio, June 22-26. Any person planning or desiring to attend the Council should notify Superintendent Scott at once. It is possible that there will be some vacancies in the delegates from the Convention.

Our Winchester Church through a special emphasis for the past few years has raised $600 for the support of the Jacksons and the work in Shao-wu. They have gone over the top again this year. Congratulations to Pastor Whitten and his Winchester people.

The Eastern Virginia Junior High Summer Camp will be held June 18-23 at the Y.M.C.A. Camp, Chesapeake Beach. Pastors and Sunday school superintendents have application blanks. It is hoped that our churches will support this camp. Registrations should be sent to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, N. C., at once.

Rev. Thurmond F. Bowers will assist Rev. Mark W. Andes in a series of revival services at Lebanon Congregational Christian Church, Se-mora, North Carolina, June 4-9. Services will begin each evening at eight o'clock.

An Ecclesiastical Council was held at the Burlington Church on Friday, May 26, for purpose of installing Rev. Henry E. Robinson as pastor of that church. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean Emeritus of Hartford Seminary, delivered the sermon. Others participating in the service were: Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds, Moderator of the Council; Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Scribe; Rev. Guy H. Veazey, Rev. William P. Smith, Dr. John G. Truitt, Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. Harvey A. Fesperman and Superintendent Scott.

OPEN HOUSE AT BURLINGTON CHURCH PARSONAGE.

About 200 members and friends of the Congregation of the First Christian Church of Burlington were guests of the pastor and his family, Rev. and Mrs. Henry E. Robinson, Lois, Jane, Paul and Ruth. A beautiful afternoon on May 21 added greatly to the happy occasion. Many children accompanied their parents lending a spirit of informality and fellowship.

The Young Adult Class of the Sunday School sponsored the event and supplied committees for invitations, music, refreshments, flowers, reception and transportation.

Rev. and Mrs. Robinson moved to Burlington last January from Putnam, Connecticut.

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

J. H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR. GRADUATES FROM HARTFORD SEMINARY.

James Horn Lightbourne, Jr., was granted the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from the Hartford Theological Seminary of the Hartford Seminary Foundation at the Exercises of Graduation held Wednesday forenoon, May 17, at Hartford, Connecticut.

Mr. Lightbourne was honored with two of the five cash prizes for the encouragement of scholarly work awarded to graduates in connection with the Commencement.

He received the Edward Everett Nourse Prize of $50.00 which is awarded "to that senior who shall exhibit high proficiency during his three-year course in the New Testament." He received also the Bennett Tyler Prize of $50.00 designated for "that senior who shall exhibit high proficiency in Systematic Theology."

He expects to begin his professional career as minister of the Holland Christian (Congregational Christian) Church, Holland, Virginia, on June 1, 1950.

Mr. Lightbourne is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James H. Lightbourne of Providence, R. I., and formerly of Burlington, N. C.

COUNCIL LEADERS GIVE LYMAN BEECHER TALKS.

Among the six leaders in religion and education who delivered the Lyman Beecher lectures at the fortieth annual convocation of the Yale Divinity School this year were two who are prominent in the Federal Council of Churches. They were Mr. Charles P. Taft, former president of the Council, and Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, President of Ohio Wesleyan University and chairman of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life.

Miss Helen Kenyon, moderator of the General Council, Congregational Christian Churches, gave one of the lectures. It was the first given by a woman and was well received.

Mr. Taft also was one of the speakers on the radio program "America's Town Meeting" on March 14, on the theme, "How Can Organized Religion Advance American Democracy?" Other speakers were Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, and Dr. Geo. N. Shuster, president of Hunter College, New York.

"OUTSTANDING ELON ALUMNUS OF 1950."

Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, president of Elon College, who graduated from the institution with the Class of 1910 has been named as Elon's "Outstanding Alumnus of 1950." The choice was announced at the annual Alumni Banquet, and an honor scroll was presented to him in the presence of the old grads back for Alumni Day.

The choice was made by an alumni committee, headed by Alumni Secretary James F. Darden, and the award was presented by Mrs. John G. Truitt, a member of the Class of 1926. In presenting the scroll, she cited Dr. Smith's long record of religious and educational leadership.

Dr. Smith graduated at Elon in 1910 and pursued graduate work at

DR. L. E. SMITH

Princeton University, where he was awarded the M. A. degree. He has since been awarded the degree of Doctor of Divinity by Elon College and the honorary Doctor of Laws by Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio.

He was called in 1931 from the pastorate of the Christian Temple at Norfolk, Va., to assume the presidency of Elon. He has continued to serve as Elon's president for nineteen years and has placed the college upon a sound financial basis, with six times the student body and twice the faculty it had when he assumed the presidency.

During the past year, for which he was chosen the college's "Outstanding Alumnus," he has continued to lead the college forward, with the opening of a magnificent new quarter million dollar gymnasium as a significant milestone in the institution's progress. Members of his own graduating class of 1910, here for their fortieth reunion, saw him receive the award.

A MIRACLE OF THE LIVING CHRIST.

A MEMORIAL DAY THOUGHT.

Again comes the anniversary upon which we remember with gratitude and wistfulness the dead who laid down their lives to preserve the life of the nation.

The first memorial service was one of those unconscious, beautiful things which spring out of the heart like a pure and lovely wild flower.

At Columbus, Mississippi, Confederate women went out to the little cemetery to decorate the graves of their dead. Near by were graves of unknown Federal soldiers—who would remember them? The Southern women gave way to their hearts and decorated with the same kinds of flowers and in the same profusion the graves of their late enemies, who had died in battle and slept as unknown soldiers far from home.

The idea was so touching, of such high sentiment, of such wonderful chivalry, of such tender grace, that it quickly spread until today it is universal. The spirit awakened by it in the North was sung by Finch in "The Blue and the Gray," which will forever remain the supreme song of Memorial Day. The Great Reunion had commenced.

In it there is no rancor, no bitterness, no sectionalism, but the high resolve that nothing like this shall ever again occur in our land.

A most wonderful thing has come to pass. All but a few hearts not only concede courage to the mutual foes who faced each other, but today they concede patriotism. We know of no wrangling recriminations, and we the sons of the Blue and the Gray who struggled with each other in the sanguinary sixties clasp hands in the love of the whole country, in fervent belief and rejoicing in the full patriotism of those who live on the opposite sides of the imaginary line between North and South.

Certainly "All's quiet along the Potomac"—quiet excepting for the hum of industry, the laughter and gladness of children, the songs of churches, and the fellowship of a united people who look up in hope.

The other day I was in a national cemetery in one of the Southern States. This quiet "City of the Dead" looked out on miles and miles of river. Great magnolia trees filled the air with fragrance. Roses were blooming everywhere. Thrushes and mocking birds were singing in the trees. I noticed an old cannon that had been

GRADUATION

Many high school and college graduates face a new world. High school graduates must make important decisions: whether to go to work, get married or go to college. Of course, some will do all three! The choice of a college is a major decision. Many motives may enter into this decision. There is little to fear if God is invited to assist in the decision.

In some homes college training is held as an ideal for children from infancy. Usually, some money has been saved to assist in that realization. Children respond to the tug of such a tradition in the family.

College graduates go out now to contend with the erosive and corrosive forces of civilization. This great confraternity of graduates should make a perceptible difference in the social pattern of our generation. New knowledge, new skills, new ideals are liberated in our society. Democracy, education and religion give an incomparable setting for creative living. Graduates, we are confident, will not ask for easy tasks, but simply for strength commensurate for every task.

THE SCHEDULE OF JESUS

A great amount of theology can be put into a sentence. We realize that on reading John 3:16. One is fortunate who has arrived at a theological common denominator, or a compass-like statement of faith which holds steady in all times of turmoil. "This word signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain." Those who launch out into life without a well-seasoned theology are like a boat without a rudder or a ship without an anchor.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling has a fine sentence which emphasizes a great truth: "The schedule of Jesus is the pattern of God." That sentence puts theology within reach of everyone; it tells a lot about God.

What is your schedule, the schedule of your day, your life? The way to let God into your life is to adopt the schedule of Jesus. Include the things he included: prayer, teaching, forgiveness, compassion, sacrifice. Omit the things he omitted: envy, revenge, worry, malice, bitterness.

"The schedule of Jesus is the pattern of God." Yes, God works orderly. There is something majestically consistent about the pattern of God. He is not fickle. He is orderly and, strange as it may seem, predictable. He is the kind of God with whom we can cooperate. We know what his "big idea" is. It is the Kingdom, the Kingdom of God.

A portable theology is the only theology of real value in Christian living. Few can handle it in whole-sale measure. The majority of us must take it in retail or broken down doses. If necessary, get your theology into a sentence, then put it to work. Remember, as you make your plans from day to day, "The schedule of Jesus is the pattern of God."

O RETIREMENT, WHERE IS THY STING?

Some folk think of retirement in terms of sitting in the sunshine and taking life easy. Not so Drs. Frank and Amey D. Watson of Haverford, Pennsylvania, 67 and 65 years of age, respectively. This pair of distinguished educators are going out to Greece for a three-year term as teachers and social workers under the Congregational Christian Service Committee and the American Board. They remind one of Livingstone who was willing to be put on the shelf, provided Africa was the shelf. Dr. Watson is Professor Emeritus of Sociology and Social Work at Haverford College. He and Mrs. Watson, also an experienced social worker and teacher of economics and social service, say: "Now that we have reached the compulsory retirement age at Haverford we desire new opportunities for service since we enjoy good health and are keenly interested in world affairs. We would like to be of service in foreign fields where there is so much need of educated personnel to help those who have suffered so severely in the great world conflict. We can think of no place where we would be happier in making a contribution than in Greece."

As a specialist in labor economics, Dr. Watson served in the Department of Labor and Industry of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania from 1937-38. He was for two years part-time Panel Chairman of the Regional War Labor Board and was Visiting Lecturer on The Church and Society at Crozier Theological Seminary last year.

Dr. Watson is editor of "Social Work With Families," "The Charity Organization Movement in the United States," and joint author of "Economics." He has contributed to "Dictionary of Sociology," and "Family, Marriage and Parenthood."

Dr. Amey E. Watson was born in Providence, R. I., and educated at Pembroke College, Brown University, the University of Pennsylvania, and Bryn Mawr (Ph. D.).

Dr. Amey E. Watson has had a most varied career in the field of teaching and social work including posts with the State of Pennsylvania. She has taught economics at the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, and been a member of the faculty of the Pennsylvania School of Social Work. From 1942 to 1949 she was Coordinator of Courses for Workers with the Adult Blind, Overbrook School for the Blind in cooperation with the School of Education of the University of Pennsylvania and other social and educational agencies.

Mrs. Watson has written widely on social subjects. She is the former President of the Women's Phi Beta Kappa Association of Philadelphia, and Honorary President of the Alumni Association of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research at Bryn Mawr College.

Dr. and Mrs. Watson will be associated in Greece with Pierce College for Girls in Athens, founded in 1923 under the American Board of Foreign Missions, providing a Christian liberal high school and college education for Greek and Armenian girls. Pierce College is considered the best school of its kind in Greece with a high school curriculum prescribed by the government and college level courses, including literature, social work and homemaking as well as the usual college subjects.

A Year of Liberation in Tunghsien, North China

DEAR FRIENDS:

A whole year has elapsed since the liberation, as we call it here, of this northern section of China by the Chinese Communists. The Chinese people, and a few privileged foreigners, have had ringside seats at this amazing pageant that is surely unfolding before the eyes of the world. A year ago, to one living near the capital of the new Chinese People's Republic, means of communication were limited, indeed. Letters could not be sent directly to foreign countries, and foreign letters dribbled in slowly to us. Travel permits were almost impossible to obtain. A year ago, colleagues with whom we worked side by side, were reluctant to be seen visiting us in our homes, or greeting us on the street. Many local Christians were just a bit afraid of attending public worship services, not knowing what the new government's policy toward Christian institutions, and the Christian Church, might be. Members of the local government organs made frequent visits to our homes, to check on our activities, our living, and to sense what our thoughts toward the new regime were. In the community, a cautious, alert attitude on the part of many of its citizens was evident. Prices of most commodities remained at a somewhat more stable level than had been the case before our liberation. Land reform, conducted in the earlier liberated areas, had not been started.

Mails come and go with somewhat predictable regularity. Airmail on an international scale has been resumed, at a fancier rate than before—around fifty cents per letter, in U. S. currency. Travel for the foreigner is still on a very limited basis. Living so near Peking, we four Americans are able now to apply for and receive travel permits in one day, for any number of days—to Peking only! As you may recall, just one year ago, a Presbyterian missionary assigned to the Rural Service Union here and I went to Peking for several days, presuming that the necessary permits were in order. The Peking authorities felt otherwise, and we were two months in negotiating for our return to Tunghsien—13 miles away! In contrast, last week I applied for a travel permit to Peking. Courtesy, comparative efficiency and friendliness were encountered all along the line, from the local headquarters here to the district registration bureau in Peking. The visit was made with ease, on the very anniversary of that first trip, that was fraught with misunderstanding, frustration, and fear.

Signs of returning friendliness, confidence, and trust, are once more in evidence as I go about the day's work at the Lu Ho Hospital. Patients who a year ago refrained from speaking to the foreign nurse, now visit and ask questions concerning my work and their illnesses. The staff members are freer in their conversations! they feel more and more that their special vocations are important, no matter what the circumstance.

Christian activities are progressing at a more normal pace. Sunday worship services are well attended, with a proportionately larger number of adults. Church school for the children has had to struggle through opposition and competition by the secular schools and the propaganda disseminated there immediately after our liberation. The responsibility for the church school, as well as the church buildings and grounds, has in large part fallen upon the shoulders of a very capable, young Chinese evangelist. A woman, small of stature, she has not been swayed or coerced by the newer forces. She remains a tower of spiritual strength and calmness, which even the local officials cannot undermine. She repeats over and over the fact that she is a Christian evangelist, is not ashamed of her calling, and intends to be a witness to her faith, come what may! Moreover, she puts her words into action on many occasions throughout each day.

On the compound, the religious activities of our two Christian schools are very ably directed by our senior missionary, Alice M. Huggins. In the schools now, much emphasis is being placed on the role of youth in new China—what the party ideologies are, what the student should be thinking, what he should be doing with his leisure time (of which there is very little; it is being displaced by sundry meetings, thought-change discussions, and other similar time-consuming devices), and how he must fit into the present scheme of things. With all this emphasis away from a Christian student's first concern, his faith, Alice Huggins has managed to sustain interest in Christian fellowship groups, until at present her house is a bedlam of activity any day in the week, and any hour during the day! Girls' Bible classes, discussion groups, choir rehearsals, are attended in ever-increasing numbers, and with marked enthusiasm. Several of the students are proving to be real leaders, with convictions that are unshakable. Just how long this type of student activity can last is not known. However, Miss Huggins is certainly making the best of her opportunity—and the students, theirs!

If I seem to present a picture of extreme optimism, it is chiefly because I have recently emerged from one of pessimism! But life, in the main, is far from rosy. Taxes, bonds, high prices, are making the rich poor, and the poor poorer. Industry, under state control, is eulogized; the farmer is forgotten, at least as an individual. Stress is laid on the "state" rather than on the "home." How poor the poor are may be seen from the example of a patient we admitted to the hospital not long ago. Because of a rather rapidly-growing cancer of the uterus, this woman was delivered of a baby boy by Caesarian Section. With spinal anaesthesia, the mother was aware of the activities in the operating room. For over half an hour, the Chinese nurse and I took turns in resuscitating the baby who did not seem to breathe. When the danger-point had passed, the mother addressed her remarks to the doctor thus: "I'll give you this baby. I cannot afford to rear him." And it was true. She did not know where her husband was, at the moment. An older daughter was expecting the birth of her own child. Two smaller children in rags had visited their mother earlier. And this woman had had a time-limit put upon her own life, in the confirmation of the diagnosis of cancer! A more cheerful note may be added here, that a responsible family has already been found, who does want the boy baby, very much!

Southern Convention Office

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE.

Adopted at the 39th Biennial Session Of the Southern Convention.

Because of the unusual character of the 39th Biennial Session of the Southern Convention, be it therefore resolved:

1. That we extend to the pastor and his people of Oakland Christian Church our hearty thanks for their gracious entertainment, their bountiful provision for our comforts, and their genuine hospitality.

2. That we express our appreciation for the most helpful contribution made to our Convention sessions by the special music rendered by the Elon College Singers and the Chuckatuck Glee Club; and to Drs. Truman B. Douglass and Ross W. Sanderson, New York, for their inspiring addresses.

3. That we recommend to our pastors and churches that greater emphasis be placed upon Evangelism; that Visitation Evangelism, special efforts among our young people and in the Sunday schools, as well as mass evangelism be emphasized.

Be it further resolved:

1. That we recognize the most excellent spirit which has presided over all our sessions, and that such unity of purpose has resulted.

2. That we express our appreciation to Professor L. L. Vaughan for his generous offer to help meet the deficit of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

3. That each Conference endeavor to have one or more of its ministers in attendance at Rural Church Schools and Institutes in their respective areas.

Be it further resolved that the Convention acknowledge with thanks the invaluable service of the Convention Office, especially in the preparation of the Blue Book used by this session.

Be it further resolved that the Convention adopt the recommendations of Superintendent Scott for launching "The Mid-Century Advance" as follows:

"That the Convention accept the challenge of the theme of this session, 'A New Togetherness for a Needed Advance,' and launch 'The Mid-Century Advance' in every area of our church life; this Advance to be a part of 'Our Christian World Mission' of the denomination; that the Convention appoint a Commission to formulate a plan of action for this needed advance, and that this Commission be composed of representatives from the Mission Board, Board of Christian Education, Board of Trustees of Elon College, Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage, the Finance, Evangelism and Stewardship Committees.

"That we use the services of Dr. Ross W. Sanderson, Director of the Department of Research of our national Board of Home Missions, placed at our disposal for the purpose of surveying our present situation, helping us to discover our strength and weakness, and determine lines of action which we may follow for strengthening the life and witness of our churches in the Convention in this Advance."

SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES FOR PASTORS.

The Deering Pastors School will be held at Deering, New Hampshire, July 5-August 3. This School is designed for "refresher school" for pastors. Dr. Truman B. Douglass is dean. It is financed by our Board of Home Missions. The cost is very small to the individual pastor. He pays $15 towards his transportation, and all other costs are borne by our Board. This is an opportunity for a pastor who wishes to have fellowship in another section of the country, to do some real study under consecrated, competent instructors. Any pastor interested should notify Superintendent Scott at once.

—o—

Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, will offer three scholarships of $45 each to men or women qualified for graduate work in the summer of 1950—June 19-July 21. Our national Board of Home Missions will grant an additional $45 to persons qualifying for the above grant. Those applying should be a rural pastor. Interested persons should write Superintendent Scott or Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

Summer School for Religious Radio, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, August 6-31. The Division of Church Extension and Evangelism of our Board of Home Missions, New York, will make four grants of $150 each to four pastors who will attend this School for Religious Radio. Any interested should contact Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

—o—

Emory University "Town and Country School," Atlanta, Georgia, July 3-19. Inquiries should be sent to Rev. E. Brewer, Candler School of Theology, Emory University, Georgia.

—o—

Massanetta Springs Bible Conference and School for Pastors August 21-September 3. Reservations should be made at once.

—o—

Duke Pastors School as announced previously.

OPPORTUNITY FOR PASTORS.

The Christian Convocation at Duke University, June 6-9, was commended to our pastors by the Southern Convention. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman will be the special lecturer. Dr. James T. Cleland will lecture on "The Sermon in the Study." Dr. Arthur Hewitt will offer a course on "The Rural Church," and Dr. A. J. Walton on "Parish Evangelism." Other interesting features are in the offing. The Convocation is open to ministers of all denominations and the registration fee is only $2.00.

DR. SEARLE APPOINTED EDITOR OF PROTESTANT WORLD.

Dr. Robert W. Searle has been appointed editor of The Protestant World, interdenominational news weekly which is scheduled to begin publication before the end of the year.

Dr. Searle is executive secretary of the human relations commission of the Protestant Council of the City of New York. He plans to give up this position immediately in order to devote all of his time to The Protestant World.

The April issue of the Bulletin announced the appointment of James E. Craig, formerly chief editorial writer of the New York Sun, as managing editor of the proposed paper.

Dr. Searle explained that the new weekly would feature national and international news and would also carry sections on the family, town and country churches, books and fashions.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

THE ELON ALUMNI.

In college circles you frequently hear the expression, "A college is no stronger than its alumni." In many instances this would be true. In others, however, it would not. At Elon College students are instructed and guided. We endeavor to inspire the students to go on to other schools that offer additional advantages in graduate work. A large percentage of Elon graduates do continue their work in graduate schools in some recognized university. Advanced studies prepare them for greater achievements than they otherwise could have realized. They go farther in business and professions because of educational advantages afforded in post graduate courses. The fact remains, however, that the foundation for worthwhile achievements in life was laid at Elon College. The super structure made possible by advanced opportunities would not have been possible had it not been for the foundation previously laid.

Elon College, however, does depend quite largely upon its alumni. Fortunately, this dependence has not been wrongly placed. Out of approximately 10,000 students who have matriculated at Elon College since its founding in 1889 we have the correct addresses of nearly 4,000. Six hundred and fifty-four Elon alumni have paid alumni dues so far this year. The dues paid total $3,559.00. Jimmy Darden, our Alumni Secretary, has been working hard to induce at least 1,000 Elon alumni to pay their alumni dues. This is a very modest goal and certainly it should be reached. If the reader has not paid his alumni dues for 1949-50, it is still not too late. It would gladden Jimmy's heart. In addition to alumni dues, 344 Elon College alumni have contributed to the gymnasium fund. The gymnasium is an undertaking. The total amount contributed by less than 10 per cent of our current list of alumni in cash and pledges is $75,000. This is an excellent showing, and the college is proud of it, as I am sure all are who are interested in Elon College.

Fortunately, Elon College is not entirely dependent upon its alumni for support but it has back of it and with it in all its struggles the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches which boasts of nearly 35,000 communicants. This body founded the college and has been faithful and loyal in its support. With these two strong forces back of Elon College, together with its friends, the future should be much brighter and the college takes great courage in this fact.

When this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN appears the 60th annual commencement will be history. A splendid program has been prepared and we hope for it a successful rendition.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

It is encouraging to note that contributions on apportionments paid by the Sunday schools and churches of the Convention amount to more this year than at any previous year at even date. Our friends are doubtless conscious of the needs of the college and are anxious to lend a helping hand in its present day struggles. When a church or Sunday school pays the amount due on its apportionment to date or in advance they are lending the college a very great service.

GRADUATION EXERCISES AT ELON.

By LUTHER N. BYRD.
(By Air Mail to THE SUN.)

Elon College brought its sixtieth annual commencement to a successful close on Monday morning when the Honorable Ralph Bradford, of Washington, D. C., executive vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, delivered the baccalaureate address to the 153 graduating seniors, the largest class in the history of the college.

Mr. Bradford, a leader of the world's largest business organization and recognized as an outstanding authority on the past history, the present needs and the future prospects of American business, drew on both the past and present when he chose "Heritage" as the subject of his address, and he issued a challenge to the seniors in closing as to what they and their fellow Americans will do with their common heritage of freedom.

Delivered in rhyme, imaginative, figurative and symbolic in its content, his address was epic in its scope, for he traced the mental, spiritual, political, physical and emotional heritage which has come to modern man as a result of many centuries of development.

In purely imaginative form, Mr. Bradford went back to pre-historic times to trace the origins of fire, the wheel, trade, the division of labor, various types of transportation and the dawn of man's religious concepts. He then moved forward in point of time to the historic period to pick up great episodes and characters that illustrated the development of various liberal institutions, which have meant so much to mankind.

Elaborating upon the "Heritage" of modern America, he moved rapidly from historic beginnings down the years to portray America's present situation, when the essence of the nation's freedom is under attack from without and within, and it was there that he challenged the Elon graduates to consider what they will do with their heritage.

Mr. Bradford received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, and Elon bestowed the same degree upon Prof. M. E. Yount, superintendent of the Alamance County Schools. Doctor of Divinity degrees were granted to Rev. George W. Lawrence, of Ventnor, N. J.; Arthur Stanley Wheelock, of White Plains, N. Y.; Rev. Robert Lee House, of Southern Pines, N. C., editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN; and Prof. Hiram Earl Myers, of the Duke University Divinity School.

Commencement Opened Saturday.

The Elon commencement got underway on Saturday, May 27, opening with the Class Day exercises at 10:00 o'clock, conducted by members of the senior class. The main theme of the Saturday program, however, centered about the Elon College alumni, many of whom returned to the campus for the annual Alumni Day meetings. The business session for the alumni was held at 3:00 o'clock, followed at 6:00 o'clock by a reception given by President and Mrs. Leon E. Smith in the Student Union, at which the graduating seniors were honor guests.

The Alumni Banquet, held in the college dining hall at 7:00 o'clock, climaxed that day's program and was

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

PSYCHIATRY AND MISSIONS.

A long-time interest in making psychiatry a part of medical missionary work is now being put into action, it was indicated at the 20th Annual Conference on Medical Missions, held during May in New York.

Conference delegates cited several examples. At Vellore Christian Medical College in South India, Dr. Florence Nichols is setting up a neuropsychiatric unit in the college hospital. In China, psychiatrists are teaching at two Christian universities—Dr. Fannie Halpern at the medical school of St. John's University in Shanghai, and Dr. C. Y. Liu at West China Union University in Chengtu.

Newest venture, scheduled to begin in Northern India next fall, is a program of psychiatric counselling at the Ashrams in Lucknow and Sat Tal, sponsored by Dr. E. Stanley Jones, noted missionary evangelist. Present at the conference was Dr. Dagmar Norell, Swedish-trained psychiatrist here for post-graduate work, who will initiate the project for Dr. Jones. Lucknow, she said, will probably be restricted to milder emotional disorders, but it is hoped that Sat Tal will eventually develop a sanitarium for treatment of serious mental illness.

One reason for the development of psychiatric mission work was given by Dr. Douglas Forman, secretary of the Christian Medical Council for Overseas Work, interdenominational agency sponsoring the conference.

Dr. Forman pointed out that psychiatry was one phase of the trend toward specialization in medicine, reflected in an increasing number of specialists among candidates for medical missionary work. This specialization, he added, in turn is leading to greater departmentalization of mission hospitals, so medical specialists can function more efficiently.

Another reason was given by Dr. Earl A. Loomis, Jr., psychiatrist on the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, who addressed the conference on "Fundamental Relationships Between Religion and Medicine." Dr. Loomis has had theological training.

The development of psychomatic medicine, with its emphasis on man's emotional as well as his physical ills, Dr. Loomis said, has given "a new impetus for understanding men's highest loyalties and the role of faith in health and disease."

Many physicians, he said, even without realizing the Christian origin of the idea, understand that "man does not live by bread alone and that the soul as well as the body requires attention."

The medical missionary, he added, is the product of two heritages: the return in medical thought to an understanding of man as a whole, and the Christian heritage of Christ's ministry of health and salvation through love and its extension in the carrying of this gospel to all corners of the earth.

The early church view of psychiatry as a menace to faith and morals, he said, is slowly being reconciled as psychiatrists seek to understand the structure of religious doctrine and its practical application to human needs, and as churchmen restudy Christian dogma and practice in the light of psychodynamics and, in pastoral work, apply new techniques in interpersonal relations.

Study, conferences and internships in medicine and psychiatry, Dr. Loomis noted, have given many ministers an understanding of how a parishoner feels after a major surgical operation or a severe illness, or in time of death whether the bereaved is suffering normal reactions of grief or a psychotic depression.

In the mission field, he pointed out, psychiatry helps the missionary doctor to understand the afflictions of guilt, fear and hate "which disturb and distort the minds and emotions of all of us" and which can be effectively solved by faith, hope and love in both a psychiatric and a Christian sense.

Dr. Loomis emphasized, however, that these must be expressed in action. He suggested that psychiatry could also help the medical missionary solve for himself, his colleagues and patients the "besetting sins of religious men and women"—such as "asceticism, intolerance and rabid moralism."

"Often we must remind ourselves," he said, "that 'God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved.'"

SOLVING CHINA'S CRISIS DEPENDS ON CHRISTIANITY.

"Chinese Christians see very clearly that the future of China depends not on the communist method of solving their nation's problems by force and power, but on the leavening process of the Christian response to the challenge," the Rev. Tracey K. Jones, Jr., missionary of the Methodist Church, declared at the eighteenth annual dinner of the United Board for Christian Colleges in China held in New York May 9.

"The crisis in China has come about because of an almost pathetic desire on the part of Chinese people for something to free them from a past culture that has held them down," Mr. Jones said. "Both Christians and Communists are aware of the overwhelming Chinese desire to break out of this system," he continued, "but they disagree on how to bring about the change." The Christian approach according to the speaker, is a transformation process depending on Christ-like love and trust working from within.

"It will take tremendous faith on the part of Christians in China, and in this country as well," he concluded, "to solve the problems of the Chinese people in bringing about this transformation."

More than 250 alumni, former faculty members, and friends of the twelve mission-supported Christian colleges in China, whose American headquarters are at 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City, attended the dinner held at Christ Church Methodist.

CHRISTIANITY TERMED "A LIBERATING POWER" FOR WOMEN IN AFRICA AND THE ORIENT.

Discovery of the "joint mission" of men and women in the Church has been stressed in a statement issued by the World Council's Commission on the Life and Work of Women in the Church following its meeting, March 6-10, near Geneva, Switzerland.

The statement stressed that the impact of "Western civilization" was bringing new opportunities to the women of Asia and Africa and that Christianity was "lifting them up to a new freedom in Christ."

The Commission, which includes three American church women, prepared the statement as a survey of the purposes of a world-wide study now in progress on women's work in the Church. Results of the survey will be compiled by Dr. Kathleen Bliss, well-

SUFFOLK HAS WOMAN'S BANQUET.

The fourth Annual Woman's Banquet sponsored by the Woman's Society of the Suffolk Church was held in the Fellowship Hall on May 12, with Dr. H. S. Harcastle as guest speaker and Rev. Duane N. Vore offering the invocation.

Mrs. M. F. Hall, President of the Society, presided and welcomed the guests. She presented those at the speakers' table, who were Mrs. George Wells, Treasurer of the Society; Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Harcastle; Mrs. J. C. Webb, Vice-President of the Society; the Rev. and Mrs. Duane N. Vore and their little daughter, Sherrill; Mrs. George Blackman, mother of Mrs. Vore; Mrs. Hubert Young, toastmistress; and David Brown Harrell, choir director and organist.

Mrs. Hubert Young, toastmistress introduced the following, who gave toasts: Toast to Grandmothers by Miss Nancy Speight; Response by Mrs. H. P. Murphy; Toast to Mothers by Faye Gordon; Toast to Daughters by Mrs. N. G. Newman, Jr. Mrs. Young read a humorous poem entitled "When Mother Stays in Bed," and she paid tribute to all mothers-in-law.

Rev. Duane Vore, accompanied by David Brown Harrell at the piano, sang "Hills of Home," "Mumsy of Mine" and "Rotunda Profunda." He led the group in singing "Dixie" and "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

Dr. Harcastle spoke on "Family Life" and declared that "a good family life is a foretaste of Heaven." He stated that "We are a part of all we have seen and met. God caused the family circles so that we might receive his richest blessings. He stated that home life should be preserved; that there are too many outside recreations. He concluded by saying that "families who pray together stay together."

Mrs. Tom Fulton was presented a corsage for being the oldest mother and she had passed her eighty-first birthday.

Mrs. D. H. Howell and Mrs. J. W. Underwood welcomed at the door the 250 mothers and daughters. Mrs. J. C. Philtower had charge of preparing the dinner, which was very delicious.

The meal was served by the men of the church, who donned white jackets and really showed their skill as waiters.

The tables and Fellowship Hall were attractive with arrangements of roses, pansies, snowballs, ragged robins, mock orange and lighted candles in crystal holders.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

JUNE 13, 14, 15.

Make Reservation by filling out card sent to your president and returning to Mrs. John G. Truitt, Elon College, N. C.

Cost—Entire cost of school will be $7.50 ($2.00 registration fee; $5.50 room and board, which includes a banquet and a private dining room with waitress service for other meals. Banquet is informal.

What to Bring—Linen and blanket, pillow if desired, towels, toilet articles, Bible, notebook, pencil.

Literature—The Packet and other helpful literature will be on display and for sale. Come prepared to buy all materials needed by your women for next year's study.

The School of Missions Committee are as follows: Mrs. John G. Truitt, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman and Mrs. Garland E. Spratley. Registrar, Miss Melva Foster, Greensboro, N. C.; Organist, Mrs. L. E. Smith, Elon College, N. C.; Hostess, Mrs. J. L. Pierce, Elon College, N. C.

Registration begins at 1:00 p. m. Tuesday, June 13, followed by an afternoon session and a visit to the Orphanage. Tuesday evening Rev. Arthur Detwiler will lead group songs, followed by a movie, Second Chance. A social hour follows this.

On Wednesday morning, Dr. Fred D. Wentzel will present the home mission study for next year, followed by Miss Margaret Blemker, who will give the foreign mission study on the Near East. The study of Hebrews, Bible study for next year, will be given by Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson. Fun and fellowship at the lunch tables will be led by Mr. Detwiler. At 2:30 Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman and Mrs. Tucker Humphries will lead a demonstration of how to plan and present programs for local societies. A visit through the college will begin at 4:30 and at 6:30 President and Mrs. L. E. Smith will be at home to the Women of the Convention.

Perhaps the climax of the school will come on Wednesday evening when Pattie Lee Coghill will direct a World Fellowship Banquet.

On Thursday morning, Dr. Wentzel, Miss Blemker and Dr. Thompson will again present their studies, followed by reports and impressions. A communion service follows and then return home, after lunch.

This sounds like an interesting program. It is hoped that at least one person from every church in the Convention can attend, and certainly the Program Chairman should see that demonstration on Wednesday afternoon.

known British church leader, and published in book form in 1951. Full text of the statement follows:

We hope within a year to publish the results of the survey of women's work in the form of a book. No such book, drawing together world-wide examples of the work of women and setting out the thought of many churches and groups on the life of women in the Church, has ever been written. It is our hope that even those churches which have given most consideration to this subject will find fresh insights and wider horizons.

We have within the membership of this Commission a meeting place of East and West, of ancient churches and of comparatively young ones. It is our desire to serve all. We know that while among some nations women have progressively entered into a life of freedom and opportunity, in other nations they are only just beginning to rise from a position of dependence and even subjection.

At this moment, much of what is often called "Western civilization" is sweeping over the lands of the East and Africa, breaking down old communities and offering a freedom which for women in particular brings with new opportunities new insecurities and new temptations. But we rejoice that to countless women Christianity has come as a liberating power, lifting them up to a new freedom in Christ in which they become truly persons.

The existence of our Commission will, we hope, help Christian women

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

If your mother has a copy of the June issue of Good Housekeeping magazine, ask her to find for you the article on butterflies. It is toward the front of the magazine and has a few butterflies pictured. It is very interesting reading and if you can't read it, ask her to read it for you.

Do you ever chase them? Occasionally I see a little boy with a butterfly net. Once I had a collection of monarchs caught by hand when I was around five years old, but they finally became dust. Properly caught, pressed and framed, they will keep for ten or fifteen years.

In case you haven't chased any butterflies—it is a very good summertime hobby. If you don't want to press them, your collection could be kept in boxes with a long pin running through the specimen to hold it in place.

* * *

School will soon be over. Colleges and high schools are having commencement and grammar schools are having farewell picnics. I do hope that you will be looking forward to school in the fall and that you will learn all there is to be known about butterflies alone, not to mention the sciences, arts, music, mechanical skills and literary efforts. How shall you learn? By reading, playing with others, going to Bible School, taking vacation trips (good time to drink in history and geography) and by working at your hobby.

Pleasant vacation time!

MUST THEY BE COAXED?

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Won't you please play for us, Jean?" The request was made by my niece, Alice, one evening when I was visiting in my brother's home and a group of friends had come in to welcome me.

Knowing that Jean is an accomplished musician, I looked up expectantly. What was my surprise to hear her murmur, "Oh no. I don't play very well. Please ask someone else."

It was not until a chorus of voices had urged her—"Do play for us, Jean!" "You know we love to hear you!" "We want you to play, Jean!"

—that the young musician could be persuaded to approach the piano.

Once seated, she struck a few hesitant chords, and then the full tones of a great largo filled the room, followed by a bright sonata and a playful modern fantasy.

"More! More!" cried the audience, and Jean responded with some popular songs after inviting everyone to join in singing them.

It was evident that under the spell of the music she had forgotten her reluctance, but I could not help wondering why she had not given immediate compliance to my niece's original request. Was she too shy to play readily, or did she mistakenly suppose that modesty demanded such hesitation?

Later in the evening, after the guests were gone, I questioned my sister-in-law about Jean's unwillingness.

"We're trying to help Jean overcome her diffidence," Beatrice told me. "That's why Alice asked her to play. Jean does not realize that her musical ability is a precious gift bringing pleasure that should be shared with others, or that self-consciousness is really a form of selfishness. She is gradually learning, though, to think more about her music than about herself, and she is growing more gracious under the encouragement of sincere appreciation."

"How about your music, Alice?" I inquired as my niece came into the room. "I was hoping to hear you play this evening."

"There wasn't time for more solos after the group-singing began, Aunt Lucia," Alice explained. "I've had a good time with my music this year. I played for the girls' glee club at school, and now I'm getting ready to take part in a recital that's to be given next month."

"Alice has done well with her music," her mother said quietly.

"I'm sorry I won't be here to attend your recital," I commented.

"Then you shall grant me a special audition tomorrow," Alice promised, giving me a warm-hearted embrace before she skipped upstairs to bed.

That is exactly what happened; my niece rehearsed for me and several of the neighbors, the next evening, her entire contribution to the recital. She played every one of her numbers with an utter lack of self-consciousness that charmed me as much as did her exquisite rendering of the selections. "I like this piece," she would say, "and I think you'll like it, too." Again, "The melody in this one is lovely." And, "I believe you'll enjoy this descriptive piece my teacher found for me."

I was to hear Alice play many times before larger audiences than the small group that listened that evening, but always she had the same pleasant way of sharing her joy in the music.

How fine it would be if all parents would help their children to acquire such a gracious attitude toward playing or singing in public. Young musicians should not need to be coaxed.

GRADUATION EXERCISES.

attended by several hundred returning alumni. The program for the banquet featured several musical numbers by members of the senior class, recognition of the reunion classes and outstanding alumni, the presentation to Dr. Leon E. Smith of the award as the "Outstanding Alumnus of 1950," and the annual Alumni Oration by Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, Va., a member of the Class of 1898.

Three Programs on Sunday.

The commencement events for Sunday, May 28, got underway with the baccalaureate sermon in Whitley Auditorium at 11:30 o'clock. This program, which was featured throughout by the fine musical program rendered by the Elon Choir, opened with the invocation by President Leon Edgar Smith, followed by the reading of the scripture by Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, Va., and a prayer by Dr. John G. Truitt, of Elon College.

The baccalaureate sermon itself was delivered by Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, of Hartford, Connecticut, Dean Emeritus of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

Two fine musical programs on Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening concluded the day's program. The Elon Choir offered a vespers recital at 4:00 o'clock, with solo roles by Miss Jane Dougherty, Miss Geneva Cooper, Charles Lynam, James Clyburn, Jack Castle, Mrs. Dorothy Jones Parker and Fred Sahlman.

On Sunday evening the Elon Singers presented Haydn's "The Seasons," under the direction of Prof. John Westmoreland, with Prof. Fletcher Moore at the organ and with Fred Sahlman at the piano. Soloists for the evening were Miss Virginia Groomes and Prof. William H. Struhs—both of the Elon College music faculty, and Robert Bird.

Youth at Work in the Church

VIRGINIA YOUTH LEADER GRADUATES FROM HARTFORD.

Ruth Harriette Dunn was granted the degree of Master of Arts from the Hartford School of Religious Education at the Hartford Seminary Foundation at the Exercises of Graduation held Wednesday forenoon, May 17, at Hartford, Connecticut.

Miss Dunn has been a youth leader in her home church, the First Congregational Church in Lynchburg, and has worked in Christian Endeavor in Lynchburg, District and State of Virginia. She served as Associate Counsellor of the Junior Pilgrim Fellowship of Elon Community Church and as Counsellor of Junior Pilgrim Fellowship in her home church. She also worked three summers in Vacation Schools for the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches and plans to do the same again this summer. She was a member of the Elon Singers while at Elon College. Miss Dunn attended the North American Youth Conference to represent Youth of Southern Convention at Lawrence, Kansas, in December, 1947.

Miss Dunn graduated from Elon College, Elon College, N. C., in 1948. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Dunn, Sr., of Lynchburg, Va.

The Hartford Seminary Foundation is a University of Religion where students, already college graduates, prepare for professional leadership in Christian work with advanced study in one of the Foundation's several schools. These are the Hartford Theological Seminary (founded in 1834), the Hartford School of Religious Education (1885), and the Kennedy School of Missions (1911). A fourth unit, the newly founded Institute of Church Social Service, will be opened in September, 1950.

NINETY AMERICAN YOUNG PEOPLE TO JOIN W.C.C.'S SUMMER WORK CAMPS.

Eight hundred church youth, including 90 Americans, will be participating in the World Council's volunteer ecumenical work camps this summer. Inaugurated after World War II, the 1950 work camp program includes projects of Europe, Asia and the U.S.A.

Men and women between 18 and 30, from over 35 nations and over 12 Protestant and Orthodox confessional groups, will spend four weeks of their summer doing manual labor in international groups of 30 or 40 members.

Countries where the work projects are now planned are France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, England, Japan, Korea, the Philippine Islands and the U.S.A., where 25 campers will work with the East Halem Protestant Parish, New York City.

The American work campers, the majority joining in European work projects, include Christian young people from 27 states and Hawaii. Representing 14 U.S. denominations, the campers are largely university students and church workers.

According to World Council youth department authorities, the 1950 work camp is the largest project undertaken since the camps were started in 1948. Seven hundred youth participated in 1949.

The camps were described as "frankly Christian in character although invitation to participate is not restricted to church youth of any particular background." The day-by-day program at the camps include not only physical labor, but daily worship services, Bible studies, and discussion groups.

Among the newly established work projects to be undertaken this summer is a housing development for Korean refugees at Taejun, South Korea. Christian youth from Japan and the U.S.A. will join with fifty Korean youth in constructing fifty "rammed earth" houses similar to the adobe houses of the Southwestern U.S.A., first of their kind in Korea.

HOW MIAMI COUNTY (OHIO) BUILDS STRONGER MARRIAGES.

"Sorry, I can't marry you tonight," said the minister. "Nor tomorrow—nor till we have had several chances to talk things over."

Jim wasn't to be stopped. "We'll find someone who will marry us."

"You'll have trouble with that," the minister told them. "You see," he went on, "here in Troy and in all Miami County, we think that getting married is about the most important thing you do in your whole life. And we want to help you do it right."

So the young couple went to the marriage class. A banker talked with them about budgets and insurance and groceries and rent. A physician spoke, a psychiatrist helped, and the minister. The ministers and lawyers work together; the schools teach family life—the whole community is in on this.—Richard C. Davids.

INCONGRUOUS.

When the President of the United States drives along Skid Row, lined by dull-eyed living dead men, en route to a political rally where great public issues are to be discussed, but where not one word will be said about perhaps the second greatest problem of all, there is something disturbingly incongruous about the whole affair.

It is common knowledge that the liquor traffic, which in the last analysis is responsible for Skid Row and for all the dread streets of disaster which lead into Skid Row, contributes heavily to political funds.

Federal political administration of the past 16 years must, because of its benevolent attitude toward liquor, bear a share of the responsibility for the death of hundreds of thousands of men, women, and children; worse than death of hundreds of thousands of others; for an appalling degeneration of the national culture; and a political and social disintegration which threatens the national unity. All of this because we have abandoned our national ideals and our leaders have not called us back to the Straight and Narrow Path of Temperance, Decency and Freedom.

Is it out of place at this point to remind the Congress of the United States that a bill is before it, and will remain before it, until passage, intended to restrict the promotion for profit, of alcohol-caused crime, juvenile delinquency, corruption, sickness and death? We lay the matter on your consciences, Gentlemen of the Congress.

ZEPHANIAH CALLS TO REPENTANCE.

LESSON XI—JUNE 11, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, that have kept his ordinances; seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be hid in the day of the Lord's anger.—Zephaniah 2:3.

LESSON: Zephaniah 1:12-18; 3:16-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 11:1-10.

The Recurring Refrain of the Prophets.

There is, generally speaking, a recurring theme in the writings of the prophets. Almost without exception, they denounce the sins of the times—it may be on the part of the political leaders, of the priests, of the civil leaders, or of the people themselves. They denounce the formalism of the times and expose the weakness of the position of those who feel secure because of formalism. Then they pronounce judgment upon the nation. In bold language, even if with breaking hearts, they pronounce Jehovah's judgment upon the nation, and inevitable punishment and even destruction upon the people, Chosen though they may be, unless the people repent. And finally, but important, the prophets invariably emphasize Jehovah's long-suffering and His mercy, and assure the people that if they do repent, He will forgive and He will heal. There are variations to be sure, but this is the general pattern of the prophetic message. And Zephaniah is no exception. In today's lesson, he proclaims Jehovah's Day of Judgment on His People, contrasts the Sin of Jerusalem with the Righteousness of God, and predicts the Coming Restoration of Israel.

Jehovah's Day of Judgment.

"I will search Jerusalem with lamps." It is figurative language, and has its analogy in the reported trip of Diogenes through the streets of ancient Grecian cities with a lantern looking for an honest man. It also illustrates the thoroughness of the divine winnowing of men, and the impossibility of escape from God. The New Testament says it in more blunt words—we must all appear or stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

"I will punish the men that are settled on their lees." Another pictorial use of speech to describe men who have sunk into self-indulgence, weak self-indulgence, men who have lost all concern for and interest in the higher things of life, and are concerned only with their bodily comfort and ease. The world is full of such people today. And not all of them are the idle rich.

"They say in their heart, Jehovah will not do good, neither will He do evil." In other words, Jehovah will do nothing at all. In short it is practical atheism. It says that God is not interested in practical affairs, is without influence on human life, and may be ignored by practical men. It was the subtle temptation of a cultured and commercial age, and it is still such a temptation. As man's place and power in the world increases, men seem to give less heed to a consideration of God. Materialism is dangerous and deadly to the spiritual insight of men. As nations, and for that matter as individuals, become prosperous they tend to forget God. There are exceptions but the principle still holds.

"Their wealth shall become a spoil, and their houses a desolation. They shall build houses but they shall not dwell in them, they shall plant vineyards but shall not drink the wine thereof." This prophecy was literally fulfilled for the invading armies overran the country and many of the owners were carried away into captivity. Their wealth and their property not only did not protect them but actually became a liability.

"The great day of Jehovah is near, it is near and hasteth greatly." There was a time when the people clamored for the "day of Jehovah." They thought it would be a time when Jehovah would slay the enemies of Israel and establish His rule by force. But the "day of Jehovah" was to be a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation and darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of trumpet and alarm. . . ." It is significant that when Jesus was hanging on the cross there was a great darkness over the land. Even physical nature seems to be in tune with the great moral and spiritual order which enfolds it. Wars and moral subsidences, moral subsidences and wars seem to have some connection with one another.

"Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of Jehovah's wrath." Money has power to purchase immunity in many areas in this world. We can often get by if we "know the right people." But not in the world to come. Wealth and "pull" have not place or power when we stand before Almighty God. Every one of us must give an account of himself to God, and we shall stand naked before Him.

Jehovah's Mercy.

Doom is certain. Unless . . . unless the people repent!!! But if they repent, if they turn from their sins and turn again unto Jehovah, if they respond to His earnest appeals, Israel will again be restored. To be sure the penalty of sin will have to take its natural course. But the broken relationship will be restored, and the name that has been a shame in the earth will "be a praise and a name of praise among all the peoples of the earth when I bring back your captivity before your eyes, saith Jehovah."

*There's a wideness in God's mercy,
Like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in His justice,
That is more than liberty.*

*There is welcome for the sinner,
And more graces for the good,
There is mercy with the Saviour,
There is healing in His blood.*

*For the love of God is broader,
Than the measure of man's mind,
And the heart of the Eternal,
Is most wonderfully kind.*

SAM HIGGINBOTTOM: FARMER. An Autobiography. Scribners. N. Y. $3.

Anyone who is ashamed of being a farmer should read this autobiography of Sam Higginbottom. The publication is valuable, first of all, as the autobiography of a man who is known and loved by many people in America and abroad. His childhood, education, fight to overcome poverty, family relationships, and personal faith are items of interest to all lovers of biography. Here is the portrait, or portraits, of a live, flesh-and-blood missionary.

By far the most valuable contribution of this chronicle is the first-hand portrayal of the problems of agricultural missions in India. Higginbottom soon clashed with those missionaries who claimed that they knew "nothing save Jesus Christ and him crucified." This made it necessary to determine the theological basis of missions. "Why was Christ crucified?" Sam Higginbottom concluded that it was because "Jesus pitched full tilt into the social abuses of his day, even emphasizing hunger." Theology is no mere academic affair for the missionary.

The Allahabad Agricultural Institute has special significance for Presbyterians, who assume primary responsibility for the enterprise, but should be of vital interest to all who are interested in the problems and possibilities of agricultural missions, in India and elsewhere.

FAITH IS POWER—FOR YOU. Daniel A. Poling. Greenberg: Publisher. N. Y. $2.50.

Here is Dan Poling's own story, told in his own inimitable way. The real theme of the book is "Prayer is Power," and the assumption is that the Power which has worked so potently in his life will work in the lives of others. There are many grand statements, like the one in which Dr.

Poling quotes his father: "Pray without ceasing, and work accordingly."

While the book is primarily a study of prayer, there are many fine passages on the character of God, evangelism and immortality.

THE TEACHING OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH. Edited by Canon George D. Smith. The Macmillan Co. 1949. Two volumes, 1,316 pages. $12.50.

This is an overdue review of a book published a year ago. The book, however, is not new. Nor is it one of those which appear one day and are forgotten the next. It was originally published in 1927; it went through subsequent editions in 1928, '29, '30 and '31. Its purpose was to give a summary of Roman Catholic doctrine. Out of print for several years, it is now re-edited in two volumes.

The Teaching of the Catholic Church is the work of twenty-one Roman Catholic divines on both sides of the Atlantic, possessed of scholarship and the logical mind which so well distinguishes theologians of this church.

The first volume devotes a chapter to Revealed Truth, and another to an Outline of Catholic Theology. The rest of the book elaborates the points raised in the introductory chapters, and gives the Roman Catholic teachings on the Trinity, Angels, Mary the Mother of God, man's fall and salvation, Grace, and the supernatural virtues of Faith, Hope and Charity. The second volume deals with the Church, the Sacraments and the Last Things.

This is not a controversial book, although here and there "errors" ancient and modern are pointed out. It states in as positive a manner as possible the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church. It is not a book for the uninitiated. It contains solid theology and philosophy. Those who have the background and the patience to plough through 1,300 pages will be amply rewarded. Though only a "summary" of Roman Catholic doctrine, to the average Protestant minister or layman, it will serve as a reference book, in which he will find every doctrine of the Roman Church succinctly stated and ably discussed.

CHRISTIANITY TERMED "A LIBERATING POWER."

throughout the world to have a new sense that none of them are alone in the difficulties and danger of these times. It is our intention so far as we are able to express this solidarity by interpreting the opinions and achievements of different groups to each other, and to this end we hope that our Secretary in visiting, where conditions permit, will show our concern that the burdens of each should be borne by all.

Our Commission is composed of men and women. We are convinced that as God created us in the beginning, man and woman in His image, he intended that men and women should help each other to perform their tasks in the Church and in the world. We know that the Church has often failed to exemplify to the world this joint mission of men and women. We intend, therefore to promote a new concern to discover, taught by God's word and inspired by His spirit, what it means that men and women are one in Christ.

We have therefore set in motion a study which will take account of the best that we can learn from science about which the nature of man and of woman, will look at the practical tasks which have to be performed and try to discover what the Bible has to teach us in our day. We trust that it will be found helpful to the churches, though it will be understood that quick and easy answers would inevitably be wrong ones, and time will have to be taken.

ADOPT TEN-POINT PROGRAM ON RACIAL GOODWILL.

In New York City the Coordinating Committee of Teachers' Religious Associations has compiled a ten-point program through which public school teachers may promote religious and racial goodwill.

Among the ten points are the following:

Let each one of us turn the searchlight upon his own conscience to examine his conduct in relation to those who differ from us racially, nationally, religiously.

Let us make use of folk songs, folk dancers, carols, etc., to show similarities in racial, national and religious observance.

Let us encourage discussion among our pupils of the religious holidays of Jews and Christians to show how conducive to moral and ethical conduct such observance is, and to create a mutual understanding of and a respect for the beliefs of all people.

Let us cooperate with religious organizations of all faiths and all lay organizations which have as their purpose the bringing about of mutual understanding and respect.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Seventy-five children greet you from the Christian Orphanage. They wish me to thank you for their matrons, for their home, for the love and security which you have given them, for your letters and cards, for your gifts to the home upon which they depend and they wish me to tell you that they love and respect one another as a family.

Seventy-five children face the future. Some of them will be servants of the church—ministers, directors of religious education, nurses and teachers. All of them dream dreams of being somebody. Many of them will preside over homes of their own. They will tell their children about Larry, and Hugh, and Banks, and the others—girls and boys that had good times and work times together.

Seventy-five children will remember the tough spots. That time when they were so sick with the measles, that time they had an operation, that time they were on the carpet for some prank, or failure. They will remember the days of work on the farm—the dust of the hay, the weight of the green corn, the tedium of picking peas. They will remember these times and they will be sweet memories—the time Mrs. Black sat by their bed when the night was so deep and rubbed them with alcohol to reduce the fever, or when Miss Hattie gave them her unfailing love and praise, or when Mrs. Whitt gave them a little extra permission to go to some favorite picture. They will remember Miss Newman's good egg-bread, or those big baking-pan pies of Miss Lackey's. They will remember Mrs. Branch's "English lessons" or her little armful of lectures on how to show good manners. They will remember the fittings of new clothes by Mrs. Stadler, and the mail handed them by Mrs. Perry in the office. They'll not forget Less Wagoner, nor Garner Hilliard or I miss my guess—and they will rejoice to think of them. Perhaps they'll not forget me. They will not forget Mr. Holt's visits, nor those Board meetings. And I shall do my best to see that they remember and appreciate you—and the home which you gave them.

Yes, we are going to pray together, and play together, and work together, and grow together. Many of them are going to make you mighty proud of them—and they will learn more and more to be grateful to you for your gifts, your home, your help. "Cast your bread upon the waters, and it will return to you after many days." "Inasmuch as you do it unto little Jackie, or big Jeff, or poor little cripple Bobby, you do it unto Me." In His name these children greet you out there in your churches and across our land wherever you are. And may God bless you everyone.

DENDRON CHRISTIAN CHURCH REPORTS.

The Rev. W. L. Wood of the Wakefield, Burton's Grove and Barrett's Parish assumed the pastorate of the Dendron Church on January 1. The worship services are held each first Sunday evening and third Sunday morning. The mid-week prayer services are interdenominational, with the pastor serving each third Wednesday evening. Elon College Day was observed with Mr. G. C. White of Waverly as guest speaker. The organizations of the church consist of the Ladies Aid Society and Missionary Society with the members as participants in the local Council of Church Women. The Ladies Aid is all its name implies—wherever there is a need it is met by this group. The Woman's Missionary Society was rated as a Superior Society last year (and expects to be again this year)! It sponsors the Young People under the leadership of Mrs. Thurman Williams, the Juniors by Mrs. Owen Whitmore and the Cradle Roll with Mrs. Garland Morris as leader. The women of this Parish participated in Wakefield, February 14. This group also planned for Mrs. Flore Moulton to tell of some of her experiences as a missionary in India in March. We were represented at the Vacation Bible School Institute which was held in Waverly recently. The children will begin in the Vacation Bible School June 12—and continue until June 23. The World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day was observed in our church with the women from the other churches in the community. The pastor presided over an impressive candlelight service commemorating the Lord's Supper on Maundy Thursday during Holy Week.

Although the active membership of the Dendron Church is small the interest in the program of the church is demonstrated through the offerings on each first Sunday for the Orphanage, on each third Sunday for Missions, and the fifth Sunday offering for Elon College. A number of the members are carrying on the Penny-A-Meal project in their homes. The business meetings of the church are held quarterly at which time the business affairs of the church are taken care of, such as the paying of the Conference apportionments, which have always been met in full, and local expenses of the church. A committee has been recently appointed to select and purchase new hymnals for worship services of the church. In all of these and other activities the pastor has taken an active part. Mrs. Wood is giving generously of her time, having taught the foreign mission study book, assisted in the Bible study and teaches the Woman's Bible Class whenever she is present.

In Memoriam

JOYNER.

Mrs. Sallie Holland Joyner departed this life after several months of declining health at the home of her son, in Walters, Virginia, April 3rd, 1950 at the age of 82 years. She was a member of Mt. Carmel Church.

We as a church and individuals desire to record our appreciations and sorrow in our loss.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are grateful for what her life has meant to us as individuals and for the peaceful kind and happy life that seem to be her's.

2. That we extend to her bereaved husband and family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the comforter, whose grace is sufficient for every need.

3. That we seek to emulate all that was finest and best in her life.

Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,
Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Committee.

PAYNE.

Miss Sallie Payne departed this life on March 29th at the age of 78. She spent her entire life in the Linville Community except for a few months with her sister, Mrs. Annie Bradford in Petersburg, Va., where she passed away. Mrs. Bradford died just a few days before "Miss Sallie" was called to her reward.

About five years ago Miss Payne suffered a stroke, but before that time she was untiring in the Master's work. She united with the church in early childhood and was always a willing worker. She served as church secretary for many years and as S. S. teacher. She was a liberal giver of time and means.

Therefore we offer the following resolutions:

1. The church has lost a member that will be sadly missed.

2. That we honor her memory by carrying on the work so dear to her heart.

Mrs. EVA HOSFLOOK,
Mrs. MARY DORIS,
Committee.

IF THERE WERE NO GOD—

Then there could have been no creation and the world and all things in the world always existed. Is the world at bottom one thing or many things? If one thing, by what power did it become differential into so many things? If many things, how came these to be assembled into orderly universe? The materialistic philosophers can give no satisfactory answer to either question.

If there were no God, there was no power to impose design on the material world. The atheists can evade this point only by denying the existence of design. The eye is an accident.

The ear is an accident. All parts of animal bodies are accidents. They serve a use but not a purpose. They had no planner. They just happened to fall into shape. By similar reasoning you can prove that a house had no intelligent builder. The wind and sun blew the bricks together out of clay and baked them hard. Then in a great hurricane the bricks were swept up into a pile in the form of a house. Another storm blew down trees and split them into shingles and spread them out for a roof and then shaped nails out of the iron ore and with mighty force drove them in, holding the shingles in place. This is no more absurd and improbable than the atheistic accounts of the formation of parts of the world.

If there were no God, of course there would be no divine providence. But it would be quite impossible for the atheist to show how there could originate in the world a being that would feel the need of divine providence. How could the human soul spring out of matter? How could the dead bring forth life? The atheists are hoping to find that life is inherent in matter, but they have never found it. If they did find it, they would but add to the evidence of a marvelous creative power. Such a discovery would not eliminate the thought of God, but would magnify the power of God. The atheists cannot lay just claim to being brilliant thinkers. If there were in the world no more intelligence than they exhibit, it would not be very difficult to believe that there is either no God or at best a very inferior and unsuccessful one.

PRESBYTERIAN-CONGREGATIONAL MERGER IN ENGLAND DELAYED.

A joint conference of British Presbyterian and Congregationalist church leaders, appointed by the two religious bodies in 1945, have reported that at present there is "no sufficient agreement to warrant the consummation of union" of the two churches.

The Presbyterian Church of England, however, approved a closer co-operative relationship with the Congregational Union of England and Wales. Meeting in London on May 1, the Presbyterian delegates affirmed their common Reformed tradition with the Congregationalists and pledged themselves to "enter into a new and solemn relationship," including mutual consultation and cooperative action, wherever possible.

used in the battle fought on the very ground where I stood. But it bristled and threatened no more. It was silent, it was at peace. In another cemetery I had seen such a gun and in its mouth a bird was quietly hatching its brood. It was the scene of peace that marked the new era of unbreakable peace for our country. It was the "decoration day" in which all nature joined—the flowers strewn by the Hand that leads the world. A gentleman with me—a son of the South—said, "There are also some Confederates asleep in this God's acre."

*Under the sod and the dew
Waiting the judgment day
Under the roses the Blue
Under the lilies the Gray.*

I said the deeds that grew into Decoration Day, that sprang up in the hearts of these Southern women were "like wild flowers." Yes, and who planted the wild flowers? God planted the sentiment that grew into Decoration Day, and has helped to destroy sectionalism in the great hearts of the Mississippi women.

No seeds of hatred seem to be left in the nation, by the quiet Potomac, or the flow of the inland river, whence the fleets of iron have fled. People can "get over things." The reason we have conquered our hate and can "laurel the graves" of Blue and Gray alike is that the controlling influence in the soul of the nation is Christian. After the Civil War came evangelists preaching the love of God. Perhaps Moody was the chief one—but generally speaking all the pulpits preached the gospel of the love of God, taught that we are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus and brothers to each other in his salvation. The people believed it, accepted it, lived by it, and refused to hate.

The flower of love was planted in the heart by the grace of Christianity.

We are not only patriots when we decorate the graves of our dead, but what is much more, we are Christians—An Editorial in The Christian Evangelist, twenty years ago.

It's good to have money and the things money can buy, but it's good, too, to check up once in a while and make sure you haven't lost the things money cannot buy. — George Horace Lorimer.

Veteran Minister and Wife Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

By REV. JOE A. FRENCH, Lanett, Alabama

The Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Dollar celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary April 2 at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Harry, in Lanett, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry held open house for the Rev. and Mrs. Dollar in the afternoon and many of their friends from far and near had a pleasant visit with the family.

Mr. Dollar has served as pastor of three of our churches in the Valley,

At least two events awaited his ordination so that he could perform ceremonies in his own right. The first couple whom he married postponed their wedding until after his ordination so that he could perform their ceremony. The Rock Stand Church was organized in July, 1908, and at the organization meeting Brother Dollar was called to serve as pastor. He could not give them an official acceptance of the call until August.

Very near all the churches of the Christian side of the fellowship in Alabama and many of the churches in Georgia have felt the fervor of his evangelistic spirit either as a pastor or as an evangelist. Always a flaming evangelist in his ministry, he has had the joy of being present at the birth of many hundreds of people into the Kingdom. His services have been in great demand for revival services.

He also served his fellowship well as an official in that he has filled every official position in the churches of this area. As an official he has won the admiration and appreciation of our folk in his wisdom in dealing with the problems of the church.

John D. Dollar is one of several preachers in his family. His father, the Rev. C. M. Dollar, was one of the pioneer preachers of the Christian Church in the South. Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, Suffolk, Va., is a brother; Rev. C. Carl Dollar, Wadley, Ala., is his son and Rev. Melvin Dollar, Franklin, Va., is a nephew.

Brother Dollar has five boys and seven girls, all of whom are living and married. There are 27 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Mrs. Dollar has been confined to her bed for more than four years now as a result of a stroke, but she remains cheerful and in good spirits. She is not able to speak but she can certainly tell you plenty with that charming smile of hers and the waving fingers on her left hand.

REV. AND MRS. DOLLAR

the Lanett Church, Langdale Church and the Highway Church at Hughuley. Large numbers of former parishoners visited them and many of them took suitable gifts for the occasion.

Brother Dollar has lived a useful and fruitful life as minister of many of the churches in Alabama. He was licensed to preach in Rock Springs Church in December of 1906 and ordained to the ministry by the Executive Committee of the Alabama Conference on the fifth Sunday in August, 1908, in the Flint Hill Church.

Opportunities in Japan are unprecedented. Our schools are crowded to overflowing, churches are reporting large numbers of enquirers. Our work is part of the Church of Christ in Japan, a united church, as it undertakes new methods of evangelism and appeal. Though we have no medical work in Japan, our program in every other respect is well-rounded, straining against the day when opportunities may have passed. The American Board is at work for the Kingdom of God in Japan, and $700855 is currently

Rev. Bernard V. Munger of Chapel Hill gave the address at the High School's Junior-Senior Banquet last Friday evening (May 26) and was guest preacher Sunday morning at the Chapel of Talladega College in Alabama. During his absence, his pulpit was filled by Dr. Bernard H. Anderson, professor of Biblical Literature at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Anderson will join the faculty of Colgate-Rochester Seminary in the fall.

Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Harcastle became happy grandparents on Saturday, May 27, when their daughter Jane—Mrs. J. B. Jones—gave birth to a baby girl who has been named Ellen Elizabeth Jones. Jane and her husband, "J. B.," are living at West Lafayette, Indiana. Mr. Jones is a member of the faculty of Purdue University. The other member of the Harcastle family, "Hardy Jr.," will graduate from V. P. I. on June 10 with a degree in Mechanical Engineering.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

GROUND-BREAKING CEREMONY IS HELD FOR HANK'S CHAPEL CHURCH PARSONAGE.

On Saturday morning, May 20, at 10:00 o'clock, on the lot donated for our parsonage by Mr. and Mrs. H. G. White, our dreams began to be a reality. On this date the ground-breaking ceremony was held. A goodly number of the church membership and our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. C. Fred Allred, were present. The ceremony was conducted by Mr. Allred with the deacons of the church and the building committee taking part.

These seeds of thought were planted in our minds by our former pastor, Rev. M. V. Welch. The plants began to take growth a few weeks ago when a building committee was appointed, plans were chosen for the house, and we may be better Christians in the name of our Savior, Jesus Christ.

We cordially welcome everyone to come down and look over our project.

C. FRED ALLRED,
Pastor.

SHELTON CHURCH, PORTSMOUTH.

Mrs. Frank H. Lewis of Shelton Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, had the misfortune to fall and break her left ankle. The morning after the accident, she asked the nurse in the hospital for a Bible. After some delay and searching, a Bible was finally found. In a hospital where spiritual healing, help and comfort are needed as much as physical healing, it might be interesting to know how many Bibles are available to patients in your own local hospital!

a goodly amount of the money was raised. We now have some of the building material on the lot and the foundation is being laid.

We feel that this is a great step forward in our church and denomination. If the records are clear we are the first church of our denomination in Chatham County to have a rural church parsonage. We sincerely hope that we will not be the last to take on a project like this. We believe that a pastor can do a much better job in church leadership if he can live on the field. We believe that we all will be benefitted by having our pastor in our community. We believe that the step we have taken will make us better Christians and servants for Christ and his cause.

With the blessings of God and the prayer of His people to back us up, we hope to have our house completed in the very near future and our pastor living with us. Pray for us that Arthur T. Pope, a member of Shelton Church, died May 24, 1950, following an illness of three weeks. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. John Doyle, supply pastor, and Rev. Stanley Carne, pastor of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth.

Rev. Dr. Vann Talmadge Crawford will become pastor of the Shelton Church on July 1, 1950. Dr. Crawford has just concluded a successful ministry in the Congregational Church at North Miami, Florida. Since Dr. Crawford is a Virginian, his return to Virginia will be like a home-coming to him.

Mrs. Fannie R. Shelton, wife of the late Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton, is living at 2441 Linden Avenue, Long Beach 6, California. She keeps in contact with her friends in Portsmouth. She is always happy to hear from her friends in Virginia.

TORONTO HOST TO CHRISTIAN FORCES THIS SUMMER.

Toronto, Canada, this summer, will be a center of world-wide Christian cooperation.

Protestant and Orthodox church leaders from over 60 countries on five continents will be gathering at Toronto and environs for a series of twelve conferences and assemblies to plan action and establish policy affecting over 160,000,000 Christian believers throughout the world.

Lasting from July 3 to August 21, the conference series will include the massive World Convention on Christian Education, with an estimated 5,000 delegates and visitors in attendance, to be held at the University of Toronto, August 10-16.

The Central Committee of the World Council of Churches, the 90-member policy-making body for cooperative action among 156 Protestant and Orthodox churches in 44 countries, will be holding its annual meeting July 8-15 at Emmanuel College, Toronto. Expected for the Central Committee meeting are such world-famed church leaders as Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church, New York Area, Pastor Martin Niemöller of the Evangelical Church, Germany, and Dr. Michio Kozaki, President of the United Church of Japan.

Joining in the August meetings, devoted to the extension and improvement of Sunday school education throughout the world, will be President Harold E. Stassen of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., Lord Mackintosh of Halifax, England, President of the World Council of Christian Education, other international Christian organizations holding sessions at Toronto or environs include the International Council of Religious Education, The Commission of the Churches on International Affairs, the United Christian Youth Movement, and the World Christian Youth Commission.

The dates for these meetings, together with brief sketches of the organizations, follow:

July 3-5: "Commission of the Churches on International Affairs" (Executive Committee).—A joint agency of the World Council of Churches and the International Missionary Council set up to represent Protestant and Orthodox churches and national councils throughout the world in assigned dealings with governmental and international agencies.

COMMENCEMENT DIGEST

One of the most delightful seasons of the year is commencement time. Spring has put forth her finest garlands. The atmosphere is fresh and fragrant. Life is agog with expectancy.

Commencement brings into sharp focus the ideas and ideals of the classroom. An academic procession, emblazoned with color and set to martial music, stirs the imagination as it dramatizes the essential dignity of truth. Days of preparation yield appropriate rewards and now the flags of victory are unfurled. Graduates see that travail of their souls and are satisfied.

Speakers come from near and far to share their wisest counsel, the findings and convictions of a lifetime. However desirable and delightful it might be, one is unable to attend all commencements in a given state or region. The editor finds keen interest and considerable satisfaction in reading the newspaper accounts.

Dean Herring of Duke University said to the forty-four Fuquay Springs High School graduates: "You are a citizen of two worlds, a physical and a spiritual. Everyone has a human mission to fulfil. . . . Decide whether you are a parasite or a contributing self. We should all accept individual responsibilities."

Salem College graduates heard Irving Carlyle define "The Role of an Educated Person in a Disturbed World." Interesting subject, isn't it? The Winston-Salem attorney declared that: "Those who are educated should be able to understand the problems of others, feel obliged to give moral and intellectual leadership to good causes, create a climate of opinion in which right things can happen, help to dispel pessimism, and aid in the defense of human freedom." That sounds like good preaching, doesn't it?

Samuel James Ervin, Jr., associate justice of the State Supreme Court exhorted Peace College graduates "not to let anything this side of the grave stop you from learning." Then he added this formula for wholesome living: "Learn always, labor hard, laugh often and love much."

A stern word was given the 140 graduates at Shaw University in Raleigh by the Rev. George D. Kelsey of New York. He declared that "Dogmatic sectarianism which identifies truth only with certain organizations is wrong; it is wrong whether dogmatic sectarianism be the written dogma of the Catholic Church or the unwritten dogma of the Baptist Church."

Dr. James T. Cleland has been the commencement speaker at a number of schools. In one appearance he spoke on "The Dissatisfactions That Lead to Satisfaction." He concluded by pointing to the Church. "It will hold before you the God who is to be adored, whose service is our duty and our joy. It will offer us the God to whom we may confess our sins, and in whom there is pardon. It will send us forth again, rededicated to the service of God shown in good will to our fellows."

So we have been to commencement. We have pondered the words of great leaders both in the realm of education and religion. This places us all under obligation, does it not, to live more efficient and fruitful lives?

CHURCH HISTORY: VIA BROOKLYN

The essence of church history is the history of churches. The Christian Century, which delineates the Christian movement, has recently embarked on the interesting experiment of describing in detail some of America's most successful churches. Interest in this kind of thing is widespread, for in far too much of our church history the tree has been lost in the forest.

Through the courtesy of Miss Marietta C. Vanderveer, a very interesting book lies on the editor's desk. It is an attractively bound volume containing the annuals of the Flatbush-Tompkins Congregational Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., and was published in observance of the 50-75 anniversaries of two churches which have now become one.

One of the interesting features is the record of ministers. When Dr. George F. Pentecost took up his ministry at Tompkins Avenue Church in 1880, the membership numbered 272. More than 1,100 members were added during the six years of his pastorate. Dr. Pentecost, it is interesting to note, preached evangelistic sermons Sunday evenings, baptized by immersion, and spent some time in evangelistic work with Dwight L. Moody in London. He engaged George C. Stebbins, noted song writer and evangelistic singer to lead the music at Tompkins Avenue.

It is noted that at one time this church had the second largest Sunday School in the world, the largest being in England. When the church observed its 25th anniversary, the Sunday School, including Park Avenue Chapel, had grown to 3,512. This remarkable church had a leading part in developing the Congregational Home for the Aged in Brooklyn.

Dr. Lewis T. Reed was pastor of the Flatbush Church, 1910-1928. He led in the construction of a new building. Since that time many people in Congregational Christian Churches knew Dr. Reed as secretary of the Ministerial Relief Division of the Board of Home Missions. He rendered a lasting service by interesting and enlisting many of our ministers in the Annuity Fund.

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce was pastor of the Puritan Church, 1908-1910. This church united with Tompkins Avenue in 1915.

The Flatbush-Tompkins Church came into being in 1942. Dr. Alfred Grant Walton came with his people from Tompkins Avenue as the first and greatly beloved minister of the merged congregations. Dr. Walton has published a number of books and appears frequently on radio and television programs. He has served as president of the Board of Home Missions. He was one of the nominees four years ago for the moderatorship of the General Council. Since a minister is to be elected this time, it would appear in order to place his name in nomination at our forthcoming Cleveland Council. He is wiser by four years and retains his ready wit, characteristic friendliness and unabated vigor.

At the beginning of 1950, with a membership close to 4,000, all debts are paid and the future of Flatbush-Tompkins is said to be encouraging. The church last year gave more than $14,000 to benevolences.

Some people know no church intimately. Many know only their own. Our knowledge of churches should be amplified, especially those of our fellowship.

Anniversaries are important. They offer unusual opportunities. Every church should give attention to its history, and an anniversary offers the best opportunity for a proper chronicle.

RUTH SEABURY HONORED.

Dr. Ruth Isabel Seabury, Christian educator and internationalist, was given an honorary D. H. L. (Doctor of Humane Letters) by Cedar Crest College, Allentown, Penna. Dr. Seabury gave the Baccalaureate Address at Cedar Crest, June 4.

Miss Seabury is widely known for her ability as a speaker and preacher. She travels almost continuously throughout America. She has visited the major fields of the American Board around the world, including two trips to the Near East, two to India and four to Europe. She attended the famous World Conference of the Churches at Madras, India, in 1938-39.

From March 1948 through the summer of 1949, Dr. Seabury acted as Educational Counsellor to Dr. Hachiro Yuasa, President of Doshisha University in Kyoto. During this period of service in Japan she worked with the churches and students.

Dr. Seabury's travels in the U.S.A. include many lectures at colleges, universities and theological seminaries. She has written several books mostly on the subject of world friendship. In 1940 Elon College, North Carolina, conferred upon her the degree of Lit.D.

She has been a member of the University Christian Movement, the Federal Council of Churches Preaching Mission, the Board of the Student Volunteer Movement, the Missionary Education Movement, the International Council of Religious Education, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Wider Quaker Fellowship and the Advisory Committee of the Danforth Foundation.

to their accomplishments. It is more important to put heart into one's work, whatever one is doing, than merely to put time at it. Time is never a substitute for accomplishment. One cannot truly put his mind on his work unless his heart is in it.

The Christian philosophy of life is that life has its richest meaning and its brightest prospect for those who make their everyday work as worship unto God—doing their daily tasks as unto the Lord, putting their mind and heart, their enthusiasm, into their work.

The world has a right to expect superior service from the Christian laborer, the Christian teacher, the Christian physician, the Christian banker, the Christian salesman, the Christian clerk, the Christian attorney, the Christian soldier, the Christian statesman, the Christian servant, and from Christians in every other line of human service, because Christians are dedicated to the proposition of living their lives and doing their work "heartily (enthusiastically) as unto the Lord."

To be half-hearted means to be half-happy. The person who has lost his enthusiasm has two strikes registered against him at the very beginning of anything he attempts. People to whom life appears to be but a dead-end street, people for whom life seems to be decked in a mournful grey, people who are discouraged or defeated need to pray to God to give them back their enthusiasm for life. And we all need to guard our enthusiasm for life, for the truth, for the right, for the beautiful, and for God as we would guard life itself; for life is meaningless and without purpose or prospect when enthusiasm for life dies.

"THE TALKING BIBLE."

Early risers in New York City and vicinity can hear the Bible read every Sunday morning, starting at seven o'clock. This new program, sponsored jointly by the American Bible Society and Station WNEW presents a half-hour continuous reading of the Bible, which was begun with the Book of Genesis. The Talking Book Records, which the Bible Society has prepared for the use of the blind, are being used. The reading is by Alexander Scourby. It is expected that it will take a period of three years to complete the reading of the entire Bible.

You cannot run away from a weakness; you must some time fight it out or perish. If that be so, why not now, and where you stand?—Selected.

A Prerequisite for Success

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, D. D.

Enthusiasm is a priceless virtue; and, because this virtue is so often absent in modern life, thousands are losing their way in the world's confusion.

Nothing else can take the place of wholesome enthusiasm in the realization of human achievement and human happiness. That's why the Apostle Paul told the Colossian Christians: "Whatsoever you do, do it heartily as unto the Lord."

The deepest enthusiasm, like the deepest grief or the deepest joy, is not expressed by words or by noise, but by attitudes and actions. Enthusiasm in one's daily work and in one's religion is the virtue perhaps most needed in our modern life. Enthusiasm for life, for God, for the right, for the highest and the best constitutes the religion of Jesus Christ. There is no place in God's favor for half-heartedness and luke-warmness in individuals or in organizations. People who are not enthusiastic about their work find life a drudgery, because they keep their eyes on the clock instead of putting their hearts into their job. People without enthusiasm for their work and "for life in general" are content to see how little they can do and get by with it, instead of being concerned about how much they can do so as to have something to be proud about.

Enthusiasm is the pre-requisite for success in every field of human effort. The woman who detests cooking is sure to be a poor cook. The teacher who doesn't like children is sure to be a poor teacher. The secretary who does not like figures and details is sure to be a poor secretary. And so it is in every field of human effort. No matter how much knowledge a person may have regarding his vocation or profession, if he does not like his work—if he does not have enthusiasm for it—he will fail. The half-hearted, unenthusiastic worker anywhere—in office, in store, in mine, on the farm or wherever people toil—is not only a head-ache to those who have to work with him, but also a definite hindrance

BURLINGTON DISTRICT HOLDS LAYMAN'S INSTITUTE.

The Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed Churches of the Burlington District recently completed a most successful series of three supper meetings. The purpose of these gatherings was to inform laymen about the work of the church and their part in it. Approximately one hundred men attended each of the three sessions held as follows:

Tuesday, April 25, at Union Ridge Church—Leaders (A panel discussion): Dr. William T. Scott, Superintendent of the Convention; Dr. John G. Truitt, Superintendent of the Elon Orphanage; Rev. John C. Peeler, St. Mark's Church; Rev. Henry E. Robinson, Burlington Church; Mr. W. L. Cooper, Burlington Church; Dr. L. E. Smith, Elon College. Topic: "The Objectives of the Local Church." Discussion following.

Tuesday, May 9, at First Christian Church, Burlington—Speaker: The Rev. J. H. Dollar, Liberty Spring Church, Suffolk, Va. (Mr. Dollar is well known for his vigorous presentation of church finance.) Topic: "Financing the Local Church." Especially set up with the duties of the Trustees of the church in mind. Discussion following.

Thursday, May 25, at First Evangelical and Reformed Church, Burlington—Speaker: Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean Emeritus of the Hartford Seminary Foundation and minister-at-large to our Fellowship. Topic: "The Work of the Deacon in the Local Church." Discussion following.

A permanent organization was set up to plan for further activities with Prof. A. L. Hook of Elon College, chairman, and A. H. Blaylock of Union Ridge as secretary-treasurer. A steering committee was authorized to plan the next meeting of the District.

The primary purpose of this group is to foster and strengthen the men and men's work in the local church. It is in no wise intended to take the plan of the local organization.

Many have expressed their satisfaction in both the fellowship and the instruction provided by the Institute.

MORALITY AND BOMBING.

The appointment of nineteen distinguished theologians, educators and lay experts as members of the Commission of Christian Scholars to study the moral implications of area bombing and the military use of nuclear bombs and other weapons of mass destruction has been announced today by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

In announcing the personnel of the commission, Rev. Richard M. Fagley, co-secretary of the Federal Council's Department of International Justice and Goodwill, said that the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington (D. C.) diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, had accepted the chairmanship.

The creation of the commission was approved several months ago by the Federal Council's Executive Committee but the personnel was not announced until today. It includes several theologians who served on the Federal Council's war-time commission which prepared a report on "Atomic Warfare and the Christian Faith."

The commission's membership includes William W. Waymack of Adel, Iowa, former member of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission; Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, New York, distinguished theologian; Chester I. Barnard, New York, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, and three college presidents: Dr. John R. Cunningham, Davidson College; Dr. Conrad J. I. Bergendoff, Augustana College and Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Morehouse College.

Bishop Dun said that the commission had been given an assignment "in which failure is almost certain."

"We are asked to enter together into a dark cavern of perplexities in the hope of finding some light which can guide us and our fellows. To refuse the assignment would be to turn our back on the responsibility which God lays upon us.

"We are supposed to be a group with more than average capacity for thinking clearly about moral issues. We are supposed to be men and women who can bring 'the mind of Christ' to bear on the truly dreadful issues which confront us. Whether we can rise to that level remains to be seen.

We shall stand under the judgment of men and more inescapably under the judgment of God.

"It will be our task to look with honest and open eyes at the powers of mass destruction now available or likely to be available to our own nation and other nations; to consider the human and political and moral results of the bombing procedures used in World War II and what the results for ourselves and other people are likely to be in another war; to face the possibilities of international blackmail if one or more major powers possess weapons of mass destruction not available to others; to consider perhaps the conditions and the price of international control of such weapons; and certainly to ask ourselves what conceivable decision or actions could be taken by Christian individuals or Christian groups seeking in sincerity to do the will of the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ in our world now.

"A company of men and women faced with that task, we can without any false piety say to our brethren, 'Pray for us, that the God with whom all things are possible may grant us light even in this darkness.'"

"DO SOMETHING UNTIL IT HURTS."

Someone has said that the seven deadly sins are these: Policies without principles; wealth without work; pleasure without conscience; knowledge without character; commerce and industry without morality; science without humanity; worship without sacrifice.

As I understand the meaning of this meeting here, it is at least in one of its phases to fit this last of the seven deadly sins, namely, a worship that is without sacrifice, a Christianity without a cross. And I believe if there is any meaning to World Service it means this: That we are trying to put at the heart of our worship a cross, something for which we see no immediate return, asking for nothing save the privilege of giving, doing the thing not because we are compelled by a program but impelled by a Person, something that we cannot escape because we are in fellowship with Him and we must do because we feel that inward compulsion.

This church, and other churches, has taken upon itself a great World Service program to give the world a chance. It is the biggest business under Heaven.

This meeting here has a meaning

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

COMMENCEMENT.

The sixtieth annual commencement of Elon College was held June 27-29. Saturday was Alumni Day. The attendance was very good. Class reunions were held during the day. A picnic lunch was served on the campus for the faculty, students, alumni and visitors. The alumni banquet was held at 7:00 o'clock with a large attendance, and there was a very enthusiastic meeting.

Dr. I. W. Johnson of the Class of 1898 gave the alumni address. He spoke on the college, and urged all to love the college and demonstrate their love by loyalty and support; to lift burdens from each other's hearts, and from the college itself; and to live loyally and sacrificially for the higher and better interests of life.

Sunday was baccalaureate day. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter gave a very interesting and illuminating message—one that was enjoyed by all.

Sunday evening the Elon College Singers gave "The Seasons (Haydn)". This was a very delightful occasion enjoyed by all present.

Monday was graduation day. The address was given by Dr. Ralph Bradford, Executive Vice-President of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C. It was a very unusual, scholarly and effective address. The attendance at all exercises exceeded any on previous occasions. The entire program was delightful and most satisfactory. The parting words of Dr. Smith to the graduating class of 1950 were:

"For four years you have been on the campus of a liberal arts college. The freedom of this campus has made lasting contributions to your character and life. Today as you turn from this campus you face a distorted and disturbed world—disturbed by subversive forces that strike at the foundation of the freedom that was purchased by sacrificial hands and bequeathed to you by patriotic hearts. Wherever you turn today, whether on land or on sea, in private or public life, wherever you read, whether in newspapers, books, magazines, or periodicals, you are faced with communistic propaganda intended eventually to undermine democracy and overthrow the American way of life.

"It is not your responsibility to be passive in this religious, social and political struggle but to be informative and constructive. It is not enough for you to search the records of the past and determine what has happened or to observe the present and see what is taking place today; it is your duty to stand for the right regardless of the cost, to lift high the principles of truth, to enunciate and defend common justice and fairness to all. It is your duty to temper the winds that would fan the fires of prejudice and hate and to change the stream that would bring pollution and destruction to Christianity, to society, and to mankind.

"It is your privilege to take the forces that are, purify them, regenerate them, transform them, and make them to be the builders of universal brotherhood and the moulders of a lasting peace. Your Alma Mater has taught you history. Now she is depending on you to make history.

"God bless you and keep you; may He inspire you and crown your efforts with enduring success."

CHINESE CHRISTIAN OUTLINES SEVEN TASKS OF THE CHURCH.

Promotion of "all cultural activities of the church which are not in opposition to the principles of New Democratic education" is recommended as an immediate pursuit of the Christian Church in China by Dr. H. H. Tsui, General Secretary of the Church of Christ in China.

Writing in The Church (Shanghai) April, 1950, Dr. Tsui emphasized the responsibility of Christians to utilize popular education to wipe out illiteracy. "At this time when a New China is being created, the church should respond to the needs of the hour to make its individual contribution to the nation and society," wrote Dr. Tsui.

Dr. Tsui was one of nineteen Chinese Christian leaders who late in 1949 signed a 2,000-word letter to Protestant mission boards, urging the necessity of revamping policies of missions and the church in China, turning over all administrative functions to the Chinese and limiting the work of mission boards to "special services."

In addition to the primary tasks of the Church, according to Dr. Tsui's article in The Church, the following should be undertaken at once:

1. Begin to study. It is impossible to understand the age without studying it. All literature dealing with the new age should be studied.

2. Start productive work. . . . The Church should be the first to respond to the call of the People's Government for production and economy. It should take a vital part in responding to local needs. Preachers should take the lead in productive activities to strengthen the church's self-support.

3. Constant self-criticism. . . . There should be all possible self-criticism . . . and a readiness to correct faults as they are discarded.

4. Promote cultural education. All cultural activities of the church which are not in opposition to the principles of New Democratic education should be proceeded with and in addition popular education should be encouraged to wipe out illiteracy and raise the level of public knowledge.

5. Unite the sections of the church. . . . The age of church denominations, coming out of the "mission" background, is over. The Church of Christ in China should bring together the different churches and become with them a real unity resulting in a greater contribution to society.

6. Start social service. All activities that benefit the people are a part of the work of the church. . . . Quality, not quantity, should be aimed at, so that the people may know that the church is their beloved home.

7. Protect world peace. The Christian Church is founded on the gospel of peace. . . . The importance of world peace should be emphasized in all gatherings of the church so that . . . the outbreak of a third World War . . . may be prevented.

"To sum up," concludes Dr. Tsui, "the church is the church of the people; it should move toward the people and correct its mistakes that it may benefit the nation and society."—Ecumenical Press Service.

THE INSTITUTE OF WORLD MISSIONS.

The Institute of World Missions will be held at Chautauqua, N. Y., August 20 to 25, sponsored by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, United Council of Church Women and the Home Missions Council of North America, in cooperation with the Chautauqua Institution.

Dr. E. G. Homrighausen of Princeton will have the devotional service at 9:30 each morning and a course in the afternoon dealing with "Evangelism in Our Time."

Dr. John Short of London will conduct a Bible class on the "Relevance of Jesus Christ in Our Life and Times."

The Lecture Series will be handled by Rev. Setareki Tuilovoni, pastor of the largest Methodist Church in the Fiji Islands.

Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, Rev. James K. Matthews, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions with the responsibility for India, under the Methodist Church; Dr. Gloria M. Wysner, secretary of the International Missionary Council and author of the study book, Islam in the Near East Today; Dr. Mark A. Dawber will conduct a course on "The Town and Country Church;" Dr. Dorothy Stevens from the Northern Baptist Convention will teach a course on "New Methods for the Church Programs;" Miss Alice Maloney of the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., will teach the Home Missions study book on "The Rural Church."

A full program may be secured by writing to Dr. Alfred E. Randell, Department of Religion, Chautauqua, N. Y.

RECRUIT FOR TURKEY.

Miss Elizabeth Boynton Richmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Richmond of South Hanover, Mass., and at present a teacher of Psychology at Oak Grove School, Vassalboro, Me., has just been appointed by the American Board for a three-year term as a teacher of English in its American Academy for Girls in Scutari, Turkey. She expects to sail for her new post in August. The American School for Girls is the largest of four schools under the American Board in Turkey, and while a majority of the students are Turkish, about 20 per cent of them are Jewish, American and Greek girls, thus mingling varying traditions in a common enterprise.

Miss Richmond was born in South Hanover, and educated at Hanover High School, Colby College (A. B., Psychology, Class of 1947). She was awarded a graduate assistantship in education at Wellesley College following graduation from Colby.

"One of the best ways to promote world peace is to help people understand different cultures. By living, working and playing together with the members of those cultures, I want to contribute what I can to the mental and spiritual growth of my students while at the same time I learned from them," says Miss Richmond.

NEW RECRUITS FOR JAPAN.

A highly significant service took place Sunday morning, June 4, in the First Church (Congregational) in Cambridge, Mass., when Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Earl Dalbeck, young newly appointed Congregational Christian career missionaries to Japan were commissioned by the American Board.

Dr. Hachiro Yuasa of Kyoto, Japan, President-Elect of the great new International Christian University of Japan, gave the Welcome to the Field. Rev. and Mrs. Robert E. Chandler of China, who for many years have been the representatives on the foreign field of First Church and now are retiring from active service, "passed on the torch" to the

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

NOTICE TO ALL WOMEN'S GROUPS.

Mr. J. T. Kernodle, Managing Editor of our paper, has asked that all articles which are to appear on the Woman's Page be sent directly to the editor of this page, who at the present time is the undersigned. This means all news concerning women's groups and reports of meetings, except the reports of the Treasurers and special notices of meetings that have been delayed for last minute decisions. This will make it easier for everyone concerned if this policy is followed.

Another thing regarding the news on the Woman's Page should be emphasized. The Woman's Board suggested to the editor of this page that articles which just list everything that is done during the year and tell the same things that everybody else does should be edited and shortened so that we don't have so much of the same thing. In writing an article for the Woman's Page, it is a good idea to write a feature of some special meeting during the year or some unusual activity which might be a good suggestion for another group. Try to make the articles interesting and tell about something which has not been told before. It helps to know what other people are doing that is different.

It is not necessary to make a real article if you haven't the time. Just send the facts to the editor and she can make the article from the information you send.

two books of poems, To the Dogmatist and The Man of Labor and Other Poems. He has also written Song of the Earth and Epistle to White Christians and served as editor and co-author of two devotional books for young people, Windows of Worship and Gates of Beauty.

DR. ERNEST T. THOMPSON

DR. THOMPSON TO SPEAK AT ELON SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

Born: Tekarkana, Texas.
B. A.—Hampden-Sydney College, '14.
M. A.—Columbia University, '15.
B. D.—Union Theological Seminary (Hoge Fellow '20-'21).

D. D.—Hampden-Sydney College, '26.
D. Litt.—Washington and Lee, '33.
Professor, Union Theological Seminary since 1922.

Author and Editor of note.

On the Seminary campus "Doctor E. T." is first thought of as a brilliant, forceful teacher. He is more widely known across the land for his writing and his multiple services on Church boards, committees, councils, and as an incomparable lecturer in leadership training schools, ministers' institutes and conferences. Dr. Thompson holds academic degrees from Hampden-Sydney, Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary, and also studied at the Biblical Seminary in New York and at the Universities of Edinburgh and Heidelberg. Instrumental in founding the Virginia State Council of Churches, he is its first president. He has borne a heavy share of community leadership and responsibility in Richmond. His weekly Sunday school lessons, his book reviews and articles have reached thousands beyond the limits of the Seminary. His recent Changing Emphases in American Preaching was a Religious Book Club selection. As editor-in-chief of The Bases of World Order and as a lecturer on social and moral problems, Dr. Thompson's voice is among the most challenging which speak in our Church today.

Dr. Thompson will speak at the School of Missions, Elon College, N. C., June 13 to 15.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

THE GOOSEY GANDER.

Once there was a young Goosey-Gander who thought himself very smart. He never would stay in the yard where all the other ducks and geese were but went wandering along the grass by the roadside, and even in the road. The old geece said to him, "You will get hurt if you go there;" but he only said, "Quack! Quack! I know better."

And they said, "Look out for yourself when you hear a big noise;" but he only said, "Quack! Quack! I can look out for myself without your help."

So they stopped talking to him.

One day he was picking around in the grass very close to the white road, when he suddenly heard a loud "Honk! Honk!" "Pooh," said the Goosey-Gander, "what goose are you? I can make one as loud as that. Honk! Honk!"

And he didn't get out of the way.

The next instant a glaring red automobile came rushing along the white road, with a "Honk! Honk!" as loud as thunder. It passed the Goosey-Gander with a roar and a rush, and such a swirl of wind and dust came with it that it swept him up in the air against the hedge. He was like to die with fright! He flew and scrambled and tumbled over the hedge into the yard, screaming, "Honk! Honk! Quack! Quack! Honk! Honk!"

And do you know, he was so frightened at automobiles after that, that the faintest sound of a horn would set him running. The other geese used to tease him by coming up close behind him, and saying, "Honk! Honk!" Every time they did it the little Goosey-Gander would fly straight up in the air, with a fuss and a flurry, and he would say, "Quack! Quack! Oh! Honk!"

And he never played in the road after that.—Sara Cone Bryant in Stories to Tell the Littlest Ones.

IN THE LIGHT OF TODAY.

By M. LOUISE C. HASTINGS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"My niece, only eight years old, is unnaturally opiniated!" exclaimed my neighbor. "She isn't pleased with the dress I bought her and she won't wear it. I don't like that. She should wear what I buy her!"

"Let us think about it," I replied. "Our little redhead has opinions, too. She said the other day, 'No, I don't like that basket to carry my lunch in. I've seen one in the ten-cent store that I like better. It has two handles!'"

After we had compared notes for a while, my neighbor had a clearer conception of the child of today. Time was when children said little to adults. No doubt they had ideas, but to argue about what they thought or what they wanted to do was, they knew, out of the question—it just wasn't done. Mothers made the decisions.

"Go and pick out the dress you'd prefer to wear to school today," Brenda's mother said. "I've ironed several and they are all hanging up in your closet for you to choose from. Then match your socks and we'll get you ready for kindergarten." How much better this is than: "Here are your clothes, Brenda. Come and get dressed."

"No, I don't like your picture!" five-year-old Fredda said. "I like it only from the face down!" None but a modern child would venture to express a thought like that.

"No, thank you, I don't want to go with you this morning. My friend, Tiny, has come home from Canada, and I'd rather play with her." This child knows what she wants—or does? Ten minutes later, just as we are ready to start, the telephone rings. "I've decided to go with you," she says. Her change of plans does not indicate indecision on her part—it shows merely that it has taken time to think the pros and cons through to the final issue.

Grandfather and Jonathan were driving together. Grandfather said, "Isn't that a nice breeze?" The official temperature was one hundred degrees. Six-year-old Jonathan answered "Yes, it is very refreshing." "It is invigorating," replied Grandfather. Jonathan thought for a long while. "I prefer to have it called refreshing," he finally said.

Today, children are permitted to talk at mealtime. In fact, the alert mother plans table talks in which the children can share intelligently. However, she does not allow them to monopolize the conversation; she teaches them to be good listeners, too. Certain games are often played at the dining table—all the family joining in—games that keep the atmosphere above the level of faultfinding and criticism.

When obligated to change family plans, it is needful to present the changes more carefully to the children than to the grownups. Children who are strong in their decisions have difficulty in immediate readjustment to new plans, especially if the reason for the change is beyond their understanding.

Suzanne expected to go to her grandmother's for the afternoon. She had dressed her dolls and packed their clothes in her bag and was waiting for the family to get ready. Mother took her little daughter on her lap. "We shall have to change our plans," she said. "Auntie is sick and we can't go. We must stay at home and take care of her." "But I want to go," cried Suzanne. "My dolls are all ready to go!" "Auntie needs our help," Mother explained. "You love Auntie and you always like to do kind things for her. The first thing to do is to prepare the hot-water bag for her." With an understanding smile Suzanne at once jumped down and ran to help.

Yes, the children of today do express their opinions quite freely, and is not this desirable? It gives to their parents increased opportunity to encourage or to correct, wisely.

THE BIBLE IN FORMOSA.

In spite of military activities in Formosa, the Bible continues to make its way. Large supplies of Chinese Scriptures are frequently being sent by the American Bible Society to Tsipeh where the bookstore, managed by Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Montgomery, sells hundreds of Bibles and New Testaments every month. Mr. L. Singleton, in Tainan, is also making a similar distribution in Southern Formosa.

The Church in Southern Formosa is a Bible reading Church, largely due to having the Scriptures in Roman characters which are simple to learn.

Within the past three months, 2,000 Bibles have been sent from Hong Kong to Formosa. Indo-China, Burma, Malaya, Indonesia, the Philippine Islands and Japan are also receiving Chinese Scriptures from Formosa.

EASTERN VIRGINIA HIGH CAMP.

Location—Central Y. M. C. A. Camp, Route No. 1, Box 237, Bayside, Va. This is also the address for mail that week. This is near Lynnhaven and on the Chesapeake Bay. The Camp is fully equipped with everything needed for such a camp as ours and the beach is lovely.

How to Drive to Camp—Go out Princess Anne Road or U. S. Highway No. 460 to State Highway No. 60 or Shore Drive, turn right and go one mile to Camp Sign.

Date—June 18-23. We should come on Sunday afternoon and supper will be the first meal served. The camp will close on Friday afternoon. Dinner will be the last meal served.

Food—Plenty of good wholesome food is served. The Camp is equipped with commercial refrigeration. Fish are purchased direct from the Bay Fisherman and green vegetables come direct from the farmer. Menus are planned by experienced dietitians. The cooks have had many years of experience. Meals are served family style. Milk is served in abundance.

Cost—$15.00—Board and room and insurance. $2.00—Registration Fee. Meals will be the responsibility of the Y.M.C.A. and we shall have the use of all their recreational equipment, their beach, large dining hall, recreation and assembly room, and splendidly equipped cabins.

What to Bring With You—Bathing trunks, tennis shoes, several pairs of shorts, T-shirts, sweaters or sweat shirts, handkerchiefs, sheets and pillow cases, Bible, notebook, pencil, tooth brush and paste, comb. All clothes and property should be marked with name or initials. Parents should instruct campers to be responsible for all possessions. Do not bring expensive equipment. The camp furnishes blankets and pillows. Official Camp T-shirts are on sale at camp.

Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., will serve as dean of the camp. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, as registrar and treasurer. Mrs. R. E. Brittle will be head counsellor for girls and Rev. Cecil Thomas will be head counsellor for boys. Timothy Chang from Shaowu, China, will be special guest for the week. Baxter Twiddy, president of the Southern Convention Young People, will teach a course. Paul Vargo, Summer Student Worker, will be a counsellor.

By the time this appears in THE CHRISTIAN SUN you will have received a copy of the program listing courses, teachers, and a full list of counsellors.

As of this date, June 2, Nansemond has the largest group registered from any one church—eight young people. Holland has sent six registrations, and Union 5. Union was the first church to send in a registration for this camp. Others are coming in all the time. Please send in your registrations immediately to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Elon College, N. C.

134TH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

A distribution of 8,822,880 copies of the Scriptures during 1949 was reported at the 134th annual meeting of the American Bible Society, which was held recently at the Bible House in New York City.

The distribution in this country amounted to 4,727,626 copies, and, according to Dr. Gilbert Darlington, treasurer of the Society, was one of the largest in the Society's history. The books were circulated in 85 different languages in the United States.

China led off in the high point of circulation abroad, where 965,480 copies were distributed of the Society's foreign circulation of 3,212,348 copies. "The Scriptures in China last year," said Dr. Darlington, "were circulated with surprising freedom, according to reports received in New York from the Society's office in Shanghai. The demand continues to be high. With the receipt of a hundred tons of paper imported during the year, Scriptures were printed as fast as facilities and funds would permit. Because of the possibility of closing off the areas that early in the year had fallen to the Communists," Dr. Darlington continued, "large quantities of the books were flown into the interior. Others were sent by boat to Chungking. A further precautionary step was taken in exporting matrices and printed copies of all books published in Shanghai to places outside and near to China. If printing must stop in Shanghai, it can be done elsewhere."

Continuing its World Emergency program, which covers aid to Bible Societies and countries devastated by the war, the Society furnished to Japan, Germany and Korea, printing and binding materials from which an estimated three million volumes of the Scriptures were printed. These figures are not included in the total circulation of the Bible Society's work.

Dr. Darlington called attention to one of the popular publications of the Society—the single volume containing the Sermon on the Mount, which the Society prints in five languages—English, Spanish, French, Portuguese and Japanese. Nearly a million copies of the book were distributed last year, an increase of 300 per cent over 1948.

The Bible Society continued its century-old service to the nation's men in uniform. During the year, upon definite requests from chaplains, it supplied free of charge, a total of 356,264 volumes at an expense of over $65,000, the largest peacetime expenditure for this purpose.

Although two large shipments of Scriptures in Russian have been forwarded to Russia since the close of the war, it was not possible to make further deliveries in 1949. However, the Bible Society stands ready to supply the churches and the people of Russia with as many Russian Scriptures as they can use. The Society is also prepared to donate paper, printing and binding machinery, plates and funds to help revive Scripture publication in Russia, not only in Russian but in any of the other twenty-five or more languages that are spoken in the U.S.S.R. The increase of literacy in the Soviet Union and

MALACHI PLEADS FOR WHOLE-HEARTED RELIGION.

LESSON XII—JUNE 18, 1950.

MEMORY SELECTION: Have we not all one father? Hath not one God created us? Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, profaning the covenant of our fathers?—Malachi 2:10.

LESSON: Malachi 2:10; 3:7-10; 4:4-6.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Malachi 4:1-6.

The Times.

Malachi appeared on the stage of Israel's, or rather Judah's, history somewhere around 450 B. C. He was probably a contemporary of Nehemiah. It was the period marking the break-up of the Persian Empire. Seeking revenge for the defeat which the Greeks had inflicted upon Darius at the battle of Marathon, Xerxes after lavish outlay of men and materials and money was also defeated at the battle of Salamis in 480 B. C. That battle, and the battle of Platea which followed completed the downfall of Persia in Europe.

It was inevitable that when the forces of the Orient were streaming into the West, that the life of the restored Jerusalem would feel the influence of the tides sweeping over the nations. Materialism was dominant and the Jews had lost something of their fervor and zeal for the One true God of Israel, and all kinds of wickedness had developed in national and community life. The people were careless and indifferent toward their religious duties, the priests were careless and even sacrilegious in the temple services. As is always the case a decline in religion was accompanied by a decline in morals. It was against this moral and spiritual darkness that Malachi preached.

The Man.

We know little about Malachi himself. The name means "Messenger." From his messages we can glean that he was fearless in denouncing sin even as he was shrewd in diagnosis. For him religion had a universal content. And for him religion concerned the inner life rather than merely outward forms and ceremonies. He was a worthy successor to the long line of prophets who with rugged honesty and spiritual vigor, preached "the word of the Lord."

The Message.

Malachi's message as embodied in today's lesson was concerned with three themes or topics:

1. The Universal Fatherhood of God.—"Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? This is not the first time that the Fatherhood of God had been proclaimed, but Malachi gave the doctrine a new emphasis. He reminded his people that they, and all men for that matter were members of the same spiritual family. Even at that it is not likely that he understood the Fatherhood of God as taught by Jesus. He was emphasizing the Fatherhood of God among the Hebrew people, as the ensuing verses plainly show.

"Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother—profaning the covenant of our fathers?" Malachi did draw the logical conclusion to the Fatherhood of God—all men were brothers and were to be treated as such.

If men are sons of a common Father, they are brothers one of another. They should therefore treat one another as brothers. According to the standards of that day, it might be permissible to deal treacherously with the people of another nation, especially with one's enemies, but one should not deal thus with one's brother. This doctrine found a wider and more searching application in the teachings of Jesus who taught that men should deal with all men, and with every man as a brother. As usual Jesus fulfilled or filled full the law.

2. Malachi's second point concerned Israel's sin in robbing God. Putting the matter in the form of a dialogue he bluntly tells his fellow-countrymen that they have robbed God in that they have withheld from Him the tithes and offerings. Malachi makes no bones about the matter—they are thieves and robbers, and thieves and robbers against God Himself. And there was a curse against them for their sin. Lacking love and loyalty to God, becoming the slaves of materialism, they had neglected their religious obligations. Then as now, the first thing that usually feels the pinch, was the church. A general decline of religious zeal means a decline in giving to religious causes. This neglect to pay tithes was due to unbelief in Jehovah.

Then in bold language Malachi says that Jehovah "double dares" His people to take Him at His word. Let them bring their tithes into the storehouse and see what happens. "Prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour out such a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it."

This "scribe" wants to give a testimonial concerning tithing. In a meeting at Elon College while a freshman, under the appeal of a layman who was a believer in tithing, he entered into a covenant to tithe his income for life. He has tried to keep that covenant through all these years. At times he has given a double tithe, and always more than a tithe. It has been a source of satisfaction to him to know that through the years he has thus been able to make a considerable contribution in the aggregate to the Church and Kingdom causes. And the practice has been good discipline. It would not be true to say that he had grown rich in material things as a result of tithing. He has, of course, had had enough and more than enough through the years. But his life has been greatly enriched and his spirit has been kindled by this sense of partnership with God in the administration of his substance. The Kingdom of God will not come simply by money or even by tithing, but it will never come apart from money, and tithing would give great increase in the things that help to bring in the Kingdom.

3. Finally Malachi speaks of the coming of Elijah who shall prepare for the coming of the great and terrible day of Jehovah. His prediction found fulfillment in the ministry of John the Baptist—Jesus himself says this very thing. As always the prophets sound a note of hope. For them the Golden Age is yet to come, and not in the past. There will be a final triumph of righteousness. The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign and rule forever and forever.

I never yet knew any good cause to be served by making people mad. Wars are economic in origin, it is said, but also nations, like men, fight because insulting, offensive, bitter things are said. A soft answer turneth away wrath and the sooner it is made the more wrath it turns away.

COLLEGE APPORTIONMENTS.

It would be interesting to know the total amount contributed to Elon College by the Sunday schools and churches of the Convention through conference apportionment. Figures are not available for this information during the past 60 years. It is also interesting to know the amount asked of the churches by the convention through conference apportionment for the current year. This figure is available. Figures are also available to show the amount already contributed during the current year by Sunday schools and churches on conference apportionment. The total amount asked for the college on conference apportionment is $15,000. Practically half of the year is gone. We are far from half the amount requested.

It was assumed by the convention that the amount of apportionment to the college would be paid quarterly. Some of our churches and Sunday schools have done well—wonderfully so. Others, not so generously, and still many others delay. The needs of the college are really critical. A payment on conference apportionment, from either your Sunday school or church, would be appreciated.

young Dalbecks. The Commissioned Sermon was preached by Dr. John H. Leamon, minister of the church and a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board.

Mr. and Mrs. Dalbeck come from North Hollywood, California, but more recently have been taking theological training at Chicago Theological Seminary.

Gordon Dalbeck was born in Los Angeles, California, and is the son of Mrs. Anna Dalbeck, 2830 Massachusetts Avenue, Los Angeles. He was educated at Stockton Junior College, the University of Chicago College, the College of the Pacific and Chicago Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Dalbeck, the former Ruth Baldwin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Baldwin of North Hollywood, California, and was educated at the same institutions as those attended by her husband.

It is expected that Mr. Dalbeck will be ordained to the Congregational Christian ministry sometime in July at the Mt. Hollywood (Calif.) Congregational Christian Church and will sail, with Mrs. Dalbeck, for his post in Japan on the SS President Wilson from San Francisco, July 13.

SCIENCE AND MISSIONS.

Melvin Eugene Blumenfeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Blumenfeld, 3532 Washington, Gary, Indiana, has just been appointed by the American Board of Foreign Missions, Boston, Mass., for a three-year term as a teacher of mathematics in its American School for Boys, Talas, Turkey. For the past year Mr. Blumenfeld has been working as an accountant in Chicago, Illinois, and residing with his parents in Gary. He hopes to sail for his new post in August.

Mr. Blumenfeld is an ex-service man who served with the U. S. Army Air Corps during World War II. He was born in Chicago, Ill., 22 years ago, and educated at Michigan State College, East Lansing, Mich., and Carroll College, Waukesha, Wis. (B. S. 1949).

Undecided as whether he wished to go into business, or education, Mr. Blumenfeld decided on teaching, feeling that "our scientific and material culture is advancing so much faster than our esthetic and material culture," that, "we are as a race unable to meet the demands for modern living. We are fast becoming victims of our own technical juggernaut," he adds. His decision to go into Christian work was furthered by hearing a Negro College President and an Indian doctor tell of the "great need for American youth to share their opportunities with the world."

VALLEY WOMAN'S BOARD MEETS.

The Valley Woman's Missionary Board met in the home of Mrs. J. E. Bryant on Tuesday, May 16.

Miss Verdie Showalter, President, was presiding. Mrs. E. J. Rohart conducted the devotionals, and a business session followed.

A nominating committee for new officers was appointed.

Each missionary society was asked to send a delegate to the School of Missions at Elon in June.

There were nineteen members and ministers present.

A covered dish dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour.

The Valley Woman's Conference will be held July 28, at Winchester, Virginia.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

When your Sunday school receives its regular offering—say, one the third or fourth Sunday—and sends it to the Convention Office for these children it is not a "special offering," but a regular offering donated to the Orphanage. We are not asking you to take a "special offering" once each month for the Orphanage, but to donate to the Orphanage one of your regular offerings. It is the plan set forth by vote of the Southern Convention. It is practiced not only in our denomination but in many others. It is a good plan.

How many mystery and detective stories, with their killing and murder, and double-crossings are put on the air over radio every day? How many movies filled with shooting, and killing, and murder are presented in your neighborhood theatres every day? How many such stories are presented on the printed page and in the funny pictures? How funny is funny in funny pictures? These things with all their suggestions come to many children daily throughout our land.

Sunday school is like a spiritual bath for children who have filled their little minds with such things during the week. Get your child into Sunday school regularly. And what better thing could he be taught than that he can help show mercy and love, and give help to others who are less fortunate than he? Week after week he could prepare his little contribution to others—to mission work across the needy world, to homeless children at our Christian Orphanage, and quarterly to Elon College—the college of his church. But whatever you do about the offerings it surely will be a pity to let Christian faith in the children of America lessen.

I wish to record my special thanks to the one hundred and twelve Sunday schools and churches which have thus far sent us help since January 1. This is June. Clothes and shoes or sandals for the season are needed. Vacations are here. We try to give two weeks to as many as possible and one week to all the others. Your help is needed. Your help is needed for work clothes, too. This week we purchased 132 pairs of overalls. We can get them at wholesale but it still cost us $187.00. Wouldn't it be good if some big-hearted friend would send us a check to cover the purchase of these overalls?

Please help us make some good reports during the summer weeks. Make your own happiness more simon pure by being generous to your institution which gives a hand to little helpless children. A lawyer and a fine churchman asked me this week if the novelty has worn off of my new job. My answer was an emphatic "no." Suppose you had seen the boy's face when he showed me a report card with all "A's" on it, and knowing as I do that that boy has a fine Christian faith and personality!

134TH ANNUAL MEETING OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

the complete lack of Scripture production there for so many years have created a shortage of books that is unparalleled in the history of the Russian Church.

Five new Scripture volumes were brought out by the Bible Society during the year—first publication of Marshall Islands and English diglot volume; a Gospel in Nukuoro, for use on one of the Pacific Islands; Navaho and English diglot volume, in which the new orthography required by the Government was used, for the Indians in this country; a Malagasy Testament and Psalms for Madagascar and the Book of Acts for the Mazateco Indians in Mexico.

The worldwide shortage of Scriptures, reported last year continues. The society has never before been faced with such an insistent demand as it faces today in the countries where it works outside of the United States. The advance of literacy, the general rise in living conditions including education, and the struggle for freedom among people still free, account for much of this.

"DO SOMETHING IF IT HURTS."

too deep for tears and too wide for horizons; it stretches to the last human need, and will not stop until they are all in, at home and abroad.

If we shall be tempted during these days that we are together here just to pluck some beautiful thought or some fine idea or some beautiful plan that shall be put before us to take the esthetics of Christianity, the beauty, art, literature, oratory, architecture, a sterner voice calls to us today as a great group representing Christianity, and that sterner voice says, "Turn a moment from the esthetics. Do something else motivating it and Christ shall come down in the midst of it and hold it and use it, and will turn toward it."

If out of this great meeting here, a meeting the undertone of which I sense as the very undertone that beats at the heart of Christianity, I believe if we deliberately, one by one, go and say, "I am going to take it on myself; it shall not end in a plan, but in the personal taking it on myself to see that my vision meets its obligation and its opportunity through this great passion of World Service," that we will accomplish.—Selected.

What is all wisdom save a collection of platitudes? Take fifty of our current proverbial sayings—they are so trite, so threadbare, that we can hardly bring our lips to utter them. Nonetheless, they embody the concentrated experience of the race, and the man who orders his life according to their teaching cannot go far wrong. How easy that seems! But has anyone ever done so? Never. Has any man ever attained inner harmony by pondering the experience of others? Not since the world began. He must pass through the fire.

In Memoriam

TATE.

In the recent death of Mrs. Sarah Amanda Tate, Antioch Christian Church suffered the loss of one of its oldest and most faithful members. Mrs. Tate died April 17 at the age of eighty-three, leaving two sons, William and Edward; one sister, Mrs. Emma Fulk; and three grandchildren. In memory of the life of this faithful Christian servant, the following resolutions are offered:

1. That we give recognition to her unflinching devotion and loyalty to Antioch Church and to her exemplary Christian conduct and character.

2. That we honor her memory by emulating her sacrificial life, continuing the unfinished tasks to which she dedicated herself.

3. That we humbly acknowledge the omniscience of God and bow before his eternal purpose in this bereavement which brings distress to all of us who knew her.

4. That we extend our deep sympathy to the members of her family and remember them by word, deed and prayer.

IVIE D. FRANK,
RAYMOND N. ANDES,
Committee.

DEAVERS.

Mr. T. L. Deavers, for many years a deacon and trustee of the Antioch Christian Church, died on his birthday, March 6, at the age of eighty-one. His wife, at present a patient at Rockingham Memorial Hospital in Harrisonburg, Va.; one son, Ben C. Deavers; one daughter, Mrs. Mark Dean; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild survive.

In his memory the following resolutions are offered:

1. That we give recognition to his unceasing interest in Antioch Church and all of its interests and to his quiet faith in the Christian way of life for all.

2. That we make known the enriching experience that association with him has brought all who knew him.

3. That in his death we again acknowledge the omniscience of God and give thanks for his beneficent life which has touched and changed all of us.

4. That we extend our deep sympathy to the members of his family and remember them in our prayers.

IVIE D. FRANK,
RAYMOND N. ANDES,
Committee.

LASSITER.

Mr. John H. Lassiter, seventy-two, died at his home near Sunbury, N. C., May 10, 1950, after a few hours of serious illness. Besides his wife, Mr. Lassiter leaves two sons and one daughter: Thurman Lassiter, Walter Lassiter and Mae Lassiter Gray.

From first to last Mr. and Mrs. Lassiter took into their home some fifteen children and adults and cared for them. They could not turn from their home people seeking a place to live.

Mr. Lassiter leaves behind a host of friends and the word from all in the community was that "He was a good man." He served for many years as a deacon in Damascus Christian Church of which he was a loyal member. His wealth consisted not in possessions, nor in the abundance of years lived, but in his spirit, and in his contribution to his family and the people who came into his home, his loyalty to the church and his community. God bless his memory to all of us.

EARL T. FARRELL,
Pastor.

HOST TO CHRISTIAN FORCES.

July 6-7: The "World Council of Churches" (Executive Committee).—A council composed of 156 Protestant and Orthodox Churches in 44 countries throughout the world representing an estimated 160,000,000 Christian believers.

July 8-15: "World Council of Churches" (Central Committee).—The Council's 90-member Central Committee is entrusted with final responsibility for all Council action between assemblies held once every five years. The Central Committee meets annually, the 1949 meeting having been held at Chichester, England.

July 17-23: "World Christian Youth Commission."—The Commission is a coordinating agency composed of the Youth Department of the World Council of Churches, the YMCA, the World's Student Christian Federation, and the World Council of Christian Education.

The Whitby meeting, to be attended by 30 youth work executives, will be concerned primarily with drawing up plans for a World Assembly of Youth to be held in Southeast Asia in 1952.

July 16-18: "World Council of Churches" (Joint Committee) and "International Missionary Council (Joint Committee).—A meeting of executives largely devoted to administrative matters.

July 22-August 10: "World Council of Christian Education (World Institute).—A federation of 50 national and regional councils of Christian Education in over 60 countries throughout the world. This institute, to be attended by about 250 people, has been set up by the World Council of Christian Education to provide Christian Education leaders from all over the world with a chance to study Christian educational philosophy and techniques under an international faculty. The institute will also draw up proposals for an advance in these techniques for submission to the WCCE for international distribution.

August 7-9: "International Council of Religious Education" (Children's Work Conference).—The ICRE is a cooperative agency through which the Boards of Christian Education of 40 U.S. and Canadian Protestant denominations coordinate their Sunday School programs.

August 7-10: "World Council of Churches (Youth Department) and "World Council of Christian Education" (Youth Department).—Development of a program for newly-formed youth department of WCCE for recommendation to the Assembly of the WCCE. Survey of the World Council's ecumenical volunteer work-camp program, and participation of younger delegates in the study program of the World Council of Churches. Close cooperation between the youth departments of both organizations is planned.

August 10-16: "World Council of Christian Education (World Convention).—The world-wide task of Christian Education.

August 15: "International Council of Religious Education" (Quadrennial Convention).—Originally scheduled for 1951, the Convention is held this year to coincide with the WCCE's Convention.

August 17-19: "World Council of Christian Education (Assembly).—The governing body of the WCCE, the assembly is composed of official representatives of the fifty constituent organizations of the Council.

August 17-21: "United Christian Youth Movement (General Council). The UCYM is closely affiliated with the ICRE and its Council includes officers of national denominational youth fellowships of 40 denominations, 36 state youth councils, and representatives of 16 agencies serving youth including the YMCA and YWCA. The Council meets annually. The program consists of planning the cooperative work of Christian youth in the U.S.A. and Canada which according to present plans includes financing the interchange of youth between the U.S.A. and Europe. The Council will also receive reports of the past year's work.

Our civilization demands love and justice more than any other civilization ever has. The whole technical mechanics of our era demands that we live as brothers. When we try, we realize how stubborn we are in resistance to God. We may go down to perdition before we are willing to live as brothers. The way we maintain our self-respect is to hold someone else in contempt.

—Reinhold Niebuhr, D. D.

The Greatest Lesson

By Charles A. Wells

One of the great truths of our day is the fact that education is not giving our young people what the world needs most. We have an abundance of skillfully trained men, clever and experienced men and women who have already increased man's physical capacities beyond his powers of control. Yet our civilization is not facing destruction by savages—but by Ph.D.'s. We encourage daring experiment in physical fields but look with suspicion at daring innovations in the fields of human relations. Perhaps the reason young people are afraid to attempt much in such areas is because they see how our Western materialism ignores or scoffs at such figures as Ghandi, who has really made more history than any half dozen modern western statesmen; or today's Garry Davis, the young American veteran who has struck out into "world citizenship," because, as he simply states, "It's got to come some day. Some of us better start it now." More such daring—and even more skill—must come into the arena of human relations.

1. Blessed are they who accept church membership as life's highest privilege.
2. Blessed are they who can spend an hour in a place of worship without complaint if two hours seem not too long to them to spend in a place of entertainment.
3. Blessed are they who are faithful in serving on church boards and church committees.
4. Blessed are the church officials who are always optimistic—always believing that "The best is yet to be."
5. Blessed are they who come to church to worship instead of to criticize.
